PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 98th CONGRESS, SECOND SESSION

SENATE—Wednesday, September 19, 1984

(Legislative day of Monday, September 17, 1984)

The Senate met at 11 a.m., on the expiration of the recess, and was called to order by the President pro tempore [Mr. THURMOND].

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Our prayer this morning will be offered by the son of the Senate Chaplain, the Reverend Richard Christian Halverson, Jr., pastor, Chesterbrook Presbyterian Church, Falls Church, VA.

PRAYER

The Reverend Richard Christian Halverson, Jr., pastor, Chesterbrook Presbyterian Church, Falls Church, VA, offered the following prayer:

Let us pray.

God our Creator, we do not know all the personal concerns, hurts, insecurities, or problems which may be in those who work here today. But we know of Your love which heals wounds, casts out fears, and bears burdens.

We do not fully understand what keeps many of us apart from each other or causes division, distrust, or hatred. But we know of Your love which has the power to reconcile us even in our greatest differences.

This morning we pray that as the Sun has faithfully risen apart from any efforts or accomplishments of our own, so may Your merciful, everlasting love be freely shed abroad into every building, room, and corner of this Congress; and as it is made incarnate by vulnerable and humble vessels, may it be seen and felt by every person here, regardless of their position, status, color, creed, or religion.

We ask this of our Heavenly Father who did not spare His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all. Amen.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. BAKER. I thank the Chair.

RESERVATION OF LEADERSHIP TIME

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that, to the extent leader time is not utilized by either leader this morning, it be reserved for our respective use at any time during the course of this calendar day.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SENATE SCHEDULE

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, this morning, after the period for the transaction of routine morning business ends at 11:40, we will have 20 minutes of debate on the motion to proceed to the consideration of Senate Resolution 66, which is the TV in the Senate resolution. The vote is to occur on that motion, by previous order, at 12 noon.

I hope that the Senate will agree to proceed to the consideration of Senate Resolution 66, and I anticipate that if we do, a cloture motion may be filed to limit debate on the resolution itself. If that is done, I will consult with the minority leader on the matter of returning then to the consideration of the trade bill, which was pending at the time cloture was invoked on yesterday.

Mr. President, I hope that this week we can finish the trade bill and the highway bill, together with other matters that may be cleared for action, but those two major items.

I would like to finish the TV in the Senate resolution. But, in all fairness, and with an excess of candor, perhaps, I do not think we can finish it this week, and it may be next week before the Senate finally speaks on that matter.

So I hope we can do the trade bill to completion and the highway bill to completion this week.

Mr. President, next week, in addition to TV in the Senate, we will have from the House of Representatives the continuing resolution; and it will be time to start down the path that will lead us to adjournment sine die on October 4.

There may be other items we will take up, and I have enumerated them before. We need to get on with the matter at hand, so I urge Senators to consider that we pass these two bills in order to do that.

Mr. President, to conclude and to summarize, I hope the Senate will vote affirmatively to proceed to the consideration of Senate Resolution 66 today at 12 noon. If we do so, I anticipate that a cloture motion will be filed to limit debate on the resolution itself.

If that does occur, then perhaps it would be wise for the Senate to turn to something else. The trade bill was pending at the time cloture was invoked, and I intend to talk to the minority leader about returning to the trade bill. It is my hope that we can do the trade bill and the highway bill this week, because we have much to do next week.

Mr. President, if I have time remaining, I yield it to the control of the minority leader.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the majority leader.

RECOGNITION OF THE MINORITY LEADER

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WARNER). The minority leader is recognized.

SENATE SCHEDULE

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I have this to ask of the distinguished majority leader in connection with the laying out of the schedule for us, as he has been doing for the last several days.

What can the distinguished majority leader tell the Senate as to whether or not the Genocide Convention will be brought before the Senate before adjournment sine die?

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I thank the minority leader.

It is my understanding that the Foreign Relations Committee is meeting

● This "bullet" symbol identifies statements or insertions which are not spoken by the Member on the floor.

today and perhaps will report that convention today to the Executive Calendar. If that is so, we will take a look at what the reporting requirements are, how much time will be required, and the minority views, if there are any, and we can make some judgment about when it can be available and can be brought up. Looking at it right now, and assuming that there will be a report, my guess is that it would be late next week before we could possibly reach it, since today is Wednesday.

Then we will be into the CR season, so to speak. But it is still a matter that is on my agenda, and I have a request from the President to act on the measure.

I might also say that I have one other request from the President, and that has to do with the balanced budget amendment, and there is that resolution on the calendar as well.

So it is possible that the leadership on this side will ask to consider either or both of those matters in the time remaining.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I believe I understand what the distinguished majority leader has in mind with reference to the balanced budget amendment. He has indicated this to me previously.

For the record, would it be the intention of the majority leader to call up that resolution as a freestanding resolution and have the Senate work its will on that resolution, or would his intention be to offer that resolution as an amendment to another vehicle?

Mr. BAKER. Presently, it is the intention of the leadership on this side to deal with the item on the calendar with the joint resolution which has been reported by our committee and is on our calendar as a freestanding measure.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the distinguished majority leader. Does he have anything else?

Mr. BAKER. No. I thank the minority leader.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I do not believe I have any further use of my time at this point.

I wish to reserve it, if I may. I do not know that I will need it during the discussion on the trade bill if and when that comes back before the Senate, and I take it from the distinguished majority leader's statement that that will be coming back before the Senate today.

So I ask unanimous consent that I may reserve my remaining time to that point if I need it in order to avoid violating the Pastore rule, and I doubt that it would so violate that rule in any event.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, since the minority leader has reserved his time and the next item of business is the special order, and the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin is not here, as we can all understand, since it is a little earlier than we expected it, I ask unanimous consent that I may suggest the absence of a quorum without charging the time against the time allocated to him on the special order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RECOGNITION OF SENATOR PROXMIRE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Chair recognizes the Senator from Wisconsin.

ADELMAN VERSUS SMITH DEBATE ON NUCLEAR ARMS CONTROL

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, the Washington Post of Sunday, June 17 carried a written debate between Kenneth Adelman, the Reagan administration's Director of Arms Control and Disarmament, and Gerard Smith who held the same position under President Nixon. Mr. Smith also headed the U.S. delegation to the SALT I talks and served as special ambassador for nucelar nonproliferation in the Carter administration. The subject of the debate is the Reagan arms control policies. Is arms control healthy and moving ahead? Is it reducing the risk of nuclear war? Or has it been skillfully scuttled by the Reagan administration?

President Reagan's arms control administrator, Adelman, contends that the administration has made progress in reducing the prospect of nuclear war and will make much more progress in the future. He bases his argument first on the assertion that far fewer nations have nuclear arms capability now than experts generally predicted 20 years ago and 10 years ago. Adelman's conclusion: Past and current policies must be reducing the spread of nuclear weapons. Arms control is working? But he fails to offer a single policy the administration has pursued or even advocated that has lessened proliferation.

On the contrary, the administration's consideration of or approval of the export of nuclear technology or materials to Argentina, which was heavy water, South Africa, a metallurgical press and reactor service contracts, and India, fuel, in all cases substantial nuclear technlogy or materials, reveal the administration as one which has proliferated and proliferated substantially nuclear technology and nuclear knowledge and the potential at least for nuclear weapons construction.

Certainly the latest administration agreement to sell nuclear energy plants to China shows a cavalier disregard of the proliferation threat. China has been reliably reported to have provided sensitive nuclear materials or technology to other states. It is true that China already has its own nuclear military arsenal. But it is also true that a U.S. supplied nuclear powered utility industry in China would make China a potential and perhaps a very big exporter of nuclear technology. In fact, Westinghouse has proposed a contract that would make China a major nuclear exporter. So what? Has China not pledged not to sell nuclear technology without the necessary safeguards? No, it has not. The Premier of China did indeed assert in a White House toast that the Chinese do not proliferate. But note the tense of that toast. It says nothing about the future or the past. It simply asserts that at the moment, right now, the time the toast was uttered, China did not proliferate. But, Mr. President, if there is any signed document or agreement that would inhibit Chinese to sell to other countries without safeguards of the technology originally supplied by the United States, it has not been revealed.

Adelman also argues that there has been nothing like the Bay of Pigs, the Berlin Wall or Soviet armies or armies supplied by the Soviets seizing South Vietnam, Angola, Ethiopia, Cambodia or Afghanistan during the Reagan administration. These events, contends Adelman, accompanied the array of arms control agreements between the United States and the Soviet Union.

The obvious Adelman implication: The absence of arms control agreements in the Reagan administration has not meant any of the series foreign policy losses to the Soviet that occurred in the era of arms control negotiations. So if the Soviets are not willing to dicuss reasonable arms control agreements, reasons Adelman, we ought to recognize that no arms control agreements and a stronger U.S. led free world is better than arms control agreements that simply advance the cause of world communism.

Now how about all this? What does Gerard Smith reply? Smith contends that like it or not the best way to prevent nuclear war must be from arms control. He disagrees with Adelman's conclusion that arms control has hurt the free world and damaged our prospects for peace. He asserts that:

Fragile though it is, the existing framework of nuclear arms limitation—including the Limited Test Ban Treaty, the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty, the ABM Treaty and the SALT I and SALT II agreements on offensive forces—provide a comprehensive containment of nuclear weapons.

Smith contends that this fragile framework is in dire jeopardy because of Reagan policies that are tearing it apart or will do so in the near future. On April 12, the State Department announced it is considering launching the Trident submarine next year without dismantling an existing submarine. Smith says this would be a violation of both SALT treaties, and that it would destroy the SALT limits on offensive weapons.

Smith also points out that the administration has made three major arms control proposals: First, relating to the intermediate nuclear forces in Europe; second, respecting intercontinental missiles and bombers; and, third, with respect to chemical weapons.

He charges—this is Smith, who, as I have pointed out, was an appointee of President Nixon as the arms control expert—he charges that each is one sided, each of the Reagan proposals is one sided, each is nonnegotiable and calls the proposals show boating.

But, more important, Smith charges that these proposals have served a purpose precisely opposite from arms control. They have in each case given the administration a rationale to urge Congress to build nuclear weapons to strengthen our arms control positions. The INF needed the Pershing II and ground launched cruise missiles deployed in Europe. START required the MX, the B-1 bomber, and the Trident II submarine. Negotiations on chemical weapons, according to Smith, gave President Reagan a useful argument to try to persuade Congress to produce new U.S. chemical weapons.

Also, charges Smith, the administration has repeatedly sent witnesses up to the Congress to testify that our arms control agreements no longer serve our interests, for example, Weinberger's testimony against the ABM Treaty, and Keyworth's pitch that Congress should not allow the treaties prohibiting extending nuclear weapons into space to stand in the way of the Reagan Star Wars proposals.

Smith concludes by pointing out that the President's own Scowcroft Commission concluded that "arms control in an indispensable element" of national security policy to reduce the risk of nuclear war. As for the Reagan record, Smith says:

The President and his arms control staff have had ample opportunity to prove their mettle. Three years of work have produced zero progress. All previous presidents since Eisenhower had some arms control agreement to their credit. While Soviet obduracy must be considered in judging the Reagan record, history will not be easily satisfied with the superficial excuse that "it takes two to tango."

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that both the article by Kenneth Adelman and the article by Gerard Smith to which I have referred be printed at this point in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the articles were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

WHO'S RIGHT ABOUT HOW TO HANDLE THE RUSSIANS, REAGAN OR HIS CRITICS?

REAGAN'S RIGHT: THIS IS THE MOST PEACE WE'VE HAD IN AGES

(By Kenneth L. Adelman)

It has become fashionable to depict U.S.-Soviet relations as tumbling to their lowest point ever in the postwar area. Indeed, the picture is often portrayed so as to suggest that we are on a road to nuclear war somewhere in the not-too-distant future.

Before this rhetorical roll gains yet more momentun, we should pause to ask: Is it all really true?

Many of the words from Moscow recently have been harsh. The Soviet leadership talks about Italy possibly suffering the fate of Pompeii, Scandinavia and Japan burning in nuclear fires and President Reagan pursuing a Hitler-like policy. Such statements are indeed aggravating. The refusal of the Soviets to participate in nuclear arms talks is lamentable. The increased patrol of Soviet submarines off U.S. coasts is worrisome even if they have prowled these waters for many years. And the Soviet Olympic boycott is regrettable.

But are we, really, in a situation where the chance of U.S.-Soviet conflict and nuclear war are higher than in the past? Are we really less secure today then we were four years ago?

I think not. Quite the countrary. The two most likely paths to nuclear conflict—use by a Third World leader who gets his hands on the bomb in some regional conflict or use in a Soviet-U.S. conflict—are less probable today than in the past.

The first of these possibilities could come about only as the result of nuclear proliferation. Herein, surprisingly, lies one of the success stories in the realm of arms control. One of Parkinson's wisest laws states that the success of a policy can be measured by the catastrophes which do not happen. By that measure, we have here a welcome success.

And it has been an unforeseen amount of success at that. In 1958, a special committee of the National Planning Association predicted in a monograph that "by 1970, most nations with appreciable military strength will have in their arsenals nuclear weapons—strategic, tactical or both." In the early 1960s, President Kennedy warned of a world in 1975 with 15 to 20 nuclear weapon states.

Such dire forecasts have not come to pass, largely because for over 30 years we have worked with many other countries to build and buttress the political, legal and moral barriers against the spread of nuclear weapons.

This has been accomplished in a relatively undramatic but ultimately effective way, helping to hold proliferation in check. Reinforcing and, as necessary, revising policies and programs for stopping the spread of nuclear weapons have received top priority under President Reagan.

Herein, not surprisingly, also lies a critical areas of U.S.-Soviet dialogue and cooperation. In the past few years, this dialogue has been extensive and intensive. It has not been halted by the Soviets, as were the nuclear arms talks. This dialogue endures because the Soviets, like we, share a deep concern about the spread of nuclear weapons. The prospect of a Khomeini, Qadaffi, Amin or other such leader acquiring nuclear weapons is unsettling to them, as it is to us.

Though we still have much to do on nonproliferation, this path to nuclear weapons use is considered today less likely in the future than was estimated in earlier years. As Barry Blechman, a former arms control official in the Carter administration, wrote just recently; "A realistic current assessment of the potential number of nuclear weapon states in 1990 would be roughly one-third . . . [that of] previous assessments." We strive to cut that even further, but it is still good progress.

The second most likely path towards nuclear war, that through Soviet-U.S. conflict escalation, is likewise less likely today than in years gone by. Undeniably, we have serious problems in Central America and the Middle East, particularly in the Persian Gulf. Nonetheless, the world flashpoints are less numerous and less heated than many that have come before.

Just go back two decades, for example, and compare President Kennedy's 1,000 days in office to President Reagan's first 1,200 days. The Kennedy era is popularly recalled as one of suave and skillful American stewardship over foreign affairs. Yet, during that brief time, we endured the Bay of Pigs fiasco, a disastrous U.S.-Soviet summit in Vienna, a buildup of U.S. involvement in Vietnam, the construction of the Berlin Wall and, certainly not least, the Cuban missile crisis. Those were dangerous days. Events during the past three plus years, no matter how nettlesome, certainly do not match that cascade of crises.

Likewise in the 1970s, when the U.S.-Soviet dialogue was so rich and hopes for detente so high, regional crises were nonetheless severe. From 1970 to 1976, while American and Soviet leaders held five summits and engaged in any array of arms control negotiations with each other, the Soviet Union fully backed and armed the continuing infiltration of North Vietnamese troops into South Vietnam—making a peaceful settlement of the conflict impossible. The Middle East then erupted and the Soviets threatened to intervene with their own troops in the conflict, prompting us to go on strategic nuclear alert. Those too were dangerous days.

In many ways, 1975 symbolized the whole decade. In that year, there was a full-blown U.S.-Soviet dialogue—a Ford-Brezhnev summit in Helsinki and four Kissinger-Gromyko meetings—and severe regional reverses or scares: the fall of three countries in Southeast Asia; a NATO ally, Portugal, being gravely threatened by communist subversion, and the Soviets arming and dispatching thousands of Cubans to Angola to enable the Marxists to win that civil war. During the first six months, Secretary Vance and Ambassador Dobrynin met some 25 times, followed by the Carter-Brezhnev summit in Vienna. Still, regional crises flared. There was the flap over a Soviet brigade in Cuba; the false Soviet statements adding fuel to the already-blazing fires in Iran after the American hostages were seized, and, most seriously, the massive Soviet invasion of Afghanistan—called by President Carter the greatest crisis since World War II.

It is remarkable to recall that in each year from 1975 to 1980, armies largely supplied by Moscow or Soviet forces invaded or seized control of a different country: South Vietnam in 1975, Angola in 1975-76, Ethiopia in 1977, Cambodia in 1978 and Afghanistan in 1979.

Nothing on the scale of these crises has happened over the past three years. This is all to the good, not only for those around the globe spared the imposition of totalitarianism, but also because greater regional stability diminishes the chances of U.S.-Soviet conflict.

The Soviets have, since 1981, encountered resistance. This is the inevitable product of their own actions. At the same time, American strength and leadership have been restored.

Even so harsh a critic of the administration's handling of Soviet affairs as Strobe Talbott of Time Magazine writes in his new tract, "The Russians and Reagan": "Soviet expansionism has been slowed; embittered and impacted as the Soviet-American relationship was, it was also remarkably free of full-scale crisis" during the Reagan administration. He points out that of the three major wars during this period—Iran-Iraq, Lebanon and the Falklands—"none had become a superpower confrontation."

This is the key point. The world is not more dangerous today. The factors that make it more stable, that dampen chances of nuclear conflict, are active U.S. diplomacy and relationships, which calm down potential flashpoints and build up regional security; and increased U.S. deterrent strength, which demonstrates to a potential aggressor that any attack would be too costly, that the anticipated pain far outweighs any conceivable gain. Our arms control proposals, which are designed to reduce the number of nuclear weapons on both sides and to reduce the risk of war, could reinforce these factors, were the Soviets willing to agree.

These factors make the recent words of President Reagan, that "the world is a little bit safer than in the past," right on the mark.

To be sure, there is room to improve the current state of affairs. And it does need marked improvement. President Reagan has attempted to do just that by strengthening Allied and other relationships; by restoring a credible military posture, and by embarking on a wide-ranging arms control agenda. He has sought to reopen and deepen the U.S.-Soviet dialogue, as shown in his Jan. 16 speech and through a variety of private channels. A better dialogue and active nuclear arms talks would be preferable to continued Soviet absence from negotiations if the Soviets were willing to undertake serious talks.

But they haven't been willing for the past six months. They walked out of the Geneva talks on European nuclear forces and have not agreed to our proposal to resume START talks on long-range weapons not because of the Reagan administration's approach to the Soviets, not because of any previous or existing rhetoric, and not because of the ambitious "deep cuts" we seek in nuclear arms. They walked out, quite simply, because NATO stayed the course set in December 1979. That of course called for deployment of missiles to counter the ever-growing number of highly mobile and threatening SS-20 nuclear missiles, if arms control was not successful.

It is hard to imagine any U.S. administration proceeding differently on deployments in the face of Soviet insistence on its "half-zero" option—hundreds of warheads for the Soviet side versus zero for our side. And it is hard to imagine any administration accepting such a lopsided arms control "solution" (quite apart from whether any U.S. Senate would ratify such a skewed accord).

The administration still strongly hopes that the Soviets will recognize, and act on, their interest by returning to the nuclear arms talks. At the same time, we look forward to constructive responses from the Soviet Union to our new proposals for a global ban on chemical weapons, for conventional force reductions in Europe and for measures to reduce the risk of surprise attack in Europe.

But our beckoning is different from their returning. It brings to mind the question Hotspur asked, when his cousin bragged in "Henry IV, Part I," that he could "call spirits from the vast deep" to help them. "Why so can I, or so can any man, but will they come when you do call for them?"

He's Wrong: Belligerence Without Arms Talks Leads to the Brink

(By Gerard C. Smith)

Since 1963, the United States and the Soviet Union have been able to take a series of modest but significant steps toward controlling the nuclear arms race. The agreements they have reached have created an elaborate set of rules governing the size and nature of each side's forces and enabling each to keep track of the other's weaponry.

Though the arms race has continued apace, these agreements have at least established a starting point for the later achievement of more meaningful controls and reductions. It is now clear, however, that the actions of the Reagan administration are leading to the collapse of all that has been achieved, and can destroy what remains of the negotiating process.

This is an alarmist conclusion, granted. But a careful analysis of the words and deeds of this administration confirms it. Adroit public handling of its policies may allow the administration to appear dedicated to arms control, and to blame the Soviet Union for unraveling the process. But unless this government changes its course soon, history will record that the last hope of a contractual superpower relationship to control nuclear arms was forfeited by Ronald Reagan.

One does not have to be an arms expert to appreciate what is now going on. The administration's words and deeds may be as confusing as a puzzle but the pieces can be put together, even by laymen. Here are some of the important ones:

Administration officials have repeatedly testified before Congress that continued adherence to past arms control agreements may no longer serve American interests. Officials have also claimed that future limitations on a variety of nuclear and other weapons are problematical because of an alleged inability to effectively verify compliance with any proposed agreements.

Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger said on April 8 that he had "never been a proponent of the ABM Treaty." On April 25, President Reagan's science adviser, Dr. George A. Keyworth II, urged the Congress not to allow previous or future treaty obligations to interfere with the president's "Star Wars" plan for a space-based missile defense and other space weapon activities.

Kenworth warned that we should not allow our "options" to deploy weapons in space to be "blocked by a previous patchwork of treaty obligations." Assistant Secretary of Defense Richard Perle has said he opposes certain arms agreements even if they are verifiable.

On April 12, the State Department announced that the United States is considering launching the seventh Trident missile-carrying submarine next year without dismantling an existing submarine. This would be a violation of SALT I and II limits and would torpedo the fragile SALT limits on offensive nuclear weapons. (Neither SALT agreement on offensive weapons is legally in force, but Moscow and Washington have both agreed to continue respecting them as long as the other side does. The informality of this arrangement naturally makes it very easy to break.)

The administration is aggressively pursuing the president's Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI), better known as "Star Wars." In February it announced an accelerated, five-year, $26 billion program to develop and test components for tracking and shooting down Soviet ballistic missiles in various stages of flight. The Star Wars concept is also being sold to NATO allies with the dubious promise that the defensive shield envisioned could also protect Western Europe.

The ABM Treaty strictly limiting systems designed to attack incoming enemy missiles precludes developing and deploying many of the components that would go into a Star War defense. While the government talks about amending the treaty to accommodate these new systems, that is legally impossible without making a dead letter of the treaty.

The administration has also embarked on a multibillion dollar program to develop antisatellite (ASAT) weapons. In April, the president informed Congress that an arms agreement limiting ASATs is unlikely and that negotiations will not now be initiated. This demonstrates that the administration has little interest in preventing the further spread of weapons to outer space.

In January, the administration dramatically aired charges of possible Soviet violations of arms control agreements, though most of the charges it listed were based on ambiguous evidence; they may have been violations, but they may not have been, too. Arms control opponents in the administration, while admitting that the alleged violations do not have military significance, are using them to argue against adherence to existing agreements and negotiation of new ones.

The administration has made three major arms control proposals—on European-based, intermediate range forces (INF), on intercontinental-range missiles and bombers (the START proposal) and on chemical weapons. All three share the same essential character: at first blush, especially to the uninformed, they appear reasonable; in fact, as informed specialists realize, they are one-sided and nonnegotiable. In the arms control community, this kind of "negotiating" is called showboating.

The two proposals to limit missiles have been efforts to use arms control to force the Soviets to fundamentally restructure their nuclear forces without any equivalent constraints on the United States.

Revealingly, all three initiatives have been presented as supportive of particular American weapons programs. The administration maintained that progress on INF required the Pershing II and ground-launched cruise missile (GLCM) deployments in Europe; START required the MX missile, B-1 bomber and Trident II submarine, and to negotiate the chemical weapons proposal, President Reagan has said, requires producing a new generation of binary weapons.

The 1972 ABM Treaty banning nationwide defense against ballistic missiles is the most significant Soviet-American arms control agreement achieved to date. Successful conclusion of a treaty precluding large-scale defensive systems made it possible to then negotiate limits on offensive weapons.

The ABM treaty was based on a recognition by the superpowers that a nationwide missile defense system could only increase the risk of nuclear war. What's wrong with trying to develop defenses? After all, it is their aim to destroy missiles and not people, to protect rather than to threaten. True, but intent and effect are wholly different. Nuclear weapons have blurred the distinction between offense and defense.

For years, American and Soviet security has involved a condition of mutual insecurity—like two scorpions in a bottle each unwilling to sting the other lest it be stung to death. If one side came to believe that it was stingproof it could be tempted to attack. Therein lies the gravest danger in the nationwide defense systems envisioned by the president.

You may be sure that U.S. efforts to build defenses will be matched by the Soviet Union. When this happens, our concern about being attacked will mount; in future crises, the temptations to strike first will be greater.

The idea that new defensive systems could actually reduce our security is no abstract theory; it is based on lessons drawn from recent history. In the late 1960s, the Soviets deployed the "Galosh" ABM system to defend Moscow. The main justification for the large subsequent increase in U.S. strategic offensive warheads through the development of multiple warhead missiles (MIRVs) was to ensure a capability to penetrate the new Soviet defenses. American MIRVs were quickly followed by Soviet MIRVs and an enormous increase in the number of Soviet warheads. As a result, both nations now have to live with enemy forces that include numerous offensive warheads targeted against each of their land-based missiles. These ratios give a potentially large advantage to the country striking first in a war—a source of dangerous instability.

Deployment of a modern missile defense system would have similar consequences. Each superpower would strive not only to match the ABM system of its rival but to find ways to penetrate it.

The second element undercutting arms control is the development, testing and deployment of a new generation of weapons. Among them are advanced antisatellite (ASAT) weapons, mobile land-based intercontinental ballistic missiles (ICBMs), strategic sea-launched cruise missiles and "stealth" bombers not easily detectible by radar.

Arms control rests fundamentally on two premises: a political willingness to negotiate agreements and a technical ability to verify them. If their development is not aborted, verification of these new technology weapons will be difficult or impossible. Their advent could effectively remove the essential technical foundation for negotiated security, whatever might develop regarding political willingness.

For example, proponents of small, mobile Intercontinental Ballistic Missiles like them because an enemy could not see where they were at any one time, so could not target them. But missiles that can't be seen can't be counted precisely either. An arms control agreement based on numerical limits would be difficult to imagine in a world of mobile "midgetman" missiles.

What about the argument that there are now so many nuclear weapons on both sides that we can stop trying to count or control them? Even the Reagan administration rejects that view. Indeed, its spokesmen are now saying that agreements to reduce offensive armaments are essential if their proposed strategic defensive system is ever to be effective. Without limits on offensive rockets, even the Star Wars system—if it worked, which it won't—could be overwhelmed.

Unfortunately, the prospects for unraveling the existing arms control regime now seem excellent. The electoral process offers little hope for arresting this erosion. The foundation for future arms control may be removed before the November election.

Election campaigns are too consumed by domestic problems and political posturing to permit arms control to be more than a distant second-priority issue. The positions of the candidates will be tailored to address specific issues and serve specific constituencies, so that the broader question of the termination of arms control will be obscured. Candidates will attack policies but not their overall thrust, adding to the obfuscation of central issues.

The proliferation of proposals for rescuing arms control has not been helpful: deep cuts of various kinds, "build-down," the freeze, nuclear-weapons-free zones, etc. These initiatives have cluttered the public agenda with "quick fix" formulas while obscuring recognition of past arms control accomplishments and realistic future negotiating possibilities. The result has been petty bickering among the backers of various "instant gratification" proposals.

While a large segment of the public has been won over to arms limitation, it does not know what that means concretely. The confusion over the proper approach to constrain nuclear weapons has led to condemnation of "classical" negotiated arms control, especially by the freeze movement. This allows the administration to pursue its strategy unchallenged.

The Congress offers little hope for saving the existing nuclear arms limitation structure and the prospect for future accomplishment. It is divided, consumed with concern for formulaic approaches to arms control, intimidated by the popularity of the executive branch and prone to dilatory and personally self-serving measures.

What makes this a particularly critical time for the future of arms limitation is that both of the superpowers are on the threshold of a new era in strategic technology.

Far from being "asleep" in the development of strategic weapons during the past decade, the United States has been ahead in making the transition to the new technical era. It will probably continue to dominate, at least for some time, development of weapons which are intrinsically hard to detect and are made even more deceptive by the addition of "stealth" technology. History suggests, however, that this lead will be short-lived.

Gradually, both superpower arsenals will be dominated by these new weapons. Apart from arms control considerations, the advent of these systems will dramatically reduce the ability of U.S. intelligence to monitor Soviet weapon deployments. Ending the SALT regime will further prejudice U.S. intelligence capabilities, as the Soviets will again be free to conceal their strategic deployments and interfere with our intelligence operations (both are forbidden by the SALT agreements).

This transition will lead to higher vulnerability for targets of all kinds and high levels of uncertainty for strategic planning and budgeting. Such uncertainty will create pressures for military spending even beyond projected levels.

Ironically, though, this time of political and technological challenges to arms control is also the moment when serious arms control efforts could do more to counter the threats of vulnerability and uncertainty than any other component of our national security policy. Fragile though it is, the existing framework of nuclear arms limitation—including the Limited Test Ban Treaty, the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, the ABM Treaty and the SALT I and SALT II agreements on offensive forces—provides a foundation for a comprehensive containment of nuclear weapons.

The Reagan administration often argues that result of the last 15 years of arms control talks have been "disappointing." This author, having spent over three decades working in arms control, is well aware of the frustrations and disappointments that have often resulted from negotiating with an adversary. Progress has been modest, but the SALT process has produced significant achievements, and much more is possible.

Realizing this potential requires a serious commitment to the task. During the past several years, the administration has based its arms control proposals on the false premise that the United States is in a position of strategic inferiority to the Soviet Union. Arms control cannot and should not be used as a method for catching up with the Soviet Union. As long as the U.S. continues to hold such an assumption, we will never achieve an arms agreement.

The draft agreement that the United States offered at the START talks last fall, while revised from earlier proposals, would still require the Soviets to dramatically restructure their strategic nuclear forces while permitting the United States to proceed fully with its planned nuclear buildup. The Soviets cannot be expected to accept deep cuts in their ICBMs if the United States remains unwilling to put on the table weapons that the Soviets find threatening.

For example, banning MX makes good strategic sense if it can be traded (along with other inducements) for a ban on new Soviet ICBMs and reductions in their existing ICBM force. It is also unlikely that the Soviets will agree to significant cuts in ballistic missile warheads without some meaningful restrictions on American heavy bombers and cruise missiles. The administration has failed to make such an offer.

We must begin negotiations in other areas of arms control that have recently been neglected. A destabilizing arms race in space could be avoided through an agreement to ban antisatellite weapons. A comprehensive and verifiable ASAT agreement is possible but it will require sincere, concerted effort.

Another arms control priority should be the achievement of a complete ban on nuclear weapons testing. Although we have come close on several occasions to achieving a comprehensive test ban treaty, it has eluded us. Advances in our technical ability to monitor Soviet tests have eliminated the main obstacle to a treaty.

Arms limitation requires initiatives that are equitable, negotiable, verifiable, durable and stabilizing. If we fail to offer such proposals, the likelihood for both the superpowers is that economic considerations will produce uneven, unilateral arms restraint in the years ahead. Where there might have been mutually negotiated security, there will be greater peril, doubt and insecurity for both sides.

The president and his arms control staff have had ample opportunity to prove their mettle. Three years of work have produced zero progress. All previous presidents since Eisenhower had some arms control agreement to their credit. While Soviet obduracy must be considered in judging the Reagan record, history will not be easily satisfied with the superficial excuse that "it takes two to tango."

The president's bipartisan commission on strategic forces, the Scowcroft commission, concluded that "arms control is an indispensible element" of national security policy to reduce the risk of nuclear war. No amount of new weaponry can make up for our lack of success in this essential area.

RELIGIOUS OPPRESSION IN CUBA

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, the history of Cuba over the last 25 years is one of the great tragedies of modern times. It is a history of a gifted and industrious, people, whose hopes for freedom and democracy have been cruelly and systematically denied. It is the history of a revolution which overthrew the Cuban dictator, Fulgencio Batista, only to be replaced by an even more ruthless dictator. It is the history of one of the greatest tyrants of our time, Fidel Castro, who promised the Cuban people that he would restore democracy and respect the law and human rights, but instead has brought ruin and misery to his people.

Cuba has been ruled for 25 years by one man, Fidel Castro, and a group which seized power in 1959. Cuba's Communist Party, like all Communist parties in power, dominates all aspects of daily life, controlling the means of production and distribution of all goods, services, and information, public communication, public welfare, and education, as well as national defense, foreign relations, and public security. Under these circumstances, the human rights of the Cubans are systematically and repeatedly denied, subordinated instead to the aims of the Cuban Communist Party, as defined by its maximum leader, Fidel Castro.

Human rights violations transfuse all parts of the Cuban society and affect most Cubans. But one segment of the Cuban society is particularly singled out for oppressive actions by the Communist rulers—that segment is religion.

The Cuban Government enforces an active antireligious policy. In the early years of the revolution, the extensive Catholic educational system was destroyed by the Government and hundreds of priests were expelled from the country.

Today, a network of formal and informal restrictions has the effect of limiting religious activity. The official state ideology of atheism is taught on all levels of the educational system. Specific constitutional and statutory provisions are designed to restrict religious observance and education. Cuban law prohibits the observance of religious events when they conflict with work obligations or patriotic celebrations.

Mr. President, it is not difficult to discern that these practices against religious expression in Cuba are reminiscent of similar conditions in Nazi Germany prior to World War II. These conditions, if left unnoticed, can lead to an environment in which genocide can occur. That is why it is imperative for the United States to realize exactly what is being practiced in Castro's Cuba. But that alone will not be sufficient. The Senate should also ratify the Genocide Convention that has been before it for 35 years now. This action would help accelerate the development of a firm principle of international law—that life is sacred.

Our ratification of the Genocide Convention will make it clear to everyone in the world that the United States cherishes and solemnly pledges to safeguard the right of every national, ethnic, racial or religious group to exist.

The Senate's delay has been too long. I urge the Senate to take action and ratify the Genocide Convention.

THE ECONOMIC ILLUSION—WHAT YOU SEE IS NOT WHAT YOU WILL GET

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, at this moment our country seems to be enjoying a full-fledged economic recocery—vigorous overall economic growth, solid increases in personal income. Productivity has improved. Profits are rising. Buiness investment is improving. We also enjoy this strong recovery with a surprising moderation of inflation. Industry is operating close to 85 percent of capacity. The recovery has entered its third year and yet inflation behaves beautifully. Meanwhile, the Congress and the administration have lightened the tax burden considerably. Superficially, we seem to have entered an economic nirvana. So why knock it?

Well, Mr. President, we should knock it. What I have just reported, what we see, is, indeed, superficial. Consider some other aspects of today's American economy. Here we are in the third year of an economic recovery and we are still burdening the country's future with a Federal deficit that this fiscal year will exceed $170 billion. Keep in mind, this is not wartime. This is not the depth of a depression or even a recession.

In this prosperous, peacetime America, the Congress has put together back-to-back Federal deficits that total in only 2 years more than a third of a trillion dollars. That massive sum far exceeds any 2-year deficits in American history under any circumstances. It will bedevil future generations with additional tens of billions of dollars American taxpayers will have to pay in interest every year on this new addition to the national debt.

Furthermore, the deficits will not disappear in the future. There is every indication they will get worse. Oh, sure, some up-beat optimists argue that after the 1984 Presidential election, the President and the Congress will get down to brass tacks—we will cut spending; we will increase taxes; we will bring this deficit monster under control.

But, will we? Well, maybe. But it will be far tougher than most of us realize. First, in spite of the immense stimulating effect of these colossal deficits, the economy has slowed down this summer far more than most Americans realize. Last May—4 months ago—the unemployment rate was 7.4 percent. And what was it last month in August? It was exactly the same—7.4 percent. How much improvement did we have during the summer in jobs? None. We still have 8.5 million Americans seeking jobs and unable to find them. Most economists expect unemployment to improve further in coming months. Maybe it will, but maybe it will not. And 7.4 percent unemployment is an historically high figure. In the past, that level of unemployment would generally have been regarded as a mark of recession.

Furthermore, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reports that we have high levels of workers employed part time for economic reasons, a very high level, higher than we have had in most recessions. These are people who want full-time jobs but can only find part-time work. The latest figures also show a high proportion of so-called discouraged workers. These are persons who want to work but are not considered unemployed because they have given up actively seeking work. Perhaps the saddest figure is the fact that more than two-thirds of the unemployed do not qualify for unemployment compensation. In many cases these people have been pushed onto welfare.

Now, keep in mind, Mr. President, that we still have this high level of unemployment with no improvement for 3 months at a time when we have other evidence that the recovery has slowed down and maybe stalled. The latest 2 months for which we have figures show consecutive drops in the leading economic indicators. The leading indicators are a compilation of 12 measures of future economic activity. They include such indications of the kind of future economic activity we can expect as building permits which always precede building activity and new orders which necessarily precede increased production. They have been generally accurate in foretelling the economic future. After 21 consecutive months of favorable forecast, the economic indicators dropped in both of the last 2 months. Furthermore, retail sales fell last month. Housing starts dropped by a fat 13 percent below July and 18 percent below last year.

Mr. President, the reason that I have detailed this long tale of woe is that it will be hard for the Congress and the President to cut Federal spending and increase taxes next year, after the election, under any circumstances. But if the recovery has stalled out as it seems to be doing, if we seem to be slipping into a recession, either a cut in spending or an increase in taxes will be impossible. Even if the Congress should summon the courage to cut spending, the recession demands of increased unemployment compensation, increased welfare costs, and other mandated recession relief programs would require more Federal spending. The Congress would almost certainly not increase taxes in a recessionary economy. But even if we did, revenues might not increase, because of the dropoff in income and profits. A higher tax rate under those circumstances would not bring in greater revenues.

I do not mean to be a prophet of gloom and doom, as some might characterize the report I am making this morning. But I think what I have reported is realistic. We must recognize that we face a grim, tough challenge in economic policy in the future.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

ROUTINE MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there will now be a period for the transaction of routine morning business for not to extend beyond the hour of 11:40 a.m. with statements therein limited to 1 minute each.

S. 3006—LICENSING PROCEDURE BY FEDERAL ENERGY REGULATORY COMMISSION

Mr. EVANS. Mr. President, yesterday I introduced S. 3006, a bill to amend the Federal Power Act of 1920 as it relates to licensing procedures by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission. The bill requires that, before the Commission grant any new preliminary permits, licenses, relicenses, exemptions, or other approvals of hydroelectric facilities on the Columbia River or its tributaries, it develop procedures for prior consolidated reviews and prior assessment of the cumulative environmental impacts of individual projects in a given river basin. Furthermore, the legislation requires that FERC develop detailed procedures and a timetable for full implementation of the Columbia River Fish and Wildlife Program developed by the Pacific Northwest Electric Power and Conservation Planning Council.

Mr. President, fish and wildlife resources of the Columbia River Basin have been adversely affected by past hydroelectric development and could be harmed even more by future development. The records of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, which licenses non-Federal hydroelectric development, suggest that most new hydroelectric development will be accomplished by private or non-Federal public entities. The FERC has at least 400 applications pending for hydroelectric development in Idaho, Oregon, Montana, and Washington, and approximately 400 outstanding preliminary permits in those four States. Many of the applications and permits are for projects throughout the Columbia River Basin. Most of these recent proposals are for hydroelectric projects of less than 5 megawatts. Many of the hydroelectric projects are proposed for tributary drainage basins which contain important anadromous fish habitat.

Although individual projects may have no significant adverse effects on the fish and wildlife resources of the basin, the cumulative effects of such development throughout a river basin could be quite harmful to migratory fish. At present, Federal review procedures generally are limited to assessments of individual projects. Little or no consideration is given to cumulative effects of such dams.

Mr. President, the Pacific Northwest Power and Conservation Planning Council in its Fish and Wildlife Program recommended many procedural and substantive standards designed to ensure that no new hydroelectric development takes place without consideration of cumulative effects on fish and wildlife. I served as chairman of the Northwest Power Planning Council when these recommendations were made and I share the Council's enthusiasm for recommendations.

I believe that Federal agencies should assess and mitigate cumulative environmental effects of multiple hydroelectric projects on fish and wildlife. It appears that additional study is needed to design methods for assessing cumulative effects and incorporating such assessments into Federal review processes. I do not suggest that a permanent moratorium on hydroelectric development on the Columbia River and its tributaries is necessary or even appropriate. I do think, however, that no further projects should be approved until the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission develops criteria and methods for assessing potential cumulative effects on hydroelectric development on fish and wildlife.

Mr. President, the Northwest Power Planning Council's Fish and Wildlife Program includes measures to support future hydropower development at the least sensitive locations and with minimum environmental impact. With these safeguards, needed additional hydropower development can occur in an environmentally sound manner. Additional hydropower resources will not be needed in the Pacific Northwest until the early 1990's. The present surplus of electric power in the region allows sufficient time to study the impacts of hydropower development and to refine methods for alleviating them.

Mr. President, I ask my colleague and friend Senator GORTON be added as a cosponsor of S. 3006. I further ask unanimous consent that a copy of S. 3006 be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That section 4 of the Federal Power Act (Act of June 10, 1920, 41 Stat. 1063, 1065 and Acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto) is amended by adding the following new subsection at the end thereof:

"On and after the date of enactment of this subsection, no permit, license, lease, relicense, exemption, or other approval or authorization for dams, conduits, reservoirs, or other works for storage or carriage of water, or for the development of power, shall be granted or made on the Columbia River or its tributaries until the Commission has developed and adopted, in consultation with the Pacific Northwest Electric Power and Conservation Planning Council (hereafter, the Northwest Power Planning Council) (established pursuant to the Pacific Northwest Electric Power Planning and Conservation Act (94 Stat. 2697)), detailed procedures for prior consolidated reviews of individual proposals in a given river basin, detailed procedures for prior assessment of the cumulative impacts of individual projects in a given river basin, and detailed procedures and a timetable for full implementation of the Northwest Power Planning Council's Columbia River Fish and Wildlife Program.".

IN MEMORY OF JERRY VOORHIS

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, my old friend, former Congressman Jerry Voorhis, passed on unexpectedly a few days ago at the age of 83.

When he died, Jerry had been out of public office for almost 40 years. But he had never lost his zest for public issues or his compassion for humanity.

Few still remember that for 10 years Jerry Voorhis ably and energetically represented California's 12th District in Congress, from 1937 to 1947.

Sadly, many who do remember his name recall only that he was the first victim of Richard Nixon's campaign tactics.

That is not the way Jerry Voorhis deserves or would want to be remembered.

His life was a monument to caring about others.

On August 1 of this year, Jerry entered the small hospital unit of Claremont Manor, a retirement center where he and Louise, his lovely wife of almost 60 years, had lived since 1972.

Two weeks later, flat on his back, suffering from emphysema, his hand no longer firm, Jerry wrote me one last short note just 3 weeks before he died:

> Just to beg you to do all you can to prevent the deportation of refugees from dictatorship of Central America. They will probably return to great danger if forced to go home. Thank you so much. As ever. Jerry.

During my 16 years in the U.S. Senate, Jerry has written me often: as many as 40 times a year—almost once a week.

He never sought anything for himself—only to share with me compelling pieces he had read on public issues, or to express briefly his own views, so often in concert with mine.

He wrote succinctly, politely, and respectfully—almost apologetically, as though he hated to interrupt my Senate work—yet still managed to convey his deep feelings about human needs.

And he was a loyal friend, staunch in support of my efforts on issues of mutual concern.

He cared deeply about the issues of war and peace, about meeting the needs of the poor, and about insuring adequate health care for all, especially the elderly.

He worried about the mad armament race and President Reagan's efforts to promote it. He supported a moratorium on nuclear testing and a nuclear freeze, and opposed funding for first strike weapons—including the MX missile—and chemical weapons.

He wrote in support of the Legal Services Corp., hospital cost containment and low-income energy assistance, as vital assistance to the poor and those with marginal incomes, and he opposed President Reagan's attempt to cut programs that provide food for the hungry.

He supported energy conservation and development of clean renewable energy sources, and my own long-term energy plan.

Jerry Voorhis lived a full, diverse life.

Born Horace Jeremiah Voorhis in Ottawa, KS, to well-off but peripatetic parents, Jerry was educated in public schools in Kansas, Colorado, Oklahoma, Missouri, and Michigan.

He graduated Phi Beta Kappa from Yale University in 1923. Following graduation he held jobs in a factory and as a freight handler on a railroad.

Then he toured Germany as a representative of the YMCA, then returned to the United States and took work as a cowboy in Wyoming and on an auto assembly line in Charlotte, NC.

From 1925-27, he taught school at Allendale Farm School at Lake Villa, IL, and at the Dray Cottage Home for Boys at Laramie, WY.

He moved to California in 1928, opening the Voorhis School for Boys in San Dimas, where he was headmaster and trustee for a decade.

During this period, he obtained his masters degree in education from Claremont College and taught American history at Pomona College.

After failing in a try for the State legislature in 1934, he was elected to the 75th Congress in the election of 1936, as a progressive Democrat representing the predominantly Republican 12th district, by 8,500 votes.

He won reelection by increasing margins four times, despite a gerrymandering attempt by the Repubican-dominated State legislature in the early 1940's.

A staunch New Dealer, Congressman Voorhis championed the development of economic cooperatives and proposed an alteration of the monetary system that included the nationalization of the Federal Reserve System.

He was chosen by the Washington press corps as the Member of Congress with the greatest integrity and was voted the hardest working legislator by his congressional colleagues.

In 1946, Los Angeles lawyer Murray Chotiner and a group of conservative Republicans got together determinedly for the purpose of finding someone to run against Jerry Voorhis.

After some effort, they found Richard Nixon.

The key to how the unknown Nixon got elected by defeating the popular Voorhis has been told before, but bears repeating.

Thousands of voters in the district picked up their telephones and were given this messages:

> This is a friend of yours, but I can't tell you my name. I just want to tell you that Jerry Voorhis is a Communist.

Later, Life magazine, in a piece generally sympathetic to Nixon, nevertheless reported:

> Voorhis was a strong New Dealer but nothing that he had ever said or done could be even remotely mistaken for procommunism. Nevertheless, Nixon managed to equate him with Communism. . . .

Nixon won the House seat in the 80th Congress by 15,000 votes, ending the political career of Jerry Voorhis and launching Nixon's.

Ironically, Nixon's campaign tactics, which he continued to use throughout his career, led him not only to the pinnacle of political success—election and reelection to the Presidency—but also to his ultimate disgrace.

Jerry Voorhis always felt somewhat responsible for providing Richard Nixon the chance to do whatever damage he may have done along the way.

Voorhis said in a 1974 interview that he felt he had let the country down by not getting elected in 1946. "I'm sorry and repentant about it."

Although he never again tried for elective office, Jerry remained active in local Democratic party politics.

He became executive director of the Cooperative League of the United States, an organization involved in setting up food and other cooperatives, serving in that capacity until 1965 and then for 2 years as president.

He was executive secretary of the Group Health Association for more than 20 years, and also active in the National Association of Housing Cooperatives and various consumer action groups.

He wrote several books, including Confession of a Congressman in 1947, The Strange Career of Richard Milhous Nixon in 1972, and Christian in Politics.

In a 1941 speech, he described his sense of what the world needs most:

> If I were to say what I believed was the most important single need of the world today I would say it was this: for one people somewhere in the world to give to all mankind of living proof and demonstration that they can, without loss of liberty and without resort to governmental compulsion, solve the economic problems of this power age, end poverty in the midst of plenty, and make the machine the servant of man and not his master.

Jerry Voorhis is survived by Louise, by their daughter and two sons, and by grandchildren including his granddaughter, Victoria, who worked on my staff in 1977.

Norma joins me in sending our deepest sympathy to the Voorhis family. We will miss greatly hearing from this dedicated, intelligent, caring and gentle man.

THE CIVIL RIGHTS ACT OF 1984

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I take the Senate floor to urge the leadership to schedule the Civil Rights Act of 1984 for action before the Senate adjourns on October 5.

Twenty years ago this summer, the Senate debated and resolved a fundamental question that has divided our country not just since the civil war but since the first slaveship arrived from Africa. The basic issue we discussed—and thought we had settled—during that long hot summer of 1964 was whether or not the Federal Government has the power to act to correct racism, injustice and discrimination wherever it existed in this land.

Some Americans believed that racial segregation had ended in 1954, when the Supreme Court issued its decision in Brown against Board of Education. But the truth is, little real progress was made on civil rights until the Civil Rights Act of 1964—specifically title VI, which prohibits discrimination because of race in any program receiving Federal aid.

For 20 years, title VI of that act has been on the statute books—and its effect has been one of the greatest peaceful revolutions in our history.

Almost immediately, the prospect of losing Federal aid caused schools, hospitals, and States and local governments to reconsider their policies on discrimination, almost overnight, title VI became one of the most powerful tools for reducing racial discrimination in America.

And it also became a precedent for dramatic progress in other areas where discrimination had been epidemic in our society—against women, against the elderly, against the disabled. Congress enacted new laws to assist those disadvantaged groups—and all of these laws were modeled on, indeed virtually identical to, title VI of the landmark Civil Rights Act of 1964.

In 1972, we enacted title IX, to prohibit discrimination in education on the basis of sex. In 1973, we adopted section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act to outlaw discrimination against the handicapped. And in 1975, the Age Discrimination Act was written into law to guarantee the same protection to the elderly. As a result of these actions by Congress:

The participation of women in sports in high schools and colleges has soared since the enactment of title IX; disabled youngsters in record numbers are at last receiving special education since the enactment of section 504.

Black enrollment in colleges increased by 92 percent in the decade of the 1970's.

But suddenly, on February 28, 1984—all of our progress against discrimination in each of these areas was placed at risk by the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case known as Grove City College against Bell.

At the instigation of the Reagan Department of Justice, the Supreme Court ignominiously reached out—in a blatantly activist decision that violated the most basic conservative principles of judicial restraint and statutory construction—and crippled title IX by narrowing it beyond recognition.

The Grove City College case is the Dred Scott decision of the 20th century—it is a license for a wholesale return to the evils of discrimination in the critical areas of race, sex, age, and handicap, and it is a decision that Congress cannot and must not permit to stand.

The Grove City decision is a gaping hole in all our antidiscrimination laws—not just those against sex discrimination—because all the other key statutes forbidding bias based on race or age or handicap contain provisions essentially identical to those cut down by the Supreme Court in its decision on sex discrimination.

At a single stroke, the Supreme Court has unfairly jeopardized the hard-won rights of millions of women, minorities, elderly and disabled citizens in every region of our country.

If allowed to stand, there will no longer be any all-inclusive prohibitions against sex, race, handicap, or age discrimination in schools, colleges, hospitals, State, and local governments, or any other recipients of Federal aid.

The consequences of the Court's decision were felt almost immediately. Within a matter of weeks, the Department of Education's Office of Civil Rights dropped 18 pending cases in the area of higher education, and four additional cases in the area of elementary and secondary education, because of the Supreme Court's ruling in the Grove City College case.

No Congress that believes in the principle of equal justice under law could acquiesce in a misguided ruling like that. And so, on April 12, a broad bipartisan coalition in both the House and the Senate introduced legislation to reverse the decision and restore the four major civil rights statutes that had been placed in jeopardy. The response to that legislation was immediate and effective. Two House committees unanimously reported the legislation, and on June 26, 1984, the bill was overwhelmingly approved in the House of Representatives by a vote of 375 to 32. Meanwhile the original list of cosponsors in the Senate grew from 52 to 63.

In short, the support for this legislation is broad, bipartisan, and deep. During many days of hearings, top ranking civil rights officials in four past administrations, Republican and Democratic alike, unanimously endorsed the bill.

But from the beginning of this legislative battle, a small but determined band of implacable opponents of civil rights have waged a relentless campaign against Senate action on the bill.

They have argued that the bill will impose a new and massive yoke of Federal intrusion on the States and the private sector. And at every stage of the debate, these opponents of civil rights have had the tacit support of the Justice Department and the White House.

After passage by the House, our opponents resorted to the all too familiar delaying tactics in the Senate that have often given this Chamber its reputation as the graveyard of civil rights.

Their shameful arguments have no more merit in 1984 than they did in 1964. As in 1964, we are told that the bill will result in new intrusions into the prerogatives of State and local governments that will threaten our constitutional system. As in 1964, we are threatened with a filibuster by those who say they want only to clarify our intent.

The truth is that the opponents of this bill never had any intent of supporting this legislation or any other civil rights bill. They are determined to talk both on and off the Senate floor until the pressure of adjournment forces us to accept defeat.

But we are no less determined. We are prepared to debate this bill around the clock. We are prepared to answer the charges of our opponents. Above all, we are prepared to insist that the 98th Congress will not adjourn until the Senate has had a fair chance to vote upon this measure.

The issue at stake is as clear as it is fundamental—Federal tax dollars should not be used in any way, shape, or form to subsidize discrimination.

From the beginning, the sponsors of this legislation have stated and restated our intention to do nothing more than restore the status quo which existed before the Supreme Court's decision in the Grove City College case. But our opponents have repeatedly come forward with extremist legal analyses and bizarre examples to obscure the merits of the issue.

Let there be no mistake about this point. We intend the coverage of this bill to be no broader than it has been for the 20 years. But we also intend it to be no less broad. We intend recipients of Federal money to be covered in their entirety, as they have been for the past 20 years. We do not seek to expand coverage or enforcement beyond what was clearly understood to be the law prior to Grove City. But neither will we retreat a single inch from that prior law because some recipients of Federal money now say they want the right to their Federal subsidies free of any obligation to act against discrimination.

During the Senate hearings, administration representatives argued that so-called ambiguities in our bill created the prospect of new and expanded coverage under the four civil rights laws which our bill amends. Because of these concerns, Senator PACKWOOD and I, with the active participation of Senator DOLE and the majority leader, have met repeatedly with representatives of the Reagan administration, including Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights Brad Reynolds, and with representatives of the civil rights community, in an effort to reach a common understanding on the language of our bill.

Beginning last June, all the parties conducted an exhaustive reexamination of the issues. We said that we would accept any clarifying language that was offered consistent with our intent—but that we would never accept substantive amendments or legislative history retreating from the protections in prior law.

These meetings have continued for the past 3 months. Issues were explored in exhaustive detail—and substantial progress was made. But so far, each time we have approached a final agreement, the administration and its supporters have backed off.

We still have time to find a solution that will permit Senate consideration and rapid enactment of this bill before adjournment. But the time for talk is nearly over, and the time for voting is at hand. Let me repeat as clearly as I can—the Senate must not adjourn without the chance to vote on this legislation.

Our opponents continue to claim that enactment of this legislation will vastly expand the powers of the Federal Government, and extend coverage of these laws far beyond what Congress originally intended. All of these claims are false and unfounded.

But in order to answer these objections once and for all, the proponents of the bill have decided to clarify our measure with an amendment that deals plainly with all of the objections raised.

When we go to the Senate floor, we will offer a compromise package that precisely incorporates all areas of coverage as they were construed and applied before the Grove City decision. Only those who were classified as "recipients" of Federal aid under the criteria and standards developed over the past 20 years will continue to be recipients in the future. Those who were not recipients under those standards will not be recipients under the law we seek to pass.

With respect to the key issues of coverage of States and localities, our amendment excludes departments and agencies which neither receive Federal financial assistance nor are primarily involved in carrying out the purposes for which the assistance was granted.

With respect to most private businesses, the substitute makes clear that only those establishments of a corporation that receive Federal financial assistance are covered. For example, if one plant of an auto company receives a Federal grant, another plant of the same company would not be covered unless it also received a grant.

Finally, the substitute amendment ensures that the scope of the termination authority remains narrow and pinpointed to the discrimination which exists.

That is where we stand this afternoon, 2 weeks from final adjournment of the Senate.

This legislation can pass—and pass easily, with overwhelming bipartisan support—if the President of the United States is willing to take the simple step of telling Congress that he wants it.

For months, we have waited for the President's answer; but all we have received is obstruction, indecision, and delay. Now, time is running out. And so today we take the Senate floor to ask President Reagan as clearly as we can: "Where do you stand, Mr. President? Are you for civil rights or not? Are you for the Civil Rights Act of 1984—or against it?"

There is no doubt that this legislation is the most important bill remaining on the calendar. Long after the trade bill, and the highway bill, and the continuing resolution, and the Debt Ceiling Act are disposed of, this Congress and this Senate will be judged by a single test—"Did we stand up for civil rights—or take a walk?"

And let there be no doubt in any Senator's mind that, before the 98th Congress is history, the Civil Rights Act of 1984 will be brought before the Senate for a vote.

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Time for morning business has expired.

TELEVISION AND RADIO COVERAGE OF THE SENATE

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, would the Chair lay before the Senate the pending business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now resume consideration of the unfinished business, the motion to proceed to the consideration of Senate Resolution 66, which the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A motion to proceed to the consideration of Senate Resolution 66 to establish regulations to implement television and radio coverage of proceedings of the Senate.

The Senate resumed consideration of the motion to proceed.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, time is not controlled in this 20 minutes. However, I think in all fairness, if there are speakers we should try informally to allocate the time. But that does not seem to be the problem before me at this moment. I do not see anybody here. Therefore, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I know it is 12 o'clock or close to it, depending on whose clock you look at, but I need to talk to the minority leader just for a moment. So that I may gain that time, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BOSCHWITZ). Without objection, it is so ordered.

VOTE ON MOTION TO PROCEED

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. CRANSTON. I announce that the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. TSONGAS], is necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber who wish to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 67, nays 32, as follows:

NOT VOTING—1

Tsongas

So the motion to proceed was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the resolution by title.

The bill clerk read as follows:

A resolution (S. Res. 66) to establish regulations to implement television and radio coverage of proceedings of the Senate.

The Senate proceeded to the consideration of the resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, the resolution is now pending, and I have previously announced and advised the minority leader and other Senators who are particularly interested in this issue of what I am about to do.

CLOTURE MOTION

Mr. President, I now send a cloture motion to the desk and ask that it be stated by the clerk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The cloture motion having been presented under rule XXII, the Chair directs the clerk to read the motion.

The bill clerk read as follows:

CLOTURE MOTION

We, the undersigned Senators, in accordance with the provisions of rule XXII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, hereby move to bring to a close debate on Senate Resolution 66, a resolution to establish regulations to implement television and radio coverage of proceedings of the Senate.

ORDER OF PROCEDURE

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, the provisions of rule XXII require that the vote on this motion will come on Friday of this week unless other arrangements are made or unless the Senate is not in session on Friday.

Given that circumstance, I suggest to the Senate since we are in our last days of this session of Congress, some thought should be given to whether or not other matters might be dealt with in the time between now and next Friday or perhaps next Monday. I think particularly if any conference report that is available, and I know the disability conference report is available.

As I announced yesterday, I wish to return to the consideration of the trade bill and also as I announced I wish to finish the trade bill and get on to the highway bill yet this week because it is imperative, in my judgment, that we do that highway bill so that the Interstate Highway Program and other matters will not be adversely affected.

So, Mr. President, I wish now to consult with the minority leader and with the managers of this resolution on how we might proceed.

If some Senator wishes to speak now on the resolution he is free to do so, but otherwise I am going to suggest the absence of a quorum so that we may have that conference.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, will the majority leader yield for a question?

Mr. BAKER. I yield.

Mr. SARBANES. I understand it is the majority leader's intention, since he has filed the cloture motion, between now and Friday to deal with other matters; is that correct?

Mr. BAKER. Yes. Just in terms of trying to get as much done as we can, I have suggested that.

I have no desire to cut off anybody or to reduce the time desired for debate on this issue. But I thought maybe we could do both, have some debate on the TV resolution and also do the trade bill and the highway bill.

Mr. SARBANES. I take it from that that it is the majority leader's expectation that the vote on the TV issue will really be on the resolution as it is before the Senate.

Mr. BAKER. Not necessarily, Mr. President. I think amendments, of course, can be offered to the resolution and I expect will be offered to the resolution.

Once again, I have no desire to limit any Senator's opportunity to speak or to offer amendments and the Senate to dispose of them. But I guess I am suffering from the leadership anxiety about getting as much done as we can before we go out.

So I would like to also, in addition to our action on TV in the Senate, try to finish work on the trade bill and the highway bill yet this week.

Mr. LONG. Will the Senator yield at that point?

Mr. BAKER. Yes.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, there are several of us who desire to speak in opposition to the Senator's cloture motion between now and the time it comes to a vote. Some of us are ready to start talking now, and there are some Senators who are ready to offer amendments.

At the same time, if I understand the rules—and I think I do; if I am in error, the Senator can straighten me out—conference reports are privileged matters. If the disability conference report is ready, it can be brought up, and I have a speech ready to make on the disability conference report. That is a matter of very serious concern, and I see Senators on the floor who are very much interested in it Senators who sponsored that legislation and who played a major legislative role in it. They are entitled to discuss the disability conference report.

If I recall, it requires no more than a simple majority vote to move the Senate onto the trade bill which, as far as this Senator is concerned, must be passed. So it is a judgment call on which matter we want to vote on and which one we want to talk about at the moment.

I will try to cooperate and consider all that is involved. I am very sympathetic to the efforts of the distinguished Senator from Missouri, Mr. DANFORTH, and the chairman of the committee, Mr. DOLE, in trying to see that the trade bill is considered. I will cooperate in trying to see that we do have an opportunity to consider other measures as well as this pending one.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, the distinguished Senator from Louisiana has been most cooperative, not only in terms of our moving to other matters, such as the trade bill or a conference report, but also on the matter of the orderly handling of the TV in the Senate debate. I think I know how strongly he feels on this issue and any number of times he could have obstructed the pattern and procedure that has been laid out to ask the Senate to address that, but he has not done that and I am grateful. I am also grateful to him for his remarks now.

Mr. President, it is my understanding of the rules that, as the Senator from Louisiana pointed out, if the Senate chooses to go to a privileged matter such as the conference report on the disability bill, as soon as that matter is disposed of, the Senate will resume consideration then of the TV in the Senate resolution which would not displace it, would not put it back on the calendar; indeed, going to any privileged matter would not do that, I believe.

Mr. President, I put that as a parliamentary inquiry. Is that not the case?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A privileged matter would not displace TV in the Senate.

Mr. BAKER. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, what I hope we could do now is to get a time agreement on the conference report on the disability bill, and then, in the meantime, maybe we could work out an arrangement on going to the trade bill and maybe even arrange a time to get to the highway bill and still have time for Members to offer amendments to the TV in the Senate resolution and to debate it.

If the minority leader is prepared for me to do so, and the managers of this resolution, I am prepared to ask the Senate now to turn to that conference report. But, before I do, could I inquire of the minority leader and the Senator from Louisiana if we might enter into a time agreement on the conference report at this time.

Before I do that, may I inquire, are there any items in disagreement to this conference report?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The conference report is not yet at the desk.

Mr. BAKER. Then I guess I am a little premature.

Mr. BYRD. May I respond to the distinguished majority leader?

Mr. BAKER. Yes.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, as far as I am concerned, I have no problem with the majority leader proceeding to take up that conference report. As to a time agreement on it, I have no problem with that. I can only speak for myself at this point because we have not run the telephones.

Mr. BAKER. Could I inquire of the distinguished Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I have prepared a statement, and I think my statement is essential to the legislative history of this measure. My statement will take about 20 minutes. If we had a 1-hour limitation, which is a figure that we had discussed, I would point out that that leaves on this side of the aisle only about 10 more minutes available for someone, if I take the amount of time that I assume I would probably take. But the other side might not be planning to use all their time.

I do not anticipate any serious opposition to this conference report, but I also anticipate that there are Senators, such as the Senator from Michigan, Mr. LEVIN, and the Senator from Maine, Mr. COHEN, who have played a significant part and a leading role in this measure, and who will undoubtedly want to be heard about the matter and to explain both what they like about the conference report and perhaps what they might not like about the conference report.

I would point out to the leader that this is a very significant measure. This program is presently costing about $18 billion a year. The long-range estimate on this program is $23 billion a year, measured in current dollars. The Senator from Louisiana is concerned that we must see that it does not some day become $85 billion a year.

We will have some statements to make in good faith about the matter which I think are essential for the record. I do not think it is going to take any inordinate period of time. I would think we might be able to dispose of the conference report in an hour, and if not, maybe in 1½ hours.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, the Democratic cloakroom is presently prepared to run the request. What would be the majority leader's proposal as far as a time agreement is concerned?

Mr. BAKER. I have conferred with the distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee and I had a conversation with the distinguished ranking minority member. They have both suggested, I believe, an hour, equally divided.

Mr. GOLDWATER. Mr. President, will the majority leader yield for a question?

Mr. BAKER. Yes.

Mr. GOLDWATER. Mr. President, we have not heard yet from the majority leader about the probability of the conference report on the Department of Defense reaching this floor. I would remind my leader that we have 27 amendments proposed by the Senate that have not even been discussed. And I can envision that bill taking most of the week. Has the leader thought about that?

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, may I say to my friend from Arizona that I think part of my waking hours for the last week have been devoted to that, principally in meetings with the Speaker, and with others trying to resolve it. I talked perhaps dozens of times to the White House and to the Secretary of Defense on the details of how this matter might be resolved so that both the authorization bill and the appropriation bill might go on an agreed basis that was satisfactory to the President. All I can say at this time is that those negotiations are still underway. I remain somewhat hopeful that they might resolve the issue. I think we are pretty close. But if we cannot resolve the issue pretty soon, we will have no alternative except to try to get the bill up and do the best we can with it in the Senate.

But I would ask the Senator from Arizona to let us try a little while longer to see if we cannot get a compromise that the White House will agree to and accept, and that the House of Representatives will agree to pass and send to us.

Mr. GOLDWATER. Will this take precedence over other legislation on the floor?

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, it would in this sense: It is imperative that we pass, in my opinion, not only the defense authorization bill, but also a defense appropriations bill. I am trying very, very hard to keep defense from being in a continuing resolution on appropriations, and I am determined, if possible, that we should not fail to pass a defense authorization bill. So it is right up there among the absolute must items with debt limit and the continuing resolution that must be done before we get out.

Mr. GOLDWATER. I thank my friend.

Mr. BAKER. I thank my friend from Arizona.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I wonder if the leader would yield to me for a moment.

Mr. BAKER. Yes.

Mr. PRYOR. Out of a sense of courtesy and fairness, and I have heard the leader several times in the last few moments mention going to the trade bill, I first want to commend the managers of the trade bill. I would like to state to my colleagues at this time that it is not my desire to block the trade bill. I support the trade bill with one exception. That exception relates to an industry that is very vital to the State of Arkansas; that is, the bromine industry. I have discussed this matter with the Senator from Missouri, Senator DANFORTH, with the distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee, Senator DOLE, and with the distinguished Senator from Texas, Senator BENTSEN. But I am stating at this point to the very distinguished majority leader, for whom I have the greatest respect, that if a unanimous-consent request be propounded to go back to the trade bill at this point in the proceedings, I would have to object. I do that with greatest reluctance, and also with greatest respect.

Mr. BAKER. I thank the Senator from Arkansas. He is always most courteous, and always a good friend. Let me outline how I would propose to approach that. We are not now in a cloture situation. With the adoption of the motion to proceed to the consideration of Senate Resolution 66, that ended the post-cloture situation.

So it would not require a unanimous consent to get to the trade bill. It very well may be that is the way the leadership would attempt to do that. But it could be reached by motion, as could the highway bill, and as could a conference report. But I hope that the Senator from Arkansas will give me an opportunity to confer with the managers to see if we cannot address his questions and his problem. I recognize as a sister and adjoining State that there are problems unique to our region. For a moment there, I thought the Senator was going to talk about rice. But had I interjected that, I would have been wrong. I have not yet addressed the question of how bromine affects Arkansas, but I am prepared to do so.

Mr. PRYOR. The majority leader has just given the Senator from Arkansas an idea, and I might end up doing that if there is a motion.

Mr. BAKER. I will never forgive myself for having opened my mouth.

Mr. PRYOR. We have a lot of fine recipes, as I recall.

Mr. BAKER. I do remember the Senator reading at length, and, indeed, the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD become a veritable compendium of recipes for ways to fix rice that ran no doubt to a thousand pages.

Mr. PRYOR. The best seller on that list was the rice recipe, as I recall, belonging to the wife of the very distinguished Senator from Louisiana, Senator LONG—Mrs. Carolyn Long. that recipe was the best seller, as I recall.

Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, let me say I understand the problem of the Senator from Arkansas, and I appreciate his problem. I am confident that there are ways to take care of the problem which will be totally satisfactory to him. I look forward to working with him to try to accommodate his situation. Ambassador Brock will be here, I think within the next hour or so. I hope that Ambassador Brock, I, and the Senator from Arkansas would have the opportunity to sit down. I think we can provide about as close to an ironclad guarantee as possible that this problem will be taken care of to his satisfaction without the necessity of resorting to too many rice recipes.

SOCIAL SECURITY DISABILITY BENEFITS REFORM ACT—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, while we see if we can work out a time agreement, I think it might be appropriate to go to the conference report. May I inquire, are the conference documents here now?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The conference report is here.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I submit a report of the committee of conference on H.R. 3755 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 3755) to amend titles II and XVI of the Social Security Act to provide for reform in the disability having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses this report, signed by all of the conferees.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Senate will proceed to the consideration of the conference report.

(The conference report will be printed in the House proceedings of the RECORD.)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas is recognized.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I am pleased to bring to the Senate for consideration the conference report on H.R. 3755, the Social Security Disability Benefits Reform Act of 1984. As my colleagues will recall, the Senate bill was approved on May 22 by an overwhelming vote of 96 to 0. The House bill, although different in several major respects, had been approved by a similarly impressive vote of 410 to 1. The legislation we have before us now makes significant changes in the Social Security disability review process, and includes a series of provisions designed to improve the accuracy of disability determinations, the uniformity of decisions between the different levels of appeal, and the consistency of such decisions with Federal law and standards. It has the support of every conferee on the House and Senate side.

In my view, the conference report is a major accomplishment, representing the culmination of more than 2 years of congressional deliberation on the very difficult and emotional issue of disability insurance reform. It responds to many of the problems we have seen in the disability program since periodic eligibility reviews commenced in 1981, and is intended to clear up the chaotic situation in the State disability agencies and the Federal courts.

As my colleagues are well aware, the legislation mandating periodic eligibility reviews of disability beneficiaries was passed by Congress and signed into law by President Carter in 1980. The task on conducting these reviews, however, fell upon the current administration, but with no special legislative provisions for assessing the continuing eligibility of people already on the rolls. More than 2 million people, many of whom had been on the rolls for many years, became subject to the 3-year eligibility review requirement.

The requirement was well-conceived. I think we have an obligation not to only those in this program but also to taxpayers generally to review programs to make certain those who are receiving benefits deserve to receive those benefits. But, while the requirement was well-conceived, its implementation resulted in some significant problems and dislocations which were not anticipated and which have contributed to an unprecedented degree of confusion in the operation of the program. Over 1 million people have been reviewed in the past 3 years, about half of whom were found ineligible by the State disability agencies administering the reviews. Among those who appealed their termination decisions to an administrative law judge, some 60 percent had benefits reinstated. Obviously, some people were removed from the rolls who should not have been. The disparity between the decisions of the States and the administrative law judges, though long standing, has also been a major concern.

Other concerns stemmed from the fact that under present law, individuals who have been on the rolls, possibly for many years, are reviewed as if they were new applicants. The only relevant issue in an eligibility determination is whether or not the individual can engage in substantial gainful activity. As a result, people can be—and have been—terminated from the rolls who have not medically improved since the time they were initially granted benefits. While there may be many proper reasons for this to happen, such as when an individual is erroneously allowed benefits in the first place, serious questions were nevertheless raised.

During this entire period, the administration endeavored to improve the quality of the review process. Among other important changes, face-to-face interviews were introduced in district offices for individuals preparing to undergo eligibility reviews; all medical evidence available over a 12-month period must now be examined; more detailed explanations of decisions are required; a larger proportion of the beneficiary population has been classified as permanently impaired as thus exempted from the 3-year review requirement; and a temporary moratorium was placed on the review of two-thirds of all mental impairment cases pending a revision of the criteria used for determining eligibility. This was initiated prior to the nationwide suspension of periodic reviews announced last spring.

Notwithstanding these efforts by the administration, problems remained that required legislative remedies. It is unfortunate for all concerned that these problems were not anticipated when the original legislation was enacted in 1980.

To ensure that disability determinations were made in a nationally uniform manner and consistent with congressional intent as embodied in the Social Security Act, it was first necessary to develop legislation to deal with the standards of review used for people on the rolls. In addition, it was necessary to take steps to improve the uniformity of decisions between the various levels of decisionmaking and appeal. And, it was necessary to clarify and make more explicit certain key aspects of the disability determination, for example, in the area of evaluating the disabilities of people with more than a single impairment and those suffering from pain. These and other issues have been addressed in the pending conference report.

This conference agreement makes major changes in the way disability reviews are conducted. For the first time, a clear standard of review for people on the rolls will be spelled out in the law. A finding of medical improvement or some other change in the beneficiary's condition will be required along with ability to work in order for benefits to be terminated. In addition, clear standards of rulemaking will be spelled out for the Social Security Administration with the goal of reducing some of the confusion surrounding the criteria being used by the State agencies, administrative law judges and the Federal courts. It is my hope that these and many other provisions of the conference agreement will restore the confidence of the disabled in the accuracy and fairness of the disability review process. And this is critical because, in my view, we must continue the eligibility reviews. We ought to make certain we are not turning back the clock as far as making sure, as we do in other programs, that only the deserving are on the benefit rolls. At the same time, great care must be exercised to protect those disabled people who have every right to remain on the rolls.

Reaching this consensus has been a long and difficult process as we endeavored to find ways to protect the interests of the disabled without promoting runaway growth in the disability insurance program. All of us would like to have been able to reach a speedier resolution, but that was not possible. The problems were complex and without obvious solutions. Also views varied widely on the best course of action. Fortunately, these were not partisan differences and most of these differences have been resolved, or at least accommodated, in the pending conference report.

To achieve this consensus, concessions were required on the part of both the House and Senate; on net, I believe, the product is a good compromise. In the area of medical improvement, the conference report contains a middle position between the House and Senate bills, with the standard of review in the House bill being clarified and made more workable, the Senate effective date expanded to ensure that people in already certified class actions are covered by the new standard, and the burden of proof requirements in the Senate bill—which created some real confusion—are carefully laid out and explained in the statement of managers. The Senate receded on its position of sunsetting the medical improvement standards and including a financing fail-safe. On the other hand, the Senate position generally prevailed in the area of the evaluation of pain and multiple impairments. The House receded on its provision to require the Secretary to adopt as agency policy those U.S. Court of Appeals decisions which conflict with her interpretation of Federal law. Each of the agreements are summarized at the end of this statement.

This legislation is not perfect, of course. But in my view, this is a good compromise that balances the various interests. The basic eligibility criteria for disability benefits have been clarified and made more explicit. This should allow the reviews, which were suspended by the administration last spring, to be resumed in an orderly way and conducted on a uniform, nationwide basis.

There have been nearly an equal number of Senators on both sides of the aisle who have had a deep interest in this legislation, and many people who are to be commended for their role in the development of this legislation. The Senate conferees—Senators PACKWOOD, ROTH, DANFORTH, LONG, BENTSEN, and MOYNIHAN—and other of my colleagues—Senators COHEN, HEINZ, LEVIN, DURENBERGER, and METZENBAUM, RIEGLE, SASSER, and HELMS, to name a few—have worked diligently to help resolve this difficult issue. I might add that Senator HELMS, introduced one of the first pieces of legislation on this issue.

Of course, I would be remiss without extending my thanks to a distinguished Member of Congress from Texas, Congressman PICKLE, chairman of the Social Security Subcommittee, who has done an outstanding job and provided a great deal of leadership in this area.

Even before you thank other Members you ought to thank the staff. We have had staff working on these problems on both sides of the aisle for months. I do not know how many meetings Carolyn Weaver has conducted along with Mike Stern and Joe Humphreys of Senator LONG's staff, but there have been many. They had only one purpose in mind, that was to find an objective answer to some of the difficult problems we have seen in the disability insurance program in the past few years.

I want to thank the staff for all their efforts. Certainly, many people who may never know about how the changes were made will be indebted to the staff who gave a lot of their time and a lot of their talent to bring this matter to fruition.

Finally, I'd like to note the support we have received from the administration in helping to develop this compromise agreement. I commend Secretary Heckler, Secretary of HHS; the Justice Department; OMB; and the other Federal agencies that have been working with us over the past few years.

In my view, the Reagan administration has been very forthcoming. As I mentioned earlier, this law was passed in the Carter administration. The responsibility for conducting the reviews fell to the Reagan administration. I cannot seem to get that straight for Spencer Rich, the Washington Post, and the New York Times, but sooner or later they will get it right. If they do report the facts, they will report that the review bill was passed in 1980 and Ronald Reagan was not the President in 1980. Today, the Congress is acting to revise the 1980 law.

In closing, I urge my colleagues to support the conference report on H.R. 3755. It is a good, solid piece of legislation that ought to have unanimous support.

Mr. President, I have attached a summary of the conference agreement at the end of my statement. There are several points I would like to clarify about this agreement.

First, the conference report does not contain the express provision contained in the Senate bill that the burden of proof in the medical improvement standard rests with the recipient and not the Secretary. I want to make it clear that the recipient continues to bear the burden of proof in establishing the existence of his disability, just as is the case for people applying for benefits. The Senate language on burden of proof was eliminated because it was seen as unnecessary and potentially confusing. The conference report also changes the language of the "no presumption" in the Senate bill to make it clearer that we do not intend for the Secretary or the courts to draw any initial inference of the presence or absence of continuing disability from the fact that the recipient was found to be under a disability in a prior determination.

I would like to note that the Supreme Court held in Matthews versus Eldridge that the burden of proof lies with the recipient.

Second, the conference report eliminates portions of the language in the effective date of the Senate bill relating to the time limits, exhaustion requirements, and other provisions of section 205 of the Social Security Act and regulations of the Secretary. These provisions are critical to the orderly administration of the program, and nothing in this legislation should be interpreted as detracting from their broad applicability. The effective date provision does, however, permit all class members of certified class actions to seek review of their cases under the medical improvement standard establishment by this act, even where they may not have pursued their appeal rights in accordance with section 205 and the Secretary's regulations. This is intended to help resolve the existing controversy over the medical improvement issue in the courts and is justified on the grounds that many class members of certified class actions may have formed reasonable expectations from the fact of certification that they would receive further review of their cases. Accordingly, the bill gives them the opportunity to receive such further review. But this should in no way be interpreted as a judgment by the conferees that these individuals have claims properly pending in court or that these classes were properly certified. The conference bill's treatment of these cases should be given no broader reading, and certainly should not be used as a precedent.

Third, the Senate bill expressly provides that the medical improvement standard established by the bill does not apply to unnamed putative members of uncertified class actions, and that such individuals, to the extent they have not individually sought judicial or further administrative review of their cases, will not have any further administrative review of the determination of the Secretary. The House bill is silent on the matter. The conferees, after carefully considering this matter, have concluded that the best approach is to prohibit any further certifications of class actions that raise the issue of whether a medical improvement standard should have been applied to individuals terminated from the rolls prior to the enactment of this legislation. This approach, which more directly addresses the nature of the problem this legislation seeks to correct, is designed to accomplish the same result as the related provision in the Senate bill. Accordingly, the rationale set forth in the Finance Committee report for why such determinations will not be reviewed under the medical improvement standard, directly applies to the provision agreed to by the conferees. The Senate report gives four reasons for this approach: First, because of the highly speculative nature of class certification, putative members of an uncertified class action—unlike members of a certified class action—have no reasonable expectation of obtaining judicial review of their determinations by way of the class action; second, these putative class members have already decided not to pursue their appeal remedies under the act, and therefore are left in the same position under this provision; third, the number of people which might be remanded to the Secretary were these individuals to be treated similarly to members of certified class actions is literally unknowable since these actions have not yet been certified, presenting serious adverse consequences for the orderly administration of the program as well as its ultimate cost; and fourth, there is a pressing need to end the acrimonious litigation that has engulfed this program. I might add that the Congress has the power to prohibit such certifications since it is by way of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, which Congress has the option to amend, that these class actions would be certified.

Fourth, the conference report has deleted both the House and Senate provisions regarding nonacquiescence by the Secretary with certain U.S. Court of Appeals interpretations of the Social Security Act. While some of the conferees have expressed strong reservations regarding this practice, it should be made clear for the record that it is not the position of the Senate that the practice is unconstitutional as exercised by the Department of Health and Human Services or as by any other Federal agency. In this regard, I would like to make a part of the RECORD a letter by the Solicitor General of the United States stating that nonacquiescence is constitutionally proper, and that a prohibition of nonacquiescence would have serious adverse implications for the Government's litigation in the Social Security area.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Solicitor General's letter be printed in the RECORD along with the summary of the conference report.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
OFFICE OF THE SOLICITOR GENERAL,
Washington, DC, May 7, 1984.

Hon. ROBERT DOLE,
Chairman, Senate Finance Committee, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN DOLE: I am writing to express the Department of Justice's strong opposition to the provision in Section 234 of H.R. 3755 requiring the Social Security Administration (SSA) to follow adverse court of appeals decisions in calculating payments to beneficiaries who were not parties to the adverse decisions but whose cases would arise within the jurisdiction of that court of appeals. The Department of Justice previously commented on this proposal in a letter to you dated September 30, 1983, and in testimony given by Deputy Assistant Attorney General Carolyn B. Kuhl on January 25, 1984. I will not repeat the arguments raised in those statements. However, I wish to reemphasize our serious objection to this provision.

This provision represents an unprecedented interference with the ability of the Justice Department to determine the cases it will appeal. In practical terms the bill would require the Department to consider seeking Supreme Court review of the first adverse decision on a point in any court of appeals. This will significantly restrict the prerogative of the executive to decide which cases should be appealed and, by forcing the government to take more cases to the Supreme Court, will increase the Supreme Court's already heavy workload. (Of course, the most likely result is that the Supreme Court will refuse to hear most of these cases, because it rarely grants review on issues of statutory construction absent a conflict among the circuit courts.) Moreover, the bill's consequences may spill over to unrelated areas of government litigation since its intent appears to be to require the government to urge the Supreme Court to hear more Social Security cases at the expense of other programs that have cases meriting Supreme Court review. There also would be significant practical problems in administering the provision, because it often is difficult to ascertain the precise scope of a particular appellate decision until subsequent cases arise on somewhat different facts and a court is asked to distinguish prior precedent. Finally, the provision would have the effect of rigidly freezing the law in a particular circuit and thereby foreclosing the Secretary from asking an appellate court to reconsider the particular holding in light of experience or changed circumstances, including contrary holdings by other courts of appeals.

The government must be accorded great discretion to choose the cases it will appeal. As the Supreme Court recently recognized in United States v. Mendoza, No. 82-849 (Jan. 10, 1984), the "Government is not in a position identical to that of a private litigant" (at p. 5). In that case a unanimous Supreme Court decided that the government could not be foreclosed from relitigating a legal issue it had previously litigated unsuccessfully in another action against a different party, even within the same judicial circuit. The Court's decision rested on many of the same considerations we have relied on in objecting to Section 234 of H.R. 3755. The Court observed (at p. 6; emphasis added):

"Government litigation frequently involves legal questions of substantial public importance; indeed, because the proscriptions of the United States Constitution are so generally directed at governmental action many constitutional questions can arise only in the context of litigation to which the government is a party. Because of those facts the government is more likely than any private party to be involved in lawsuits against different parties which nonetheless involve the same legal issues.

"A rule allowing nonmutual collateral estoppel against the government in such cases could substantially thwart the development of important questions of law by freezing the first final decision rendered on a particular legal issue. Allowing only one final adjudication would deprive this Court of the benefit it receives from permitting several courts of appeals to explore a difficult question before this Court grants certiorari. * * * Indeed, if nonmutual estoppel were routinely applied against the government, this Court would have to revise its practice of waiting for a conflict to develop before granting the government's petitions for certiorari."

Thus, strong policy reasons counsel against a departure by Congress from what the Supreme Court has recognized as the established principle that "the United States, like other parties, is entitled to adhere to what it believes to be the correct interpretation of a statute, and to reap the benefits of that adherence if it proves to be correct, except where bound to the contrary by a final judgment in a particular case." United States v. Estate of Donnelly, 397 U.S. 286, 294-295 (1970). That is especially so in the massive Social Security disability program, because Congress by statute has directed the Secretary "to assure effective and uniform administration of the disability insurance program throughout the United States." 42 U.S.C. (Supp. V) 421(a)(2). Indeed, although Section 234 of H.R. 3755 undoubtedly is motivated by considerations of fairness, the provision actually is quite unfair to the litigating interests of the United States. It would, in effect, make every case a circuit-wide class action, contrary to Rule 23 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, whenever the government loses a Social Security case in a court of appeals—but not when it wins one.

In sum, Section 234 of H.R. 3755 has serious adverse implications for the conduct of the government's litigation in the Social Security context. At the same time, we recognize that SSA's decision not to acquiesce in a particular decision has on occasion led to results that might be perceived as inequitable. There are, however, far less drastic responses to this perceived problem, such as the provision in the Levin-Cohen bill that would require the Secretary to publish a notice in the Federal Register and to notify Congress whenever she does not intend to acquiesce in a particular appellate decision. In these circumstances, we urge that no legislation be adopted that would damage the conduct of the defense of government programs and policies and would provide an exceptionally troublesome precedent.

Very truly yours,

REX E. LEE,
Solicitor General.

SUMMARY OF CONFERENCE AGREEMENT ON H.R. 3755, THE SOCIAL SECURITY DISABILITY BENEFITS REFORM ACT OF 1984

1. Medical Improvement Standard

Establishes a medical improvement standard under which the Secretary may terminate disability benefits on the basis that the person is no longer disabled only if

(1) there is substantial evidence demonstrating that (a) there has been any medical improvement in the individual's impairment or combination of impairments (other than medical improvement which is not related to the person's ability to work) and (b) the individual is now able to engage in substantial gainful activity (SGA); or

(2) there is substantial evidence consisting of new medical evidence and a new assessment of RFC which demonstrates that although there is no medical improvement, (a) the person has benefited from advances in medical or vocational therapy or technology related to ability to work, and (b) that he or she is now able to peform SGA; or

(3) there is substantial evidence that although there is no medical improvement (a) the person has benefited from vocational therapy and (b) the beneficiary can now perform SGA; or

(4) there is substantial evidence that, based on new or improved diagnostic techniques or evaluations, the person's impairment or combination of impairments is not as disabling as it was considered to be at the time of the prior determination, and that therefore the individual is able to peform SGA; or

(5) there is substantial evidence either in the file at the original determination or newly obtained showing that the prior determination was in error; or

(6) there is substantial evidence that the original decision was fraudently obtained; or

(7) if the individual is engaging in SGA (except where he or she is eligible under Section 1619), fails without good cause to cooperate in the review or follow prescribed treatment or cannot be located.

In making the determination, the Secretary shall consider the evidence in the file as well as any additional information concerning the claimant's current or prior condition secured by the Secretary or provided by the claimant.

Determinations under this provision must be made on the basis of the weight of the evidence, and on a neutral basis with regard to the individual's condition, without any inference as to the present or absence of disability based on the previous finding of disability.

Regulations must be issued within 6 months.

Effective date: Applies only with respect to the following categories:

(1) Determinations by the Secretary made after date of enactment;

(2) Cases pending at any level of the administrative process on the date of enactment;

(3) Cases of individual litigants pending in Federal court on the date the conference report is filed;

(4) Cases of named plaintiffs in class action suits pending on that date;

(5) Cases of unnamed plaintiffs in class action suits certified prior to that date; and

(6) Cases where a request for judicial review was made within 60 days prior to enactment;

Cases in categories (3), (4), (5) and (6) will be remanded to the Secretary for review under this standard. Individuals in (5) will be sent a notice via certified mail informing them that they have 120 days after the date of receipt of the notice to request a review under the medical improvement standard.

No class action may be certified after the date the conference report is filed which raises the issue of medical improvement with respect to an individual whose benefits were terminated prior to that date.

Persons whose cases are remanded to the Secretary will receive benefits pending the Secretary's decision and appeal of that decision if they so elect. If found eligible, any person whose case was remanded under this provision will receive benefits retroactive to the date they were last found ineligible.

2. Evaluation of Pain

Requires the Secretary of HHS, in conjunction with the National Academy of Sciences, to conduct a study concerning the questions of using subjective evidence of pain in determining whether a person is under a disability, and the state of the art of preventing, reducing or coping with pain. This study is due to the House Committee on Ways and Means and the Senate Committee on Finance by December 31, 1985.

Establishes the following statutory standard to be in effect until December 31, 1986:

"An individual's statement as to pain or other symptoms shall not alone be conclusive evidence of disability as defined in this section; there must be medical signs and findings, established by medically acceptable clinical or laboratory diagnostic techniques which show the existence of a medical impairment that results from anatomical, physiological or psychological abnormalities which could reasonably be expected to produce the pain or other symptoms alleged and which, when considered with all evidence required to be furnished under this paragraph (including statements of the individual or his physician as to the intensity and persistence of such pain or other symptoms which may reasonably be accepted as consistent with the medical signs and findings), would lead to a conclusion that the individual is under a disability. Objective medical evidence of pain or other symptoms established by medically acceptable clinical or laboratory techniques (for example, deteriorating nerve or muscle tissue), must be considered in reaching a conclusion as to whether the individual is under a disability.

3. Multiple Impairments

Provides that in determining whether a person's impairment or impairments are of a sufficient medical severity to be the basis of a finding of eligibility for benefits, the Secretary must consider the combined effect of all of the person's impairments, whether or not any one impairment would alone be severe enough to qualify the person for benefits. Provision applies to all determinations made on or after 30 days after enactment.

4. Moratorium on Mental Impairment Reviews

Provides for a moratorium on reviews of all cases of mental impairment disability until the mental impairment criteria in the Listing of Impairments are revised to realistically evaluate the person's ability to engage in SGA in a competitive workplace environment. The revised criteria are to be published within 120 days of the date of enactment. The moratorium applies to all cases on which an administrative or judicial appeal was pending on or after June 7, 1983. All persons claiming benefits based on mental impairment disability who received an unfavorable initial or continuing disability decision after March 1, 1981 could reapply for benefits within 12 months of enactment.

5. Pre-Termination Notice

Requires the Secretary to initiate demonstration projects on providing face-to-face interviews for (1) pre-termination continuing disability cases and (2) for all initial denial cases, in lieu of face-to-face evidentiary hearings at reconsideration, to be done in at least 5 States with a report due to the Committees on Ways and Means and Finance April 1, 1986. Also requires Secretary to notify individuals upon initiating a periodic eligibility review that termination of benefits could be the result of the review, and that medical evidence may be provided.

6. Continuation of Benefits During Appeal

Provides for continuation of benefits during appeal for all continuing disability review cases through the decision of the administrative law judge, at the election of the individual. Where the ALJ's decision is adverse to the individual, these benefits would have to be repaid. The provision is permanent for SSI disability recipients, and will apply to Title II disability beneficiaries through December 1987. The Secretary is required to report to Congress on the impact of this provision by July 1, 1986.

7. Qualifications of Medical Professionals

Requires the Secretary to make every reasonable effort in cases based on mental impairments to insure that a qualified psychiatrist or psychologist complete the medical portion of the case review and of the residual functional capacity assessment before any determination may be made that an individual is not disabled. The statement of managers will state that the Secretary has the authority to contract directly for such services if the State agency is unable to do so.

8. Standards for Consultative Examinations/Medical Evidence

Requires the Secretary to promulgate regulations regarding consultative examinations, including when they should be obtained, the type of referral to be made and the procedures for monitoring the referral process. The Secretary must make every effort to obtain necessary medical evidence from the treating physician before evaluating medical evidence from any other source. The Secretary must also consider all evidence in the case record and development of complete medical history over at least the preceding 12-month period.

9. Administrative Procedure and Uniform Standards

Requires publication of regulations setting forth uniform standards for DI and SSI disability determinations under section 553 of the Administrative Procedures Act, to be binding at all levels of adjudication.

10. Non-Acquiescence

No statutory provision is included in the conference agreement. The statement of managers of the conference agreement states that the agreement to drop both the House and Senate provisions is not to be interpreted as approval of the practice of "non-acquiescence", that the conferees note that questions have been raised about the constitutional basis of the practice, that many of the conferees have strong concerns about the current application of the practice, and that a policy of non-acquiescence should be followed only where steps have been taken or are intended to be taken to receive a review of the disputed issue in the Supreme Court. The conferees also urge the Secretary to seek a resolution of the non-acquiescence issue in the Supreme Court.

11. Payment of Costs of Rehabilitation Services

Allows reimbursement to State agencies for costs of VR services provided to individuals receiving DI benefits under section

225(b) of the Social Security Act who medically recover while in VR, whether or not the person worked at SGA for 9 months, and whether or not the person failed to cooperate in the program.

12. Direction for Quadrennial Social Security Advisory Council

Directs next quadrennial advisory council (as required in the Social Security Act) to study the medical and vocational aspects of disability using ad hoc panels of experts where appropriate. The study must include alternative approaches to work evaluation for SSI recipients, effectiveness of VR programs, and other disability program policies, standards and procedures. The Secretary must appoint the members by June 1, 1985.

13. Staff Attorneys

Directs the Secretary to report, within 120 days of enactment, to the Committees on Ways and Means and Finance, on the actions taken by the Secretary to establish positions which enable staff attorneys to gain the qualifying experience and quality of experience necessary to compete for ALJ positions. Statement of managers states that it is assumed, given recent OPM actions, that statutory requirements for establishing specific positions are not required, and that the Secretary is urged to take all reasonable steps to see that the OPM actions result in SSA staff attorneys becoming qualified for GS-15 ALJ positions.

14. SSI Benefits for Persons Working Despite Impairment (1619)

Extends Sections 1619 (a) and (b) through June 30, 1987, and requires the Secretaries of HHS and Education to establish training programs for staff personnel in SSA district offices and State VR agencies, and disseminate information to SSI applicants, recipients, and potentially interested public and private organizations. Effective retroactive to January 1, 1984.

15. Frequency of Continuing Eligibility Reviews

Requires the Secretary to promulgate regulations establishing standards for determining the frequency of continuing eligibility reviews. Final regulations must be issued within 6 months; until that time, no individual may be subject to more than one periodic review.

16. Representative Payees for Social Security and SSI Beneficiaries

Requires the Secretary to (1) evaluate qualifications of prospective payees prior to or within 45 days following certification, (2) establish a system of annual accountability monitoring where payments are made to someone other than a parent or spouse living in the same household with the beneficiary, and (3) report to Congress on implementation, and annually on the number of cases of misused funds and disposition of such cases.

17. Measures To Improve Compliance with Federal Law

Requires the Secretary to federalize disability determinations in a State within 6 months of finding that a State is not in substantial compliance with Federal law and standards. Such a finding must be made within 16 weeks of the time a State's failure to comply first comes to the attention of the Secretary, during which period a hearing could be afforded to the State. The Secretary is directed to comply with current law requirements protecting employment of current State employees to the extent feasible, and is directed in order to accomplish that end, to exceed any applicable personnel ceilings and to waive any applicable hiring restrictions. The statement of managers directs the Secretary to give preference in hiring to agency employees capable of performing the requisite duties.

Mr. LEVIN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I greet the conference report on the Social Security disability reform legislation with a sense of great relief. Relief for those beneficiaries who have been terminated and who are now challenging those terminations through the administrative process or the courts who will now have their matters remanded to the Social Security Administration [SSA] for a redetermination of eligibility based on a medical improvement standard; relief for the current beneficiaries who have not yet been terminated but who have lived under the threat that upon review they could be terminated even though their condition is the same as or worse than when they were initially found eligible; relief for those new applicants for Social Security disability benefits who will now face fairer treatment and consideration by SSA of all of their impairments and not just one that must be deemed to be severe; relief for the recipients of SSI benefits who will now have payment of those benefits through appeals fixed in law; relief for those disabled by pain who may soon enjoy a more humane and realistic response by the SSA to their plight.

I also feel relief, personally, Mr. President, because agreeing to the conference report on H.R. 3755 today represents the culmination of over 2 years of continuous effort on the part of myself, Senator COHEN, and the other Members of Congress who have worked so hard to bring the injustices and problems of the Social Security Disability Program to the attention of Congress and the President.

It started for Senator COHEN and me at the oversight hearing we held on disability terminations in May 1982 when we learned that almost one-half of the persons reviewed by SSA for their continuing eligibility were being terminated. Of those terminated, 50 percent appealed that decision and an amazing two-thirds of those who appealed were being reinstated. The appeals process usually cost the beneficiary a substantial sum of money for attorneys fees—approximately 25 percent of the benefit amount—and took at least 9 months to 1½ years to complete during which time the person was not receiving disability benefits and was no longer eligible for medicare coverage.

At that time we estimated that some quarter of a million disabled persons would eventually make up what we called the injustice index—those persons who were wrongfully terminated only to be later reinstated after great personal hardship and expense. We were not far from wrong. SSA reports now that approximately 200,000 persons have been through such an unjust process, terminated only to be reinstated, and the figure would have been far greater but for the moratorium on further continuing disability review imposed by SSA in April of this year.

Senator COHEN and I were able to win a reprieve for the disability beneficiaries in the fall of 1982 with passage of legislation requiring the payment of benefits through appeal for terminations made through December 7, 1983. We also held another hearing that year in which we uncovered evidence to show that SSA was attempting to reduce the number of allowance decision by administrative law judges through indirect pressures of review and harassment. Passage of this reform legislation was expected by the time the payment of benefits provision expired, but the legislative process was not so easy or so quick. Senator COHEN and I went to the floor on November 17, 1983, with an amendment similar to the conference report we are agreeing to today, during Senate consideration of the fiscal year 1984 supplemental appropriations bill. We came very close to victory at that time, losing on a motion to table by a vote of 49 to 46. On March 27, 1984, the House then passed its bill by the overwhelming vote of 410 to 1. The Senate followed suit, after much deliberation and negotiation, on May 22, 1984, with a unanimous vote of 96 to 0.

Mr. President, in my almost 6 years of service in this body, I have never witnessed a social program in such chaos and disarray as the Social Security Disability Insurance Program over the past 3 years. It has been so poorly and callously administered, with no thought to our basic rules of reason, fairness and compassion.

Because the fairness, order, and consistency which this bill will now bring to the disability program is so long in coming, it is the more welcome. I commend the chairman of the Finance Committee, BOB DOLE, the ranking minority member of the Finance Committee, RUSSELL LONG, and their excellent staff. I also congratulate and commend the chairman of the Social Security Subcommittee of the House Ways and Means Committee, JAKE PICKLE, and the ranking minority member of that subcommittee, WILLIAM ARCHER, for their hard work and willingness to reach consensus on this vitally important legislation. I also commend the work of the other conferees and congratulate them all on the quality of the final product. Implementation of the conference report will bring fairness and order not only to the continuing disability review process but to the overall management of the disability program as well.

I particularly thank my good friend and colleague, BILL COHEN of Maine, for his outstanding work and dedication on this issue. The bipartisanship we brought to this issue was an important factor in our success in the Senate. His staff, particularly Susan Collins, always provided great support.

My own staff, particularly Linda Gustitus and Cassandra Woods, made my contribution possible. I know of no better staffer on the Hill than Linda Gustitus.

My staff person in Detroit, MI, Cassandra Woods, has pursued this issue with perception and determination on the front lines for the last several years. I thank them both for their good work on behalf of the disabled residents of Michigan and America.

Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HUMPHREY). Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana is recognized.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, the pending disability conference agreement represents, like most conference agreements, a compromise between differing Senate and House positions on a number of issues.

As I have stated previously, I do have concerns about the disability bill, and in particular about its medical improvement standard. But on balance, I believe the bill should be enacted because of a number of important improvements it makes in the law. Let me discuss those first.

UNIFORM STANDARDS

Since the beginning of the disability insurance program, a major problem has been the question of how to apply such a program in a nationally uniform manner. There has not been a comparable problem with the general social security program in which the basic causes of benefit eligibility are the attainment of a statutory retirement age or the death of the insured individual. These are factors which can be determined, except in the rarest of cases, on the basis of objective and uniform evidentiary rules.

It is not so easy to find clear-cut, uniform standards of evidence for deciding whether or not an individual is so seriously impaired for medical reasons as to be unable to engage in any significant work activity. Each individual's particular medical circumstances are likely to differ in many respects from those of any other individual. And the importance of a given set of impairments in limiting employability may differ according to the age and vocational background of different individuals. Moreover, different medical experts may not agree as to the degree of restriction on activity that can be presumed from particular medical findings. Even if Congress could write into law a comprehensive set of criteria for sorting out evidence of disability, advances in medical science and rehabilitation therapy could make those criteria obsolete.

For all these reasons, it is difficult to apply the concept of disability on a consistent basis. Yet, it is not acceptable to the Congress that a national program of social security disability benefits should be run in such a way that each individual's eligibility will depend on which administrator happens to decide his case or on which medical theories, economic conditions, or judicial sentiments happen to be prevalent in his region of the country. Time and again, Congress has insisted, and attempted to insure, that the Social Security Disability Program would be operated on a consistent, nationally uniform basis.

In 1967, for example, Congress rewrote elements of the definition of disability to make clear that objective evidence of physical or mental abnormalities must be provided and to require that ability to work be considered in the context of the national economy. In 1980, Congress attempted to improve uniformity by requiring greatly increased Federal review of State agency determinations. The 1980 law also mandates review by the Secretary of findings by individual administrative law judges.

In the context of the current legislation, the problem of uniformity has again arisen. There have been allegations of conflicting guidelines used at different levels of adjudication. There have been questions of the extent to which administrative law judges must follow the policy guidance of the Secretary. And again, this legislation weighs in on the side of a more uniform and consistent program. The Secretary is directed to establish by regulation the standards for determining disability. Those standards are to be applied at all levels of determination and review. Thus, while adjudicators and administrative law judges and, in some cases, Federal district judges may decide whether an individual is disabled for Social Security purposes, Congress intends that they do so according to uniform standards promulgated by the Secretary and not according to their own personal preferences as to how best to decide the issue.

PAIN

The conference agreement adopted, with minor clarifications, the Senate provision relating to the evaluation of pain and other subjective symptoms. This incorporates into the statute the existing policy under which purely subjective allegations of pain or other symptoms cannot be the basis for a finding of disability. This is a good example of the problems faced by the program in maintaining uniformity of standards. The 1967 amendments plainly expressed congressional intent that disability findings be supported by objective medical evidence. The Secretary correctly adopted a policy which allows for consideration of subjective allegations of pain, but only if one of two specific conditions are also met. There must be some objective medical evidence pointing to a medical condition which could reasonably explain the pain and its alleged severity, or there must be actual objective medical evidence, such as muscle deterioration, which demonstrates the existence of severe pain.

Instead of granting deference to the Secretary's inherent regulatory authority to determine the criteria for establishing disability, a number of courts have chosen to substitute their policy judgment that subjective allegations must be considered even in the absence of objective evidence of the type required by regulation. Ultimately, this would mean that eligibility would depend upon the subjective credibility judgement made by each individual adjudicator of claims. This is not much different from turning over the trust funds to the judges and letting them hand out the funds on a case-by-case basis as they see fit.

There are some strong statistical indications that much of the lack of uniformity in the disability program can be attributed to issues like the evaluation of pain—that is, issues where courts and administrative law judges have tended to ignore the criteria established by the Secretary for evaluating evidence of disability. The conference agreement will provide a specific statutory confirmation of the existing regulatory requirement. The administration should undertake appropriate reviews of those categories of decisions which are likely to involve such issues so as to bring about, in practice, a more uniform application of these standards.

MULTIPLE IMPAIRMENTS

Both the Senate and House bills included requirements that the combined impact of multiple impairments must be considered in determining whether an applicant is sufficiently disabled to qualify for benefits. The House formulation of this rule, however, might have been misinterpreted so as to raise questions about the ability of the Department to deny benefits at the initial stage of evaluation on the basis that there is no severe medical impairment.

The Social Security Disability Program is intended to be limited to cases where the fundamental cause of inability to work is a significant medical impairment. It is not intended to remedy vocational handicaps for individuals who do not have seriously disabling medical conditions. In evaluating eligibility, the Department first determines whether a seriously limiting medical condition exists. If it does not, the claim can be denied without further evaluation—including evaluation of vocational capacity. Some courts, however, have ruled that the Secretary cannot deny claims solely on the basis that the individual has no severe medical condition but must always make an evaluation of vocational capacities.

The Senate bill was carefully drawn to reaffirm the authority of the Secretary to limit benefits to only those individuals with conditions which can be shown to be severe from a strictly medical standpoint—that is, without vocational evaluation. It requires, however, that the combined impact of all medical impairments be considered in making this decision.

The conference agreement, with minor language changes of a technical nature, follows the Senate approach. This language clearly indicates that Congress envisions a sequential approach to evaluating disability. The individual must first demonstrate the existence of an impairment or combination of impairments which are sufficiently severe from a medical standpoint as to meet the Secretary's criteria as to what could potentially be a disabling condition. If, and only if, the individual meets this test, there would be a further evaluation as to whether that condition or combination of conditions does in fact preclude him from engaging in substantial work activity in the light of his age, education, and work experience.

CIRCUIT COURT INTERPRETATIONS

The House bill had proposed to require the Department to adopt the interpretations of statute underlying circuit court decisions whenever it was unable to immediately appeal such a decision to the Supreme Court. The Senate bill simply required the Department to notify Congress of such instances. The Conference agreement includes no statutory language on this issue, but the conferees did include a statement of opinion in the report.

For a variety of reasons, it may not always be possible to immediately initiate an appeal of an adverse circuit court decision. In such a situation, the administration should do what the court orders it to do in that case, unless it is able to obtain a stay of the court's order. If the case involves a court interpretation of the statute that might affect other cases, this situation becomes more complex. The Secretary should not be in a position of administering a program which applies one definition of disability in New York, a second in California, and a third somewhere else. Moreover, even within a given circuit, there may be circuit court decisions which are not entirely consistent with each other or which leave some doubt as to just what the court's interpretation was. Courts deal with individual cases. They are not regional legislatures charged with spelling out general policy of a statutory nature.

On the other hand, the Secretary should not simply disregard a circuit court decision which involves a significant statutory interpretation. It is undesirable to simply proliferate law suits and to litigate the same question over and over again. It is undesirable to have a difference in statutory interpretation among different branches of Government remain outstanding for a protracted period. The administration has a responsibility to obtain a resolution of such issues. Appropriate cases should be appealed, and the administration also should consider asking for clarifying legislation.

The statement of managers in the conference report provides a balanced approach to this problem. It recognizes that immediate appeals are not always possible. It also reaffirms the obligation of the Department to support what it believes to be the policy judgment of the Congress as reflected in the statutes. At the same time, it urges that the practice of nonacquiescense be used only in conjunction with a continuing good faith effort of the administration to obtain a resolution of the outstanding issue.

COMPLIANCE WITH FEDERAL STANDARDS

The disability program has proven difficult to administer with any degree of consistency. One structural problem in maintaining national uniformity is that the actual operations of the program are largely carried out by individuals who are employed by the States. Even though all the costs of benefits and administration are supplied from the Federal Social Security trust funds, the power to hire and fire those who hand out those funds rests with the Governors of the States.

Reports by the General Accounting Office during the 1970's showed that this administrative structure was a major barrier to nationally uniform application of the Federal disability program. As a result, the 1980 amendments included changes designed to permit closer control of the program by the Federal Government. Unfortunately, the 1980 amendments did not have the desired result. In the past couple of years, some States have begun to challenge outright the authority of the Secretary to exercise policy guidance over the program. For example, one Governor recently told a House committee that his State has "fashioned and tailored Social Security policy" to conform to the State's philosophy of how the program should be run. Unfortunately, the administration did not move vigorously to deal with those States which chose to defy Federal authority over this program.

I am pleased that the conference agreement includes a Senate provision designed to better deal with this problem. Under this provision, the discretion of the Secretary to allow protracted State defiance of Federal authority would be eliminated. A strict timetable is established for investigating and acting on any indication of State failure to comply with Federal rules. If that investigation confirms a continuing state of nonconformity, the operations of the program in that State must be placed under direct Federal administration.

Mr. President, I have discussed what I consider the positive features of the conference report. I also wish to talk about two features of the report which I find disappointing.

MEDICAL IMPROVEMENT

The major element in both bills was the establishment of a medical improvement standard in reviewing continuing eligibility. The conference agreement is, in many respects, closer to the House than the Senate version on this item, but this is a matter of degree. I continue to have serious reservations about any medical improvement standard, since the essence of such a standard is to continue benefit payments to people who are found not able to work. Where there are handicapped people who have the capacity for work, we should—for their sake as well as the taxpayers'—be restoring them to productive self-support. We should not write them off to a life of dependency on Government benefit payments.

FAIL-SAFE FINANCING

I am disappointed that the House, for the second time in this Congress, has refused to accept a Senate provision designed to improve the financial soundless of the Social Security Program—the fail-safe financing provision. The fundamental theory of Social Security trust fund programs is that they are to be self-financing. They enjoy the security of an earmarked source of revenues—the Social Security payroll tax—and they are also subject to the discipline of living within that revenue source. If the payroll taxes should fall short of meeting benefit obligations, there is no legal authority to continue benefit payments.

In the earlier years of the program, the trust funds always maintained an adequate reserve so that any financial imbalance could be dealt with in an orderly manner and in an atmosphere where Congress could thoughtfully assess the policy choices. This assured ample time to implement any revenue or benefit changes that might be found appropriate.

In recent years, however, the trust fund balances have declined sharply, sometimes coming perilously close to the point of exhaustion. Consequently, Congress has been faced with the need to act on a precipitous basis and to choose among very limited and undesirable options. In the 1983 amendments, for example, to keep the program afloat, Congress voted to infuse massive amounts of general fund subsidies—clearly an undesirable method, which is foreign to the basic nature of the program.

The purpose of the fail-safe proposal was to slow down the rate of decline in fund reserves once they have fallen to near-dangerous levels. This would be done by suspending those features which automatically increase benefit payments until the funds are restored to safer levels or until Congress has had the opportunity to implement measures to deal with the financial problems.

I think the Senate wisely incorporated a fail-safe mechanism in its version of the 1983 general Social Security amendments. I was disappointed that this element of prudence was deleted by the House-Senate conference on that legislation.

In the current disability bill, there were at least equally valid reasons for incorporating a fail-safe financing provision. Historically, the outgo of the disability program has fluctuated much more widely than that of the general Social Security system. The pending legislation makes a significant change in disability standards, particularly by establishing the new medical improvement standard of review. While it is to be hoped that this can be carefully administered within the cost now estimated by the actuaries, the accuracy of similar projections on previous occasions gives little reason for relying heavily on such a hope.

Given this situation and the continuing precarious state of the Social Security trust funds, the Senate again made the right and prudent decision by inorporating a fail-safe financing mechanism in the bill we sent to the House. Again, however, the House has refused to agree to such a provision. I certainly hope that, as a practical matter, the mechanism turns out not to be needed. But I am disappointed that it was dropped. If the current projections prove wrong again, the absence of this feature will force us to deal with the system's next financial difficulties in an atmosphere of crisis rather than in an orderly manner. Moreover, eliminating this provision also removes a necessary Congressional statement of concern over the prospect that this program could double in cost if it is not carefully administered.

SUMMARY

Mr. President, I continue to believe that a medical improvement standard is unwise. There should not be a double standard of eligibility depending on whether you are an initial applicant or a beneficiary being reviewed. In either case, the question of eligibility for this program ought to resolved on the basis of whether or not the individual has the ability to work.

However, it is clear that a medical improvement standard will become law. I hope it can be carefully administered, and that it will not lead to a new round of runaway growth in program costs.

The best hope for bringing this program under control is the kind of careful administration that was mandated by the 1980 amendments. Good administration, of course, depends upon good administrators more than it depends upon the language in the statute. There are, however, several elements in the pending legislation which should help the administrators of the program to do a better job. The authority of the Secretary to establish the criteria for applying the definition of disability is made very specific. Current issues before the courts in the area of pain and medical severity are clarified. The bill spells out the right and duty of the Secretary to federalize administration of the program in the face of State failure to follow Federal rules. On balance, therefore, despite my reservation about some features of this bill and my disappointment that it no longer contains a fail-safe financing mechanism, I signed the conference agreement, and I will vote for the approval by the Senate of that agreement. I recommend that the Senate agree to the conference report.

Mr. President, there are other Senators who desire to speak on this subject, or at least who have led me to believe that they would like to make a speech on this subject. In order that they may have the opportunity to know that this measure is being considered, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SASSER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SASSER. Mr. President, I commend the managers of this bill for their efforts in reaching agreement on what many consider to be one of the most pressing social matters to come before this Congress over the past 3 years.

I first became involved in the Social Security disability issue back in January 1982. Since that time, I have spent a great amount of time attempting to remedy the serious inequities and injustices inherent in the administration of this program.

I believe that the history of the problems affecting the program and consequently the hundreds of thousands of beneficiaries dependent upon it have been elaborated repeatedly over the past 2½ years. No further elaboration is needed here.

The conference report before us today significantly addresses many of the structural deficiencies that are existent in the current system. In particular, I refer to the provisions stipulating the use of a medical improvement standard, payments pending appeal to the administrative law judge, a study on the evaluation of pain, and last, special provisions on multiple impairments.

Unfortunately, there is one provision which is not included in this agreement which I must say I am disappointed not to see included, and that is the provision dealing with the so-called "nonacquiescence" policy followed by the Social Security Administration. Although the language contained in the statement of managers does sufficiently address this problem, it is unfortunate that it is not spelled out in statutory fashion, in this Senator's opinion.

Indeed, a recently released internal report by a Social Security Administration task force pinpointed the problems facing the Federal courts and their efforts to enforce or deal with this nonacquiescence policy. That report stated that there are now 50,000 Social Security cases pending in the Federal courts and that is expected that an additional 28,000 new court cases will arise in fiscal year 1984.

It is my sincere hope that the Social Security Administration will abide by the strong language contained in the conference report. If the Social Security Administration continues to follow the "nonacquiescence" policy which they have adhered to to date, then I shall be prepared to introduce at the earliest possible date legislation which will require the Social Security Administration to follow the legal process which prescribes that if they do not agree with Federal court decisions in a particular circuit then they should appeal the decision to the Supreme Court and get a ruling once and for all.

Mr. President, I applaud the efforts of those who have been involved in this issue over the past 2 years. Indeed, the conference report before us today represents the culmination of many, many hours of negotiation and deliberation.

I might say, parenthetically, that this conference report is indeed welcome news to the thousands of disabled beneficiaries who will face periodic reviews in the future.

It is also welcome news to the thousands of disabled beneficiaries who will no longer have to suffer the injustices created by the Reagan administration's hasty, unwise, and ill-advised acceleration of these periodic reviews in March 1981.

It was really administrative folly which precipitated these wholesale terminations and the cruel injustices that were worked on literally thousands of disabled Americans. It is hoped that this legislative remedy, albeit long overdue, will redress these injustices.

I will support the conference report before us today and I urge my colleagues to support it. I doubt that there will be a single dissenting vote cast against this conference report. When this legislation is sent to the President, I would urge him to sign it. After 2½ years, it appears we are finally close to putting the Social Security disability system back on the right track. The track of serving the disabled citizens of this country who comply with the prescription of the statute and should be eligible for Social Security disability benefits.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. COHEN. Mr. President, will the Senator withhold the request.

Mr. SASSER. Mr. President, I am delighted to withhold the request and yield to the Senator from Maine.

Mr. COHEN. I thank the Senator for yielding.

Mr. President, this matter has been pending in one form or another before this body for well over 2 years and so I do not intend to make a long explanatory statement. I think most of the membership is aware of the genesis of the difficulties.

We passed in I think the year 1980 a measure to try to correct what we saw were some of the deficiencies in the Social Security disability program and I think the last 2½ years do in fact serve to remind not only this Senate and the House of Representatives, but also the country of the kind of conflict that is presented to Members of this body. On the one hand, the taxpayers demand and we have an obligation to be efficient, to spend hard-earned tax dollars efficiently, and that was the basis for the original reform calling for periodic reviews of those who are on the Social Security disability program. By the same token, we also have an obligation to be fair. And it seems to me it has been that essential conflict between the duty to be efficient and the duty to be fair that has presented us with the last 2½ years of debate on how best to pursue the reform of the Social Security disability program.

What took place immediately after the passage of the original legislation was an effort by the administration to implement congressional mandate. They did so with a fervor that was not matched with capability. And they called for the review of cases before there were adequate staffs. They called for reviews of cases when people were not well trained. They called for review of cases under circumstances in which there was an inadequate notice extended to the beneficiaries. A postcard was sent out, "Dear Beneficiary, this is to notify you that your case is coming up for review," with nothing further, no further indication that that individual would then have the burden of proof of coming forward and showing that he or she was still disabled, with no indication in that notice that prior medical evidence would not be considered, with no indication in that notice that those individuals would have to present new medical evidence and carry the burden of proof. That they were still disabled. So time after time thousands upon thousands of individuals were terminated without having been adequately notified as to the consequences of the review procedure itself. Moreover, it was done in a way that certainly does not speak well of our proclamation that we have a humane system of government. It was done basically by computers. There was virtually no human contact between the beneficiaries and the Social Security Administration itself.

So these determinations were made based upon medical charts and the record, determinations made by people removed from the process and out of the fear that if the individuals making the decisions to terminate or to perpetuate the disability relief, that those individuals might be overcome with compassion. Their objectivity and neutrality might somehow be compromised by having to look at the individuals who were being reviewed.

As a result of that sort of objective noninterrelationship with the beneficiaries, the recipients, we had a number of horror stories which have been printed in newspapers across the country, people who were in body casts being terminated from disability, people in iron lungs being terminated from disability. There is one case cited by Senator LEVIN, who has worked so hard to secure the passage of this legislation, from his own State of Michigan, and one of the major cases that we reviewed, in which we had an individual who was a diabetic from the age of 13, as I recall, who was blind in one eye and had tunnel vision in the other, could not walk without assistance from his wife because he had no sense of equilibrium, and yet he was terminated. He went to the hospital and was having some toes amputated because he had gangrene and in the process he suffered a massive heart attack, which doctors later stated was due to the anxiety caused by the termination of disability, only to find out that his wife, 6 months later, received a notice from the Social Security Administration saying, "Sorry, we made a mistake. Your husband's benefits were not properly terminated."

We had cases of people committing suicide and attempting to commit suicide, a desperation from among a large segment of our population who had no other place to turn.

So that is the reason why it had taken so long to reform this situation, because we had these conflicting obligations, the duty to be efficient and duty to be fair. In the process of trying to resolve those conflicting duties, I believe we have come out with a compromise which is acceptable—it does not go as far as Senator LEVIN and I would liked to have had it go, but it does embrace the essential ingredients of efficiency and equity. And I would like to put the stress upon the equitable side of it.

It is going to change the notification requirement. It is going to introduce human contact. It is going to include pain as a factor to be considered, which had been excluded by the Social Security Administration.

We are setting forth some fairly clear-cut standards where those standards were vague and perhaps even nonexistent before. We are going to insist upon the establishment of medical improvements and there will be a continuation, at least on an experimental basis, the continuation of loss of benefits during appeal.

One of the most difficult things about this entire procedure was that many individuals were being terminated and then had the burden of appealing. Then the appeals process would take anywhere from a year to 18 months, during which time individuals had no source of relief or compensation and they lost their homes, sold their cars, and had tremendous physical and psychological burdens placed upon them, only to wait 18 months and then have an administrative law judge make a finding that the administration was in error. That is the sort of thing that this legislation seeks to, and I believe will, eliminate.

So I think what we have today is a compromise thanks to the hard work of Senator LEVIN—and I do not know of anyone who has been more committed to seeing to it that we revise, reform our system than Senator LEVIN. I also want to extend my thanks to Senator DOLE, the chairman of the Finance Committee, for his work in trying to negotiate some very long hours of complex issues between us, Members of this body and the other body and the administration.

I also want to extend my thanks to the Senator from Louisiana who, during the course of these deliberations, raised a number of legitimate issues and who felt as strongly as we did about the need to have a system which was efficient and equitable. As a result of these efforts throughout these negotiations, we have something which is acceptable to the overwhelming majority of the people. I might say that this would not have been possible without his aid and assistance and we would not be here today without his involvement. I want to extend my thanks and congratulations to him, as well.

Mr. President, I am delighted that the Senate today is taking final action on legislation which Senator LEVIN and I sponsored to reform the Social Security Disability Program.

Although the conference agreement on S. 476 does not reflect every reform that we have advocated, it is a worthwhile compromise deserving of support. The bill will protect disabled workers from arbitrary decisions to curtail their benefits, strengthen the administration of the disability program, and promote uniformity in decisionmaking.

At the heart of the bill are the criteria it establishes for assessing the continued eligibility of individuals receiving benefits. In 1980, when Congress mandated periodic reviews of disability beneficiaries, we neglected to set forth standards for determining whether or not benefits should be continued. This legislation remedies that fundamental omission. By establishing clear criteria for disability reviews, this bill will provide disabled workers, their attorneys, State claims examiners, and administrative law judges with an understanding of the grounds for terminating benefits. These standards, including the medical improvement rule, will correct the problems in the current process which have caused hundreds of thousands of severely disabled people to lose their benefits.

Since the disability reviews began in March 1981, State agencies, which apply Social Security Administration guidelines, have disqualified more than 491,000 beneficiaries. Yet, more than 200,000 individuals have been reinstated after appealing to administrative law judges who ruled that they, in fact, remained disabled and thus were entitled to benefits. Thousands of others have been restored to the program as a result of court orders.

The hardships imposed on the truly disabled have been chronicled in countless hearings, studies, court decisions, press reports, and personal experiences. The reviews have spawned an overwhelming number of court challenges, an unprecedented rebellion by State governments, and pleas for justice from the disabled, their families, and their advocates.

Under this legislation, individuals who have recovered will be eliminated from the disability rolls, but those who remain disabled will continue to receive their benefits. These reforms, in my judgment, will ensure an equitable disability program and end the chaos that has troubled the system for the past 3 years.

Other important provisions of the conference agreement will extend the law allowing benefits to be continued pending appeal; mandate more careful consideration of individuals with multiple impairments; and require the standards used to adjudicate disability claims to be issued as regulations subject to public notice and comment.

The Social Security Administration also will be required to conduct a five-State demonstration in which a claimant will have a personal interview with a State claims examiner at the first stage of review. This approach, I believe, holds great promise for improving the accuracy of initial determinations by giving the State adjudicator a more complete picture of the claimant's condition. I hope that a personal interview eventually will be incorporated into the system on a nationwide basis.

Mr. President, several months ago, a Maine woman whose husband lost his battle with cancer as he fought to get his disability benefits wrote to me:

> The emotional stress of living with cancer, knowing your husband may die, is in itself overwhelming, but to have one's own Government not care because first comes the paperwork and redtape, then come people, makes it even worse.

Her words are eloquent testimony on the need for this legislation. By adopting this conference report, Congress can reform the disability program so that its hallmarks are compassion and equity, rather than indifference and injustice.

Mr. President, this legislation is the product of more than 2 years of work. It would not have been possible without the dedication and persistence of Senator LEVIN and the leadership and patience of Senator DOLE, who had been unceasing in his efforts to hammer out responsible legislation. Senator HEINZ, as chairman of the Senate Aging Committee and a member of the Finance Committee, also contributed greatly to this effort. I also want to thank the distinguished Senator from Louisiana whose cooperation was essential to a fair resolution of this problem.

I urge the adoption of the conference report.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I want to thank the Senator from Maine for the gracious reference he made to me and others who were involved in this legislation along with him. The Senator from Maine, along with the Senator from Michigan, have been tireless, have been indefatigable, in seeking to provide sympathetic treatment for those who were disabled and who must seek assistance from the Government or wherever it may be available.

Mr. President, I also want to congratulate the Senator from Kansas [Mr. DOLE], the able chairman of the committee, for the very fine work that he has done to resolve this issue in ways that take into consideration the various and broad swath of problems that are involved in the program.

I do think, Mr. President, in discussing a major program of this sort, that from time to time we ought to give some consideration to the cost of it, and at least some consolation to the taxpayers who have to pay for all of the program. I think now and then we should make it clear to them that we are aware of the pain of paying all the taxes that Government levies on its citizens, and also we are aware of the fact the Government has a very large deficit and that there is a need to economize wherever we can and to contain the costs of all Government spending, be it defense, social welfare, law enforcement, or any other Federal program.

The Finance Committee did not merely by accident become the committee of jurisdiction for the Social Security Program—at least I would like to think it did not become the committee of jurisdiction by any accident.

Mr. President, the Social Security Program went into effect under a Finance Committee bill because it involved a major tax levied on the people of the United States to provide a benefit which was to be generally available to vast numbers of people. Today the program is approaching universality. The program ensures almost all working people, other than those who are Government employees, of a degree of protection against poverty in their declining years. The extension of the program to include disability benefits was a measure which the Senator from Louisiana was privileged to sponsor.

In 1956, Mr. President, the Senator from Louisiana was approached by a number of outstanding people, some of them associated with the labor movement, but all of whom had a long and compelling interest in the welfare of the working population of America. They urged this Senator to sponsor the proposed disability amendment.

The Senator from Louisiana agreed to be a cosponsor of that proposal, and five of us on the Committee on Finance sponsored it at that time. We had a rather extended and heated debate in the Senate. Under the leadership of the late Walter George, who was the chairman emeritus of the committee at that point—he was then chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations—we adopted the amendment sponsored by five of us, members of the Finance Committee, who were privileged to join in starting the Government in the direction of caring for the disabled.

At that time, Mr. President, the Senator from Georgia, Mr. George, spelled out what he estimated to be the cost of the program. And I would urge students social welfare programs to read the speech Walter George gave at that time, because he spelled out the estimate and explained why he thought this was a carefully drawn proposal and it would carefully control the costs.

There has been no Senator even in more complete sincerity in proposing an amendment, or in seeking to assure the Senate and the public in general that this would be a cost that the Government could well afford to bear. I regret to say, Mr. President, that those of us who supported the program and who are very concerned about the cost of Government are somewhat apologetic to the taxpayers to see that the cost does greatly exceed the estimates given at that time. Those estimate were given in complete good faith. It was estimated that this program by now would be costing us about $5 billion a year in 1984 dollars. Yet, Mr. President, by 1978 the program had grown so much that it was estimated to cost in its long-term projections about $40 billion per year, again, in 1984 dollars.

That, Mr. President, amounts to about eight times the cost that we estimated when we voted to start the program. We gave those estimates in complete good faith.

The cost grew until under the administration of President Carter, the President of the United States recommended that Congress enact legislation in 1980 whose implementation has brought down the projections to a current, long-range estimate of $23 billion per year, again measured in 1984 dollars. This, of course, is 4½ times what the cost was originally estimated to be.

When one seeks explanations as to how the cost of the program increased so much, there are a number of explanations. One of them is that the very existence of a program of this sort does provide a disincentive to some handicapped people who otherwise would have been more or less forced to undertake a very difficult program of rehabilitation to try to reach independence.

The existence of the program would also, Mr. President, tend to ease the pressure on those of us who are not handicapped or disabled to either aid in rehabilitation or to provide employment opportunities for those who clearly would have to undergo rehabilitation.

Mr. President, I emphasize that there is a great void in our disability program, and that void has to do with the fact that we have not given adequate attention to our need of having the most forward-looking program that we are capable of devising to help people to overcome their handicaps and their limitations, and to obtain employment once they have done so. We have to go no further than the Netherlands to see what is in store for us if we fail to contain the cost of the program, or to adequately avail ourselves of the potential of rehabilitation for persons who are handicapped, to be sure, but who are not totally disabled.

For example, in the Netherlands, the program has led to a situation in which one out of every six persons of the working age population is on the benefit rolls.

Mr. President, when one looks at the deficit that the Government faces today and ponders the cost of doing for our population what is done in the Netherlands, it provides a fiscal headache to think of the cost of it. Against a projected cost of $23 billion, one could look at a potential cost of well over $100 billion per year.

As a member of what I regard as the most responsible committee in the Senate from the fiscal point of view, the Senate Committee on Finance, I shudder to think of the burden we would have to put upon our taxpayers in order to provide the same expansive and extensive program that they have in the Netherlands. Far better, Mr. President, that we seize upon the advances of medical science to help those who are handicapped to restore their working capabilities, to make the adjustments that would make it possible for them to obtain certain types of employment, and that we call upon the business community to join with Government in giving the people who are handicapped a preference in doing the kind of work which they are capable of doing. Failure to do that means that the handicapped would have little choice but to seek the aid of a Government. Instead, the objective should be, if possible, to help those individuals to become self-sustaining, proud, self-reliant, and taxpaying American citizens. In my judgment, the prime example of what is capable or what is possible for a citizen is the example set by a former President of the United States, the late Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

Mr. President, if such a person were living today, handicapped as he was, it is easy to see how such a person might very well have qualified for our disability insurance program, and perhaps spend a life living on the Social Security rolls rather than performing as a great leader of the Nation—or even a self-sustaining person. Yet, that man, handicapped for a period of three terms and the beginning of a fourth term as President, had carried the burdens of one of the most demanding jobs in the entire world.

When one looks at the enormous accomplishments of Franklin Delano Roosevelt one could look at the kind of handicaps that would cause us as people to lean upon fellow human beings for support rather than providing leadership, hope, and opportunity for millions, not only in this country but around the world.

Mr. President, we cannot afford to relegate to dependency millions of Americans who have the potential of being enormously useful and productive.

While we move to care for those who need and those who through no fault of their own must call upon their Government for its assistance and its cooperation, I hope that we very much keep in mind that this is not the answer for those who have the potential of being useful leaders among our society or of carrying their share of the burden. We have too many examples of what can be done by Americans who are determined to overcome adversity to overcome their handicaps, and to carry their share of the burden—and even more—as self-reliant Americans.

● Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, at long last, the Senate is asked to give final approval to legislation to reform the review process for Americans receiving Social Security disability benefits. Our action today—an effort to establish fair, responsible, and equitable standards for the review of Social Security disability recipients, is one long overdue. No one is more acutely aware of the desparate need for this legislation than the hundreds of thousands of disabled Americans whose benefits—benefits they have earned—have been wrongfully terminated.

As ranking minority member of the Finance Committee's Subcommittee on Social Security and Income Maintenance, I have been involved in the development of this legislation for some considerable time. On October 26, 1983, I introduced S. 2002, the companion measure to H.R. 3755, Representative J.J. PICKLE's legislation that passed the House of Representatives on March 27, 1984, by an overwhelming margin, 410–1.

On May 22, 1984, the Senate unanimously approved a measure incorporating many provisions contained in my legislation. The conference committee, on which I served, labored for nearly 2 months to fashion an acceptable resolution of the differences between the House and the Senate versions of the bill. The product of these negotiations is before us today. It does not contain all the features for which we might have hoped, but it does represent an important achievement in reforming the disability redetermination program and protecting the benefits of hundreds of thousands of disabled Americans. I am pleased that the basis for the conference agreement is the legislation Representative PICKLE and I introduced in the Senate.

This measure represents a critical step in improving and refining the redetermination process. The single most important element is a new medical improvement standard, for termination of a recipient's eligibility.

Under this standard, we have required the Social Security Administration to first determine whether a disabled beneficiary's medical condition has actually improved since he or she was declared eligible for disability benefits, before the SSA can terminate those benefits.

The absence of a medical improvement standard during the continuing eligibility review has provided the Social Security Administration with grounds to terminate the disability benefits of nearly 500,000 Americans since 1981—the year SSA accelerated the mandated review of disability insurance recipients. In the past 3 years, SSA has reviewed the cases of nearly 1 million Americans receiving disability benefits; as a result, SSA terminated the benefits of nearly 500,000 people. A Federal judge in Minnesota described these procedures as "arbitrary, capricious, irrational, and an abuse of discretion." In human terms, what happened is that the Social Security Administration tried to reduce program costs by terminating support for hundreds of thousands of disabled Americans. Nearly 50 percent of all those terminated had their benefits reinstated after appeal.

In response to the thousands of tragic instances of wrongful terminations, Governors from 10 States, including New York, have refused to administer the reviews as directed by SSA. Citizens throughout the country have filed class action suits against SSA, challenging the standards by which their disability benefits were terminated. Circuit courts throughout the Nation have ruled against SSA, and ordered reevaluation of thousands of disabled individuals under a medical improvement standard.

Last April, in recognition of the disarray and injustice plaguing the redetermination process for the past 3 years, Secretary of Health and Human Services Margaret M. Heckler suspended all further reviews of disabled beneficiaries. Despite this action, the inequities did not cease.

Since July 26, the date the conference on H.R. 3755 convened, additional events have demonstrated the pressing, urgent need for this legislation. On August 28, in my own State of New York, a Federal appeals court ordered the Social Security Administration to restore terminated benefits to some 4,000 mentally disabled New York State residents and to reconsider its rejection of applications by 50,000 to 60,000 others. This decision upheld the ruling in January by the distinguished Federal judge for the southern district of New York, Jack B. Weinstein. In his ruling, Judge Weinstein cited a series of internal memoranda circulated within SSA, directing the denial of benefits to mentally ill applicants who could not meet a different, more stringent set of criteria than that mandated by Congress. He termed this a "fixed, clandestine policy against those with mental illness," and ordered the Government to reconsider the eligibility of more than 54,000 New Yorkers.

Indeed, SSA's policies have provoked a rash of court cases involving individuals suing the Government to overturn their termination decisions. This situation, in the words of SSA, is a "major crisis in litigation," and has led to a huge volume of adverse court decisions. At the present time, 48,000 Social Security cases are pending in Federal courts around the country—up from 19,600 cases at the end of 1981. Just last year, 26,798 new cases were filed in Federal court—an average of nearly 100 new cases each working day.

I offer the simple observation that in the half century history of the Social Security Act, there have never been a situation in which Governors and U.S. attorneys have refused to follow or defend the Government's administration of the act. It was the judgment of these public officials that the administrators in Washington were so distorting the intent of the law and the purposes of the act, as to make it a question of elemental justice and, indeed, a crisis in federalism.

It is our responsibility to insure that only the genuinely disabled receive Social Security disability insurance benefits. I supported adoption of the Disability Insurance Amendments of 1980, requiring SSA to reexamine everyone receiving DI benefits. But, it is also the responsibility of the Congress to ensure that these reexaminations are conducted in a manner that is both fair and judicious. The administration of the periodic reviews since March 1981 has been neither fair nor judicious.

It is this shameful situation that had produced this legislation to reform the disability reexamination process. In addition to the adoption of the new medical improvement standard, this legislation would mandate payment of benefits while a recipient is appealing a termination decision to an administrative law judge. It also would establish uniform standards for all disability decisions and maintain the current moratorium on review of mentally impaired recipients.

This legislation also contains an important proposal, establishing a 12 member Commission to conduct a study, in consultation with the National Academy of Science, of the evaluation of pain in determining eligibility for disability benefits. The need for this study is apparent: quite often, an individual may suffer from excruciating, debilitating pain that is impossible to measure through existing medical techniques.

Medical science by definition is the quest for knowledge, which is to say an effort to learn that which is not known. Typically this process begins by the identification of symptoms, followed by a slow process of tracing symptoms to causes. Even when causes are discovered, cures do not always follow. Correspondingly, over the long history of medicine any number of effective treatments have developed in the absence of complete or even partial knowledge of the etiology of the disease or condition involved. A commonplace example is aspirin, which has been in use for almost a century. It relieves certain types of pain, but medical research has only the dimmest clues as to how. More recently, the discovery of steroids has made possible the treatment of many thoroughly disabling diseases of which little if anything is known except that they respond to treatment by steroids. In most—but by no means all—such illnesses and afflictions the most significant symptom is pain. This is where the physician typically begins in the search for a diagnosis and treatment. It is not merely useful clinical evidence, it is often the only, or the predominant evidence.

Upon review of the Commission's report, due on December 31, 1985, it is my hope that we can develop new legislative language and regulations reflecting the Commission's findings on the procedures and methods to establish the existence of disabling pain in the absence of concrete laboratory tests confirming the existence of illnesses already known.

I do not suggest that the measure before us is ideal. In but a few years, the Congress once again will be required to act to ensure that individuals appealing a termination decision will continue to receive disability benefits during appeal. All told, however, the measure before us does represent a significant achievement. It will protect the benefits of hundreds of thousands of disabled Americans. Despite the reluctance of many to consider this legislation, and the efforts of many more to prevent its consideration, I believe we have crafted a measure that will produce more fair, equitable and judicious review of the continuing eligibility of Social Security disability insurance recipients. I urge, in the strongest terms I can, its prompt enactment.●

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, I strongly support the conference agreement on H.R. 3755, the Social Security Disability Reform Act. Passage of this legislation will end the nightmare of 3 long years of injustice, uncertainty, and abuse for the nearly 4 million people who rely on the disability program for basic support. The conference agreement before us represents a major legislative achievement, one that will restore fairness, integrity, and human decency to the disability review process.

Ever since I conducted an investigation into the case of Kathleen McGovern, a mentally impaired woman in Philadelphia who committed suicide in 1982 after the Social Security Administration [SSA] notified her that her disability benefits were to be terminated, I have concluded that the entire disability review process was in need of comprehensive reform. The more deeply I looked into the manner in which SSA was administering the continuing disability investigations, the more clear it became to me that an enormous number of innocent Americans were being needlessly and wrongfully denied their disability benefits.

The national statistics on the magnitude of this tragedy are astounding. Since 1981, nearly half a million disability beneficiaries have been told by SSA that they no longer qualify for benefits. For those with the resources and fortitude to appeal to an administrative law judge, two-thirds have had their benefits restored. Almost 50,000 have taken their cases to the Federal courts, and well over 100,000 are members of class action suits already certified by Federal judges. Twenty-nine States have either refused to process claims under the inhumane standards set by SSA or are under court order to revise their review procedures. Overall, we have a program in a state of shambles.

The human dimension of this crisis—the unnecessary suffering, anxiety, and turmoil—has been graphically exposed by dozens of congressional hearings and in newspaper articles all across the country. People clearly unable to work found themselves stripped of the monthly income upon which they depended, and were forced to resort to State and local welfare programs. Many have ended up living on the streets.

A General Accounting Office [GAO] study I requested last year sheds a great deal of light on the quality of the review process, and its implications for human lives. GAO found that for every 28 cases SSA reviewed, SSA told 13 they were no longer eligible for benefits. Seven of this group were eventually reinstated on appeal; four ended up on welfare. Only 1 of every 28 was able to achieve self-support through employment. These statistics describe a program both deeply flawed and completely out of control.

The legislation before us will return order, equity, and national uniformity to the disability review process. It will provide relief for many of those who have been hurt by the continuing reviews, and it will build into the law structural safeguards to protect current and future disability beneficiaries.

Most importantly, this legislation establishes medical improvement as the primary criterion for the review of disability cases. This means that if SSA is going to terminate eligibility for disability benefits, the weight of evidence in the file must show both that the individual's medical condition has improved and that he or she is now capable of working.

The rationale for a medical improvement standard is simple—you should only be denied continuing eligibility for disability benefits if there is some reason why you are now more able to work than when you were admitted to the disability rolls. This should be the standard irrespective of whether the eligibility standards have subsequently been arbitrarily changed. This seems only fair, and should prevent the unreasonable terminations witnessed all too frequently since 1981.

The medical improvement standard in this bill is very tightly drawn, and is qualified by a number of exceptions that allow for flexibility in applying it. For instance, where improved medical or vocational technology allow a person to work despite an unchanged medical condition, or where new diagnostic techniques show an impairment less disabling than originally thought, the medical improvement standard is waived. These provisions assure consideration of advances in medical and rehabilitation technology in the disability review process.

One of my greatest concerns about the continuing disability reviews is that mentally disabled beneficiaries have been singled out for particularly unfair treatment by the Social Security Administration, and that this group has suffered most from the excesses of the past 3 years. In April 1983, the Special Committee on Aging, which I chair, held hearings on this issue, and the General Accounting Office reported that, although the mentally disabled account for only one-tenth of the total disability caseload, they represented almost a third of all those terminated. Many witnesses, including mentally impaired beneficiaries themselves, testified to the cruel human effects of this process, of which suicide is the most extreme expression.

Following these hearings, I introduced legislation to provide special safeguards for the mentally disabled, and I am happy similar provisions are incorporated into the conference agreement. Specifically, the legislation mandates that SSA revise the antiquated criteria it uses to evaluate the nature and severity of mental impairments. Further, the agency must now utilize qualified psychiatrists or psychologists in reviewing the mentally disabled. I am confident these reforms will serve to protect the most vulnerable of the disabled, those whose very disability leaves them defenseless to abuse by the Government.

The legislation before us includes a number of other noteworthy provisions. SSA will now be required to consider the combined effects of multiple impairments upon an individual's capacity to work. Due to regulatory and administrative changes in the past 5 years, a person with 10 "nonsevere" impairments could be denied benefits, despite the interactive effects these impairments may produce. This provision to require the combined evaluation of multiple impairments, like many others in this package, underscores the longstanding intent of Congress that every person should receive a comprehensive, realistic, and individualized assessment of his or her ability to work.

One problem that has plagued this program is the lack of consistency in standards among various levels of adjudication. Currently, State agencies receive their instructions from SSA through a detailed and elaborate program operations manual system [POMS]. Administrative law judges on the other hand are bound only to the law and published regulations. Instances in which SSA incorporates into the POMS administrative policy at variance with the law and regulations, as interpreted by administrative law judges, leads to widely different decisions on eligibility at different levels of the review process.

This legislation will establish uniform standards binding on all levels of decisionmaking process thus bringing SSA under the rulemaking requirements of the Administrative Procedures Act. This means that if SSA is going to revise basic review criteria, it has to publish the proposed rule changes and allow for public comment.

The legislation will extend the provision of continued benefits through the adminstrative law judge level for those who choose to appeal initial termination decisions through December 1987. "Aid-paid-pending" appeal will be made permanent for recipients of supplemental security income, to protect those with very limited income from losing their benefits until they have exhausted all administrative channels.

One provision in this legislation that I have reservations about is the section on pain. In this bill, we basically confirm in the statute the current regulatory policy of not considering pain unless a medically determinable condition can be identified that can be expected to cause the pain. It seems to me that this standard may be too narrow, and out of touch with the state of the art of scientific knowledge on pain. Pain is an extraordinary complex phenomenon, and real, disabling pain can exist without anyone understanding what impairment causes it to occur. I suspect we may want to revise this standard in the future.

Overall, this conference agreement reflects a finely crafted compromise, incorporating the diverse views of a plethora of advocacy groups for the disabled, the administration, and many Members of Congress. After 3 years of struggle and controversy, we have finally constructed legislation everyone can support. Though there are areas where I do not think the legislation goes far enough, it is a fair compromise, worthy of enactment.

From my standpoint as chairman of the Aging Committee, I want to emphasize how important the disability program is to the elderly. Almost 75 percent of all disability beneficiaries are over age 50, and this program has to be understood in the context of a broader policy of guaranteeing income security for older Americans. It is important to note that the original disability insurance program established in 1956 was designed to provide income to workers who became disabled after age 50. The disability program was a way of insuring that older persons who became disabled maintained their economic security until reaching the age of eligibility for Social Security retirement benefits.

The legislation under consideration is designed to restore proper administration to the disability program and does not change the basic mission or structure of the program. However, as we increase the retirement age for Social Security, we may in the future want to rethink our basic policy on the disability program, and perhaps focus more attention on the adequacy of the program as a targeted means of supporting older people no longer capable of working, but too young to retire.

Mr. President, I conclude by stating that the Social Security Disability Insurance Program is just that, an insurance program. What Congress has finally accomplished in this legislation is to restore the protection of a fair and consistently administrated program to the millions of American workers who finance that protection with their every paycheck. They have earned nothing less, and I urge my colleagues to support the conference report.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I rise in support of the conference agreement on H.R. 3755, the Social Security Disability Amendments of 1984.

By my count, this is the fifth time in the past 16 months that I have supported a measure to correct problems in the way the Social Security Administration reviews the eligibility for benefits of disabled Americans. We have, at last, found a bipartisan solution to these problems that is permanent, fair to beneficiaries, and financially responsible.

But before we congratulate each other for our work, we should pause for a moment to consider the plight of many of America's most vulnerable citizen's, the disabled. It is these people who should be congratulated. They are the ones who have shouldered the burden of an overzealous review process, who too often were removed from the rolls after no more than a "paper" examination, who were unnecessarily frightened, and who, in many cases, were unfairly deprived of benefits.

In my own State of New Mexico, I know of a man who had received benefits since 1977 because of a heart condition. He was removed from the program in 1982. He appealed this decision for 12 months and was still waiting for some action when stricken with a massive heart attack and died outside of my New Mexico office. Six months after he died, his widow received a notice that his benefits would be restored.

Mr. President, this bill improves the disability review process by: Ensuring that an individual has medically improved before he or she stops receiving benefits; providing more face-to-face contact between program officials and beneficiaries; and allowing the disabled to continue to receive benefits while they appeal a decision to remove them from the program.

These changes will make the Social Security disability review process a more fair and compassionate process. These changes are long overdue, and I hope that we can pass this conference report without delay.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I rise today to express my support for the conference agreement on H.R. 3755, the Social Security Disability Benefits Reform Act of 1984. This report is the culmination of over 2 years of debate and compromise on how best to resolve the tragic and needless confusion which has beset the Social Security Disability Insurance Program since 1981. Mr. President, since the beginning of the Reagan administration, nearly 500,000 recipients of Social Security disability insurance have had their benefits cut off while having their cases reviewed; more than 40 percent of these persons were reinstated upon appeal. We have listened to the stories of many disabled persons who suffered severe hardship because of this unfair review process. Under the conference agreement, the Government could remove a recipient from the rolls only if it is proven that his or her medical condition had improved. I believe this agreement will be a major step toward correcting the unfairness which existed in the earlier review process and administration of this vital program. The bill will protect the interests of those already on the rolls and of taxpayers in assuring that benefits are paid only to those in need of them.

In May of this year, when the Senate approved its version of the Social Security Disability Benefits Reform Act, I expressed my concern about the antideficiency provision contained in the bill which would have required the Secretary of Health and Human Services to scale back the cost-of-living increase in disability benefits if the disability insurance trust fund was projected to fall below 20 percent of expected annual benefit payments. If this action were not enough, the Secretary could further act to reduce the benefit schedules for new entrants into the system. I stated at that time that this provision was particularly unfair to those relying on disability benefits for their sole source of income who would not have been responsible for the conditions that might lead to a funding reserve shortfall. I am pleased that the conferees agreed to drop this provision in conference.

The conference agreement requires publication of regulations setting forth uniform standards for Social Security disability determinations under section 553 of the Administrative Procedures Act which will be binding at all levels of adjudication. In my view, this is the critical element in reforming the Social Security Disability Program. I hope that a set of uniform regulations will serve to end the painful and unnecessary chaos which has plagued the disability program since 1981. Uniform standards supply a solid base on which the administrative law judges can fairly and efficiently gauge the merits of cases before them. I worked hard to make sure that this provision of the bill remained strong and I am encouraged to note that the conference agreement is also firm on this point.

I will vote for the conference agreement because it is a long overdue correction of a situation which brought undue pain and hardship to thousands of disabled Americans. I hope the legislation will assure the fair and equitable treatment of those persons who are entitled to benefits under the Social Security Disability Program.

Thank you, Mr. President.

Mr. RIEGLE. Mr. President, after years of struggle, the Congress is finally acting to put an end to the needless hardships and suffering by hundreds of thousands of our Nation's disabled citizens. The enactment of this legislation should end the chaos that has resulted in the administration of the Social Security Disability Insurance Program ever since the administration implemented the continuing disability investigations [CDI's] several months prior to the time mandated by law.

The final action we are taking today is long overdue. I think it is instructive to look at how long it has taken the Congress to finally pass this critical legislation, that could have, and should have been enacted during the 97th Congress. Many of the individuals who were the victims of the careless and at times cruel treatment by the Social Security Administration were unable to speak for themselves due to extreme physical and emotional hardships they have experienced as a result of a severe disability. It was our job here in Congress to recognize the problem and swiftly and effectively correct the problem. Today, over 2½ years after the Congress initially started examining this program, we are at last enacting this needed Social Security reform. The basic outline of the legislation we are giving final approval here today was contained in the legislation I introduced on July 26, 1982 (S. 2776) during the 97th Congress. It is truly sad that it has taken this institution so long to respond to this vital need.

Finally, Mr. President, I would like to commend those of my colleagues who presided with great vigilance over this matter and without whose continued persistence we might not have even gotten where we are today. In particular, I want to single out my friend and colleague from Michigan, Senator LEVIN, whose efforts in this area have been truly exceptional. I urge all of my colleagues to join with us in unanimously adopting this conference report.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I am pleased to lend my support to the conference agreement on H.R. 3755, the Social Security Disability Benefits Reform Act of 1984. For more than 2 years, many Members have worked diligently toward the resolution of some very thorny issues that developed with implementation of the disability amendments of 1980. Reaching agreement was a lengthy and sometimes ardous process, but I believe that with enactment of this compromise, the Congress will send a strong signal to beneficiaries and program administrators that we intend to protect the disabled from unjustified loss of benefits, but that we are equally committed to ensuring the integrity of the trust funds is not jeopardized by permitting ineligible individuals to receive benefits.

I am particularly gratified that this bill includes my provision designed to insure that benefits intended for those unable to care for themselves are not misused. This provision, directed at persons who act as agents for Social Security recipients, establishes a system for auditing expenditures by representative payees. While the caring individual who accepts responsibility to act on behalf of another deserves to be commended, it is a disgrace that some have abused this trust to their own advantage.

According to agency records, there are approximately 5.5 million representative payees nationwide. Some 1.5 million are not members of the families of individuals who they represent. General Accounting Office data and studies conducted internally by the Social Security Administration have documented over 1,400 cases of misuse of funds since 1974, yet only 122 were referred to the Department of Justice for prosecution—and only 29 convictions were actually obtained.

The provisions included in this bill instruct the Secretary of Health and Human Services to develop and present to the Congress, within 9 months, a plan to tighten procedures for auditing representative payees. Parents or spouses are specifically exempt from extensive scrutiny in order to protect families from excessive governmental intrusion. However, the Secretary retains the authority to review even familial accounts if she finds there is reason to believe funds have been diverted from the beneficiary and misused by the representative payee. In the event a representative payee is convicted of willfully cheating the Social Security recipient of his or her benefits, the judge will be able to assess a more appropriate and stiffer penalty—up to 1 year in prison and a $5,000 fine for first offenders, and up to 5 years imprisonment and $25,000 for second offenses. Should the representative payee be convicted for a second time, his or her ability to function in this capacity in the future will be permanently revoked.

Mr. President, I commend the chairman and ranking member of the Finance Committee for their extraordinary efforts in reaching agreement on this compromise, and I thank my colleagues Senators LEVIN and COHEN for their diligence in developing legislation that will accomplish the difficult task of balancing sensitivity toward the beneficiaries with legitimate restraints on unbridled growth in the disability program. In particular, I would like to congratulate my colleague from Texas, Congressman JAKE PICKLE, whose initiative coupled with grace in the face of sometimes trying negotiations, played a major role in crafting a more fair and workable review process.

I urge my colleagues to join with me in support of the pending conference report.

BETTER LATE THAN NEVER ON SOCIAL SECURITY DISABILITY INSURANCE REFORM

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, we have before us something for which many of us have been working—and waiting—for many, many months. In 1980, the Congress ordered a review of the disabled individuals who are on the rolls of the Social Security disability insurance program. From the time it took office in 1981, the Reagan administration has used this review as an opportunity to purge beneficiaries from the rolls. As a result, caring people of every description have cried foul and sought to repair the damage that was being inflicted. Democrats, Republicans, conservatives, moderates, and liberals, Northerners, Southerners, Westerners—the cries have come from all quarters as the administration purged the rolls of this program, and, in the process, sacrificed the well-being of some of our least fortunate citizens—those who are physically or mentally disabled.

The facts of this matter have been stated and restated before this body. Since the administration began the disability purge in 1981, nearly half a million persons have received initial termination notices. Initially, payments to these beneficiaries were halted abruptly even when they felt confident that an appeal would reinstate their eligibility—and even in those cases where there was no real possibility that the individuals would be able in the meantime to derive enough income from other sources to meet their fundamental needs. Later, due to legislation the Congress found it necessary to pass, benefits were extended for terminated beneficiaries who appeal their terminations until administrative law judges return judgments on those appeals.

By last spring, more than 200,000 of the disabled who had been cut from the rolls in fact were reinstated upon appeal. But during the course of proving their eligibilty, they were confronted with untold anxiety over the possible loss of their benefits and with inconvenience and sometimes even physical pain during lengthy hearings and consultations with attorneys and agency personnel. There were press reports of suicides and other deaths of disabled persons who simply were incapable of contending with this kind of disruption of their lives. Simple respect for human life, dignity, and fairness required the correction of this situation.

But the beneficiaries were not the only ones to suffer. The eligibility review caseworkers, who had been given inadequate explanation and training concerning their case review responsibilities, were seriously overworked and demoralized. The administrative law judges were overwhelmed with unprecedented numbers of appeals. Allegations surfaced in lawsuits and elsewhere that the administration was connecting personnel performance reviews of those judges to their record of appeals rejections.

And the problem did not stop even there. Over 40,000 of these appeals reached the Federal courts, adding to their already troubling burden.

Many State governments—which under Federal law have the responsibility for determining eligibility for this program—rebelled at what they viewed as the inexcusable harshness of the administration's approach to this issue. Over half of the States, either of their own accord—as was the case with my own State of West Virginia—or upon orders from the courts, ceased enforcing the Federal review and termination requirements.

Finally, even the administration concluded that the situation could not be allowed to persist. The Secretary of Health and Human Service, facing a political nightmare, was forced to suspend the reviews nationwide to await congressional passage of legislation to return order to the chaos.

Fortunately, through all this turmoil, several compassionate and determined Senators and Representatives never let up in their efforts to gain enactment of fair, effective remedial legislation. While any attempt to list all such Senators likely would inadvertently omit the name of one or more who invested themselves in this effort, any list must include the names of Senators SASSER, PRYOR, MOYNIHAN, COHEN, and HEINZ. But the real champion of the disabled has been the distinguished junior Senator from Michigan, Senator LEVIN. He, as ranking member of the Subcommittee on Oversight, along with subcommittee Chairman COHEN, held hearings on this matter, introduced remedial legislation which forms in large measure the basis for the final product that is before us today, and refused to let the issue be forgotten.

I commend these Senators, and their counterparts on the House side, Mr. President, for their long, difficult, tiring efforts. Even when the outlook appeared bleak for this legislation, they never let up. They knew, and felt acutely, the degree to which the disabled of this Nation were depending on them—and they took it as a personal affront that a Federal law designed to help the disabled should be used by the uncaring to harm the disabled.

Mr. President, the conference report—like most conference reports—is not perfect from anyone's perspective. But I believe it resolves the issues of difference acceptably—in a manner that is simultaneously fiscally responsible, humane, and programmatically sound. The enactment of this bill will return rationality to this program—for the benefit, first, of the disabled, but also for their family members; for Federal and State government caseworkers; for administrative law judges, for Federal courts; and for virtually all others who have had to deal with this mistreated system during the past 4 years. I only regret that this day could not have come sooner. I am sincerely hopeful that the Reagan administration will move as rapidly and with as much force and enthusiasm to implement the provisions of this legislation as it mover to purge the disability rolls in 1981.

Mrs. HAWKINS. Mr. President, I am pleased that the House-Senate conference committee has completed action on the Social Security disability review amendments. I have many constituents in Florida who are anxiously awaiting the enactment of this legislation.

The Social Security Disability Program was enacted to provide aid to disabled Americans and the SSI disability reviews undertaken by the Department since 1981 was undertaken with the same noble purpose, to maximize aid to those with genuine needs and to minimize the amount of inefficiencies and cheating within the program. Unfortunately, because of the flawed review process, severe hardships have been imposed on the disabled. The most dramatic indication of the flaws in the current disability review system is that more than 160,000 disabled individuals have had their SSI eligibility reinstated after appealing to administrative law judges.

Clearly, we must improve our SSI disability review procedure to ensure that it is equitable as well as efficient. We must correct the flaws of inadequate notice, lack of face-to-face interviews, conflicting standards regarding disability, confusion over the evaluation of pain, inadequate medical evidence and failure of SSA to apply circuit court decisions to its policies if the agencies happen to disagree with the decision.

The conference report we are considering today would rectify many of these flaws and restore fairness to the Social Security disability review process. As we strive to eliminate waste and inefficiency in the Social Security Disability Program, we must remember that these are not merely numbers, they are people. People who are dependent upon the disability program for survival. Since a worker does not have to be permanently disabled in order to receive SSI benefits, I support periodic review of individuals receiving disability to ensure that only those who remain disabled continue to collect disability checks. But the review process that determines eligibility must be fair and provide due process protections to the affected individuals.

Mr. President, I would like to compliment Senators HEINZ, LEVIN, COHEN, DOLE, and others who have taken such an active role in this issue. Their diligent efforts have resulted in the legislation that is before us today.

SOCIAL SECURITY DISABILITY BENEFITS REFORM ACT OF 1984

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I am delighted to join in urging Senate passage of the conference report on H.R. 3755, the Social Security Disability Benefits Reform Act of 1984.

I was also pleased to be a cosponsor of the original Senate version of this legislation, S. 476, and amendments to it and to join in the overwhelming 96–0 vote by which the Senate passed its version on May 22, 1984. However, since the House version of this legislation contained a number of provisions that I favored over the corresponding provisions in the Senate-passed measure, I wrote to the distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee [Mr. DOLE] on June 25, 1984, urging resolution of certain issues generally along the lines of the results in the conference report.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that that letter be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, as many of my colleagues know, this legislation has had a painstakingly slow evolution. Over the past 3 years, in the absence of legislation providing for a comprehensive reform of the Social Security disability insurance [SSDI] review process, we have received one report after another documenting the chaos and inequities that have resulted from this administration's conduct of continuing disability investigations—CDI's.

Thus far, Congress has enacted legislation that treated only the symptoms of the problems created by the CDI's without addressing the underlying flaws in the disability review process. With final action today—3½ years after the Reagan administration made the decision to accelerate precipitously the congressionally mandated reviews of SSDI beneficiaries—some measure of consistency and equity will be restored to a chaotic review system that has caused needless suffering to many disabled beneficiaries.

Mr. President, it is especially noteworthy that the conference agreement establishes a medical-improvement standard setting forth specific guidelines under which the Secretary generally must consider an SSDI recipient's ability to return to work as well as any medical improvement which may have occurred since the initial finding of eligibility.

I am also pleased that the conference report includes a provision requiring the Secretary of HHS, along with the National Academy of Sciences, to conduct a study—due to Congress by December 31, 1985—relating to determining the presence of pain for SSDI eligibility purposes.

The legislation also requires that multiple impairments be considered in determining eligibility and that a moratorium on reviews of persons with mental impairments be instituted pending revision of the current, unrealistic criteria for determining the individuals' ability to perform substantial gainful activity in a competitive workplace, and provides for continued payment of benefits through the appeals process, subject to forfeiture if the appeal fails.

Mr. President, I also note with interest and approval a provision allowing reimbursement to State agencies for the cost of vocational rehabilitation services provided to beneficiaries who recover medically while in a vocational rehabilitation program, regardless of whether the recipient performed substantial gainful activity for 9 months or cooperated in the program.

CONCLUSION

Mr. President, several of my colleagues have worked relentlessly toward the comprehensive reform which we are now considering. In particular, I would like to note the efforts of the Senator from Michigan [Mr. LEVIN], the Senator from Maine [Mr. COHEN], and the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. HEINZ], on behalf of these reforms and the disabled persons who will be assisted through them. I would also like to thank the Senator from Kansas [Mr. DOLE] for his efforts and cooperation in the development of the agreement on this legislation.

Mr. President, the chaos, the inequities, and the disruption in the lives of countless disabled beneficiaries has plagued the review process for far too long. I am delighted to join my colleagues in urging that the Senate adopt the conference report, and in so doing, help to restore equity, fairness, and compassion to the review process and, I sincerely hope, the peace of mind that SSDI recipients deserve.

U.S. SENATE,
Washington, DC, June 25, 1984.

Hon. ROBERT DOLE,
Chairman, Committee on Finance, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR BOB: I understand that you received a June 18, 1984, letter from the authors and a number of the cosponsors of S. 476, the proposed "Social Security Disability Reform Amendments of 1984", alerting you to their concerns about three provisions in the Senate version of H.R. 3755, the House-passed bill to make reforms in the social security disability insurance (SSDI) program.

As a cosponsor of S. 476, I share my colleagues' concerns expressed in that letter and wish to associate myself with the positions they expressed in that letter with respect to the Senate provisions to "sunset" the so-called "medical-improvement standard", to codify the regulatory standard for evaluating pain, and to reduce SSDI benefits in certain circumstances.

Regarding the provision to terminate the medical-improvement standard on December 31, 1987, the need for this standard arose in response to concerns about persons being terminated, through the retroactive application of new rules for determining disability, even though their physical conditions had not changed since they were put on the rolls. I am aware of no evidence to suggest that the need for this standard would cease to exist on December 31, 1987, and thus urge that the Senate accept the House position that it not be subject to a sunset provision.

As to the provision that would codify the Social Security Administration's pain standard, I totally agree with the discussion in the June 18 letter and urge that no statutory standard be established at this point and that the deadline for the proposed study be one year rather than three years.

In addition, I am concerned about the provision that could result in lower benefit levels for new beneficiaries when the disability trust fund is projected to decline to less than 20 percent of a year's benefits at the beginning of any given year.

Bob, I appreciate your attention to these matters of mutual concern.

With warm regards,

Cordially,

ALAN CRANSTON.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I am very happy to support the conference agreement on H.R. 3755, the Social Security Disability Reform Act. Few social problems have touched us more than the thousands of handicapped and disabled Americans whose benefits were unfairly taken away as a result of a flawed review process. This legislation will end the uncertainty and unfairness that disability beneficiaries have suffered as a result of the disability review process.

I am personally aware of the tragedies that have been caused as a result of this flawed "disability review process." The volume of Social Security disability casework by my field offices has been greater than any other issue. On October 8, 1983, I was pleased to hold a field hearing of the U.S. Senate Committee on Governmental Affairs in Santa Fe on the subject of Social Security disability reviews. Firsthand testimony was heard from a cross-section of New Mexicans who told of their painful experiences caused by an insensitive, inefficient, and dehumanizing process. Testimony was also received from doctors who treated claimants, attorneys who represented claimants, the State of New Mexico Disability Determination Unit Director, an administrative law judge who heard their appeals, and a representative from the Governor's office. They all told the same tragic story that the claimants were wrongfully denied their disability benefits.

The magnitude of this tragedy is enormous. Since 1981, nearly half a million disabled beneficiaries have been told by SSA that they no longer qualify for benefits. For those with resources and fortitude to appeal to an administrative law judge, two-thirds have had their benefits restored. Almost 50,000 have taken their cases to the Federal courts, and well over 100,000 are members of class action suits already certified by Federal judges. Twenty-nine States have either refused to process claims under the inhumane standards set by SSA or are under court order to revise their review procedures. Overall, the program was a disaster.

The flood of terminations stemmed largely from two factors. One was the act of Congress, the so-called Bellmon amendment, which mandated in 1980 that disability recipients be reviewed every 3 years to determine if they were still eligible for benefits. These reviews, called continuing disability investigations, or CDI's, were scheduled by Congress to begin in January 1982. The second factor behind the great number of terminations was an administration bent on reducing Government spending regardless of human costs. Wielding the Bellmon amendment, the Reagan administration decided to accelerate the implementation date to March 1981, and began ordering disability reviews at an alarming rate.

None of us condone allowing people who are not disabled to receive Social Security or supplemental security disability benefits. But just as we are repulsed by disability benefit fraud and seek its elimination, we should not permit any administration to terminate disability benefits for literally thousands who were truly disabled.

Because of the abrupt acceleration of the reviews, many individual cases received only the most cursory examination. State disability determination offices were forced to accept a threefold increase in their workloads without an increase in funding or support. Many reviews were accomplished simply on paper, without ever seeing another human being, or by a 5-minute examination by a physician who had never seen the recipient before. Often the statements of personal physicians were either never sought or simply disregarded. Most reviews centered on a profile of disabled persons who were thought most likely to be able to go back to work. Several days of hearings before the Senate Special Committee on Aging, the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee and other groups have documented irrefutable patterns of unfairness and improper denials of disability benefits to individuals, particularly those suffering from severe psychiatric problems.

Mr. President, my strong support for this legislation comes from the review of hundreds of cases in my State, where disabled constituents wait over 2 years for favorable reviews. This legislation will return fairness, order and uniformity to the disability review process. I am hoping it will provide relief for many who have been hurt by the continuing reviews, and it will build into the law structural safeguards to protect current and future disability beneficiaries.

Most importantly, this legislation establishes a medical improvement as the primary criterion for the review of disability cases. This means that if SSA is going to terminate eligibility for disability benefits, the weight of evidence in the file must show both that the individual's medical condition has improved and that he or she is now capable of working.

The rationale for a medical improvement standard is simple—the recipient could only be denied continuing eligibility for disability benefits if there is some reason why he/she is now more able to work than when he/she was admitted to the disability rolls, other than that the eligibility standards have been arbitrarily changed over time. This seems to be fair, and should prevent the unreasonable terminations witnessed all too frequently since 1981.

The medical improvement standard in this legislation is qualified by a number of exceptions that allow for flexibility in applying it. For example, where improved medical or vocational technology allow a person to work despite an unchanged medical condition, or where new diagnostic techniques show an impairment less disabling than originally thought, the medical improvement standard is waived. These provisions assure consideration of advances in medical and rehabilitation technology in the disability review process.

I am pleased to note that Senator HEINZ has incorporated legislation affecting the mentally disabled recipients. The guidelines provide special safeguards for the mentally disabled. Specifically, the legislation mandates that SSA revise the antiquated criteria it uses to evaluate the nature and severity of mental impairments. Further, the agency must now utilize qualified psychiatrists or psychologists in reviewing the mentally disabled. I am hopeful that these reforms will protect the most vulnerable of the disabled, those whose disability leaves them defenseless to abuse by the Government.

Other provisions include the following: SSA will now be required to consider the combined effects of multiple impairments upon an individual's capacity to work. Due to regulatory and administrative changes in the past 5 years, a person with 10 nonsevere impairments could be denied benefits, despite the interactive effects these impairments may produce. This provision to require the combined evaluation of multiple impairments, like many others in this package, underscores the longstanding intent of Congress that every person should receive a comprehensive, realistic, and individualized assessment of his or her ability to work. This legislation will also establish uniform standards binding on all levels of decisionmaking process bringing SSA under the rulemaking requirements of the Administrative Procedures Act. This means that if SSA is going to revise basic review criteria, it has to publish the proposed rule changes and allow for public comment.

The legislation will extend the provision of continued benefits through the administrative law judge level for those who choose to appeal initial termination decisions through December 1987. "Aid-Paid-Pending" appeal will be made permanent for recipients of SSI, to protect those with very limited income from losing their benefits until they have exhausted all administrative channels.

Overall, this conference agreement reflects a finely crafted compromise, incorporating the diverse views of many groups. I am unhappy, however, that the conference report language does not fully address the issue of compliance with court orders; the so-called nonacquiescence issues. This is one of the most crucial issues in the debate over disability reform. The primary point of contention involves the policy of nonacquiescence practiced by the SSA in disability reviews. Under this policy, SSA does not consider the decisions of circuit courts of appeal binding, except for the plaintiffs in the individual cases, when the ruling and interpretation conflict with the agency's regulations and policies.

What this effectively amounts to is the making of new law in each individual case. This practice disregards the basic notion of precedent and judicial interpretation.

Administrative law judges across the country have indicated time and again before congressional hearings that this policy significantly hampers their ability to utilize these court interpretations and subsequently works great hardships on individual claimants because they must go to the expense of reestablishing a new point of law in each case.

I am sorry that the language contained in the House version which requires that SSA either apply circuit court decisions to all cases within the circuit or appeal the decisions to the Supreme Court has not been made a part of the final bill. This is the normal legal procedure and should be followed.

Mr. President, in spite of this oversight, I am happy to go on record as a supporter of this legislation.

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, for the past 3 years Members of Congress and the American people have read almost daily news stories about the unwarranted termination of Social Security disability benefits for persons who were clearly disabled and dependent on benefit payments.

I have heard from numerous individuals in my own State who have found themselves suddenly, and I believe mistakenly deprived of disability benefits and forced into unnecessary hardship while they sought to reverse arbitrary, bureaucratic decisions.

Upon becoming aware of the unfair treatment given to disability recipients, I, along with my colleagues in the Senate proposed legislation to bring an end to this arbitrary treatment of disability recipients.

Mr. President, it was necessary for this body to take legislative action and eliminate this unjust situation because the executive branch in its blind persistence ignored court orders directing it to cease and desist from taking these illegal actions. The administration in ignoring court directives ordering it to comply with the law also ignored the human misery it was inflicting on disability recipients and their families. Instead of correcting its illegal and unfair actions, the administration accelerated the review process, conducting hasty and inadequate case reviews to meet arbitrary quotas. In 1982, some 497,000 recipients, or about 18 percent of all disability recipients, were subjected to review before termination decisions were rendered. Needless to say with this type of review process, many of the termination decisions were later found to be incorrect. From this brief description, it is clear that the disability review process was being conducted in a manner contrary to the intent of Congress, in defiance of court mandates and without any regard for the pain and hardship that was being placed upon the disability recipient. Confronted with this unfair and unjust situation, I, along with my colleagues, took action to bring the administration's practices to a standstill.

Mr. President, I support the efforts of my colleagues in the House and in the Senate to finally develop legislation that will restore a fair and just review procedure to the disability review process. It is sad, however, that it has taken Congress nearly 3 years to put an end to the administration's actions and to ensure that the disability review process will be carried out in a nonarbitrary and, ultimately, more humane manner.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, the nearly 3 million disabled Americans and their families can rest much easier today, knowing the Senate and House of Representatives have agreed on a plan that will prevent any arbitrary cuts in their Social Security disability benefits. I am confident that the Senate will overwhelmingly vote in favor of this agreement because it illustrates our commitment to citizens who are disabled.

This conference report agreement does not change the basic eligibility requirements for disability relief. Nor does it change the law passed by Congress in 1980 and signed by former President Carter, which mandated a 3-year review of every disability case. It simply clarifies the procedures for that review.

Early last year, Mr. President, I proposed S. 541, a comprehensive bill to reform and strengthen our Nation's retirement system. A cornerstone of that proposal was a section pertaining to disability reform. I suggested that Congress insure due process to every individual receiving disability benefits before any benefits could be cut. S. 541 established that each beneficiary should be entitled to a full and fair hearing before an administrative law judge prior to any adjustment in benefits.

Although Congress approved 11 of the 20 sections of S. 541, it did not enact the disability portion. I reintroduced that section in September 1983 as S. 1888.

Mr. President, S. 1888, like the comprehensive proposal, placed the burden of proof on the Social Security Administration to show either an improvement in medical condition, or a mistake or fraud in the original determination.

Mr. President, this conference report agreement embodies those same principles. I commend the able Senator from Kansas, Senator DOLE, and others who spent much of this year working to resolve the serious problems facing disabled citizens.

Mr. BAKER addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee, the majority leader.

ORDER OF PROCEDURE

Mr. BAKER addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, under the order previously entered, the Senate at 2 o'clock is to go to the consideration of a nomination. It is clear that a vote to occur now on the conference report would intrude on the hour provided for debate on that nomination.

Let me make this request for the consideration of the minority leader and all Senators:

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that at the hour of 3 o'clock the Senate proceed to vote on the Beaudin nomination, and that the Senate then immediately return to legislative session and vote without further debate on the disability conference report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. ROTH. I object. My problem, I say to the majority leader, is that we have rescheduled the Finance Committee at 2:30 on the Superfund, which is a matter of great importance to me. I want to be there for those hearings. Is it possible to complete the nomination by 2:30? We have postponed the Finance Committee because Senator LONG had to be on the floor for the debate. I also want to be there during the next panel. I am on the nub of a problem because we have the Beaudin nomination at 2 o'clock.

Mr. BAKER. Do I understand the Senator is suggesting, then, that we reduce the time for debate on Beaudin to 30 minutes and begin that vote at 2:30?

Mr. ROTH. Yes. Can we do that by 2:30?

Mr. LONG. Might I just suggest that we go ahead and vote now on this measure and delay the time to resume the Superfund hearing by 15 minutes or whatever it takes, or whatever it takes to accommodate the Beaudin nomination?

Mr. ROTH. I understand that Senator STEVENS, who is also on Governmental Affairs, is willing to take over at 2:30.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, if no agreement is reached when this little colloquy stops, we will be on the Beaudin nomination. Why not just do that at this time, Mr. President.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, with that understanding, I will withdraw my objection.

Mr. BYRD. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. BAKER. Yes.

Mr. BYRD. There are Senators who did not anticipate a rollcall vote coming at this time on this conference report. They do anticipate a rollcall commencing at 3 o'clock on the nomination. I would hope that we could avoid having a vote before 3 o'clock. We have one Senator on this side who has to go to the doctor about a serious back problem, but he will be back at 3 o'clock. Without any agreement at all, we could make it 3 o'clock, I say to the distinguished Senator from Delaware. As the majority leader has said, the Chair should be putting us in executive session right now. We have an agreement for 1 hour on the nomination. There are enough of us here who could talk to make it last that long.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I do not think we are ready. Maybe this is the best thing to do.

I ask the Chair to execute the unanimous-consent order.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

NOMINATION OF BRUCE D. BEAUDIN, OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, TO BE AN ASSOCIATE JUDGE OF THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. EVANS). Under the previous order, the hour of 2 p.m. having arrived, the Senate will now go into executive session to consider the nomination of Bruce D. Beaudin, of the District of Columbia, to be an associate judge of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia.

Mr. BAKER. Now, Mr. President, I understand that the distinguished chairman of the Governmental Affairs Committee, the originating committee, will proceed to manage the nomination on this side and I will pursue the idea of setting a vote on the conference report.

Let me say for the benefit of the Senate we are a little backed up here, but it is still the intention of the leadership to finish this nomination, finish the conference report, and still get back to the trade bill. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. ROTH addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, President Reagan submitted Mr. Bruce Beaudin's name to the Senate on June 29, 1983, to be an associate judge of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia. Under procedures established by my Committee on Governmental Affairs for the consideration of nominees, a detailed biographical and financial information questionnaire was submitted to be completed by Mr. Beaudin.

On July 6, 1983, the committee received Mr. Beaudin's responses to the questionnaire and shortly thereafter the nominee's FBI file was reviewed by both Senator MATHIAS and Senator EAGLETON on behalf of the committee. The FBI report contains a summary of the background investigation conducted on each nominee by the Bureau. The report required updating by the FBI, which was completed in mid-July and reviewed again by both Senators.

Our committee's rules also require each nominee to be personnally interviewed by committee staff investigators. In that interview, the nominee attested to the accuracy and completeness of all written responses to the committee's questions. The nominee also addressed in greater depth a number of matters raised by both the FBI report and his written responses to the committee.

The committee held a hearing on the nomination and it was considered at a committee business meeting on March 29, 1984. The committee voted 9 to 4 to recommend the nomination favorably to the Senate.

Mr. President, the committee spent a great deal of time reviewing Mr. Beaudin's nomination. Bruce D. Beaudin was graduated with a juris doctor degree from Georgetown University Law Center in 1964. He holds a bachelor of arts from Fairfield University. He is a member of the District of Columbia bar, and has been since 1965.

Mr. Beaudin has substantial legal experience and is well acquainted with the local criminal justice system in the District of Columbia. In law school he was employed as a staff interviewer with the DC Bail Project. From 1963 until 1968, Mr. Beaudin was associated with the DC Public Defender Service. His positions included investigator, staff attorney, deputy director, and agency director. In 1968, he moved to the DC Pretrial Services Agency, serving as its director.

Mr. President, during the committee's investigation on this nomination a number of questions were raised regarding Mr. Beaudin's fitness to assume the duties of a judge. The committee spent a great deal of time reviewing these questions and based on that review, and on the tremendous amount of support his nomination received from very distinguished members of the legal community, the committee decided to favorably report the nomination to the Senate.

The main focus of concern regarding Mr. Beaudin's fitness for the position of associate judge centers on his relationship with Donald Epstein, a known dealer of pornography and a client of Mr. Beaudin's friend and professional mentor, Kenneth Wood.

During his early years as an attorney, Mr. Beaudin maintained a close personal and professional relationship with Mr. Wood, who was Mr. Beaudin's supervisor while he was employed at the DC Public Defender's Service. When Mr. Wood went into private practice, he and Mr. Beaudin continued to maintain a very close relationship.

In private practice Mr. Wood was retained by Donald Epstein, and it was through Mr. Wood's attorney-client association with Mr. Epstein that Mr. Beaudin first became acquainted with Mr. Epstein.

Mr. President, the committee felt that based on the information it received, the relationship between Mr. Beaudin and Mr. Epstein was derivative in nature and based upon the attorney-client relationship between Mr. Epstein and this attorney, Mr. Wood. Mr. Beaudin's relationship with Mr. Epstein was coincidental to his association with Mr. Wood. When Mr. Wood's association with Mr. Epstein ended, so, too, did Mr. Beaudin's.

During Mr. Beaudin's acquaintance with Mr. Epstein, Mr. Beaudin was a party to three transactions with Mr. Epstein. However, the information available to the committee shows that these transactions were minor and not illegal. Specifically, an unsecured car loan of between $800 and $1,100 that Mr. Beaudin received from Mr. Epstein was promptly and completely repaid, and Mr. Beaudin testified under oath that he paid the going market price for a $20 gold piece and a small kitchen appliance he purchased from Mr. Epstein. Moreover, it appears that these transactions were also related to Mr. Beaudin's relationship with Mr. Wood, in that Mr. Epstein loaned Mr. Beaudin the money and sold him the gold coin and the appliance because Mr. Beaudin was a close friend and companion of Mr. Wood's.

The record also indicates that Mr. Beaudin ate lunch at Mr. Epstein's place of business on several occasions. However, these incidents occurred only when he accompanied Mr. Wood on his visits to this client, Mr. Epstein. During those visits Mr. Beaudin stated that he was not a party to the business that transpired between Mr. Wood and Mr. Epstein, but rather, ate alone while waiting for Mr. Wood.

In addition, in a posthearing conversation, Mr. Beaudin indicated to a committee staff member that although he received Christmas cards and token gifts from Mr. Epstein, these cards and gifts were not sent to him personally by Mr. Epstein, but rather, were sent out by one of Mr. Epstein's other business concerns which maintained a mailing list that included numerous other individuals.

The record also shows that Mr. Beaudin provided legal assistance to Mr. Epstein. Although he did provide Mr. Epstein and his alleged girlfriend with limited legal assistance on two occasions in 1976 and 1981, this limited assistance was rendered because Mr. Wood was unavailable and could not be reached, and, again, was a consequence of Mr. Beaudin's relationship with Mr. Wood. Furthermore, none of the evidence presented to the committee indicated that there was ever any wrongdoing of any kind by Mr. Beaudin with respect to his association with Mr. Epstein.

Mr. President, throughout his legal career Mr. Beaudin has demonstrated superior ability in his field, and it is the committee's opinion that he possesses the requisite judgment and temperament and is qualified to serve as a judge on the superior court of the District of Columbia.

I would like to stress that Mr. Beaudin is well regarded by his fellow members of the District of Columbia bar and comes to the committee highly recommended by his peers and associates in the legal community. In fact, Mr. Harold Green and Mr. John Pratt, both highly respected judges in the U.S. district court in Washington, DC testified in support of Mr. Beaudin's nomination. The committee has also received numerous letters in support of Mr. Beaudin's nomination and I ask unanimous consent to enter them into the RECORD at this time. I just point out that these letters were sent by highly regarded attorneys and government officials including the State's attorney for Montgomery County, MD, Judge Nicholas Nunzio of the DC superior court, and Charles Ruff of Covington and Burling. In addition, Washington, DC, Mayor Marion Barry contacted me personally to indicate his interest in seeing M. Beaudin's nomination approved.

There being no objection, the letters were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATE'S ATTORNEY FOR MONTGOMERY COUNTY,
Rockville, MD, October 24, 1983.

Hon. WILLIAM V. ROTH, Jr.,
Chairman, U.S. Senate Committee on Governmental Affairs, Hart Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR ROTH: I understand that Bruce Beaudin is under consideration for appointment to the bench of the Superior Court for the District of Columbia. I am writing in support of his appointment.

I have known Mr. Beaudin for approximately fifteen years. I first came to know him professionally as a member of the Washington, DC area legal community and then subsequently more closely in a social context as I came to see him more often and enjoy his company.

I also over the years have known a number of people who have worked with him in his position at the bail agency or with professional associations in which he is active.

My observation of Bruce Beaudin leads me to believe that he would make an outstanding judge. He is sensible, exercises sound judgment after careful consideration, and has a keen understanding of human nature. In my position as a prosecutor I have seen many judges, some successful and some not. I have tried to discern what qualities in lawyers indicate future success in the judiciary. Those qualities are frequently hard to predict and sometimes we are fooled by candidates and later disappointed. I can say, however, that among the many I know who have discussed Bruce Beaudin's candidacy there is a unanimous consensus that he has what it takes to make an excellent judge. I want to recommend him most heartily and without any reservations at all.

Sincerely,

ANDREW L. SONNER,
State's Attorney.

BARRETT, HANNA, DALY & GASPAR,
Washington, DC, October 17, 1983.

Hon. WILLIAM V. ROTH, Jr.,
U.S. Senate, Senate Hart Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR ROTH: Bruce Beaudin is a nominee for a vacancy on the Superior Court, as you know, I have known Bruce since I was a law clerk to Judge Bill Jones in the U.S. District Court which, I hate to say, is now 17 years ago. I have known Bruce well through all of those years, including those while I was an Assistant United States Attorney.

Bruce is possessed of the finest abilities that our profession requires, those of intelligence, dedication, integrity and, above all, judgment. In talking to a number of the Superior Court judges, I know how strongly they would welcome his joining that Court to assist them in their very difficult tasks.

If you feel that there is anything else that I can do to explain my total support for his candidacy, just let me know.

Very best regards,

Sincerely,

DAVID M. BARRETT.

SUPERIOR COURT OF THE
DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA,
Washington, DC, October 17, 1983.

Hon. WILLIAM V. ROTH, Jr.,
Chairman, Committee on Governmental Affairs, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. ROTH: Mr. Bruce Beaudin's name has been submitted by President Reagan to the Senate for an appointment to the Superior Court and I am writing in support of his confirmation. I have known Mr. Beaudin for 20 years as a practicing member of our bar, Director of the Public Defender Service, and Director of the Pretrial Services Agency for this jurisdiction.

As a member of the United States Attorney's Office in the late sixties, I had many occasions to prosecute felony cases in which Mr. Beaudin was defense counsel and can personally attest to his excellent trial abilities as well as his extensive knowledge of criminal law and procedure.

During the seventies and up to the present, I have had countless contacts with Mr. Beaudin as head of the Pretrial Services Agency and have come to know and respect him for the outstanding work he has performed with this agency. In my opinion, Mr. Beaudin would make an excellent jurist and I urge the Senate to confirm his nomination.

Mr. Beaudin is a pleasant, hardworking, diligent and dedicated attorney, who has demonstrated to many members of the bar and our bench, as well as the bench of the United States District Court, that in addition to the aforementioned qualifications, he possesses the judicial temperament that would favorably enhance the administration of justice in the District of Columbia.

Sincerely yours,

NICHOLAS S. NUNZIO, Judge.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY GOVERNMENT,
Rockville, MD, October 17, 1983.

Hon. WILLIAM V. ROTH, Jr.,
Chairman, Committee on Governmental Affairs, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR ROTH: I have been advised that our President has announced his appointments for the existing vacancies to the bench of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia.

I have served in law enforcement for 27 years in the Washington Metropolitan Area and have a keen interest in these appointments. The future depends heavily on an effective judiciary.

I urge you to seriously consider the nomination of Mr. Bruce Beaudin. I have known Mr. Beaudin for almost eleven years, both professionally and socially, and have the highest regard for his honesty, intelligence, fairness, and sensitivity. I realize many nominees possess these attributes, but Mr. Beaudin possesses a high level of "common sense" that is often lacking in our judiciary.

Sincerely,

BERNARD D. CROOKE,
Chief of Police.

McDERMOTT, WILL & EMERY,
Washington, DC, October 17, 1983.

Hon. WILLIAM V. ROTH, Jr.,
Chairman, Committee on Government Affairs, Hart Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: I write in support of Bruce Beaudin, Esq. who has been nominated by the President as an Associate Judge of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia.

I have known Mr. Beaudin for more than fifteen years. I have had occasion to work with him when I was an Assistant U.S. Attorney, when I was Deputy Administrator of LEAA and when I was President of the D.C. Bar. I know many people who know Mr. Beaudin.

Mr. Beaudin is a dedicated and hard working public servant. He was instrumental in helping to reform and improve the Courts of the District of Columbia in the early seventies. He has been an important figure in the national effort to reform our bail practices. Mr. Beaudin is an able administrator and has done an excellent job heading D.C.'s pre trial services agency.

Mr. Beaudin is an excellent lawyer. I am familiar with a number of the cases he tried as an attorney with D.C.'s Public Defender Service. He is highly regarded by the judiciary in the District of Columbia.

Mr. Beaudin is a person of the highest integrity. He says what he means and does what he says. Mr. Beaudin can be trusted. Mr. Beaudin has an excellent temperament. He is mature, thoughtful and does not take himself too seriously; he will not let being a judge go to his head.

Mr. Beaudin will make an excellent judge. I commend him to you in the strongest possible terms.

Sincerely yours,

CHARLES R. WORK.

SUPERIOR COURT OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA,
Washington, DC, October 17, 1983.

Hon. WILLIAM V. ROTH, Jr.,
U.S. Senator, Chairman, Committee on Governmental Affairs, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR ROTH: It is my understanding that the confirmation of the nomination of Bruce Beaudin, Esq., to be an associate judge of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia is presently before your Committee. I have known Mr. Beaudin quite well since both he and I were students at Georgetown University Law Center over 20 years ago, and have maintained contact with him, both professionally and socially, since that time.

In all my dealings with him, I have found Mr. Beaudin to be a kind and decent human being, with a balanced appreciation of both sides of a question and all sides of a controversy. His most notable characteristic, in my judgment, is his candor and honesty. I have always known him to make judgments on issues exactly as he sees them, without regard to extraneous considerations. I think he would bring these important qualities to the bench, and I am certain that he would dispense justice on this Court in a fair, balanced and even-handed manner.

For these reasons, and others which come to mind, I enthusiastically recommend Mr. Beaudin to your consideration. I am certain he will prove to be an excellent judge of this Court.

Sincerely,

GEOFFREY M. ALPRIN,
Associate Judge.

GOVERNMENT OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, METROPOLITAN POLICE DEPARTMENT,
Washington, DC.

Hon. WILLIAM V. ROTH, Jr.,
Chairman, U.S. Senate, Committee on Governmental Affairs, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR ROTH: It is my understanding that Mr. Bruce Beaudin, Director Pre-Trial Services for the District of Columbia is being considered for nomination as a judge for the District of Columbia Superior Court. I want to take this opportunity to express my opinion of Mr. Beaudin for this important position.

I have known Mr. Beaudin for about eight years both professionally and socially. I first met Mr. Beaudin in 1974 while I was assigned to the department's Planning and Development Division and serving as the Chief of Police's primary representative to the Criminal Justice Coordinating Board for the District of Columbia. During these assignments I worked with Mr. Beaudin frequently on many issues involving criminal justice, both from city-wide and departmental levels. His knowledge, dedication, sincerity, understanding and cooperativeness impressed me tremendously. He was always in the forefront of all discussions of the Board, well prepared when many were not, and by his poignant comments and questions was able to keep the Board focusing on the issue(s) at hand. His ability to do this and still maintain the respect and admiration of everyone was a clear illustration of his outstanding personal and professional characteristics.

A number of departmental policies and procedures concerning prisoner processing was modified and improved at his suggestion. While assigned to the Planning and Development Division (over four years), and the last year as its Director, I often sought the advice and support of Mr. Beaudin relative to matter of mutual concern and was always received in an enthusiastic and helpful manner.

In my later capacities as Director of the Training Division and Commanding Officer of the First District, I have had continued contact with Mr. Beaudin in a number of matters, and my opinion of his capabilities has not diminished. On the contrary, they have grown with each subsequent occasion.

The outstanding attributes which were evident in his professional role were just as visible in the social and recreational activities we shared. His conduct was and is, in my opinion, exemplary and beyond reproach.

In conclusion, let me say that in my twenty years of service on this department, I have had numerous opportunities to observe and evaluate the criminal justice system and the judiciary in particular. It is my sincere opinion that Mr. Bruce Beaudin is an exceptional individual, possessing all the qualities, i.e., knowledge, understanding, temperament, decisiveness, and fairness, that would make him an outstanding addition to the D.C. Superior Court judiciary.

Sincerely,

RONAL D. COX,
Deputy Chief of Police, Commanding Officer, First District.

COVINGTON & BURLING,
Washington, DC, October 17, 1983.

Hon. WILLIAM V. ROTH,
Chairman, Committee on Governmental Affairs, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN ROTH: I am writing in support of the nomination of Bruce Beaudin to be an Associate Judge of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia.

I have known Mr. Beaudin for several years and had the opportunity to work closely with him from 1979 to 1982, when I served as United States Attorney for the District of Columbia. Mr. Beaudin is a person of integrity who has demonstrated his dedication to this city and to the improvement of its criminal justice system. Although he and I did not always agree on the details of various proposals for change, his suggestions were always thoughtful and reflected his wealth of experience in working with the disadvantaged citizens of the community.

In my judgment Mr. Beaudin would bring to the bench the same commitment to justice and sense of fairness that he brought to his service as director of the Pretrial Services Agency—an organization which has been a model for comparable agencies throughout the country. I commend him to the Committee without hesitation.

Sincerely,

CHARLES F.C. RUFF.

COVINGTON & BURLING,
Washington, DC, November 15, 1983.

Hon. CHARLES McC. MATHIAS,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MAC: I am advised that the nomination of Bruce Beaudin for a position as judge of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia will come before your Committee within the next day or so, and I would like to urge that you approve his nomination.

I am acquainted with Bruce Beaudin through his membership on the Board of the Council for Court Excellence—a group formed a few years ago to improve the administration of justice in the District of Columbia, of which I serve as chairman—and I am confident that he would be one of our better Superior Court judges were his nomination to be approved. He has had a wealth of experience in the District and in the administration particularly of the criminal justice system, not only as the long-time director of the District of Columbia Pretrial Services Agency, but as the member or chairman of a number of committees and task forces dealing with various aspects of the judicial operations of the District.

In short, he is the kind of person whose experience as well as abilities and character—as testified to at the hearing by judges, U.S. attorneys and others—make him eminently qualified.

I hope he will have your vote.

Sincerely,

CHARLES A HORSKY.

OCTOBER 18, 1983.

Hon. WILLIAM V. ROTH, JR.,
Chairman, U.S. Senate, Committee on Governmental Affairs, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: It is my pleasure to recommend Mr. Bruce D. Beaudin for favorable action by your committee and appointment to the District of Columbia Superior Court.

It was my pleasure to first meet Mr. Beaudin in his capacity as President of the National Pre-Trial Services Association, and Director of the District of Columbia Pre-Trial Services Agency. He remains a friend today. Mr. Beaudin is and has been a serious student of the law, a man of good moral character, and an individual who brings interest and enthusiasm to his undertakings. He has the patience to cope with cut-and-dried matters, but he also has the imagination and creativity to deal with novel, complex, difficult issues. His most remarkable quality is sheer energy, resulting in uncommon productivity. He is a prodigious worker, capable of turning out remarkable quantities of first-rate material of every sort.

His judgment is intuitively good and has been refined by the acquisition of systematic planning techniques. He handles himself well in courtroom settings and knows the virtues of preparedness. He deals with people sensitively and tactfully. Because of his past employment he has had the opportunity to appreciate the problems that confront the Criminal Justice System, the courts and our Urban areas in seeking solutions to the honored phrase of "equal Justice under the Law".

Over the past decade his professional duties, and my own duties, have often caused us to work for, or against, one another. In each case I found him honorable, astute in his interpretation of fact and law, and always able to bring organization, clarity and persuasiveness to the goal at hand.

It is pleasure to recommend him.

Sincerely,

LESLIE H. ROWE.

GEORGETOWN UNIVERSITY LAW CENTER,
Washington, DC.

Hon. WILLIAM V. ROTH, Jr.,
Chairman, Committee on Governmental Affairs, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR ROTH: I write to recommend respectfully that the nomination of Bruce D. Beaudin to the Bench of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia be confirmed. I have known Mr. Beaudin during his student days at Georgetown, in his capacities at the then Legal Aid Agency and, especially, as Director of the District of Columbia Pretrial Services Agency, whose Executive Committee I chair.

Mr. Beaudin possesses the attributes that predict a successful tenure on the bench. He is very personable, able and knowledgeable in the law, especially the administration of criminal justice. He has been active in the affairs of the District of Columbia and is known, respected and liked by judges, congressional, court, and municipal officials and by fellow members of the Bar. He has had a wealth of litigation and administrative experience.

It is no accident that the award-winning Pretrial Services Agency has functioned so well under his leadership. It has been through his efforts, creativity and direction that the agency has evolved from its origins as an entity assisting in verifying data at the setting of bail to a mature organization assisting the courts and the criminal justice system in establishing and implementing pretrial decisions relating to community danger, preventive detention, conditions of release, prompt attendance at court hearings, evaluation of third party custodians and the like, while integrating its data and work with the efforts of the courts, the United States Attorney, the Police Department, and the city.

To the Bench, Mr. Beaudin would bring an almost unique depth and breadth of knowledge and experience, and a judicial demeanor at once pleasant and effective. Secure in his knowledge and professionally personable, he would make an excellent judge. I commend him to your favorable attention.

Sincerely,

DAVID J. MCCARTHY, Jr.,
Professor of Law.

Re Confirmation of Bruce D. Beaudin.

Hon. WILLIAM V. ROTH, Jr.,
Chairman, Committee on Governmental Affairs, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR ROTH: I write to you in my capacity as an active member of the District of Columbia Bar and, in so doing, urge you, your Committee and the full Senate to consider favorably and promptly President Reagan's nomination of Bruce D. Beaudin as a Judge for the Superior Court of the District of Columbia.

I urge Mr. Beaudin's nomination because, in my judgment, he is uniquely qualified to deal with the challenges that face the Court in the next ten years. Earlier in his legal career, 1964 to 1968, he held the position as Staff Attorney, Deputy Director, and then Acting Director of what is now known as the Public Defender Service. In those capacities, he earned the esteem of his colleagues at the bar and the members of the bench before whom he appeared as an able litigator who, in a word, "knew how to try a case."

Since leaving the active trial bar, Mr. Beaudin has been intimately involved in the entire criminal justice system in this city. As Director of the Pre-Trial Services Agency, he undoubtedly has more knowledge of the criminal justice system than 99% of the lawyers who are involved in that system as litigators. His value to the community goes beyond its geographical bounds in that he has become recognized as a national expert in pre-trial services. He is not only hailed as a national expert but the agency which he administers is deemed an example that is emulated across the nation. Evidence of this fact was the Justice Department award given to the D.C. Pre-Trial Services Agency as an exemplary organization.

In my opinion, he would bring to the bench a keen mind, a sense of what is right, and a judicial temperament that could only enhance the Superior Court bench.

His commitment to the judicial system, this city and its citizens compels me to urge you, your Committee, and the Senate to confirm Mr. Beaudin's nomination to the Superior Court bench.

Very truly yours,

MICHAEL F. CURTIN.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW,
Riverdale, MD, October 17, 1983.

Hon. WILLIAM V. ROTH, Jr.,
Chairman. Committee on Governmental Affairs, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN ROTH: Earlier this year, President Reagan nominated Bruce David Beaudin, Esquire, presently Director of the District of Columbia Pretrial Services Agency, for the position of Associate Judge of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia. I wish to voice my strong support for Mr. Beaudin's prompt confirmation by the Senate.

I have known Mr. Beaudin since 1973, when I began work at what was then known as the District of Columbia Bail Agency. While enrolled in law school, I continued full-time employment with the Bail Agency, eventually rising in position to Director, Post-Release Services, in which I was responsible for one-half of the Agency's operations. In 1978, I was selected as Law Clerk to Alfred Burka [then] Associate Judge, Superior Court of the District of Columbia. Following Judge Burka's sudden retirement [on disability] in December 1979, I was offered the position by Chief Judge H. Carl Moultrie, I, of Law Clerk to the Court's Senior Judges, where I served until September 1980. I then served as Law Clerk to Honorable Paul F. McArdle of the Superior Court for one year, after which I entered private practice in September 1981.

Based upon my experience in the Court, I believe that I am in a unique position to comment on Mr. Beaudin's qualification. I know most of the present judges and their work, and I believe that Mr. Beaudin would rank among the highest of the present judges in terms of intellect, insight, and judicial temperament. Additionally, Mr. Beaudin would bring to the bench the strong philosophies and independent beliefs that are necessary for judicial officers. While he has primarily been involved in the criminal justice system, his knowledge embraces all aspects of the law. I have often utilized his private documentation, by subject heading, of the slip opinions of the appellate courts in the District of Columbia.

I appreciate the opportunity to "second" Mr. Beaudin's nomination, and I believe the Senate's confirmation of Mr. Beaudin will result in a stronger Superior Court judiciary.

Sincerely,

THOMAS G. ROSS.

WILKES, ARTIS, HEDRICK & LANE,
ATTORNEYS AT LAW,
Washington, DC, October 17, 1983.

Hon. WILLIAM V. ROTH, Jr.,
Chairman, Committee on Governmental Affairs, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: I am writing to urge and recommend the confirmation of Bruce D. Beaudin as a judge of the Superior Court. I am a former Assistant District Attorney of New York County, New York and a former Assistant United States Attorney, Washington, D.C. I am now in private practice, specializing in litigation.

I have known Bruce Beaudin for over 20 years and have dealt with him professionally on numerous occasions. Mr. Beaudin is highly regarded by the attorneys of this city as a competent and knowledgeable attorney and a man of high integrity. He has had substantial trial experience, particularly in his earlier professional years and is regarded by all who have opposed him in the courtroom as a most capable trial lawyer.

Although not an extremist, Mr. Beaudin takes a conservative, law and order approach to the administration of criminal justice, and would be exactly the type of judge greatly needed by the courts of this city.

There are few lawyers who are as independent and principled as Mr. Beaudin. The high moral integrity which he has demonstrated over the years as an attorney will cause him to be the type of judge whom everyone will recognize as being not only honest but absolutely beyond reproach.

Very truly yours,

ROBERT X. PERRY, Jr.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, based on the judgments of these esteemed members of the legal profession, on the willingness of two sitting district court judges to testify personally on Mr. Beaudin's qualifications and on the committee's extensive review and investigation, I ask the Senate to confirm the nomination of Bruce D. Beaudin to be an associate judge of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia.

I yield back the floor, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri is recognized.

Mr. EAGLETON. Mr. President, I rise today to speak in opposition to the appointment of Mr. Bruce Beaudin to the position of associate judge of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia. Many of my colleagues may not be aware that judges are Presidential appointments and that those appointments, because of jurisdiction, are referred to the Governmental Affairs Committee, rather than the Judiciary Committee.

During the 16 years I have worked on DC affairs, I personally have reviewed the nominations of nearly all of the 43 judges who now sit on DC Superior Court. Not all of these nominees have been of my political persuasion; not all of them have demonstrated the trial experience or equivalent legal expertise which I personally feel is helpful on the bench. Nonetheless, after thoroughly reviewing each candidate's credentials, I have affirmed the Presidential choice—be it Nixon, Ford, Carter, or Reagan. In the case of Mr. Bruce Beaudin, I am no longer able to do that.

My singular objection to Mr. Beaudin relates to his longstanding and continuing friendship with a Mr. Donald Epstein, a local, known dealer in pornography. At the outset, and in fairness to Mr. Beaudin, let me emphasize that Mr. Beaudin has done nothing illegal. Professionally, he has built a fine reputation during his 16 years as director of the DC Pretrial Services Agency. Nonetheless, I oppose his nomination.

Mr. Beaudin's nomination to DC Superior Court came before the Governmental Affairs Committee for consideration more than a year ago. Since that time, his qualifications have been reviewed by staff, been the subject of a lengthy hearing, been the object of a private meeting between myself and Mr. Beaudin, and been fully debated at a full committee markup. In addition, I and other interested Senators on the committee have reviewed the FBI report on Mr. Beaudin.

This thorough investigation has affirmed my conclusion that Mr. Beaudin simply lacks the maturity, independence, wisdom, and judgment which I deem necessary to sit on DC Superior Court—a court which, in design and importance, can be equated with the State trial courts in any of the States we all represent.

What has Mr. Beaudin's relationship with Mr. Donald Epstein been, and why do I conclude that it should disqualify Mr. Beaudin from the bench?

Mr. Beaudin testified at his hearing on October 19, 1983, that he first met Donald Epstein sometime between 1965 and 1967 while accompanying Mr. Epstein's criminal attorney, a Mr. Kenneth Wood. Mr. Wood, a respected criminal lawyer in Washington, served as a mentor to Mr. Beaudin, in addition to being a neighbor and close personal friend. "* * * at some point in my relationship with Mr. Wood I would have learned that Mr. Epstein in fact employed Mr. Wood and why he had to employ Mr. Wood," Mr. Beaudin testified at his hearing.

It is unclear from interviews with Mr. Beaudin or from the hearing record, however, what exactly Mr. Beaudin did know about Mr. Epstein's business and activities. Between May 1952, and calendar year end 1981, Mr. Epstein was arrested 11 times on pornography-related charges. These charges ranged from exhibiting lewd and immoral movies to a 1973, 66-count indictment which charged indecent publication, conspiracy, importation/transportation of obscene matter, and transportation of obscene matter for sale/publication. A jury found Mr. Epstein not guilty.

That Mr. Beaudin was fully aware of the pornographic nature of Mr. Epstein's affairs, however, was made clear during a staff interview on July 18, 1983, when Mr. Beaudin commented: "This really hasn't been fair to have to cut off my friendship. He has been cleared." That meant Mr. Epstein. "Just because I like him, it doesn't mean I like his business. I've told him many times I don't like his business, and I have asked him why he doesn't go into something else. His answer is the money is too good. It comes too easy and too fast."

I think that juicy little quote bears repetition. This is the man that we are about to put on the trial court in the District of Columbia describing his relationship with a known, and indeed in the eyes of some people one of the biggest pornographers in town. "This really hasn't been fair to have to cut off my friendship. He has been cleared." "He" meaning Mr. Epstein, the pornographer. "Just because I like him, it doesn't mean I like his business. I've told him many times I don't like his business, and I have asked him why he doesn't go into something else. His answer is the money is too good. It comes too easy and too fast."

Mr. Epstein's reputation and record, however, are not in question here. The question is whether Mr. Beaudin, knowing of Mr. Epstein's business, engaged in an association, which he admits lasted a decade, which would have been terminated by a more prudent man—by a man who exhibits the basic standards one would term "judicial temperament." Specifically, Mr. Beaudin's questionable dealings with Mr. Epstein appear to be a "sweetheart" car loan, purchases of "discounted" consumer goods, a continuing friendship involving lunches and the exchange of Christmas gifts, and serving as "point man" between Mr. Epstein and his criminal attorney.

1. THE CAR LOAN

In the late 1960's—Mr. Beaudin thinks it was 1967—Mr. Epstein lent Mr. Beaudin, then 28 years old, somewhere between $800 and $1,100 to help buy Mr. Beaudin's first car. Mr. Wood cosigned a Riggs Bank note for Mr. Beaudin for the remainder of the money needed. The Epstein loan was a "handshake" loan, accompanied by no promissory note, no interest, and no terms, other than that Mr. Beaudin would pay Mr. Epstein back $100 per paycheck for the period it took to repay the loan. That really is a sweetheart loan. Mr. Beaudin remembers paying back the note in cash installments. When I questioned Mr. Beaudin about the loan during an interview on September 16, 1983, Mr. Beaudin did not recall whether he received the original funds from Mr. Epstein by cash or check. In fact, he thought that perhaps Mr. Epstein, "who did a lot of business with Curtis Chevrolet," gave the money to the dealer directly.

2. APPLIANCE PURCHASES

At some point during the early 1970's, Mr. Beaudin purchased directly from Mr. Epstein a $20 gold piece and a small kitchen appliance. Both transactions apparently occurred in the presence of Mr. Wood. The appliance was purchased from among a substantial number of similar items, obtained by Mr. Epstein in New York, and brought to his Washington office for Christmas gifts for his employees and friends. He is the lovable old Christmas pornographer. Mr. Epstein apparently offered to give Mr. Beaudin the appliance, but Mr. Beaudin rejected it as a gift and arranged to pay the price on the sticker, either a discount or wholesale price. Mr. Beaudin remembers the price as being close to what he would have paid for the same item at Bell's or Best.

The gold piece transaction was similar. At some point between Thanksgiving and Christmas, again in the 1970's, Mr. Beaudin mentioned to Mr. Epstein that he was having trouble finding a gold piece for his wife for Christmas. Mr. Beaudin was looking for a coin with a specific date. At his hearing, Mr. Beaudin testified that Mr. Epstein said: "I have a gold collection. I bought these coins long ago. I will get one for you." About 2 weeks later, Mr. Beaudin purchased the coin from Mr. Epstein for $225, cash he had removed from his Christmas Club account. Again, Mr. Beaudin said the price was equivalent to similar coins he had priced at Bell's or Best.

3. LUNCHES/CHRISTMAS GIFTS

When Mr. Beaudin was first interviewed by staff in July 1983, he commented that his friendship with Mr. Epstein consisted pretty much of monthly or bimonthly lunch dates among himself, Mr. Wood, and Mr. Epstein. While he mentioned that he and Mr. Epstein had exchanged Christmas presents—poinsettias or fruit baskets—he noted that since his interest in the bench, their communication was confined to chance meetings on the street and Christmas cards.

However, at his hearing and during my conversation with him, Mr. Beaudin characterized the lunches as "eating a sandwich" in Mr. Epstein's front office while Mr. Wood and Mr. Epstein conducted their business in Mr. Epstein's rear office. Mr. Beaudin acknowledged that the surroundings—peepshows, girlie magazines—made it evident that Mr. Epstein was in the pornography business.

Once again, here is a would-be judge sitting out in the anteroom of the pornography establishment, while the pornographer and his lawyer are consulting in the backroom, munching on a sandwich—time and time and time again, not just once, not just twice, not just occasionally.

At one point during our conversation, Mr. Beaudin told me that a District of Columbia policeman advised him that Mr. Epstein's office was under surveillance by police cameras. During his hearing, Mr. Beaudin testified that the surveillance information led him to discuss with Mr. Wood "* * * the propriety of my meeting Mr. Wood there for lunch * * *," but that Mr. Wood assured him that there would be no problem.

Now, that just defies common sense. You are informed by the police that a place you are frequenting is under surveillance by the police with a camera, and you are not sure whether that casts any doubt on the wisdom of your frequenting such a place, so you turn to the pornographer's criminal lawyer and say, "Mr. Lawyer, do you think there is something wrong with my meeting here all the time while all this surveillance is going on?" And the lawyer says, "Think nothing of it; I am just having some nice conversations with the lovable old pornographer." It defies common sense. A judge needs an abundance of common sense.

4. PATRICIA PEYTON

In 1976, an employee and alleged girlfriend of Mr. Epstein's, a woman named Patricia Peyton, was involved in an automobile accident in Maryland. Mr. Beaudin accompanied Ms. Peyton to Hyattsville, MD, spoke with the arresting officer, and explained the charges to Ms. Peyton. Mr. Beaudin, not a Maryland attorney, was not able to represent Ms. Peyton, but said that he waited until Ms. Peyton's case was called, and then returned to his job as head of the DC Pretrial Services Agency, once the case was dismissed. Mr. Beaudin stated that he accompanied Ms. Peyton at the request of, and in place of, Mr. Wood, who had a court appearance that morning. Mr. Beaudin also stated that he took annual leave for this purpose.

Ms. Peyton again called on Mr. Beaudin in 1981 when Mr. Epstein was arrested at Washington National Airport for possession of a gun. Mr. Beaudin testified at his hearing that such a call was necessary because Ms. Peyton could not reach Mr. Wood, who had an unlisted number. Mr. Beaudin said he advised Ms. Peyton that they needed a Virginia attorney. Mr. Wood's clients, according to Mr. Beaudin, "knew that if they needed to get in touch with Mr. Wood, if they called me, I would know where he was." Mr. Beaudin rejected at his hearing any notion that he served as an agent for Mr. Wood.

I do not know whether he was an agent for Mr. Wood. However, he was Mr. Wood's phone answering service. If people wanted to get hold of Mr. Wood, the criminal lawyer, they could get hold of Mr. Beaudin. Who did Ms. Peyton call when Mr. Epstein was arrested at Washington National Airport? She called Mr. Beaudin.

Finally, also apparently in 1981, Patricia Peyton was beaten up outside of the District of Columbia and afterwards identified two persons who were later arrested and processed through DC Superior Court. The individuals gave "Bruce Beaudin" as one of their references. At his hearing, Mr. Beaudin explained that in a pretrial release context, the term "reference" is used to verify information and is not a character reference.

Here are two guys arrested for thuggery, beating up a woman, and when they are booked, they give as their reference Bruce Beaudin, by name. Very curious.

Mr. President, Mr. Beaudin directly associated with Mr. Epstein for at least a decade. During some of that time—and I would surmise most of that time—he knew full well what business Mr. Epstein was in. Yet he entered into a "sweetheart" loan with Mr. Epstein, exchanged Christmas gifts with Mr. Epstein, purchased consumer items from Mr. Epstein at favorable prices, and went beyond any professional association to have lunch with Mr. Epstein and to help out Mr. Epstein's friends.

In my opinion, these are not the actions of a man who should be elevated to the bench. I urge my colleagues to join me in rejecting this nomination, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There appears to be a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. EAGLETON. Mr. President, I do not know if there are any other speakers on this matter. The time allotted was from 2 p.m. to 3 p.m. At this time, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that any subsequent quorum calls be charged to this side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. EAGLETON. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ETHICS COMMITTEE MEETING

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, as in legislative business, on a matter that is not before us but I wish to make a statement here that as chairman of the Ethics Committee, the Ethics Committee will meet following these two votes which are scheduled. There will be a vote at 3 p.m., as I understand it, on this nomination. That will be followed by a vote on the conference report. And after those two votes, I am hopeful that we can convene the Ethics Committee. We do have an agenda to consider this afternoon.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I rise in support of this nomination. I do so because Mr. Beaudin has served with distinction as the Director of the D.C. Pre-Trial Services Agency since 1968. So, for the last 15 years or so we have someone who has served as the director of a very important public agency and apparently, it is conceded, with distinction.

Some time ago he met a man who was involved in the pornography business through Mr. Beaudin's mentor, a lawyer by the name of Wood, and as a result of that relationship between Mr. Wood and his client, Bruce Beaudin came to know that client somewhat and had some dealings with that client of a lawyer that even my friend from Missouri has called a distinguished lawyer in D.C., Kenneth Wood.

Mr. President, if Kenneth Wood were up here today for confirmation, this distinguished lawyer, in the words of my friend from Missouri, this distinguished lawyer, would we be debating his confirmation today? That is the distinguished lawyer who represented the man who was in the pornography business. Would he be disqualified from being appointed to a judge because he represented the man? I think most of us would say not.

Although I cannot speak for my friend from Missouri, I would think that he would agree that lawyers at times have represented people who were somewhat, or very much so, disreputable.

Now, if the distinguished lawyer—to again use my friend from Missouri's words—the distinguished lawyer Kenneth Wood would not be disqualified because he represented an unsavory character in the pornography business, the question then is, Why would we then say that Bruce Beaudin is qualified?

Kenneth Wood, the pornographer's lawyer, this distinguished lawyer, was Bruce Beaudin's mentor. And it was because of that lawyer-client relationship that Bruce Beaudin came to know the man who was in the pornography business. It was a derivative relationship through a distinguished lawyer. That is it. I should not quite say that is it, because there were some additional things which my good friend from Missouri has pointed out.

Mr. Beaudin received a loan in 1967 of about $1,100, if my memory is correct, from the man in the pornography business and it was repaid. That is 17 years ago. He purchased an appliance, a mixer, in the early 1970's from Epstein. That is 10 years ago or more and he paid cash for that. And he purchased a gold coin from Epstein or from Epstein's wife 10 years ago or more.

Now, in addition to those three purchases and loans, which all took place 10 years ago or more, we have the fact that a girlfriend of Epstein's received some assistance from Mr. Beaudin 8 years ago. How is that for derivation? And Mr. Epstein's name was given, he was listed as a reference by people without his consent, not at his initiative, in 1981 and received a phone call in 1981 looking for Mr. Wood again. He did not initiate the phone call, he received the phone call.

What has happened in the last 8 years are two events: His name was listed without his consent and he received a phone call not at his initiative. That is it in the last 8 years.

Now I do not like pornography any more than my friend from Missouri. I think we share our equal dislike and equal distaste and disgust for it. But I think we also sense and share that we want to judge people fairly. And I think that is his instinct as much as it is my instinct. And as disreputable as the business of Mr. Epstein, we owe it to Mr. Beaudin to judge him on his qualifications now for this particular judgeship.

Again, the relationship between Mr. Beaudin and Mr. Epstein was a derivative relationship. It occurred over 10 years ago. I think my friend from Missouri agrees that Mr. Beaudin has served with distinction for the last 16 years as director of the D.C. Pretrial Services Agency. So the question then becomes should he be disqualified for these other particular events, the purchase of a gold coin for which he paid cash 10 years ago or more; the purchase of an appliance, a mixer, for which he paid cash at least 10 years ago, if our facts are correct; and a loan of 6 years ago which he repaid?

My sense of fairness drives me to the conclusion that a man who has this kind of a record as the director of a legal services agency, whose relationship with the unsavory character is derivative, limited and over 10 years ago, and whose only connection with this man in the last 6 years is a phone call which came, which he did not solicit, from the man's girlfriend; and another connection being the fact that he was listed by two people as a reference without his support, without his concurrence, not at his initiative, without his consent; and the only other contact in the last 6 years, the fact that Epstein's girlfriend called him—not at his request, not at his initiative, not with his consent—looking for Kenneth Wood's phone number. I do not believe that that kind of association is direct enough to disqualify this man from being confirmed as a judge.

Now my sense of fairness leads me to that conclusion. My friend from Missouri has as keen a sense of fairness as I do and his sense of fairness has led him to a different conclusion. But it was the judgment of the committee that this relationship was long ago, relatively, more than 6 years ago in terms of any direct contact—Beaudin has not even seen Epstein except by chance for the last 8 years—that it was long enough ago and that it was derivative enough so that the majority of the committee voted to confirm this nomination.

I thank my friend from Missouri. I hope I did not use up the time he reserved for himself.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I yield the balance of our time to the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. EAGLETON. Mr. President, that was a very remarkable little speech. The next thing we know Bruce Beaudin is going to be nominated for Pope.

I do not disqualify Mr. Beaudin because of people he represents. Mr. Wood is a criminal lawyer and represents people accused of crime.

I disqualify Mr. Beaudin because of an indiscreet, grossly indiscreet, social and business relationship of a continuing nature that went on for over 10 years and as recently as 1981. We have from the FBI report marked confidential, et cetera, a reference to Beaudin and Epstein as late as 1981.

Now, what was this indiscreet relationship? Just in summary, frequent and continued lunches at Mr. Epstein's place of business; a sweetheart loan; appearance in court for Ms. Patricia Peyton, an employee of Mr. Epstein. The whole relationship stinks. It is a smelly, odoriferous relationship, and it is not worthy of the high praise which the Senator from Michigan ascribed to it.

Yes, we would confirm Louis Brandeis for the Supreme Court, even though Brandeis had represented some criminal defendants. But if Louis Brandeis had become a habitue of criminals and known pornographers, we would have disqualified him. I think we would have had enough good sense to do so.

If you do not know better than to hang out in a pornographic establishment time and time again and to do frequent business deals with a known pornographer, how do you have enough common sense to sit on the bench in the District of Columbia?

The action of Mr. Beaudin was indiscrete in the extreme, and I think it forbids him being put on the Superior Court of the District of Columbia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. LEVIN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, Mr. Beaudin is being nominated for a judicial position. He should be judged based on his entire record, not on three events which took place 10 years ago or more where he received no benefit and no profit from a man who was being represented by his mentor. That is it.

The 1981 event which my friend talks about is Mr. Beaudin being listed—not at his request, not with his consent, not at his initiative—as a reference by two people.

He had nothing to do with that in all fairness. We have to be fair to Beaudin. That is the issue. We have to be fair to Beaudin. In the 1981 most recent event he is listed by others as a reference—two people who beat up somebody else, if my memory is correct. He did not initiate that listing as a reference. You cannot stop being listed by people as a reference. I do not even know who these people are. He did not ask these people to list him. He did not give his reference. He did not say these people were good. He was listed. I think that we owe him a fair judgment. We do not owe Mr. Epstein anything. I share a distaste for Epstein and his kind as deeply as my friend from Missouri.

I also have a sense of fairness which I know my friend from Missouri has, too, which has led us to different conclusions. But my sense of fairness leads me to the conclusion that as a man who has served with this distinction as head of the pretrial services of the DC Bar since 1967 he should not be disqualified for three events which took place in the early seventies or the late sixties. I do not know Bruce Beaudin from a bale of hay. I would not know him if he walked in this Chamber today, although I have met him. I met him only at the hearing. I saw him in the hearing. I thought he was going to make a good judge. That is the only thing that brings me to the floor today; is I think we owe him a judgment on him and not on Epstein—on him.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, we yield back the remainder of our time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. NICKLES). All time is yielded back.

The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the nomination of Bruce D. Beaudin, to be an associate judge of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia? On this question, the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. CRANSTON. I announce that the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. DODD] and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. TSONGAS] are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber who wish to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 57, nays 41, as follows:

NOT VOTING—2

Dodd Tsongas

So the nomination was confirmed.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the nomination was confirmed.

Mr. GARN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the President be immediately notified that the Senate has given its consent to this nomination.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Mr. BAKER. I ask, Mr. President, that the Senate now return to legislative session.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SOCIAL SECURITY DISABILITY BENEFITS REFORM ACT—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. BAKER. Now, Mr. President, what is the pending business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the pending business.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

NOT VOTING—1

Tsongas

So the conference report was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the conference report was agreed to.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ORDER OF PROCEDURE

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I am advised by the minority leader that on behalf of another Senator it would be necessary to interpose an objection to proceed to the consideration of the trade bill. I understand the reasons for that and I respect them.

In order to start the machinery running to get back to the trade bill in a moment I am going to make a motion that we proceed to the consideration of the trade bill with the full understanding that no effort will be made on this side to get a vote on that motion for the time being but at least then we will have a vehicle before the Senate to allow Senators to make statements on the trade bill, perhaps to discuss but not dispose of the amendments, so at least we can make some progress, I hope, toward final resolution of this matter.

On that basis, then, Mr. President, and having advised in advance the minority leader and the managers of this technique, I now move that the Senate move to the consideration of Calendar Order No. 559, H.R. 3398.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I have to ask for a quorum call. I, therefore, suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HECHT). Without objection, it is so ordered.

MISCELLANEOUS TARIFF,TRADE, AND CUSTOMS MATTERS

Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending motion to proceed be withdrawn and I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of H.R. 3398.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill.

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, I call up my amendment and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, I will defer to the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, what is the Senator doing?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator called up an amendment which the clerk was directed to report.

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, what is the parliamentary situation? Am I free to offer an amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington is offering an amendment which the clerk was directed to report.

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, I yielded the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from New Hampshire.

AMENDMENT NO. 4278

(Purpose: To provide a user fee for customs services at certain small airports)

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Hampshire (Mr. HUMPHREY) proposes an amendment numbered 4278.

On page 41, between lines 18 and 19, insert the following:

SEC. . USER FEE FOR CUSTOMS SERVICES AT CERTAIN SMALL AIRPORTS.

(a) The Secretary of the Treasury shall make customs services available and charge a fee for the use of such customs services at—

(1) the airport located at Lebanon, New Hampshire, and

(2) any other airport designated by the Secretary of the Treasury under subsection (c).

(b) The fee which is charged under subsection (a) shall be paid by each person using the customs services at the airport and shall be in an amount equal to the expenses incurred by the Secretary of the Treasury in providing the customs services which are rendered to such person at such airport (including the salary and expenses of individuals employed by the Secretary of the Treasury to provide such customs services).

(c) The Secretary of the Treasury may designate 4 airports under this subsection. An airport may be designated under this subsection only if—

(1) the Secretary of the Treasury has made a determination that the volume or value of business cleared through such airport is insufficient to justify the availability of customs services at such airport, and

(2) the governor of the State in which such airport is located approves such designation.

(d) Any person who, after notice and demand for payment of any fee charged under subsection (a), fails to pay such fee shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and if convicted thereof shall pay a fine that does not exceed an amount equal to 200 percent of such fee.

(e) Fees collected by the Secretary of the Treasury under subsection (a) with respect to the provision of services at an airport shall be deposited in an account within the Treasury of the United States that is specially designated for such airport. The funds in such account shall only be available, as provided by appropriation Acts, for expenditures relating to the provision of customs services at such airport (including expenditures for the salaries and expenses of individuals employed to provide such services.)

Mr. HUMPHREY. I am offering this amendment to provide customs service at certain small airports on a user fee basis.

This amendment has been reported out of the Finance Committee as part of the customs reauthorization bill, and is based on a bill I introduced earlier this year, S. 2495.

The legislation arises out of the plight of several airports facing closure of Customs service, an important aspect of airport service. It authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to establish user-financed service at five airports. This demonstration program would not affect or harm operation of existing service locations.

Lebanon Municipal Airport, located in my State, offers a fine example of the importance of airports to our communities. The airport in Lebanon, NH, services many growing communities in New Hampshire and Vermont. It provides access to many businesses located in the upper Connecticut River Valley, as well as Dartmouth College and its important medical center. Also, it accommodates a substantial amount of general and commercial aviation.

Although the number of international flights arriving at Lebanon Municipal Airport is insufficient to establish a port of entry [POE], the ability to land at Lebanon is crucial for those businesses traveling regularly from Canada or overseas. The ability for international flights to land at Lebanon Airport rests on the availability of Customs services to clear personnel for arrival in the United States.

Currently, Customs service is provided at Lebanon from the POE at Derby Line, VT. This is accomplished on an on-call basis through the out-of-port service concept. Parties requesting clearance at Lebanon are required to contact the Derby Line office at least 3 hours in advance of arrival so that an officer can be sent to clear the aircraft and its passengers at Lebanon. The parties requesting clearance are responsible for reimbursing Customs for travel and per diem expenses. The Federal Government assumes responsibility for the salary of the Customs official.

The present method has proven both costly and ineffective. A Customs review of service at Lebanon reported that during a 6-month period in 1983, the net cost incurred by Customs was $5,271. On top of these costs, the system placed time-consuming burdens on businesses utilizing the airport.

Although an alternative service system was planned for the airport, none has been implemented. The airport authority has recently completed work on a new terminal. A second runway has been extended and the instrument system has been upgraded. The airport now has the capacity to better handle international flights, and the airport administration, along with the community, supports continued Customs service at the airport.

It is clear that its elimination would disrupt existing patterns of business activity, cause economic hardship for a thriving community, and negate local development in projects associated with the airport. It is safe to say that other communities where Customs service might be abandoned will experience similar hardship.

Bureau of Customs management circular 9-0:I:PA, written in June 1973, details an option which provides for a fair resolution to this problem. It allows for service if salary and expenses of a Customs officer are reimbursed in full. My amendment establishes a demonstration program utilizing this user fee option.

The amendment will allow the Secretary of the Treasury to designate up to five airports at which fees may be charged to users of Customs services, in an amount equal to the cost of these services including an official's salary and expenses. As a condition of designation, the Secretary must first determine that the airport has an insufficient volume or value of business requiring Customs clearance in order to justify the availability of Customs services. Further, the Governor of the State in which the airport is located must approve the designation. These conditions are intended to limit the authorization of user fees to airports where, without them, the services simply would be unavailable or discontinued.

I have been in contact with the current users of the Customs services at Lebanon Airport regarding this matter. They have indicated their willingness to pay the costs associated with provision of services, as I am sure would users of Customs services at other small airports. Based on my preliminary investigation, users of these services understand and accept their role of covering the costs incurred. In most cases, this presents a less costly alternative for them than flying to another location.

New Hampshire and South Dakota are the only two States without international landing rights—neither has an airport with international status designation within its boundaries. This is an obvious and unfair disincentive to business development, unjustly impeding further economic progress. My amendment offers a practical solution to this problem.

It would permit continued Customs service on a user fee basis, balancing the need to save Federal dollars while preserving valuable Customs service in affected areas. In addition, it would reduce congestion at busy hub airports and provide a stimulus for continued economic development in many areas.

I understand that Senator DANFORTH, the manager of this bill, is favorably inclined toward this amendment and I would welcome his acceptance of it. I appreciate his assistance and that of the Finance Committee staff in accepting this amendment.

Mr. President, the amendment has been cleared on both sides. I am prepared to discuss it to whatever degree is necessary. Basically, the amendment sets up a pilot program under which Customs services will be offered at five airports on a pilot program basis and paid for by user fees completely.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield.

Mr. HUMPHREY. I yield to the Senator from Texas.

Mr. BENTSEN. I heard the Senator say it has been cleared on both sides. As manager on the minority side, I have not seen the amendment.

Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, this amendment is agreeable and, as a matter of fact, has already passed the Finance Committee on a different bill.

Mr. BENTSEN. If that is correct, Mr. President, I would like to be apprised of what it is and to say it has not been cleared on this side. I suggest the absence of a quorum so I may look at it. It may be true that there is no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I think the amendment has been agreed to by both sides now. It originally was reported out of the Finance Committee as a separate bill. However, the bill is languishing on the Calendar. I am offering it now as an amendment to the trade bill.

I yield to the Senator from Texas.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I discussed the amendment with the Senator and I have no objection to it.

Mr. HUMPHREY. I believe the manager on the majority side has spoken.

Mr. DANFORTH. Yes, Mr. President; the amendment is acceptable.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, if there is no further discussion on it and no objection, I move its adoption.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 4278) was agreed to.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DANFORTH. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 4276

(Purpose: Make amendment regarding tariff treatment of certain articles returned from space)

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, I call up amendment No. 4276.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Washington (Mr. GORTON) for himself, Mr. EVANS, Mr. ROTH, Mr. HEINZ, Mr. ANDREWS, Mr. TRIBLE, Mr. BOSCHWITZ, and Mr. DENTON proposes an amendment numbered 4276.

At the appropriate place insert the following:

SEC. 208. ARTICLES RETURNED FROM SPACE.

(a) Headnote 5 of the general headnotes of the Tariff Schedules of the United States (19 U.S.C. 1202) is amended—

(A) by striking out "media; and" in subdivision (e) and inserting in lieu thereof "media,";

(B) by adding after subdivision (e) the following new subdivision:

"(f) articles returned from space within the purview of section 484a of this Act; and"; and

(C) by redesignating subdivision (f) as subdivision (g).

(b) Part III of title IV of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1481 et seq.) is amended by adding the following new section:

"SEC. 484a. ARTICLES RETURNED FROM SPACE NOT TO BE CONSTRUED AS IMPORTATION.

"The return of articles from space shall not be considered an importation, and an entry of such articles shall not be required, if:

"(1) such articles were previously launched into space from the customs territory of the United States aboard a spacecraft operated by, or under the control of, United States persons and owned—

"(A) wholly by United States persons, or

"(B) in substantial part by United States persons, or

"(C) by the United States;

"(2) such articles were maintained or utilized while in space solely on board such spacecraft or aboard another spacecraft which meets the requirements of paragraph (1) (A) through (C) of this section; and

"(3) such articles were returned to the customs territory directly from space aboard such spacecraft or aboard another spacecraft which meets the requirements of paragraph (1) (A) through (C) of this section;

without regard to whether such articles have been advanced in value or improved in condition by any process or manufacture or other means while in space.".

(c) The amendments made by this section shall apply with respect to articles launched into space from the customs territory of the United States on or after December 31, 1984.

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, I am introducing, along with my colleagues

Senators EVANS, ROTH, HEINZ, ANDREWS, TRIBLE, BOSCHWITZ, and DENTON, an amendment to H.R. 3398 which would change the customs treatment for U.S. commercial space activities.

Under present customs laws and regulations, articles manufactured in space aboard the space shuttle or other U.S. spacecraft could be treated as imports and thereby assessed import duties, even though the articles have never entered a foreign country. The purpose of this amendment is to provide for these U.S. commercial space activities equal, not preferential, customs treatment as enjoyed by U.S. commercial terrestrial activities.

Mr. President, interest in U.S. commercial activities, such as space-based research and development and space-based manufacturing is growing. However, many diverse companies have discovered that there are certain customs laws and regulations which could impede or delay their entry into the long-term high-risk arena of commercial space development. Years ago, when the customs laws and regulations were last re-written, commercial space activities were not even envisioned. Now these laws and regulations are being inappropriately and unintentionally extended to cover these commercial space activities.

The amendment I am offering is one of several initiatives included in the President's recently announced national policy on the commercial use of space, which is designed to encourage private-sector investment and involvement in the promising field of commercial space development. Furthermore, the language has been endorsed by the International Trade Commission.

I believe this has been cleared by both the majority and minority managers of the bill.

Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to support this amendment as a way to help create a more favorable investment and operational climate for U.S. commercial activities and to help maintain our position of preeminence in space.

Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, this bill has been cleared with the majority and with the administration. I commend Senator GORTON on his work with regard to this amendment. My State is very much interested in this subject, McDonnell-Douglas having been involved in the first effort to produce various articles in space. I commend the Senator for it.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, this amendment by the Senator from the State of Washington has been examined by the minority. I, too, join in commendation of the Senator. This is obviously going to be a growing field and it is important. We have no objections.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 4276) was agreed to.

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HEINZ. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 4279

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. HEINZ] proposes an amendment numbered 4279.

At the end of title III the amendment, add the following new section:

SECTION . (a) Section 203(a) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2253) is amended to read as follows:

"(a)(1) If the President proclaims the import relief recommended by the Commission, or announces his intention to negotiate one or more orderly marketing agreements pursuant to the Commission's recommendation, the President shall on the date such proclamation is made transmit to Congress a document setting forth the action he is taking under this section.

"(2) If, on the basis of advice received under section 202(b), the President determines that the provision of the import relief recommended by the Commssion is not in the national economic interest of the United States or that there are alternative recommendations which offset the material injury or threat to the industry to the same extent to which the Commission's recommendations offset such injury or threat thereof, the President shall transmit to Congress a document which sets forth—

"(A) such determination,

"(B) the reasons why providing the import relief recommended by the Commission is not in the national economic interest,

"(C) information with respect to—

"(i) what actions (other then adjustment assistance programs immediately available), if any, the President proposes to take to help the industry overcome material injury or threat thereof and the workers to find productive employment, and

"(ii) how such actions will overcome such material injury or threat thereof to the same extent as the Commission's recommendations, and

"(D) any proposed legislation needed to implement the President's recommendations.

(b) Section 203(b) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2253) is amended to read as follows:

"(b)(1) The President's recommendation under subsection (a)(2)(D) shall be treated as an implementing bill pursuant to the provisions of section 151, except that, for purposes of section 151(c)(1), no trade agreement shall be required and the day on which the implementing bill is submitted shall be treated as the day on which the trade agreement is submitted; and for purposes of section 151(e) (1), and (2) the 45-day period shall be reduced to 15 days.

"(2) The President shall no later than the 31st day after the submission of such proposal—

"(A) proclaim the actions recommended by the Commission under section 201(d) if Congress fails to adopt the implementing bill submitted pursuant to paragraph (1), or

"(B) take the action recommended by him if the Congress has adopted and the President has signed the implementing bill submitted pursuant to paragraph (1).

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, this amendment addresses the problem that was created by the Supreme Court's Chadha decision which renders the congressional override provision of the escape clause statute moot. The intent of this amendment is to correct that in a relatively neutral manner. I believe the chairman of the subcommittee [Mr. DANFORTH] has a proposal.

AMENDMENT NO. 4280

(Purpose: To provide special procedures for joint resolutions disapproving of Presidential actions under title II of the Trade Act of 1974)

Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, I send an amendment in the nature of a substitute to the desk and ask that it be immediately considered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment in the nature of a substitute will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Missouri [Mr. DANFORTH] proposes an amendment (No. 4280) in the nature of a substitute to amendment numbered 4279 proposed by the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. HEINZ].

Mr. DANFORTH. I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

In lieu of language proposed, insert:

SEC. . DISAPPROVAL OF PRESIDENTIAL DETERMINATIONS UNDER SECTION 203 OF THE TRADE ACT OF 1974.

(a)(1) Paragraph (1) of section 203(c) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2253(c)(1)) is amended to read as follows:

"(1) If the President reports under subsection (b) that he is taking action which differs from the action recommended by the Commission under section 201(d)(1)(A), or that he will not provide import relief, the action recommended by the Commission shall take effect (as provided in paragraph (2)) upon enactment of a joint resolution described in section 152(a)(1)(A) within the 90-day period beginning on the date on which the document referred to in subsection (b) is transmitted to the Congress.".

(2) Paragraph (2) of section 203(c) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2253(c)(2)) is amended—

(A) by striking out "adoption of such resolution" and inserting in lieu thereof "enactment of the joint resolution referred to in paragraph (1)", and

(B) by striking out "section 201(b)" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 201(d)".

(b) Subparagraph (A) of section 152(a)(1) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2192(a)(1)(A)) is amended by striking out

"concurrent resolution" and inserting in lieu thereof "joint resolution".

(c) Paragraph (4) of section 330(d) of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1330(d)(4)) is amended by striking out "the concurrent resolution described in such section 152" and inserting in lieu thereof "the joint resolution described in such section 152(a)(1)(A)".

Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, I think this substitute accomplishes exactly what Senator HEINZ wants it to accomplish without changing the procedures of the existing law. This amendment would conform the procedure with the Chadha decision.

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, I have examined—indeed, I am quite familiar with the amendment in the nature of a substitute proposed by Senator DANFORTH. I am pleased and prepared to accept his amendment in the nature of a substitute for my amendment.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, the manager on the minority side has examined the substitute amendment and finds no fault with it. I think it makes a contribution. We have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The amendment (No. 4280) in the nature of a substitute was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the first-degree amendment, as amended.

The amendment (No. 4279), as amended, was agreed to.

Mr. HEINZ. I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. DOLE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

UNITED STATES-ISRAEL FREE TRADE AGREEMENT

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I wish to comment again on the importance of completing action on this legislation so that the President will have authority to complete negotiations with the Government of Israel on the free trade arrangement and submit it for congressional approval early next year.

Although 90 percent of Israeli exports to this country already enter duty free, either because of zero-duty rates or because of the generalized system of preferences [GSP], the United States consistently enjoys a trade surplus with Israel, even excluding military shipments. The 1983 surplus was about $465 million, out of $3 billion in total trade; imports from Israel account for approximately one-half of 1 percent of all U.S. imports. Still, 40 percent of U.S. exports to Israel remain subject to tariffs, in the range of 10 to 15 percent. Thus, a mutual elimination of remaining tariff barriers by the two countries would clearly benefit U.S. exporters, while not significantly expanding the range of Israeli imports that enter this country duty free.

I note in particular that Israel is already a major importer of U.S. agricultural products, purchasing in 1983 $61 million of wheat, $51 million of corn, and $55 million in other cereals. Elimination of Israeli tariffs on other products would lead to greater exports of tobacco and tobacco products, processed cereals, dried garlic, raisins and grapes, various nuts, dried peas and beans, dried fruit, and kosher processed meats and wines. Of course, Israeli exports of agricultural products to this country are small and are unlikely to grow significantly.

Nevertheless, the proposed agreement is very important to Israel. The United States is Israel's single largest trading partner, a relationship reinforced by Israel's lack of access to its natural markets in the Middle East. A free-trade agreement would help to assure a market for Israeli exports. Further, a free-trade arrangement, although reciprocal in nature, would offer Israeli exporters a more comprehensive and stable trading regime than that offered by the unilateral benefits accorded under the GSP. Exports are critical to the viability of the Israeli economy, burdened as it is by enormous defense requirement; the proposed free-trade area would provide essential opportunities for the economic growth that will lessen Israel's need for aid.

For these reasons, the Committee on Finance approve the authority for the agreement without objection. I am pleased that 30 of my colleagues asked, in addition, to cosponsor this legislation. I list them below. Unfortunately, I am informed that Senate rules preclude acknowledging cosponsors in a formal way to an original bill; thus, these 30 Senators could not be listed as cosponsors to the bill reported by the Committee on Finance (S. 2746) that now comprises title IV of the committee amendment to H.R. 3398. But I wish their support for S. 2746 to be fully acknowledged for the public record, and I appreciate their interest.

Mr. President, time is of the essence. The Israeli free-trade area, renewal of the generalized system of preferences, and other matters contained in this bill are of utmost importance to many members. We must complete action quickly in order to engage in a conference with the House. I appreciate the cooperation of my colleagues thus far, and urge that that spirit continue for our mutual benefit.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a list of my colleagues who have asked to be cosponsors of this particular portion of the bill. I just indicate that in the event that there are others who wish to be added.

There being no objection, the list was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2746 COSPONSORS

AMENDMENT NO. 4281

(Purpose: To provide a tariff-rate quota on imported catalytic naphtha)

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I have an amendment that I send to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Texas [Mr. BENTSEN] proposes an amendment No. 4281.

Mr. BENTSEN. I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

Substitute for section 121 of the Committee amendment the following:

"SEC. 121. NAPHTHAS.

Subpart B of part 1 of schedule 4 of the Tariff Schedules of the United States (19 U.S.C. 1202) is amended by inserting the following in numerical order and at the same level of indentation as item 407.09:

	Naphthas derived from petroleum, shale oil, natural gas, or combinations thereof, containing by weight over 5 percent of any product described in this part:
407.11	For not over 190,000,000 pounds entered during the 12-month period beginning January 1 in any year	0.25¢ per gal.	0.5¢ per gal.
407.13	Other	1.7¢ per lb. + 13.6% ad val., but not less than the highest rate applicable to any component material.	7¢ per lb. + 43.5% ad val., but not less than the highest rate applicable to any component material.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, on Monday last I introduced and the Senate passed amendment No. 4248. There was a technical error in the line item reference, and I would like to modify that particular amendment with the amendment that I have sent to the desk. I urge passage of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will take unanimous consent to amend the earlier agreed upon amendment.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to amend the earlier agreed upon amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, this is a technical amendment; it corrects an error in prior proceedings and is acceptable.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 4281) was agreed to.

Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BENTSEN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 4282

(Purpose; To amend the Unfair Competition Act of 1916 and the Clayton Act to provide for further relief in the event of unfair foreign competition)

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. SPECTER], for himself and Mr. RANDOLPH, proposes an amendment numbered 4282.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 41 of the matter proposed to be inserted, between lines 18 and 19, insert the following:

SEC. . RELIEF FROM UNFAIR COMPETITION.

(a) Section 1 of the Clayton Act (15 U.S.C. 12) is amended by inserting after the words "nineteen hundred and thirteen;" the words "section 801 of the Act of September 8, 1916, entitled 'An Act to raise revenue, and for other purposes' (39 Stat. 798; 15 U.S.C. 72);".

(b)(1) Section 801 of the Act of September 8, 1916 (39 Stat. 798; 15 U.S.C. 72) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 801. (a)(1) If—

"(A) any article manufactured or produced in a foreign country is imported or sold within the United States at a United States price which is less than the foreign market value or constructed value of such article,

"(B) such importation or sale—

"(i) causes or threatens material injury to industry or labor in the United States, or

"(ii) prevents, in whole or in part, the establishment or modernization of any industry in the United States, and

"(C) any person is injured in his business or property by reason of such importation or sale, such person may bring a civil action against any manufacturer or exporter of such article or any importer of such article into the United States who is related to such manufacturer or exporter in the district court of the District of Columbia.

"(2) In any action brought under paragraph (1), upon a finding of liability on the part of the defendant, the plaintiff shall—

"(A) recover damages for the injury sustained or be granted such equitable relief as may be appropriate, and

"(B) recover the costs of the action, including reasonable attorney's fees.

"(b) The standard of proof in any action filed under subsection (a) is a preponderance of the evidence. Upon a prima facie showing of the elements set forth in subsection (a), or upon a final determination by the Department of Commerce or the International Trade Commission under section 735 of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1673d) relating to imports of the article in question for the country in which the defendant is located, which final determination shall be considered a prima facie case for purposes of this Act, the burden of rebutting such prima facie case thus made shall be upon the defendant.

"(c) Whenever it shall appear to the district court of the District of Columbia that justice requires that other parties be brought before the court, the court may cause them to be summoned, whether they reside in the district or not, and the subpenas to that end may be served and enforced in any district of the United States.

"(d) The acceptance by any foreign manufacturer, producer or exporter of any right or privilege conferred upon him to sell his products or have his products sold by another party in the United States shall be deemed equivalent to an appointment by the foreign manufacturer, producer, or exporter of the District Director of the United States Customs Service of the Department of the Treasury for the port through which the article is commonly imported to be the true and lawful agent upon whom may be served all lawful process in any action brought under this section.

"(e)(1) An action may be brought under this section only if such action is commenced within four years after the date on which the cause of action accrued.

"(2) The running of the statute of limitations provided in paragraph (1) shall be suspended while any administrative proceedings under section 731, 732, 733, 734, or 735 of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1673–1673d) relating to the importation in question, or any appeal of a final determination in such proceeding, is pending and for one year thereafter.

"(f) If a defendant in any action brought under subsection (a) fails to comply with any discovery order or other order or decree of the court, the court may—

"(1) enjoin the further importation into, or the sale or distribution within, the United States by such defendant of articles which are the same as, or similar to, those articles which are alleged in such action to have been sold or imported under the conditions described in subsection (a) until such time as the defendant complies with such order or decree, or

"(2) take any other action authorized by law or by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, including entering judgment for the plaintiff.

"(g)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the confidential or privileged status accorded by law to any documents, evidence, comments, or information shall be preserved in any action under this section.

"(2) The court in any action brought under this section may—

"(A) examine, in camera, any confidential or privileged material,

"(B) accept depositions, documents, affidavits, or other evidence under seal, and

"(C) disclose such material under such terms and conditions as the court may order.

"(h) Any action brought under this section shall be advanced on the docket and expedited in every way possible.

"(i) For purposes of this section—

"(1) The terms 'United States price,' 'foreign market value', 'constructed value', 'subsidy', and 'material injury', shall have the respective meaning given such terms by title VII of the Tariff Act of 1930.

"(2) If—

"(A) a subsidy is provided to the manufacturer, producer, or exporter of any article, and

"(B) such subsidy is not included in the foreign market value or constructed value of such article (but for this paragraph), the foreign market value of such article or the constructed value of such article shall be increased by the amount of such subsidy.".

(2) It is the sense of the Congress that the provisions of this section are consistent with, and in accord with, the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I send that amendment to the desk on behalf of Senator RANDOLPH and myself. Many other Senators have stated they will vote for the amendment, but we are the listed cosponsors.

This amendment, Mr. President, provides for a judicial remedy where imports come into the United States which are subsidized or dumped. The impetus for this amendment at this time follows from the decision by the President yesterday declining to impose quotas on steel imports in the United States. It is my view that as a matter of urgent necessity the Congress should act to provide that imported steel should not come into this country where the evidence shows it is dumped or subsidized and there ought to be a remedy by having jurisdiction conferred on the United States District Court for the District of Columbia to consider such evidence and to order the injunctive relief. It has long been the law of the United States, Mr. President, that subsidized goods and dumping are illegal but there is no effective remedy presently on the books.

When individuals oppose the restriction of imports on the grounds of free trade, they overlook a very fundamental fact that a great deal of the imports, steel, cement, copper, and many other products are being brought into the United States as a result of subsidies or as a result of dumping. Free trade means fair trade and fair trade is the absence of subsidy and dumping. It is a misnomer to say that we are enforcing a policy of free trade when we permit this very heavy subsidization and dumping to take place in the United States.

Because the hour is late and there are good reasons to proceed with dispatch on this measure, Mr. President, I shall quickly review some of the arguments in favor of this bill. This original antidumping bill was introduced on March 4, 1982 as S. 2167. Hearings were held on this bill and a series of distinguished witnesses, including representatives of the major steel companies, a representative of the United States Steel Workers, public officials, and others testified in favor of S. 418, which is its designation in the 90th Congress. I ask unanimous consent that a list of those witnesses be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the list was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

LIST OF WITNESSES TESTIFYING IN FAVOR OF THE ANTIDUMPING BILL, S. 418

Laird Patterson, Attorney, Bethlehem Steel.
Dominic King, Assistant General Counsel, United States Steel.
Walter Ousterman, President, Kaiser Cement.
Bill Knoell, President, Cyclops Corp.
Edward Paluso, Commissioner, Washington County, PA.
Burt Fisher, Attorney, Patton, Boggs & Blow.
Richard Cunningham, Attorney, Steptoe & Johnson.
Chris Doss, Commissioner, Birmingham, AL.
Martin Schalter, Mayor, Midlan, PA.
Steven Means, Mayor, Gadson, AL.
Pete Love, Chairman and President, National Steel Corp.
Julius Uehleim, International Representative, U.S. Steelworkers of America.
Ben Erdreich, Congressman, AL.
William Dobbs, Vice President Marketing, Jim Walter Resources.
Tom Graham, President, Jones and Laughlin Steel Corp.
Metalworking Fair Trade Coalition.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I further ask unanimous consent that a summary argument be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the summary was ordered to be prined in the RECORD, as follows:

SUMMARY

1. The bill has been newly amended, and now focuses strictly on subsidization and sales below the cost of production. References to "labor" and "modernization" of the domestic industry have been deleted, on the advice of William Baxter, former Assistant Attorney General, Antitrust Divison of D.O.J.

2. The bill has also been amended by limiting the district court jurisdiction to the District of Columbia. This will hopefully prevent (a) "shopping around" for a favorable court jurisdiction, and (b) regional pressures which may influence impartiality.

3. The bill has been altered from the original S. 2167 by eliminating treble damages. The injunctive powers of the court have been limited. Imports are enjoined if the accused does not comply with a discovery order, or if a request by the court has been refused or dumping or subsidies are found.

4. The bill does not replace present administrative channels, such as the International Trade Commission and the International Trade Administration. It simply offers a judicial remedy which will coexist with the administrative remedy presently offered.

5. The relief provided by S. 418 is both prospective and retroactive, so that an injured firm or industry may receive payment for damages from the time the dumping commenced, rather than when the bureaucracy makes its decision.

6. The current law requires both the ITA and the ITC to coordinate anti-dumping action. Multiple decisions must be made regarding (a) prices in the seller's home market (b) the prices in Third Country markets (c) allegations of injury to a U.S. industry. This process may take months, even years. In contrast, the U.S. Steel-Marathon Oil suit was resolved in several weeks, and did not require inter-agency coordination.

7. The bill imposes no trade barriers or protectionist measures, but only ensures speedy justice for victims of dumping and subsidization, which are illegal and anti-GATT.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, the evidence is plain that enormous quantities of very heavily subsidized steel are coming into the United States. That fact has been disclosed in a series of proceedings before the International Trade Commission. State-owned firms including nationalized firms in Italy, France, the United Kingdom, and Belgium accounted for at least 52 percent of the European community steel production in 1982. Over half of the major steel firms in other Western developed countries are state-owned. These firms are located in South Africa, Spain, Austria, Finland, and Yugoslavia. They accounted for 25 million net tons or 42 percent of the 60 million net tons produced in those countries during 1982.

As a result of this influx in dumping and subsidized steel, Mr. President, over 200,000 American steelworkers have lost their jobs. The financial hemorrhaging of the American steelmakers has gotten much worse in recent months. Third quarter results are expected to show significant losses after two break-even quarters following 2 years of huge losses. Three major companies are possibilities for downgrading below investment grade which means they cannot borrow, and all major firms suffered lower credit ratings since 1981.

The worsening condition of domestic steel results directly from sharp increases in imports. At 15 percent of U.S. sales in 1979, imports rose to 20 percent in 1983, 24 percent for the first half of 1984, and 33 percent for the month of July.

Mr. President, these imports are threatening the American steel industry, which is very vital for our national welfare. Our steel industry is vital for national defense. In a time of national emergency, we will need a steel industry to protect and defend the United States. The steel industry is vital for domestic production because once we find the American steel industry going down the drain and our reliance is solely on imported steel, then we can be sure the importers will jack up the prices just like we were victimized by OPEC oil. For too long our trade policies have been dictated by what some may conceive to be in the interest of foreign policy, and American industries one after another, as I see it, have been sacrificed on the altar of foreign policy. The decision on steel yesterday was another such decision.

Where the laws of the United States prohibit dumping and prohibit subsidy, those laws ought to be enforced. The way to get enforcement is through the courts. Minority groups have achieved justice in the courts—blacks, women, Hispanics. If American industry is to receive justice, it is going to be in the courts as well. It is a realistic approach to have injunctive relief granted to stop such subsidies and such dumping. The case of Marathon against Mobil Oil is illustrative of the point. That complex litigation was decided in the course of 6 weeks in the U.S. District Court in Cleveland. I have had substantial experience in civil litigation and can personally attest that when one of these cases is brought and the facts can be ascertained, discovery is available, move can be made for a temporary restraining order or preliminary injunction and it can be achieved in a manner of a few weeks at most. Once an injunction is granted, that would stop the importation of subsidized or dumped steel. If someone wants to take an appeal, they can do so, but the injunction stays unless a supersedeas is granted, so it is an effective remedy.

Unlike the proceedings before the International Trade Commission, which take months and years and induce a surge of steel, this injunctive relief would be highly effective.

Mr. President, an issue has been raised in former discussions on this matter as to whether this legislation violates GATT. There is an opinion of counsel by Peter D. Ehrenhaft, submitted to me on August 24, 1982; and I ask unanimous consent that the full text of his opinion be printed in the RECORD, together with the full text of the prior letter which he had written to Senator Ribicoff, dated March 13, 1980, establishing the legality of such a remedy, injunctive relief, as being legal under the provisions of GATT.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Re S. 2167.

Hon. ARLEN SPECTER,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR SPECTER: Thank you for your letter inviting me to provide you with an opinion concerning the consistency of S. 2167 with the GATT and the Antidumping Code. I am sorry I have been unable to respond earlier, but I have been out of my office for a number of weeks since I spoke with Mr. Finkel.

My views on this subject remain consistent with those expressed in the enclosed copy of a letter submitted to Senator Ribicoff when the latter chaired the Trade Subcommittee of the Senate Finance Committee during the last Congress.[1] It is, in brief, my opinion that:

[1] The letter was made part of the Subcommittee's Hearing (at page 37) on "Possible Amendments to

1. The GATT and Code do not preempt a private remedy.

A "single damage" statute, such as the one you are now proposing, cannot be "preempted by," nor be regarded as violative of, either the GATT or the Antidumping Code. On the issue of dumping, the GATT refers solely to the actions of governments imposing "antidumping duties." The Code provides procedures and certain substantive rules for the invocation of this governmental action. But neither the GATT nor the Code deals with private remedies, pursued in ordinary law courts, seeking redress for past injuries caused by other private parties through behavior that may also be "dumping" at which duties may be aimed in the future. This judgment is, by the way, echoed in a recent article by Senator Danforth's former Trade Counsel, Kermit Almstedt. See, "International Price Discrimination and the 1916 Antidumping Act—Are Amendments in Order," 13 Law & Pol. Int. Bus. 747, 779 (1981). (I am also enclosing the last four pages of that article in which this issue is discussed.) [2]

2. Article 16 of the Code is irrelevant.

The Administration has recently pointed specifically to Article 16, § 1 of the Antidumping Code as precluding a measure such as S. 2167. That section provides:

"No specific action against dumping of exports from another party can be taken except in accordance with the provisions of the General Agreement, as interpreted by this Agreement."

However, this section does not bar private damage actions. Its purpose is to prevent other governmental action against dumped imports—such as cease and desist orders—and to assure that investigations and actions are taken with the requisite "transparency" and "due process." See, e.g., S. Rep. 96-249, 96th Cong., 1st Sess. 41 (1979).

The mere enactment of a law creating (or amending) a possible private damage remedy is surely not a "specific action against dumping of exports" within the meaning of Article 16 of the Code. Thus, the passage of a bill such as S. 2167 is not covered by this provision. And the implementation of a measure such as would be authorized by S. 2167 should also not be seen as a "specific action against the dumping of exports"; it is only the invocation of a traditional legal remedy by one "person" for economic harm knowingly done by another. As already noted, the addressees of the cited provision—as all other provisions in the GATT—are governments and not private parties.

3. Damages are not "duties."

The Administration has reiterated suggestions that the GATT and Code permit the imposition of antidumping duties only after governmental findings of dumping margins and material injury to a domestic industry caused thereby.[3] These observations are accurate—but beside the point. The compensation to be collected by a damaged domestic producer from a foreign seller (or its U.S. importer) under the proposed statute would not involve the imposition of an "antidumping duty" as that term has been historically understood or is commonly used today. The term has a precise meaning. It means a certain type of customs duty collected on the importation of merchandise from its importer and then deposited in a government treasury. It does not include the type of damages collectible by private parties that S. 2167 would authorize.

In that connection, I might add that it is undeniable that S. 2167 or a similar law may constitute an additional "non-tariff barrier" (NTB) to imports. And it is also true that it was one of the aims of the Multilateral Trade Negotiations (MTN) out of which the current Antidumping Code emerged, to reduce NTB's. But many existing or imaginable NTB's were unaffected by what occurred in the MTN, including most notably the rules concerning "safeguards" (in our parlance "escape clause" actions). The subject of private remedies to counter "unfair trade practices" was simply not discussed and no agreement concerning their use was even tabled for consideration.

4. The 1916 Act is "grandfathered" under the Protocol.

Even if the 1916 Act were in some way inconsistent with the GATT and Code, these international agreements apply only to the extent they are not "inconsistent with existing legislation" under the Protocol of Provisional Application by which the United States adhered to the General Agreement. The 1916 Act antedates both the GATT and Code by many years. The amendments now proposed—particularly to the extent they eliminate the risks of treble damages or criminal penalties—cannot be regarded as new law not embraced by the Protocol. They are a continuation of that statute.

In the Trade Act of 1974 Congress extended the countervailing duty law to products not otherwise subject to ordinary customs duties. In that context, Congress felt that the GATT obligated the United States to apply an "injury test" to such imports before applying CVD's. The Protocol did not shield that new, substantive—and more onerous—obligation on foreign exporters. See S. Rep. 93-1298, 93d Cong. 2d Sess. 185 (1974); S. Rep. 96-249, 96th Cong., 1st Sess. 39 (1979). However, that is not an apt analogy to the present situation. While the amendments proposed in S. 2167 are intended to revive what is universally regarded as a "dead letter" of our law through certain procedural reforms (e.g., allowing use of administrative determinations as prima facie evidence in court proceedings), the substantive aspects of the law should be less onerous to companies in the countries that are our trading partners. Such a relaxation of existing law (from the foreigners' vantage point) should, therefore, still be shielded from claims of GATT inconsistency by the Protocol.

I hope that the foregoing is useful. At the same time, permit me both to thank you for this additional opportunity to present my views and to express my satisfaction that your amended bill has taken account of many of the points I made when I testified on May 24. To that I might just add for your information that a new complaint under the existing 1916 Act has recently been filed in the U.S. District Court in Denver by CF&I Steel Corp. of Pueblo, claiming Mitsui & Co. sold a variety of imported steel products in violation of the Act. CF&I Steel Corp. v. Mitsui & Co. (USA), Inc., Civ. Action No. 82-Z-1269 (D. Col. 1982). However, expeditious action seems unlikely. See, for example, the ongoing case of Outboard Marine Corp. v. Pezetel, in which the most recent opinion of the District Court permitting the plaintiff to amend its complaint was recently published. 3 ITRD 1917 (D. Del. 1982). The case was also initially brought, inter alia, under the 1916 Act but is now being prosecuted solely as a straight antitrust suit claiming predatory pricing. The original complaint was filed in February 1977; the recent amendment was allowed more than five years later, still well before trial and before the defendants have been permitted even to initiate discovery on their antitrust counterclaims. I think the case illustrates why I do not think your bill, although a useful addition to our trade laws, will provide the speedy action your statements at the hearing in May indicated you were seeking.

Sincerely,

PETER D. EHRENHAFT.

HUGHES HUBBARD & REED,
Washington, DC, March 13, 1980.

Hon. ABRAHAM A. RIBICOFF,
Chairman, Subcommittee on International Trade, Committee on Finance, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

Re: Amendments to the Antidumping Act of 1916

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: I appreciated the opportunity to appear before your Subcommittee on March 11 and share with you and your colleagues some of the impressions gained from my experience in the administration of the Antidumping Act of 1921 while serving as the Deputy Assistant Secretary and Special Counsel for Tariff Affairs at the Treasury through the end of 1979. One issue that was raised at the hearing, however, that I did not have time to address concerned your question about the compatibility of a statute authorizing a private cause of action to recover damages caused by dumping with the newly negotiated Code on Antidumping Measures to which the United States has now adhered. It is a very good question. I cannot provide you with a legal opinion as a reply. But I can indicate my views, based on more than 22 years of study and experience with antidumping laws and my particular recent responsibility both in connection with the negotiation of the Antidumping Code in the MTN and leading the U.S. delegation to the 1977 through 1979 meetings of the GATT Antidumping Committee.

In my judgment, a statute permitting the recovery of compensatory—particularly "single," as opposed to "treble"—damages for injury caused by tortious business behavior could not be regarded as a breach of the Antidumping Code.

First, the Antidumping Code is an agreement on the "Implementation of Article VI of the GATT." Article VI of the GATT does not prescribe the only method for dealing with the problem of dumping. Section 1 defines the concept of dumping—injurious price discrimination between national markets—and Section 2 states that "in order to offset or prevent dumping a contracting the '1916 Antidumping Act'" held on March 11, 1980, the printed version of which is undoubtedly available to you.

[2] It is also of interest that at the 1980 Hearings, a memorandum was submitted by three experienced trade lawyers, including Gary N. Horlick, now the Deputy Assistant Secretary for Import Administration at the Commerce Department, and, thus, the official now most directly responsible for the administration of the antidumping laws and representing the United States at the GATT with respect to such matters. It concluded that it "seems incontrovertible" that no amendments to the Antidumping Act of 1916 similar to those in S. 2167 would "in any way be circumscribed by the trade agreement obligations of the United States." Hearings, supra, at 23.

[3] See, e.g., letter of USTR General Counsel Robert Cassidy to Senator Ribicoff in the Hearings, supra, at 145, and the similar views of the present incumbent, Donald de Kieffer, submitted to your committee.

party may levy an antidumping duty not greater in amount than the margin of dumping . . . ."

The GATT, itself, thus does not suggest, much less state expressly, that antidumping duties are the exclusive method by which the problem of dumping may be addressed. It simply indicates that if the problem is attacked through the imposition of an "antidumping duty," that duty may not exceed the margin of dumping.

Second, the Code, itself, is concerned only with the implemention of the cited Article of the GATT. That is clear from Article I of the Code, taken almost verbatim from the 1967 Code. The Code speaks about the "imposition of an antidumping duty . . . to be taken only under the circumstances provided for . . . and pursuant to . . . this Code." (Emphasis added.) Thus, the Code also does not affect other actions that are not in the nature of "duties," that may affect goods that are "dumped."

Third, both when the 1967 Code was negotiated and throughout the MTN, our trading partners (not to speak of the U.S. negotiators) knew about the existence of the U.S. 1916 Antidumping Act providing criminal penalties and treble damages for acts that are comparable to those at which antidumping "duties" are aimed. Nevertheless, as far as I know, no claim was ever made by any foreign government or any U.S. agency that the existing 1916 law contravenes the Code. It may be argued that the existing law, with its requirement for "intentional injury" defines offensive behavior different in kind from that addressed by the GATT or the Code. However, that argument supports the view that the Code does not exhaust all possible remedies that a government may adopt to combat or remedy practices analogous to the "strict liability" dumping defined by the Code (i.e., "dumping" without any "intent to injure" element).

A statute that provides compensatory damages recoverable through a private action in a court of law for market behavior that has unjustifiably caused injury should not be read to be—and, in my view, is not—inconsistent with the Code. It supplements the Code-envisaged remedy. Even retention of treble damages and criminal penalties for intentional injurious behavior should not be regarded as Code inconsistent. However, as a number of witnesses at the hearing indicated, the existing antitrust laws would seem adequate to cope with intentionally harmful pricing and no further civil remedy is needed to deal with it.

A slightly more troublesome issue was raised by some witnesses concerning the possible incompatibility of a statute permitting a cause of action affecting only imported goods with the "national treatment" provisions of Article III of the GATT. However, we presently have domestic laws—primarily the Robinson-Patman Act—that contemplate remedies against sellers who discriminate between markets to the detriment of the seller's competitors. (Representatives of the American Importers Association discussed at the hearing the wholly separate—and admittedly inapplicable—remedy of the Robinson-Patman Act available to competitors of a favored customer.) The creation of a remedy addressed to imported goods causing injury to competition at the seller's level should not breach Article III to the extent that it parallels comparable domestic law. Mere extension of the Robinson-Patman Act to international trade would be one way to achieve that result. But it may not be the best method, in part because it may be desirable for some of the reasons indicated in my oral testimony to vest trial jurisdiction over the international remedy in the Customs Court that will otherwise be interpreting the language of the antidumping laws.

In any event, before any action is taken to create a new cause of action, I would urge the Subcommittee to commission some further, serious factual studies of the existence of "dumping" as a real phenomenon in U.S. trade and the extent to which our existing laws have affected both trade in particular and the economy of the Nation in general. I believe such a study would support my impression that a private remedy of the type being proposed might make good sense for many of the smaller cases that make up the bulk of the work of the "Administering Authority," while the law is not well suited to cope realistically with the big cases. For those problems—steel, textiles, automobiles—alternative, more macro-economic responses are required outside either the private suits contemplated by the bill you are considering or the procedures now authorized by the Trade Agreements Act.

Respectfully submitted,

PETER D. EHRENHAFT.

INTERNATIONAL ANTIDUMPING AGREEMENTS

One final question must be addressed. Would amending the 1916 Antidumping Act as proposed herein violate any of the international obligations of the United States assumed as a signatory to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT)[198] or the International Antidumping Code of 1979[199] formulated during the Tokyo Round of the Multilateral Trade Negotiations?[200]

Article VI of the GATT and the International Antidumping Code of 1979 do not by their own terms prohibit national legislation, such as the 1916 Antidumping Act, from providing remedial relief against dumping.[201] When the GATT and the antidumping code were negotiated, one may rightfully argue that the United States' trading partners knew of the existence of U.S. legislation that provided for judicial remedial relief in the form of treble damages upon a finding of international price discrimination. Nevertheless, no claim was or has ever been made that any of the provisions of the 1916 Antidumping Act contravened either the GATT or the antidumping code.[202] Even assuming arguendo that remedial relief statutes such as the 1916 Act would be inconsistent with article VI of the GATT, the United States is not necessarily bound by that article due to a provision exempting countries with conflicting preexisting legislation from compliance.[203]

The International Antidumping Code of 1979 sought to establish uniformity among signatories in implementing the GATT antidumping provisions.[204] The Code is thus merely an agreement among signatories for the implementation of article VI of the GATT. Neither the GATT nor the Code mandates or even suggests that imposition of dumping duties is the exclusive form of relief sanctioned against dumping.[205] Section 2 of article VI of the GATT merely provides that if a signatory wishes to attack an antidumping practice by levying an antidumping duty then the duty cannot exceed the margin of dumping.[206] Finally, since the amended 1916 Act would provide relief when there is injury to an industry as defined in the Antidumping Act of 1921, as amended, and the 1921 Act was amended to conform to the 1979 Code,[207] the terms of the amended 1916 Act would comply with the implementing Code.

One other argument which may be raised is the notion that amendments to the 1916 Act may contravene the "national treatment" article of the GATT.[208] Article III provides that "[t]he prodcuts of the territory of any contracting party imported into the territory of any other contracting party shall be accorded treatment no less favorable than that accorded to like products of national origin. . . ." Neither the 1916 Antidumping Act nor the amendments proposed herein favor domestically produced articles over imported articles, since the former are subject to a comparable price discrimination law, the Robinson-Patman Act.[210] In conclusion, neither the 1916 Antidumping Act nor the amendments proposed here are contrary to the obligations undertaken by the United States as a signatory to the GATT.

CONCLUSION

The 1916 Antidumping Act has not proved to be an effective means of redress for private parties injured by the pricing practices of U.S. importers or foreign manufacturers. Because the Antidumping Act of 1921 provides only prospective relief after a complex administrative determination, the ability of a U.S. industry to obtain treble damages for harm actually inflicted by dumping practices would further the policy of prohibiting international price discrimination much in the same manner as the ability of antitrust plaintiffs to obtain treble damages furthers the policies underlying the Sherman Act. The question that ultimately must be addressed is whether Congress is sufficiently committed to the policy of preventing harm to U.S. industries from the deleterious pricing practices of foreign manufacturers that it will coordinate the antidumping legislation to best achieve its underlying policies.

[200] In the sixty-six years since the passage of the 1916 Antidumping Act, dumping has often been the subject of international discussion. As early as 1927, the World Economic Conference in Geneva passed a resolution recognizing the harmful influence dumping may have on a domestic economy. See Marks, supra note 19, at 586. By the 1930s, at least twenty-five countries had adopted some kind of antidumping law. Id. In 1947, GATT was adopted; GATT condemns dumping if it causes or threatens material injury to an established industry in the territory of a contracting party or materially retards the establishment of a domestic industry. GATT, supra note 198, art. VI, para. 1. During the Kennedy Round of the Multilateral Trade Negotiations, GATT members adopted a Dumping Code designed to encourage uniform dumping laws. Congress' legislative response to the 1968 and 1979 Codes demonstrates that although Congress is aware of its international obligations, it does not view its own power as necessarily limited by those agreements.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, that is a very short summary of what is really very extended argument. But I abbreviated it at this point because of the interest in proceeding expeditiously, in an effort to try to finish this trade bill this afternoon. There is very little time on the Calendar. This states the essence of the contention.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, does my senior colleague seek recognition at this point?

Mr. RANDOLPH. Yes.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I thank the Chair. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. President, the able Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. SPECTER] has just concluded his very constructive comments on a matter of concern to many States—certainly Pennsylvania, West Virginia, and Ohio—and in which I am privileged to join as a cosponsor, for which I am grateful.

The amendment offered by the Senator from Pennsylvania which would provide American industries suffering from illegally dumped imports direct access to the Federal courts for injunctive relief and compensatory damages is a reasonable approach and I appreciate his leadership on this problem. The issues facing our Nation on unfair-trade practices are serious and dangerous. Our remedies are often limited, when they are utilized, and this amendment is an effective and practical proposal.

Mr. President, I want to again express the feeling I have, as one who has participated in an attempt to strengthen the steel industry in West Virginia—and Senator BYRD has been most active in that effort—that we do know there are thousands and thousands of steelworkers in the tri-State area whose well-being and jobs are at stake.

Yesterday, the President announced his decision on steel and his plan to restrict unfairly traded steel imports, and sadly for steel communities, workers, and the domestic industry, it is woefully inadequate.

This is not a new issue in the U.S. Senate, indeed Mr. President, many times I have stood with my colleagues to discuss the serious problems facing the domestic steel industry and its loyal, skilled workers. We recognize that there are many Members of this body who are committed to the preservation of this vital, basic industry, and I commend my colleagues for their dedication to this effort.

Mr. President, unfairly traded steel is a fact in this country. There is no dispute that the domestic steel industry and their workers have been and continue to be injured by illegally imported steel products. The U.S. International Trade Commission determined that import injury was a fact and recommended import relief be granted to the industry through a combination of quotas and tariffs. Many of my colleagues and I felt that the ITC recommendations were not comprehensive and would not have gone far enough to solve the problems, and we urged the President to design a relief plan that was more responsive to our domestic industry and its workers.

Unfortunately, instead of a comprehensive rescue plan for our devastated steel communities, and their workers, and families, we were given promises that voluntary restraints would be negotiated with the foreign governments who are responsible for the unfairly traded imports which caused the injury to our people in the first place. I believe this approach is inadequate and unacceptable.

I believe that American steelworkers have suffered enough, and that import relief is overdue. These highly skilled, dedicated workers and their families deserve better understanding and substantive help. Instead, yesterday they received more promises.

In my State of West Virginia there are thousands of workers who would be aided by a comprehensive import remedy for steel. Workers in steel, and coal mining, and footwear, and glass in West Virginia look to their Government to stop the tide of illegal imports. In West Virvinia, we continue to suffer the highest unemployment rate in the Nation, 14.5 percent for July 1984. This is unconscionable and a failure to address the unfair-trade problems in a comprehensive manner in steel only adds to the misery of unemployed West Virginians and unemployed workers in other industrial States.

Mr. President, the Fair Trade in Steel Act, S. 2380, is such a comprehensive plan for steel, and I urge my colleagues to give attention to this proposal. It is a reasonable approach, it would limit steel imports to 15 percent of the domestic market for a 5-year period, it is enforceable, it provides for industry modernization and it would be effective immediately.

Mr. President, our Nation, our industries, our workers, our communities must not continue to suffer under the onslaught of illegal imports. We cannot continue to allow illegal imports to destroy our industrial and economic base, and destroy American jobs. Yesterday, my hopes for a comprehensive solution were dashed by the administration's disregard of the workers in the steel industry and related industries. A promise to negotiate with foreign governments and a hope for an 18.5-percent target for import market share is simply not responsive to the desperate needs of people in this industry. We need positive import remedies, and it is disappointing that this administration fails to respond to this crying tragedy in the steel industry with an effective, enforceable plan.

It is hoped that the clarification of this matter, as presented by the Senator from Pennsylvania, Mr. SPECTER, and Senator BYRD, will help us with the administration so that they will realize that even though some persons—even in this body—are not for quotas, we are face to face with a situation that must be resolved. The reality of injury to Americans from imports of steel into this country, subsidized by the governments of foreign countries, will cause Congress, it is hoped, to come to grips with this matter. The steel industry and American jobs can remain viable and even be strengthened in these turbulent economic times, but a more responsive import relief program must be implemented.

I thank my colleague, our Democratic leader, Senator BYRD, who has yielded to me, and I yield back my time. I am very appreciative.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I support the amendment offered by the distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. SPECTER].

I am an original cosponsor of S. 418, the bill that is embodied in this amendment, and I was an original cosponsor of S. 2167, which was the version of this legislation introduced in the 97th Congress.

I commend the Senator from Pennsylvania for offering this amendment. The purpose of the amendment is to provide an effective remedy for American industry injured by goods dumped into our market by foreign interests. The amendment is particularly appropriate in light of the President's decision to reject the International Trade Commission's recommendation on steel imports.

Late yesterday President Reagan rejected the recommendation of the International Trade Commission for protection of the American steel industry from foreign shipments of steel into this country.

Far be it from me to question the President's intentions, but I do wonder about the feasibility of "coaxing" foreign steel-producing countries into voluntarily limiting steel shipments to the United States. It is a little naive to hope that our trading partners will take a "good Samaritan" attitude toward us. It is illuminating to survey some of the early foreign reaction to the President's decision. A spokesman for the Japan Iron and Steel Exporter's Association denounced the decision as "* * * An act of protectionism." Comments from Brazilian and European sources indicated that they saw no quotas in the decision, so they were not worried about the effect of the decision on their steel industries.

Some American steel industry officials, however, have described the decision as containing a firm ceiling on the percentage of the American steel market that imports may capture.

I see nothing in the President's decision that provides for a firm ceiling on steel imports. The decision mentions negotiations that are to be undertaken with various foreign steel producers. One need only look at the track record of trade negotiations with Japan and other countries to realize that the President's decision leaves our steelworkers and coal miners in the lurch.

The health of West Virginia's coal industry depends in large measure on the health of the steel industry. I doubt that the family of a steelworker or a coal miner feels very good about this "kiss and promise" approach to the steel industry. I am afraid that this approach will leave steelworkers and coal miners in West Virginia holding the bag.

I have been active, along with my colleagues in the steel caucus, in several efforts to provide meaningful, comprehensive relief to the domestic steel industry. I am an original cosponsor of S. 2380, the Fair Trade in Steel Act, which provides for 15 percent steel import quotas for 5 years. I submitted testimony to the Senate Committee on Finance on June 8, 1984, in support of that legislation. In my testimony, I pointed out that West Virginia had experienced severe reductions in the number of people working in primary and fabricated metals industries and in coal mining. Workers in the metals industries have seen employment decline by 20 percent in West Virginia in those businesses since 1981, and metallurgical coal miners have had their ranks reduced by more than 25 percent since 1981 in West Virginia.

Foreign steel imports have captured a larger share of the American market as our own steelmakers have fallen off. The increase in demand for American automobiles gave subsidized foreign steel imports a chance to capture 32.9 percent of the American market in July 1984. Much of the increase is from countries that had previously sold little steel in the United States. They have no incentive to reduce their steel shipments to this country, and the President's decision will not force them to do so.

I wrote to Mr. Alfred Eckes on April 30, 1984, concerning the section 201 steel trade complaint that was filed with the International Trade Commission by the United Steelworkers of America and Bethlehem Steel Corp. Mr. Eckes was Chairman of the ITC at that time. My letter to him pointed out that the ITC had determined in numerous cases that various foreign governments were illegally and unfairly subsidizing foreign steel companies. The steel companies would then proceed to dump steel into the American market—the only large, open steel market in the world—at prices far below the cost of production. In light of the consistent practices of some foreign countries to dump steel in the United States, I asked that the ITC give favorable consideration to the trade complaint brought by the steelworkers and Bethlehem Steel Corp.

In June 1984, the ITC announced that it had found that the domestic steel industry had been substantially injured by unfairly traded imports. In July, the ITC announced that it proposed a set of remedies to relieve the domestic industry from unfair steel trading practices pursued by foreign steelmakers.

On August 10, I joined with members of the steel caucus in writing to the President with reference to the proposed ITC remedies. The letter pointed out several deficiencies in the ITC proposal, and urged the President to correct those problems when he decided on the United Steelworkers' and Bethlehem Steel Corp.'s trade complaint.

On September 7, I wrote another letter to the President to address additional issues with respect to the ITC proposal, specifically, the failure of the ITC to cover pipe and tube products.

On September 17, former Vice President Mondale announced the details of a comprehensive steel proposal. His proposal includes elements vital to a meaningful program of relief for steelworkers and their industry. He called for firm quotas of 17 percent over a 5-year period, coupled with a strong commitment by industry to invest in itself and to modernize. Without such a commitment, the liquidation of the steel industry in America is likely to continue. Mr. Mondale's approach is consistent with the Fair Trade in Steel Act, and possesses the advantages of being firm, predictable, and constructive in the interests of American workers and the domestic steel industry.

I certainly hope that those who are hailing the President's decision this week are not left singing the old song that goes,

"I cried, but my tears came too late."

The Trade Act of 1974, as amended, provides that injured American firms can have section 201 trade complaints. The Specter amendment complements the section 201 process and does not replace it.

In light of the President's decision not to provide meaningful relief for the steel industry, I believe that the Specter amendment is justified, and I hope that the Senate will adopt it.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a copy of my letter to Mr. Alfred Eckes, the steel caucus letter to the President, and my own letter to the President be inserted in the RECORD following my remarks.

There being no objection, the letters were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

U.S. SENATE,
OFFICE OF THE DEMOCRATIC LEADER,
Washington, DC, April 30, 1984.

Hon. ALFRED ECKES,
Chairman, U.S. International Trade Commission, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: I am writing in support of the petition for relief filed jointly by the United Steelworkers of America and Bethlehem Steel Corporation under Section 201 of the Trade Act of 1974. The Section 201 filing seeks quantitative restrictions on imports of foreign steel products on a comprehensive basis for up to five years. That relief is being sought, according to the petition, on the grounds that escalating levels of steel imports have caused substantial economic injury to American steelworkers, the domestic steel industry, and the American economy.

Steel imports have generally increased their penetration of the American market since 1979. In 1983, imports had captured about 20 percent of the total market for steel in the United States. For the first two months of 1984, import penetration has averaged a staggering 26 percent. That level of penetration has occurred during a period in which domestic employment in the steel industry has fallen by 46 percent over the last five years. In West Virginia, employment in metals industries dropped roughly 20 percent in 1982, and there has been little recovery from that level.

Over the past two years, the International Trade Commission and the Department of Commerce have determined that a large number of countries are violating American trade laws by subsidizing and dumping steel imports in the United States. Countries found to be in violation include European Community members as well as Asian and South American nations. In light of the substantial number of individual Trade Act violations that have been found, the Section 201 petition filed by the United Steelworkers of America and Bethlehem Steel Corporation is justified to counter a long-term threat to the existence of a viable domestic steel industry.

It is essential to our national interest that a strong and healthy steel industry be maintained in the United States. Our national security is founded on a highly-developed industrial base. Steel is the bedrock on which key economic sectors are built, including manufacturing, construction, energy, and transportation activities.

Munitions production is impossible without steel. Tanks, guns, and ships are made of large quantities of irreplaceable steel. In wartime, a large domestic steel production capacity is a strategic necessity. The involuntary liquidation of the steel industry, accelerated by increased penetration of imports, would drastically reduce the ability of the United States to maintain an adequate defense.

In light of those factors, I hope that the commission will consider adopting a finding with respect to the Section 201 petition that the domestic steel industry has been injured by increasing levels of steel imports.

Thank you for your consideration.

With best regards, I am,

Sincerely,

ROBERT C. BYRD.

U.S. SENATE,
Washington, DC, August 10, 1984.

President RONALD REAGAN,
The White House, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: As you begin your review of the International Trade Commission's recommendations for import relief for the domestic steel industry, we would like to add our own thoughts for your consideration.

As Senators committed to restoring the vitality of our industrial base and the steel sector, we are concerned that the Commission recommendation will not alleviate the injury that has been found. The ITC recommended five-year quotas for sheets, plates, structurals and wire, subject to minimum tonnage floors calculated on the 1979-1981 base period. By using this base period, when injury was already occurring, the ITC formula sets minimum tonnages for plates and for structural shapes and units at a higher level than actual imports in 1982 or 1983. Clearly such a high level will provide no relief, and will encourage diversion from sheet and strip into plate and structural shapes. We would suggest the selection of a more representative base period for these latter products.

In addition, the ITC recommended that a tariff quota for semi-finished steel and a tariff on wire products be instituted. The history of dumping and subsidizing of steel imports suggests strongly that the tariffs will simply be absorbed through increased subsidies, thus neutralizing any beneficial effect. Only quotas will have an effect on imports of sufficient magnitude to offset the injury suffered.

Third, we are distressed by the exclusion of pipe and tube, wire rods, bars, and railway products from the Commission's affirmative serious injury determination. For oil country tubular goods, for example, imports captured 60 percent of the market in the last year alone. Equally important, small pipe and tube manufacturers, will find themselves squeezed at both ends—their raw material sources will be restricted by quotas on sheet and their foreign competition will take even greater advantage of a failure to provide protection for the finished products. The Commission's determination precludes the imposition of quotas or tariffs, but we urge you to consider an aggressive effort to seek voluntary restraints in these products categories, in order to prevent substantial diversion into them.

Without a comprehensive program of temporary import relief, the domestic steel industry will not be able to generate the appropriate capital to permit necessary modernization and restore a competitive edge. Steel companies have made a clear commitment to adjustment programs including major capital investment projects, but the ITC import relief recommendations, as presently formulated, will not give the industry the opportunity to carry out these objectives. The Commission's recommendation of an adjustment plan with the above mentioned modifications in import relief, however, provides an excellent means of insuring that industry's commitments are met and are sufficient to restore competitiveness. We urge you to consider that recommendation carefully.

These modifications in the Commission's recommendations will effectively alleviate the serious injury the industry has suffered and will restore health to this critical sector of the economy. We have seen too many ITC decisions undercut when an Administration proved unwilling to take the actions necessary to assist industries in adjusting to increased imports. This is the purpose of Article XIX of the GATT, on which our law is based, and we are confident, now that the industry has been found to be injured, that you will act consistent with that article as well.

This case is particularly critical because we cannot ignore the fact that steel is essential to the United States' continued preeminence among industrialized nations, to our own economic health, and to our national security. You have an opportunity in the next several weeks to fashion a remedy that will alleviate the industry's injury and give it a breathing space to adjust, modernize and return to a firm economic footing. We hope that you will favorably consider our suggestions for an effective relief program as you review the ITC's recommendations.

Sincerely,

U.S. SENATE,
OFFICE OF THE DEMOCRATIC LEADER,
Washington, DC, September 7, 1984.

THE PRESIDENT,
The White House, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: I write to express my concern about the United States government's response to the very serious problem of increasing foreign steel imports. In July, those imports rose to 2.6 million tons, giving foreign steelmakers nearly one third of the American market. I know you agree that this challenge cannot go unanswered.

The recent decision by the International Trade Commission provides an opportunity to articulate a realistic United States policy on steel products. But it does not go far enough in responding to the problem. The levels of relief proposed are not commensurate with the injury to American producers. Moreover, the Commission's recommendation omits approximately 30% of all steel products by failing to include pipe and tube products. At present, foreign producers have captured more than 50% of the American pipe and tube market. Even if the Commission's recommendations with respect to other products were improved, this omission would invite foreign steelmakers to divert production to pipes and tubes. That is why a solution modelled on the Fair Trade in Steel Act (S. 2380) is necessary to assure that American steel producers will have an opportunity to adjust and modernize. By imposing a 15% quota for a five-year period and requiring that steel profits be reinvested in the industry, you will signal your confidence in the ability of American companies to compete.

The United States may be the only truly open steel market in the world today. A lack of any coordinated policy has resulted in the loss of more than 200,000 jobs since the 1975-1979 period, with many plant closings and a drop in production capacity to 60% last year. I urge you to act decisively to assure that your response to the Commission's recommendation will answer the challenge to the economic and security needs of the United States and assure that the involuntary liquidation of the steel industry does not occur.

Sincerely,

ROBERT C. BYRD.

Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, this amendment is not a new issue on the floor of this Senate. This is the third time it has been on the floor. Each of the previous times, it has been tabled. The most recent time it was on the floor of the Senate was on April 21, 1983. At that time, the amendment of Senator SPECTER was tabled by a vote of 57 to 32.

The subject matter of the amendment, which would provide judicial remedies for dumping, has not yet been considered by the Finance Committee. It is currently within the jurisdiction of the Judiciary Committee, although we have asked to consider it sequentially. It is my understanding that the Judiciary Committee has not had any markup. We in the Finance Committee would be reluctant to get into a matter which involves the courts in this way and believe that the issue should be first marked up by the Judiciary Committee.

This amendment is strongly opposed by the administration, and at this point I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a letter dated June 5, 1984, from Ambassador Brock.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

U.S. TRADE REPRESENTATIVE,
Washington, June 5, 1984.

Hon. JOHN DANFORTH,
Chairman, Trade Subcommittee, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR JACK: I'm writing to express my strong opposition to S. 418, a proposed amendment to the Antidumping Act of 1916. This amendment seeks to broaden private remedies under the Act by lowering the standards required to establish antitrust liability. I understand that S. 418 may be offered as an amendment to H.R. 3398.

In my judgment, the bill is unlikely to offer any practical benefits to our industries, and would put the United States in violation of its obligations under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade ("GATT") and the GATT Antidumping Code. Exporters in many of our most competitive industries depend on the protection of these obligations, and enactment of S. 418 or any similar proposal would expose them to retaliation from our trading partners.

S. 418 is premised on the belief that going to court for a judicial remedy under the antitrust laws would be a faster, more effective, and less expensive remedy for dumping than pursuing the existing administrative remedies under section 731 of the Tariff Act of 1930. This premise is dubious at best. Instead, the bill is likely to subject plaintiffs to the uncertainty, high cost, and procedural delays of the judicial process, typified by antitrust litigation. These costs and delays are often prohibitive, and as a result, the approach taken in this bill would not be of any help to small businesses who seek antidumping relief. In addition, the approach taken in the bill raises significant questions of fairness. Unlike our other antitrust laws, the bill would subject a company to liability for money damages, even though there has been no showing of knowledge or predatory intent. Accordingly, the bill would hold a company liable for damages for conduct which was wholly inadvertent and was not intended to be anticompetitive.

I must also oppose S. 418 because it is inconsistent with the international obligations of the United States under Article VI of the GATT and the GATT Antidumping Code. The obligations of the Code relate to the fair and open operation of antidumping measures and were approved by Congress in the Trade Agreements Act of 1979. Recovery of past damages for dumping is in conflict with the GATT and the Code, which both provide that the remedy for dumping is the imposition of antidumping duties, that such duties are prospective in nature, and that the amount of the duties cannot exceed the margin of dumping. Since the bill would permit the recovery of past damages for dumping and would not limit the damages to the margin of dumping, it would violate our GATT obligations. While the Antidumping Act of 1916 in its current, unamended form is equally inconsistent with the GATT, the 1916 Act is arguably protected by the so-called "Grandfather Clause," which exempts legislation enacted before 1948 from the requirements of the GATT. However, the extensive amendments to the 1916 Act contemplated by S. 418 would mean the loss of the "Grandfather Clause" exemption. Accordingly, if Congress enacts S. 418 into law, the United States would be in violation of the GATT and would probably forfeit its only defense.

If we violate our GATT obligations, our trading partners have a right to seek GATT authorization to retaliate by raising their tariffs on U.S. exports. Accordingly, S. 418 invites retaliation against our exports by our major trading partners such as Canada, Japan, and the European Communities. Such retaliatory measures could preclude some of our most competitive export industries from selling in their most important overseas markets.

In any case, S. 418 is unnecessary, since our industries already have adequate remedies for dumping under existing law. The Trade Agreements Act of 1979 mandated expeditious handling of antidumping and countervailing duty cases. This Administration has enforced the antidumping and countervailing duty laws in a vigorous, tough, and timely fashion, and has processed more antidumping and countervailing duty cases than at any time in the history of these laws. Moreover, if predatory dumping poses a serious threat to competition, industries can avail themselves of the remedies available under the Sherman Antitrust Act.

For the above reasons, I urge that S. 418 not be included in H.R. 3398.

Very truly yours,

WILLIAM E. BROCK.

Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, there are numerous reasons for the administration's strong opposition to this amendment. The administration believes that the amendment would violate our obligations under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. But perhaps even more important than a violation of our obligations under GATT, this is a misguided effort to expedite U.S. antidumping procedures by getting the courts into the act. It has been pointed out that if you want to expedite anything, do not get the courts in the act.

I can recall from my days practicing law that the name of the game was not to expedite anything but to drag out litigation forever. As a matter of fact, lawsuits, which were in litigation 20 years ago, when I was practicing law, are still around, because defense attorneys do not want the matters to be litigated. When you have different countries involved in the litigation, you really have the possibility of complexity. I wonder how successful American litigants would be in trying to get discovery against manufacturers in other countries.

The possible trap, of course, is not only that this would delay proceedings and the enforcement of antidumping laws, but also, if litigation is involved and discovery is used, it might be used by the defendants as well as the plaintiffs.

I question whether American businesses want their books and records opened up to the searching analysis of manufacturers in other countries.

Mr. President, I do not know if anyone else wants to talk on this issue. My hope is we can get on with it. I intend to do exactly what we have done on two other occasions and move to table the amendment, but I will withhold that, seeing that the Senator from Colorado wants to speak and the Senator from Texas wants to speak.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I certainly sympathize with the objectives of the Senator from Pennsylvania and my two colleagues from West Virginia.

I must say I share a lot of their frustrations because in my own State we are having some of the same problems with the steel industry and a great deal of unemployment resulting therefrom.

The problem you run into, though, in this kind of approach is that you already have an administrative remedy available to you, so in effect you would be subjecting someone who would be importing steel into this country to two remedies, and I do not think, in turn, that we would want our own exporters to be subjected to the same types of remedies abroad. Also the point has been made, of course, that you submit U.S. firms to court-discovery procedures by foreign firms, and I do not believe that our companies really want to open up their books to that kind of a procedure.

In the Toyko round we agreed to some specifics as to procedures for remedying dumping. What we agreed to at that time was to put temporary penalties into effect prospectively until we had made a final decision and then retroactively 90 days prior to the beginning of the investigation, and it seems to me that that is an appropriate procedure.

We are subject to dumping and countervailing actions abroad for our own exports, and this bill would certainly encourage our own companies to be thrown into their courts. I really do not think that is what we should do. For that reason, as I opposed this amendment before, I shall oppose it again and hope that the Senate defeats it.

Mr. HART. Mr. President, nothing is more tragic than to see the United States, the world's leading steel producer for three or four decades, suddenly finding itself in the last decade slipping in market share, productivity, and competitiveness, and having our own productive base challenged by increased imports from abroad by more modern and efficient plants.

As every nation does, under those circumstances we seek relief temporary in nature by protectionist, quasi-protectionist and temporary protectionist measures, but I firmly believe this Nation will not regain its own domestic steel production base, as we must, unless and until trade related measures are somehow linked to industrial modernization, worker training, modern plant and equipment and a national or industrial policy.

There is plenty of blame to go around for failure. Both political parties, this administration and previous Democratic and Republican administrations, not only failed to anticipate the assault on the marketplace by more efficient producers, but they also failed, both political parties and several administrations, to put forward in conjunction with the realistic trade policy some industrial policy that makes some sense.

We are never going to be able to compete with the Japanese, West Germans, French, or anyone else until we have some sort of national scheme, not company by company, or not plant by plant, but the direct investment in the modern plants and equipment and worker training with a specific timetable and goal to make our own productive base competitive and put our own workers back to work.

We are not going to regain America's presence in the steel marketplace by trade measures alone until and unless those trade measures are linked to some short-term and long-term industrial modernization program.

This administration does not have one, and I am sorry to say previous administrations did not either.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, by way of very brief reply, when the Senator from Missouri talks about 20-year delays, I would suggest that he is not taking a look at what is possible by aggressive, knowledgeable plaintiff lawyers seeking temporary restraining orders and seeking injunctions.

The fact is that they are obtained all the time in the matter of a few days or a few weeks.

When the Senator from Missouri talks about the difficulty of obtaining discovery from manufacturers in foreign countries, he overlooks the nature of the legal process which subjects to jurisdiction anyone who sells in the United States. If someone sells steel or cement in the United States, that company is subject to the jurisdiction of the Federal courts, and discovery can be obtained in a mandatory manner. It is not optional by the foreign company. They have to do it if they want to do business here. It is a fundamental rule of law.

When the Senator from Missouri talks about the disadvantages of American companies opening up their books to foreign companies, and the Senator from Texas raises that point, American companies do not have to do that if they do not want the remedy. If they seek the remedy, then they are susceptible to discovery as well, but that is a choice made, and if an American company chooses not to seek that remedy or if the steelworkers union seeks not to choose that remedy they do not have to open up their books to any extent at all.

When the Senator from Missouri talks about no hearing before the Finance Committee, that is not because this Senator did not press for it on many occasions.

And when Mr. Brock writes to Senator DANFORTH on June 5, 1984, because of a concern that S. 418 might be attached to H.R. 3398, I would have appreciated a copy of the letter since S. 418 is my bill, but in the absence of that I have perused it quickly here today and I think Mr. Brock miscomprehends the nature of the arguments here.

When he refers in this letter to the high litigation costs, no one is compelled as a plaintiff to undertake these litigation costs. This is an additional remedy which is available.

And when Mr. Brock says in this letter if predatory dumping poses a serious threat to competition, industries can avail themselves of the remedies available under the Sherman Antitrust Act, Mr. Brock misapprehends the scope of what the Sherman Antitrust Act can do under such circumstances.

The plain fact of life is that the American steel industry and many other industries have been decimated by unfair foreign predatory competition and it is contrary to the consumers' interests to take the short-term benefits from such cutthroat pricing as opposed to paying the cost of production and a reasonable profit which is the essence of the free enterprise system.

I have traveled throughout Pennsylvania, and I am sure this scene is replete in many other States in this country. Senator HEINZ and I were in Midland, PA, where an entire town was decimated when one plant closed and 5,000 workers were thrown out of work.

Aliquippa, the Monongahela Valley, Johnstown, Coatesville, and Bethlehem are ghost towns.

When I was in Johnstown recently and was asked by a group of wives to meet in the basement of St. Teresa's Church, I was told there would be a half-dozen wives of steelworkers there but there were 400 furious people. They were furious because they feel they are being dealt with in an unjust and unfair way.

I think they are right. They are right because our laws prohibit dumping and subsidies from imports, but dumping and subsidies from imports have become the way of life, and it is high time in the absence of any relief under existing law that Congress act and authorize the courts to grant injunctive relief without regard to any foreign policy considerations or without regard to anything but the underlying fact as to whether there are subsidies or dumping. The courts are where we go for justice in this country, and I urge this body to adopt this measure which would open up the courts to grant justice on this very vital and important field of our national life.

Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, I move to table the amendment offered by the Senator from Pennsylvania.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, the yeas and nays have been requested.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Not on the motion to table.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the motion to table.

AMENDMENT NO. 4283

(Purpose: To establish a commission to study and make recommendations concerning the international trade and export policies and practices of the United States)

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. BINGAMAN], for himself, Mr. DOMENICI, Mr. HEINZ, Mrs. HAWKINS, Mr. BUMPERS, Mr. HART, and Mr. EAGLETON, proposes an amendment numbered 4283.

Mr. BINGAMAN. I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the end of the committee amendments add the following:

SEC. 1. This Act may be cited as the "International Trade and Export Policy Study Commission Act of 1984".

ESTABLISHMENT

SEC. 2. (a) There is established the International Trade and Export Policy Study Commission (hereafter in this Act referred to as the "Commission").

(b)(1) The Commission shall be composed of eighteen members as follows:

(A) Six members appointed by the President in accordance with paragraph (2)(A).

(B) Six members appointed by the President pro tempore of the Senate from members of the Senate in accordance with paragraph (2)(B), upon the recommendation of the majority leader or the minority leader of the Senate, as the case may be, with respect to members appointed from the political party of that leader.

(C) Six Members of the House of Representatives appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives in accordance with paragraph (2)(B).

(2)(A) The President shall appoint individuals to serve as members of the Commission under paragraph (1)(A) who are especially qualified to serve on the Commission due to the education, training, or experience of such individuals. Of the members appointed by the President under such paragraph, at least five members shall be individuals who are not officers or employees of the United States, and at least two members shall be representatives of businesses or labor organizations. Not more than three members of the Commission appointed under such paragraph shall be members of the same political party.

(B)(i) In appointing members to the Commission, the President pro tempore of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives shall give special consideration to the appointment of members of the Senate or the House of Representatives, as the case may be, who are members of the committees of their respective Houses which have legislative jurisdiction over, or special concerns with respect to, matters relating to international trade.

(ii) Not more than three members of the Commission appointed under paragraph (1)(B) shall be members of the same political party, and not more than three members of the Commission appointed under paragraph (1)(C) shall be members of the same political party.

(3) The first eighteen appointments to the Commission shall be made within thirty days after the date of the enactment of this Act. A vacancy in the Commission shall be filled in the manner in which the original appointment was made.

(4) Members of the Commission shall be appointed to serve for the life of the Commission.

(5) Each member of the Commission appointed under paragraph (1)(A) who is not an officer or employee of the United States shall be compensated at a rate equal to the daily equivalent of the annual rate of basic pay prescribed for grade GS-18 of the General Schedule under section 5332 of title 5, United States Code, for each day (including traveltime) during which such members are engaged in the actual performance of the duties of the Commission. All members of the Commission who are officers or employees of the United States shall serve without additional compensation.

(B) While away from their homes or regular places of business in the performance of services for the Commission, all members of the Commission shall be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, at rates authorized for employees of agencies under sections 5702 and 5703 of title 5, United States Code.

(c)(1) Nine members of the Commission shall constitute a quorum, but a lesser number may hold hearings.

(2) The Chairman and Vice Chairman of the Commission shall be elected by and from the members of the Commission for the life of the Commission.

(3) The Commission shall meet at the call of the Chairman or a majority of its members.

(d)(1) The Chairman of the Commission, in consultation with the Vice Chairman, and without regard to the civil service laws rules, and regulations, is authorized to appoint and fix the compensation of a staff director and such other additional personnel as may be necessary to enable the Commission to carry out its functions.

(2) Any Federal employee may be detailed to the Commission without reimbursement, and such detail shall be without interruption or loss of civil service status or privilege.

(3) The Commission may procure temporary and intermittent services under section 3109(b) of title 5, United States Code, at rates for individuals which do not exceed the daily equivalent of the annual rate of basic pay prescribed for GS-18 of the General Schedule under section 5332 of such title.

(e)(1) The Commission may, for the purpose of carrying out this Act, hold such hearings, sit and act at such times and places, take such testimony, and receive such evidence, as the Commission considers appropriate.

(2) The Commission may secure directly from any department or agency of the United States information necessary to enable the commission to carry out this Act. Upon request of the Chairman of the Commission, the head of such department or agency shall furnish such information to the Commission.

(3) The Commission may accept, use, and dispose of gifts or donations of services or property.

(4) The Commission may use the United States mails in the same manner and under the same conditions as other departments and agencies of the United States.

(5) The Administrator of General Services shall provide to the Commission on a reimbursable basis such administrative and support services as the Commission may request.

DUTIES

SEC. 3. (a) The Commission shall study and make recommendations concerning international trade and export policies and practices of the United States, including recommendations for such changes in laws and regulations as may be required in order to—

(1) facilitate the administration of the trade and export functions of the Federal Government;

(2) enhance export growth;

(3) provide for removal of trade barriers;

(4) provide for common understanding of international trade by businesses;

(5) develop expertise on foreign business practices and trade issues; and

(6) accomplish such other purposes as the Commission considers appropriate.

(b) In conducting the study required by subsection (a), the Commission shall review and make recommendations concerning—

(1) existing impediments to exporting by American industries, including—

(A) regulations, paperwork requirements, and procedures imposed by the United States Government, especially export controls;

(B) the impact of the antitrust laws on exports;

(C) insufficient financing, Government credits, and incentives for export expansion, uncertainty as to the continuation of the special tax treatment for Domestic International Sales Corporations, and the lack of Export-Import Bank and the Foreign Credit Insurance Association support and responsiveness;

(D) the lack of a unified, coherent, and clearly enunciated United States Government policy which supports the export community and which is carried out by all Federal agencies; and

(E) the lack of research and development capabilities to help improve the ability of American industries to compete with foreign industries;

(2) the needs of American industry for information and opportunities to enhance exporting, particularly the needs of small and medium sized firms, including needs for—

(A) specific sales or representation leads;

(B) specific information on market conditions, practices, and potentials;

(C) information about and lists of individual foreign buyers and foreign representatives;

(D) opportunities to meet directly in the United States with individual foreign buyers and foreign representatives;

(E) opportunities for publicity of companies, products, and interests abroad;

(F) opportunities to display or otherwise expose products abroad;

(G) assistance in making successful bids for major overseas contracts;

(H) general information on methods of exporting and on countries to which products can be exported; and

(I) information on the benefits of exporting;

(3) methods for improving export incentives for United States businesses, including—

(A) export financing;

(B) export insurance;

(C) tax benefits; and

(D) the facilitation of the creation of trading companies;

(4) the need for a closer integration of trade and international monetary policy, including the need to relieve trade policy of major burdens created by the recurrence of currency exchange rate misalignments;

(5) the need to coordinate American trade policies and practices with the promotion of industrial revitalization in the United States;

(6) the need for high quality data in order to identify markets, new products, and industries, and the failure to effectively communicate such data to American industry;

(7) the need for directing Federal resources to provide sustained economic growth and employment;

(8) the need for cooperation and support among the principal sectors of the economy, including business labor, government, and the public;

(9) the impact of, and the proper role for, international trade activities by State and local governments, including export promotion activities, State export-import banks, and State export trade companies;

(10) the organizational structures under which other industrial nations, such as Japan, Great Britain, Canada, and West Germany, carry out the international trade activities of those nations;

(11) the organizational structure of Federal agencies which make and carry out trade policies, including the need for strengthened and integrated implementation of international trade functions and improvements in the Foreign Commercial Service; and

(12) the need to promote institutional and noninstitutional educational activities that will contribute to the ability of United States businesses to succeed in the marketing of United States goods and services abroad, such as—

(A) government-sponsored work-study programs which allow United States representatives of business, labor, and government to live overseas and analyze foreign market opportunities, study existing trade and cultural barriers, and develop expertise on foreign business practices and trade issues; and

(B) the promotion of foreign language capabilities to facilitate United States commerce by overcoming language and marketing barriers.

FINAL REPORT

SEC. 4. Not later than July 1, 1985, the Commission shall transmit to the President and to the Congress a report containing a detailed statement of the study conducted by the Commission under this Act and the recommendations of the Commission with respect to the matters specified in section 3, including any recommendations for legislation the Commission considers appropriate.

TERMINATION

SEC. 5. The Commission shall terminate on July 1, 1985.

AUTHORIZATION

SEC. 6. For fiscal years 1984 and 1985, there are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out this Act.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk on behalf of myself and Senators DOMENICI, HEINZ, BUMPERS, HART, and EAGLETON. It is a noncontroversial amendment which addresses the need for a coherent trade policy and begins the process of dealing with our overall trade policy. This amendment would establish a bipartisan commission which would look into our trade policy situation with an eye toward identifying ways to increase our exports, to bring our growing trade deficit under control, and, hopefully, to provide fairness to our domestic industries in those cases where fairness is not being provided today.

This is not legislation that sets forth any policy in itself; it simply directs the President to establish a commission. The President would appoint six members, the Senate would appoint six members, and the House six other members. Their purpose would be to study the entire trade area and report back to the President and the Congress as to changes that are needed in our laws and regulations to deal with our increasingly severe international trade problem.

Mr. President, I believe the amendment is one which is sorely needed. It certainly, in and of itself, does not solve the problems that we are seeing arise in our trade relationships with the rest of the world, but perhaps it provides a vehicle by which we can begin to at least identify those problems and craft some solutions for them.

In recent months, much has been written and spoken about the international trade problems which this country now faces and which it is expected to face in the years ahead. There is serious concern about our Nation's continuing ability to successfully compete internationally, and the simple facts illustrate the problem well.

In 1973, trade accounted for 6 percent of the U.S. gross national product. Today, according to some estimates, trade accounts for 12 percent of our gross national product. According to a Commerce Department study in 1980, 6.2 million U.S. workers owed their jobs to U.S. exports. By 1982, the number dropped to 4.8 million, mainly because of the drop in export volume. We export over 20 percent of our industrial productions and 40 percent of our crops each year. However, despite the magnitude of our exports, they are dwarfed by foreign imports. In 1982, the United States imported $44 billion more than we exported. In sum, the future economic well-being of our Nation is inexorably linked to the ability of American business to compete successfully in the emerging international marketplace. In recent years, we have not done so well.

We have experienced steadily soaring trade deficits which have set new records virtually every month. These rising deficits have a direct effect on the U.S. economy. From 1891 through 1970, the United States had an unbroken string of trade surpluses. Since 1970, we have had deficits in every year except two. In 1983, our balance of trade has been in deficit for the eighth year in a row, reaching a record $60.6 billion. Unfortunately, in keeping with the trend, an even larger trade deficit is expected in 1984. C. Fred Bergsten, director of the Institute for International Economics, in his April 5, 1984, testimony before the House Ways and Means Committee predicted that in 1984, the merchandise trade deficit will hit $120 billion, and the current account deficit could approach $100 billion. The trade deficit during January and February has already soared to an annual rate of $105 billion and continues to rise at a dramatic pace. Mr. Bergsten further predicts that the trade deficit may well reach $150 billion in 1985.

These sustained record trade deficits have resulted in a serious threat to our economy. These trade deficits have resulted in the loss of millions of U.S. jobs and, if left unchecked, will contribute to continuing troubles for many U.S. industries and cities. More than 1.5 million jobs are estimated to have been lost due to rising trade deficits. From 1980 to 1982, 40 percent of the increase in U.S. unemployment can be traced to the decline in U.S. exports. If these trends are permitted to continue, as many as 3 million Americans will be unemployed by late 1985. Much congressional attention has been focused on these issues, but little has been accomplished. I look forward to meaningful action in the very important area of reducing our record trade deficit.

There are many perceived reasons for our trade failures and even the degree of our failure is widely debated. Some cite looming budget deficits and imported oil prices. Still others have called for trade reorganization as a logical first step. Whatever is ultimately done, I would suggest that action is long overdue.

One further problem which exists, in my opinion, is the lack of a coherent and effective international economic policy. There now exists a serious failure on the part of the Federal Government to work in cooperation with American private enterprise to formulate a coherent and effective international economic policy that promotes trading opportunities for U.S. businesses. The Senate Governmental Affairs Committee has held several days of hearings on these issues and has approved legislation to create a new Department of Trade to facilitate the formulation and implementation of cohesive and effective trade policies within the Federal Government. It is hoped by supporters of such proposals that the creation of a new Department of Trade will provide an organizational environment in which effective trade policy can be carried out. I support this legislation as a good first step, but much more needs to be done to address our trade problems and coordinate our trade policy.

I believe there has also been a failure on the part of large segments of American business to seize trade opportunities. This issue is not directly addressed by trade reorganization. Only 12 percent of the Nation's 252,000 manufacturers market their products overseas. Available information, however, indicates that many more small U.S. manufacturers could begin to export if they had the right assistance to overcome impediments to doing so. It was recently estimated that 11,000 small export-capable firms could be induced to try to export if properly approached and assisted, and that the value of exports by such firms could amount to more than $4 billion a year.

I believe we also need to increase our familiarity with foreign needs and cultures in order to compete successfully. As a people, we are not nearly as familiar with other nations of the world as they are with us. Our people trying to do business overseas are hampered by a lack of language facility, a lack of understanding of the economic systems and business practices in other countries, a lack of familiarity with local cultures and customs, ignorance about appropriate marketing techniques and local financing arrangements, lack of understanding about the local economic conditions and trading posture of other countries, and on and on. Because this expertise is not as well developed in our private sector, the Government may also be lacking a skilled cadre of individuals who can give advice or carry out trade policy. The need for such skills, experience, ties, and understanding in the Government and the private sector is paramount.

Mr. President, for these reasons, I am introducing this amendment which calls for the creation of a bipartisan national commission to study and make recommendations concerning the international trade and export policies and practices of the United States. The 1-year study is to result in recommendations for changes in laws and regulations which are intended to facilitate the administration of the trade and export functions of the Federal Government, enhance export growth, provide for removal of trade barriers, provide for common understanding of international trade by businesses, develop expertise on foreign business practices and trade issues, and for other purposes. The commission is to be composed of 6 Members of the Senate, 6 Members of the House, and 6 members appointed by the President.

The issues to be studied and reported on include: existing impediments to exporting in American industries—legal, financial and otherwise; the needs of American industry for information and opportunities to enhance exporting; methods for improving export incentives for U.S. businesses; the need for a closer integration of trade and international monetary policy; the need to coordinate American trade policies and practices with promotion of industrial revitalization; the need for high quality data to identify markets, new products, and industries; the need for directing Federal resources to provide sustained economic growth and employment; the need for cooperation among the principal sectors of the economy; the impact of State and local governments in exporting; the organizational structures of other industrial nations; the organizational structure of Federal agencies; and the need to promote institutional and noninstitutional educational activities that will contribute to the ability of U.S. businesses to succeed in marketing U.S. goods and services abroad. Each of these major issues represents a key area of our overall U.S. trade policy and deserves immediate consideration.

The purpose of the commission is to achieve a better national focus of the various trade problems that affect the United States at this time. A major national study would also provide the opportunity to develop an agenda of recommendations which would help the President and the Congress begin to solve our trade problems.

I urge my colleagues to join me in support of calling for adoption of this commission. Given the seriousness of our trade problems and current trends which show lost jobs, rising deficits, and lost opportunities, we must focus our collective national attention on making trade a national priority. America, once the premier industrial power of the world, is losing its competitive edge. We must stop blindly traveling an unchartered course. Instead, we must begin to fill the gaps in our knowledge and determine the best path for expanding our exports and recouping our position in the world marketplace.

Let us begin this process by addressing the single most important problem in the trade area—the lack of any coherent and coordinated trade policy. This commission would help to formulate such a policy by bringing all the individual trade and export issues into focus and advancing recommendations for solutions.

Mr. President, it is my understanding that this amendment has been agreed to by the managers on both the Republican and Democratic sides. I urge my colleagues to support the amendment. I believe it is good legislation. I believe it can lead to improvements in our ability to deal with this situation in the best interest of our national welfare.

Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, the amendment is acceptable.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I congratulate the distinguished Senator from New Mexico. He has been a student of trade problems and has made major contributions in that field. I am delighted to support the amendment as manager for the minority. We have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 4283) was agreed to.

Mr. DANFORTH. I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BENTSEN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 4284

(Purpose: To require that the President take into account in granting beneficiary developing country status assurances that such country will refrain from unreasonable export practices)

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I have an amendment which I send to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Montana [Mr. BAUCUS] proposes an amendment numbered 4284.

Mr. BAUCUS. I ask unanimous consent that further reading be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 65 of the matter proposed to be inserted, strike out line 9, and insert in lieu thereof "paragraph (4) and inserting in lieu thereof the following: 'and the extent to which such country has assured the United States that it will refrain from engaging in unreasonable export practices;' "

COPPER AND GSP

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, a few weeks ago, the President ignored a unanimous finding of the International Trade Commission and denied import relief to the U.S. copper industry.

The President reached this decision, in part, because he thought that import relief would "adversely affect the export earnings of the foreign copper-producing countries."

As a result of this decision, thousands of hard-rock miners and other skilled copper workers will continue to lose their jobs to workers in Chile, Peru, Zambia, and Zaire.

Now, almost before the ink is dry on the President's decision, we are being asked to provide special trade benefits to these very same countries.

That is like feeding the mouth that bites you.

The amendment I am offering today would provide a small measure of relief. Simply put, it would require the President to consider, when deciding whether to grant GSP benefits, whether a country is engaging in unreasonable export practices such as the ones foreign copper producers are using to wipe us out.

THE CONDITION OF THE COPPER INDUSTRY

For the U.S. copper industry, these should be the best of times. Since last year, consumption has increased by 10 percent; since 1979, production costs have decreased by 7 percent.

In fact, these are the worst of times. World copper prices are at the lowest real levels since the French Revolution. And the U.S. industry is operating at only 55 percent of capacity.

The main cause of this seeming anomaly is increased competition from developing countries that are ignoring conventional market incentives and trying to maximize their market share.

Let me be more specific.

Since 1969, when Chile nationalized its mines, many other developing counties have followed suit, so that now almost half of the free world's copper comes from nationalized mines. These mines operate as government adjuncts, pursuing broad national economic policy goals.

What is more, these countries have become beholden to international development banks, like the International Monetary Fund and the Inter-American Development Bank, which frequently require borrowers to dramatically increase their export earnings. For major copper producers like Chile, Peru, Zambia, and Zaire, which derive more than half of their foreign exchange from copper sales, this means increasing copper exports.

Finally, these countries have formed a cartel—CIPEC—which emphasizes expanding its members' market share, even if the market already is glutted.

The result is a perverse cycle. When world prices decline, the developing countries increase their production to maintain their foreign exchange reserves. That turn, drives world prices even lower. And on it goes, until the price hits rock bottom.

The International Trade Commission recently explained it this way:

[A] number of developing countries, with copper as their main source of foreign exchange, are continuing to produce and market increasing quantities of copper despite a worldwide glut, with plans to expand capacity even further in the near future. At the same time, much of the world continues in a recession and worldwide demand for copper remains depressed.

For the American companies which respond to conventional market forces, this cycle has had a devastating effect.

Since 1979, domestic production has declined by 28 percent, at least 16 mines have closed, and at least 16,000 workers have lost their jobs.

In Montana, where copper mining has always been an important part of our economy, the past few years have been hard.

In 1977, Montana had 13 operating mines in six counties. Today, there's only one operating mine in Troy and one smelter in Helena, neither of which depend primarily on copper for their earnings.

In 1977, Montana produced 172 million pounds of copper. This year, we expect to produce no more than 45 million.

Because of all this, copper mining employment has declined sharply. In 4 years, we have lost about 3,400 primary jobs and about 8,500 secondary jobs.

In a State with a relatively small labor force, this has a devastating impact.

For example, in Butte, the unemployment rate is 49 percent higher than the national average and 30 percent higher than the State average. Since 1980, six schools have closed and school enrollment has declined by more than 10 percent. Since 1978, the tax base has shrunk by 11 percent.

THE SECTION 201 CASES

Mr. President, the copper industry has asked for help twice now, by petitioning for import relief under the so-called escape clause in section 201 of the Trade Act.

The first time, almost 6 years ago, the International Trade Commission found that the U.S. copper industry was suffering serious injury because of imports and recommended that President Carter impose an import quota. Unfortunately, he refused to do so, in part because he predicted that the U.S. industry was about to recover.

He was dead wrong.

After his decision, the tide of imports continued to rise. Domestic production declined further. More mines and smelters closed. And thousands more workers lost their jobs.

This year, we thought we had another chance. In January, the U.S. copper industry filed a second petition for section 201 relief.

Once again, the International Trade Commission found that the U.S. industry is suffering serious injury because of imports. As a remedy, two Commissioners recommended quotas and two recommended tariffs. (One recommended no remedy.)

President Reagan then had to decide whether to grant import relief.

I wrote encouraging him to do so. So did several other copper State Senators. And Senator DOMENICI, who has been leading this fight for a long time, met with the President to explain how badly the industry needed relief.

While the President was still considering the issue, some Congressmen representing States where copper is fabricated, objected. Their States, of course, have benefited from the plummeting world price, so they claimed that quotas or tariffs might push the U.S. price higher than the world price, making it harder for them to compete with foreign fabricators.

To deflect these objections, several Copper Caucus members immediately wrote to the President urging that, if he were concerned about such a "two-tiered price," he could undertake negotiations with Chile, Zambia, Zaire, and Peru for an agreement "to reduce production from their current excessive levels by an amount sufficient to correct the present artifical depression of world copper prices."

But the President was unmoved.

Shortly after an anonymous administration official was quoted as saying that the copper industry "is an industry that should not exist in this country," the President concluded that quotas or tariffs "would not be in the national interest," and granted no relief.

That, Mr. President, was a callous, shortsighted decision.

GSP

Now, a short 2 weeks later, the same administration that made the decision is asking us to reauthorize the generalized system of preferences, or [GSP].

This program provides trade benefits to developing countries, by letting them import many of their products duty free.

One supposed justification for GSP is that it helps integrate developing countries into the world trading system.

But the copper situation belies this justification.

Most of the major foreign copper producers receive GSP benefits. For example, last year, Chile sold us $85 million worth of goods under GSP, Peru $142 million worth, Zaire $46 million worth, and Zambia $38 million worth.

Under the current version of GSP, these countries can continue on their merry way, flooding the world copper market and driving down the world price until there is not a copper miner left from Anaconda to Albuquerque.

This will have no effect on their eligibility for GSP benefits. At the same time our copper miners are signing up for unemployment benefits, the Chileans will be receiving Federal subsidies in the form of GSP benefits.

As I said earlier, Mr. President, this is like feeding the mouth that bites you.

THE BAUCUS AMENDMENT

That is why I am offering my amendment. Originally, I planned to offer an amendment denying GSP benefits to any country that does not reduce its copper exports to the United States whenever there is a substantial excess capacity here and the world price is declining.

But both the administration and the manager of the bill have objected to this amendment, and I can count votes well enough to know that it will not pass.

Therefore, I have ageed to a compromise amendment.

This compromise amendment builds on a colloquy Ambassador Brock and I had during the Finance Committee's consideration of GSP. It amends section 504(c)(4) of the bill to provide that, when deciding whether to designate or continue a country as a GSP beneficiary, the President must consider whether that country has assured the United States that it is not engaging in unreasonable export practices.

I expect the President to use this authority regarding countries like Chile, Zambia, Peru, and Zaire.

CONCLUSION

Mr. President, this amendment helps. It assures that countries cannot undermine our industries without jeopardizing their GSP benefits. And it gives us more leverage to force countries like Chile, Peru, Zambia, and Zaire to reduce their copper production.

In that way, this amendment complements the one Senator DOMENICI and I offered yesterday, which instructs the President to negotiate a production restraint agreement with the major foreign copper producers.

But we still must do more. Therefore, I plan to support other copper-related legislation, including legislation to impose a strict quota and to deny International Development Bank funds to copper exporting countries.

I shall keep working until we get this situation under control.

At this point, I would like to engage in a colloquy with the distinguished floor manager of the bill, to clarify the amendment's effect.

Mr. President, I am offering this amendment so that we do not routinely grant GSP benefits to countries whose unreasonable export practices are wiping important American industries out.

For example, I want to assure that, when the President considers whether to continue providing GSP benefits to Chile, Peru, Zambia, and Zaire, or whether to relax the competitive needs tests applicable to them, the President seeks their assurance that they will not engage in unreasonable export practices.

It is my specific understanding that the copper overproduction and copper export practices that the International Trade Commission recently concluded were seriously injuring the U.S. copper industry would constitute unreasonable export practices under this amendment. As a result, if the major copper exporting countries do not assure the United States that they will modify their practices enough to eliminate the serious injury to the U.S. industry, the President will be required, under this amendment, to give great weight to their failure to do so. Is that also the understanding of the distinguished manager of the bill?

Mr. DANFORTH. Yes. It is my understanding that the effect of this amendment will be to require the President to assess all of the export practices of current and potential GSP beneficiaries in making all GSP determinations. Accordingly, there can be no doubt that the President would be required to examine the copper export practices the Senator has described.

Mr. BAUCUS. I thank the distinguished manager of the bill.

Mr. President, I understand the amendment has been agreed to by both sides, and I urge its adoption.

Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, the amendment is agreeable.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, the manager for the minority has examined the amendment, and it is an amendment that is acceptable. I congratulate the distinguished Senator for the work he has done in this regard.

Mr. BAUCUS. I thank the Senator from Texas.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Montana.

The amendment (No. 4284) was agreed to.

Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BENTSEN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 4286

(Purpose: To amend provisions of the Tariff Act of 1930 affecting customs brokers, and for other purposes)

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I have another amendment. I send it to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Montana (Mr. BAUCUS) proposes an amendment numbered 4286.

Mr BAUCUS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 34 of the matter proposed to be inserted, between lines 2 and 3, insert the following:

SEC. . CUSTOMS BROKERS.

(a) Section 641 of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1641) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 641. CUSTOMS BROKERS.

"(a) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) The term 'customs broker' means any person granted a customs broker's license by the Secretary under subsection (b).

"(2) The term 'customs business' means those activities involving transactions with the Customs Service concerning—

"(A) the entry and admissability of merchandise,

"(B) the classification and valuation of such merchandise,

"(C) the payment of duties, taxes, or other charges assessed or collected by the Customs Service upon merchandise by reason of its importation, or

"(D) the refund, rebate, or drawback of such duties, taxes, or other charges.

"(3) The term 'Secretary' means the Secretary of the Treasury.

"(b) CUSTOM BROKERS LICENSES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—No person may conduct customs business (other than solely on such person's own behalf) unless such person holds a valid customs brokers license issued by the Secretary under paragraph (2) or (3).

"(2) LICENSES FOR INDIVIDUALS.—The Secretary may grant an individual a customs brokers license only if that individual is a citizen of the United States. Before granting the license, the Secretary may require an applicant to provide any information that the Secretary determines to be necessary to establish that the applicant is of good moral character and qualified to render valuable service to others in the conduct of customs business. In assessing the qualifications of an applicant, the Secretary may conduct an examination to determine the applicant's knowledge of customs and related laws, regulations and procedures, bookkeeping, accounting, and any other appropriate matters.

"(3) LICENSES FOR CORPORATIONS.—The Secretary may grant a customs brokers license to any corporation, association, or partnership that is organized or existing under the laws of any of the several States of the United States if at least one officer of the corporation or association, or one member of the partnership, holds a valid customs brokers license granted under paragraph (2).

"(4) DUTIES.—A customs broker shall exercise responsible supervision and control over the customs business that the customs broker conducts.

"(5) LAPSE OF LICENSE.—If a corporation, association, or partnership that is licensed as a customs broker under paragraph (3) fails to have, for any continuous period of 120 days, at least one officer of the corporation or association, or at least one member of the partnership, validly licensed under paragraph (2), in addition to any other sanction under this section (including paragraph (6)), the customs broker's license of such corporation, association, or partnership shall expire at the close of such 120-day period.

"(6) PROHIBITED ACTS.—Any person who intentionally transacts customs business (other than solely on such person's own behalf) without holding a valid customs borkers license granted to such person under this subsection shall be liable to the United States for a monetary penalty not to exceed $10,000 for each such transaction as well as for each violation of any other provision of this section. This penalty shall be assessed in the same manner and under the same procedures as the monetary penalties provided for in subsection (d)(2)(A).

"(c) CUSTOMS BROKERS PERMITS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Each person granted a customs brokers license under subsection (b) shall—

"(A) be issued a permit, in accordance with regulations prescribed under this section, for each customs district in which that person conducts customs business; and

"(B) regularly employ in each customs district for which such a permit is issued at least one individual who is licensed under subsection (b)(2) to exercise responsible supervision and control over the customs business conducted by that person in that district.

"(2) LAPSE OF PERMIT.—If a customs broker granted a permit under paragraph (1) fails to employ, for any continous period of 120 days, at least one individual who is licensed under subsection (b)(2) within the district for which a permit was issued, in addition to any other sanction under this section (including any sanction imposed under subsection (d)), such permit shall expire at the end of such 120-day period.

"(d) DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS.—

"(1) GENERAL RULE.—The Secretary may impose a monetary penalty in all cases (other than in the case of infractions described in subparagraph (B)(iii)) or revoke or suspend a license or permit of any customs broker, if the Secretary determines that the broker—

"(A) has made, or caused to be made, in any application for any license or permit under this section, or in any report filed with the Customs Service, any statement which was, at the time and in light of the circumstances under which it was made, false or misleading with respect to any material fact, or has omitted to state in any such application or report any material fact which was required to be stated therein;

"(B) has been convicted at any time after the filing of an application for license under subsection (b) of any felony or misdemeanor which the Secretary finds—

"(i) involved the importation or exportation of merchandise;

"(ii) arose out of the conduct of the customs business of the customs broker; or

"(iii) involved larceny, theft, robbery, extortion, forgery, counterfeiting, fraudulent concealment, embezzlement, fraudulent conversion, or misappropriation of funds;

"(C) has violated any provision of any law enforced by the Customs Service or violated the rules or regulations issued under any such provision;

"(D) has counseled, commanded, induced, procured, or knowingly aided or abetted the violations by any other person of any provision of any law enforced by the Customs Service or of the rules or regulations issued under any such provision;

"(E) has knowingly employed, or continues to employ, any person who has been convicted of a felony, without written approval of such employment from the Secretary; or

"(F) has, in the course of the customs business of such broker and with the intent to defraud, willfully and knowingly deceived, misled, or threatened any client or prospective client.

"(2) PROCEDURES.—

"(A) MONETARY PENALTY.—

"(i) NOTICE.—Unless action has been taken under subparagraph (B), the appropriate customs officer shall serve notice in writing upon any customs broker to show cause why the broker should not be subject to a monetary penalty not to exceed $30,000 in total for a violation or violations of this section. Such notice shall advise the customs broker of the allegations or complaints against him and shall explain that the broker has a right to respond to the allegations or complaints in writing within 30 days of the date of the notice.

"(ii) CONSIDERATION OF ALLEGATIONS AND RESPONSES.—Before imposing a monetary penalty, the customs officer shall consider the allegations or complaints and any timely response made by the customs broker and issue a written decision.

"(iii) REMISSION OR MITIGATION OF PENALTIES.—A customs broker against whom a monetary penalty has been issued under this section shall have a reasonable opportunity under section 618 to make representations seeking remission or mitigation of the monetary penalty.

"(iv) WRITTEN DECISION.—After the conclusion of any proceeding under section 618, the appropriate customs officer shall provide to the customs broker a written decision which sets forth the final determination and the findings of fact and conclusions of law on which such determination is based.

"(B) REVOCATION OR SUSPENSION.—

"(i) NOTICE OF COMPLAINT.—The appropriate customs officer may, for good and sufficient reason, serve notice in writing upon any customs broker to show cause why a license or permit issued under this section should not be revoked or suspended. Such notice shall be in the form of a statement specifically setting forth the grounds of the complaint, and shall allow the customs broker 30 days to respond.

"(ii) NOTICE OF HEARING.—If no response to the notice provided under clause (i) is filed, or the appropriate customs officer determines that the revocation or suspension is still warranted after receiving such a response, the appropriate customs officer shall notify the customs broker in writing or—

"(I) a hearing to be held within 15 days, or at a later date if the broker requests an extension and shows good cause therefor, before an administrative law judge appointed pursuant to section 3125 of title 5, United States Code, who shall serve as the hearing officer, and

"(II) the right of the customs broker to be represented by counsel at such hearing.

"(iii) TESTIMONY; CROSS EXAMINATION.—Testimony presented at the hearing described in clause (ii), including the proof of the charges and the response thereto, shall be taken under oath and the right of cross-examination accorded to both parties at such hearing.

"(iv) TRANSCRIPT.—A transcript of the hearing described in clause (ii) shall be made and a copy shall be provided to the appropriate customs officer and the customs broker.

"(v) POST-HEARING BRIEF.—The customs broker and the appropriate customs officer shall be provided a reasonable period of time after receipt of the transcript in which to file a post-hearing brief.

"(vi) WAIVER OR ABSENCE.—If the customs broker waives the hearing, or the broker or his designated representative fails to appear at the appointed time and place, the hearing officer shall make findings and recommendations based on the record submitted by the parties.

"(vii) TRANSFER OF RECORD.—The hearing officer shall promptly transmit the record of the case along with the findings of fact and recommendations of the hearing officer to the Secretary for decision.

"(viii) DECISION OF THE SECRETARY.—The Secretary will issue a written decision based solely on the record which sets forth findings of fact and the reasons for the decision of the Secretary. Such decision may provide for the sanction contained in the notice to show cause or any lesser sanction authorized by this subsection, including a monetary penalty not to exceed $30,000, than was contained in the notice to show cause.

"(3) SETTLEMENT AND COMPROMISE.—The Secretary may settle and compromise any disciplinary proceeding which has been instituted under this subsection according to the terms and conditions agreed to by the parties, including but not limited to the reduction of any proposed suspension or revocation to a monetary penalty.

"(4) LIMITATION OF ACTIONS.—Notwithstanding section 621, no proceeding under this subsection or subsection (b)(6) shall be commenced unless such proceeding is instituted by the appropriate service of written notice within 5 years from the date the alleged violation was committed; except that if the alleged violation consists of fraud, the 5-year period of limitation shall commence running from the time such alleged violation was discovered.

"(e) JUDICIAL APPEAL.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—A customs broker, applicant, or other person directly affected may appeal any decision of the Secretary denying or revoking a license or permit under subsection (b) or (c), or revoking or suspending a license or permit or imposing a monetary penalty in lieu thereof under subsection (d)(2)(B), by filing in the Court of International Trade, within 60 days after the issuance of the decision or order, a written petition requesting that the decision or order be modified or set aside in whole or in part. A copy of the petition shall be transmitted promptly by the clerk of the court to the Secretary or his designee. In cases involving revocation or suspension of a license or permit or imposition of a monetary penalty in lieu thereof under subsection (d)(2)(B), after receipt of the petition, the Secretary shall file in court the record upon which the decision or order complained of was entered, as provided in section 2635(d) of title 28, United States Code.

"(2) CONSIDERATION OF OBJECTIONS.—The court shall not consider any objection to the admission of evidence or testimony or to the decision or order of the Secretary unless that objection was raised before the hearing officer in suspension or revocation proceedings or there were reasonable grounds for failure to do so.

"(3) CONCLUSIVENESS OF FINDINGS.—The findings of the Secretary as to the facts, if supported by substantial evidence, shall be conclusive.

"(4) ADDITIONAL EVIDENCES.—If any party applies to the court for leave to present additional evidence and the court is satisfied that the additional evidence is material and that reasonable grounds existed for the failure to present the evidence in the proceedings before the hearing officer, the court may order the additional evidence to be taken before the hearing officer and to be presented in a manner and upon the terms and conditions prescribed by the court. The Secretary may modify the findings of facts on the basis of the additional evidence presented. The Secretary shall then file with the court any new or modified findings of fact which shall be conclusive if supported by substantial evidence, together with a recommendation, if any, for the modification or setting aside of the original decision or order.

"(5) EFFECT OF PROCEEDINGS.—The commencement of proceedings under this subsection shall, unless specifically ordered by the court, operate as a stay of the decision of the Secretary except in the case of a denial of a license or permit.

"(6) FAILURE TO APPEAL.—If an appeal is not filed within the time limits specified in this section, the decision by the Secretary shall be final and conclusive. In the case of a monetary penalty imposed under subsection (d)(2)(B) of this section, if the amount is not tendered within 60 days after the decision becomes final, the license shall automatically be suspended until payment is made to the Customs Service.

"(f) REGULATIONS BY THE SECRETARY.—The Secretary may prescribe such rules and regulations relating to the customs business of customs brokers as the Secretary considers necessary to protect importers and the revenue of the United States, and to carry out the provisions of this section, including rules and regulations governing the licensing of or issuance of permits to customs brokers, the keeping of books, accounts, and records by customs brokers, and documents and correspondence, and the furnishing by customs brokers of any other information relating to their customs business to any duly accredited officer or employee of the United States Customs Service.

"(g) TRIENNIAL REPORTS BY CUSTOMS BROKERS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—On February 1, 1985, and on February 1 of each third year thereafter, each person who is licensed under subsection (b) shall file with the Secretary of the Treasury a report as to—

"(A) whether such person is actively engaged in business as a customs broker; and

"(B) the name under, and the address at which such business is being transacted.

"(2) SUSPENSION AND REVOCATION.—If a person licensed under subsection (b) fails to file the required report by March 1 of the reporting year, the license is suspended, and may be thereafter revoked subject to the following procedures:

"(A) The Secretary shall transmit written notice of suspension to the licensee no later than March 31 of the reporting year.

"(B) If the licensee files the required report within 60 days of receipt of the Secretary's notice, the license shall be reinstated.

"(C) In the event the required report is not filed within the 60-day period, the license shall be revoked without prejudice to the filing of an application for a new license.

"(h) FEES AND CHARGES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the Secretary may prescribe reasonable fees and charges to defray the costs of the Customs Service in carrying out the provisions of this section, including, but not limited to, a fee for licenses issued under subsection (b) and fees for any test administered by him or under his direction.

"(2) EXCEPTIONS.—The Secretary shall not impose any fees or charges with respect to audits of individuals or disciplinary proceedings.".

(b) Section 1581(g) of title 28, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(g) The Court of International Trade shall have exclusive jurisdiction of any civil action commenced to review—

"(1) any decision of the Secretary of the Treasury to deny a customs brokers license under section 641(b)(2) or (3) or (c) of the Tariff Act of 1930, or to deny a customs brokers permit under section 641(c)(1) of such Act, or to revoke a license or permit under section 641(b)(5) or (c)(2) of such Act; and

"(2) any decision of the Secretary of the Treasury to revoke or suspend a customs brokers license or permit, or impose a monetary penalty in lieu thereof, under section 641(d)(2)(B) of the Tariff Act of 1930.".;

(c) Section 1582(1) of title 28, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(1) to recover a civil penalty under section 592, 641(a)(1)(C), 641(d)(2)(A), 704(i)(2), or 734(i)(2) of the Tariff Act of 1930;".

(d) Section 2631(g) of title 28, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(g)(1) A civil action to review any decision of the Secretary of the Treasury to deny a customs brokers license under section 641(b)(2) or (3) of the Tariff Act of 1930, or to deny a customs brokers permit under section 641(c)(1) of such Act, or to revoke such license or permit under section 641(b)(5) or (c)(2) of such Act, may be commenced in the Court of International Trade by the person whose license or permit was denied or revoked.

"(2) A civil action to review any decision of the Secretary of the Treasury to revoke or suspend a customs broker's license or permit or impose a monetary penalty in lieu thereof under section 641(d)(2)(B) of the Tariff Act of 1930 may be commenced in the Court of International Trade by the person against whom the decision was issued.".

(e) Section 2636(h) of title 28, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(h) A civil action contesting the denial or revocation by the Secretary of the Treasury of a customs broker's license or permit under subsection (b) or (c) of section 641 of the Tariff Act of 1930, or the revocation or suspension of such license or permit or the imposition of a monetary penalty in lieu thereof by such Secretary under section 641(d) of such Act, is barred unless commenced in accordance with the rules of the Court of International Trade within sixty days after the date of the entry of the decision or order of such Secretary.".

(f) Section 2640(a)(5) of title 28, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(5) Civil actions commenced to review any decision of the Secretary of the Treasury under section 641 of the Tariff Act of 1930, with the exception of decisions under section 641(d)(2)(B), which shall be governed by subdivision (d) of this section.".

(g) Section 2643 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding the following new subsection:

"(e) In any proceeding involving assessment or collection of a monetary penalty under section 641(b)(6) or 641(d)(2)(A) of the Tariff Act of 1930, the court may not render judgment in an amount greater than that sought in the initial pleading of the United States, and may render judgment in such lesser amount as shall seem proper and just to the court.".

(h) Section 564 of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1564) is amended by adding the following sentence at the end thereof: "The provisions of this section shall apply to licensed customs brokers who otherwise possess a lien for freight, charges, or contribution in general average upon the merchandise under the statutes or common law of any State or by reason of an order of any court of competent jurisdiction.".

(i) Section 520(a) of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1520(a)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(4) PRIOR TO LIQUIDATION.—Whenever it is ascertained prior to the liquidation of an entry that excess duties, fees, charges, or exactions have been deposited or paid by reason of a clerical error.".

(j)(1) The amendments made by this section shall take effect upon the close of the 180th day following the date of enactment of this Act with the following exceptions:

(A) Section 641(c)(1)(B) and Section 641(c)(2) of the Tariff Act of 1930, as added by this Act, shall take effect three years after the effective date of this Act.

(B) The amendments made to the Tariff Act of 1930 by subsections (h) and (i) shall take effect on the date of enactment of this Act.

(2) A license in effect on the date of enactment of this Act under section 641 of the Tariff Act of 1930 (as in effect before such date of enactment) shall continue in force as a license to transact customs business as a customs broker, subject to all the provisions of this subsection and such licenses shall be accepted as permits for the district or districts covered by that license.

(3) Any proceeding for revocation or suspension of a license instituted under section 641 of the Tariff Act of 1930 before the effective date of this Act shall continue and be governed by the law in effect at the time the proceeding was instituted.

(k) If any provision of, or amendment made by, this section or its application to any person or circumstances is held invalid, it shall not affect the validity of the remaining provisions or their application to any other person or circumstances.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, this amendment embodies the "Customs Brokers Reform Act of 1984." By eliminating unnecessary regulation of customs brokers, the amendment will make it easier for them to serve their customers; at the same time, it will make it easier for the Customs Service to perform its necessary regulatory functions.

The national brokers organization and the Customs Service have worked on this legislation for several years, and both now agree that this bill embodies a fair compromise. That being the case, I hope that the Senate will adopt this amendment.

Mr. President, customs brokers are specialists in the complicated process of importing goods. Other companies hire them for guidance through this process. For example, a customs broker might advise a company what duty classification its imports will fall into, fill out all of the necessary Customs forms, pay the duties, and resolve any disputes that arise with Customs agents or import specialists.

These functions are important in a State like Montana, which has 21 Customs stations that process all kinds of imports, including ore concentrates, roofing materials, fertilizer, farm machinery, and oil field equipment. Many of these products are critical to Montana's economy.

Since about 1930, customs brokers have been regulated by the Customs Service, in order to protect brokers' customers and discourage Customs fraud. Among other things, the regulations require a broker to obtain a Customs Service license—by passing a test on the Customs laws and undergoing a background investigation—provide accurate advice to customers, and adequately supervise employees. If a broker fails to meet these obligations, his license may be suspended or revoked.

Over the years, this regulatory system has created problems. For one example, the requirement that every brokerage firm employ at least two licensed brokers has imposed an unnecessary burden in places like Montana, where brokerage companies frequently are very small businesses. For a second example, some companies that provide brokerage services also provide other trade-related services like freight forwarding and inland transportation; Customs has attempted to regulate certain aspects of these services as incidental to customs brokerage, even though nonbrokers could perform the same services without becoming subject to Customs regulation. For another example, since the only way Customs can punish brokers who violate their regulatory obligation is revoke or suspend their license, Customs is unable to punish brokers for minor violations without disrupting their entire business.

A few years ago, the National Customs Brokers and Forwarders Association and the Customs Service began discussing whether, given these problems, it was time to overhaul the regulatory system. As should be expected, there were many disagreements along the way. But, eventually, they agreed on a revised system.

Under this system, customs brokers still must obtain Customs Service licenses and follow whatever basic requirements the Service establishes. However, there are four significant changes from the current system. First, a brokerage company need employ only one license broker, not two. Second, a brokerage company that is licensed to operate in one district is permitted to operate in any other district, as long as he employs a licensed broker there. Third, the bill makes clear that Customs can only regulate the performance of specifically defined customs business, not the performance of other related services. Fourth, the bill authorizes Customs to impose monetary penalties of up to a total of $30,000 for violations that do not warrant a license suspension or revocation, and establishes an administrative procedure for the assessment of these penalties.

Mr. President, the Customs Service and the brokers' association agree about this revised system. After Congressman FRENZEL introduced a House bill embodying the system, the Customs Service testified that the bill represented "in large measure [an] agreed upon solution" and the brokers' association testified that the bill "represents a compromise to which both sides are in agreement."

CONCLUSION

Mr. President, the amendment I am offering is similar to Congressman FRENZEL's bill, H.R. 5418, which was reported by the Trade Subcommittee of the House Ways and Means Committee and was included in an omnibus tariff bill, H.R. 6064, which the House approved yesterday.

This is a modest, compromise bill. It overhauls an oudated regulatory system to reduce regulatory burdens and improve Government efficiency. By doing so, it makes it easier for customs brokers to serve their customers, and for the Customs Service to enforce the law.

I understand that the amendment is acceptable to the majority and minority floor managers, and I move its adoption.

Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, the amendment is agreeable.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, the Senator from Texas has no objection to the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 4286) was agreed to.

Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a letter from the U.S. Trade Representative dated September 14, 1984, in response to my letter of June 30 concerning renewal of the U.S. Generalized System of Preferences with respect to the treatment of agricultural products, be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE U.S. TRADE REPRESENTATVE,
Washington, DC, September 14, 1984.

Hon. PETE WILSON,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR PETE: This is in response to your letter of June 30 concerning the operation of the U.S. Generalized System of Preferences (GSP) and its renewal, particularly with respect to the treatment of agricultural products. As you will recall, I provided an interim response to this letter earlier this month expressing my desire to reach agreement on the various issues raised in your letter.

As I indicated, I am prepared to make compromises where necessary provided they are in the best interests of the overall program. I have identified several areas where changes responsive to your concerns appear to be possible. I understand that these changes will result in a GSP renewal proposal that you will support in Congress.

Our respective staffs have met frequently to discuss possible measures to accommodate the interests of the agricultural community. A great deal of time and effort has been put into these discussions. I am particularly grateful to the members of the agricultural community who volunteered to work with us on these important issues.

I would like to begin by reviewing our position regarding modifications in the petitioning process. As you know, there has been a broad disparity in the quantity and quality of information contained in the hundreds of petitions requesting modifications in the list of articles eligible for duty-free treatment under the GSP. This disparity has been a source of concern for domestic and foreign parties with an interest in the requested modification. It has also placed this office in an unenviable position in determining whether a petition satisfies the GSP's informational requirements.

To address this problem, my office will develop a standard petition form as you have suggested. The form, which would be required of all petitioners, would encompass all of the types of information set forth in the current regulations. It could also include other information which would assist the President in his assessment of the relvent policy considerations. Incomplete petitions would not be accepted unless it is demonstrated that missing information was not available to the petitioner. I welcome suggestions regarding areas to be covered by a standard form.

A standardized petition form could be useful in two respects. First, it would ensure that the petitioner has fully studied the anticipated benefits of its request before filing. Second, it would ensure that other interested parties have a clearer indication of the petitioner's situation, better enabling them to assess their own interest in the issue.

You raised the issue of providing interested parties an opportunity to comment on information collected during the interagency review prior to a final determination. As you know, the President must obtain the advice of the U.S. International Trade Commission on the probable economic effect on the relevant U.S. industry of granting GSP status to a particular product before taking such action. I will make arrangements with the Commission for the issuance of a public report of the Commission's factual findings at a point sufficiently early in the review to allow interested parties an opportunity to comment on such findings. Of course we will continue to release to interested parties any other information collected during the interagency review of any petition with the exception of: (1) information which, if revealed, would disclose the operations of an individual firm; and (2) internal governmental advice or memoranda.

The next point you raised concerns the granting of GSP treatment on a generalized basis, and not limiting GSP status to the petitioner. As you know, I must insist that GSP benefits continue to be conferred on a generalized basis. To do otherwise would violate the legal requirements of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT). The selective granting of benefits would also be an administrative nightmare and would impair the interests of many U.S. producers as well as U.S. importers.

As you noted, the GSP is a departure from the most-favored-nation principle embodied in Article I of the GATT. Recognizing that a program of tariff preferences for the benefit of developing countries could make a useful contribution to the international trading system, the GATT's contracting parties agreed to a waiver of Article I which allows for such a derogation. The waiver, which was originally adopted in 1971, was made permanent during the Tokyo Round of Multilateral Trade Negotiations through its incorporation into the GATT Framework Agreement.

The GATT waiver for GSP programs provides specific parameters for GSP schemes. It requires that the scheme be "generalized, nonreciprocal and nondiscriminatory." For a GSP program to be "generalized," tariff preferences must be bestowed generally to beneficiary countries. A GSP scheme which conferred benefits only to selective beneficiaries (e.g., only those filing petitions) would not fall within the scope of the waiver and would violate Article I, thus rendering the donor country susceptible to claims for compensation. I should note that all of the 19 other industrialized countries maintaining GSP programs grant preferences on a generalized basis.

A selective awarding of GSP benefits would impair the interests of many U.S. industries as well as the importing community. For example, high-tech producers in your state claim that the duty-savings they realize on components imported from GSP suppliers are critical to their ability to compete with Japan in international end-product markets. Such producers are anxious to maintain a variety of GSP-eligible sources. The same is true with respect to many other U.S. producers.

You asked how we can obtain adequate information unless petitions are required from all potential beneficiaries and, in particular, how we can ensure that only those countries in need of (and deserving of) GSP treatment would be granted GSP treatment. We must bear in mind that petitions serve a useful role in the product review but are not the only source of economic data in this process.

I realize that your concern with respect to the granting of GSP treatment on a generalized basis also relates to the issue of whether U.S. producers of like or directly competitive articles are likely to be affected adversely. This issue will be fully addressed by the U.S. International Trade Commission, which will report to the President its findings with respect to the impact on U.S. producers of the possible designation of all potentially eligible beneficiary countries. As I indicated earlier, I will make arrangements with the Commission for the issuance of a public report of its factual findings at a point sufficiently early in the review to give interested parties an opportunity to comment on the findings. Also, my office will continue to release to interested parties the other types of information I noted earlier.

The main purpose of the petition, whether it be a petition to add or remove a product, is to demonstrate whether the requested action could produce a result consistent with the program's objectives. In the case of product addition requests filed by beneficiary country governments or exporters, the key point to be addressed in the petition is how the requested action would further the economic development of the beneficiary country.

Please note that my strong objection to the selective inclusion of beneficiaries (i.e., only those filing petitions) does not prohibit the selective exclusion of competitive suppliers. The Administration recognizes that there are products in which individual beneficiaries have achieved a sufficiently high level of competitiveness to warrant their exclusion from GSP treatment. In fact, the Administration implemented a policy of discretionary graduation based on this concept in 1981. Through this policy, over $1 billion in imports from beneficiary countries are currently excluded from GSP treatment even though the program's statutory limits have not been reached.

One of the three contexts in which this policy has been and would be applied concerns adding new products to the GSP list. If the interagency review concludes that one or more individual countries are already sufficiently competitive with respect to a product about to be added to the GSP, they will be barred from eligibility at the outset. The Administration's renewal proposal would codify this practice by including as a new statutory element for Presidential consideration the beneficiary country's competitiveness in the product of concern. I will work with you to make sure that report language addresses this practice.

In assessing a beneficiary's competitiveness with respect to a product, several factors must be examined. Among these are the various factors you enumerated in your letter (size of the industry, level of worldwide exports and productive capability). You mentioned the possibility of developing legislative history that would require those factors to be considered with respect to all countries that stand to materially benefit from the granting of preferential treatment to a product. I would support this. I would strongly object, however, to your suggestion that a "complete study" of these factors be supplied to the relevant industry. This would be unnecessarily burdensome, particularly in light of the fact that we will make available to any interested party the relevant material collected during the course of the review. This material will include the Commission report discussed earlier.

On another subject, you asked for an explanation of why the GSP cannot be used as a lever for resolving trade disputes with developing countries. It is clear that a renewed GSP program must promote the further integration of developing countries into the international trading system. In fact, the Administration's renewal bill was designed with this goal in mind. In all GSP determinations, the President will be required to examine the extent to which a beneficiary has assured the United States of equitable and reasonable access to its markets; the extent to which it is providing adequate protection for U.S. intellectual property; and the extent to which it is eliminating trade-distorting investment practices. I would support report language stating that the reasonableness of a beneficiary country's export practices should also be considered in all GSP determinations.

What I must oppose are any forms of automatic conditionality based on reciprocity-type considerations. Such provisions would violate the GATT requirement that GSP programs be administered on a "nonreciprocal" basis. Furthermore, automatic conditionality presents several other problems. One of these is that it leaves the President no flexibility to differentiate among beneficiaries at various levels of development and competitiveness—a factor that clearly relates to the speed with which a developing country should assume the full responsibilities of the international trading system.

I would also oppose any attempt to insert product-specific or sectoral reciprocity into the GSP program. In addition to the points noted above, market access evaluations cannot be conducted in such an isolated context.

Another point you raised concerns repeated requests to add a product to the GSP list. While there have been very few instances where such petitions were accepted for formal review, the simple fact that the petition has been filed can be alarming. To clarify this situation, we will amend the regulations to bar from consideration any product addition request that has been reviewed within the previous three years. This provision would be effective upon enactment of the legislation and would apply to product petitions reviewed during the three years prior to enactment.

In certain instances it may be appropriate to apply a longer waiting period. In gauging the appropriate period beyond three years for these special cases, I would consider factors such as production methods or processes and investment requirements as well as information indicating a change in circumstances since the previous review.

You expressed concern that graduation from GSP treatment has rarely occurred for agricultural items and correctly noted that not one of the 26 country/product combinations removed from eligibility in 1984 were for agricultural products. There is a very simple reason for this: no one filed a petition requesting graduation with respect to an agricultural product. The industrial products sector was considerably more active, filing numerous petitions. Of the 17 petitions filed on industrial products, 11 were accepted for formal review and 9 (covering the 26 country/product combinations you mentioned) were ultimately granted.

You asked for my comments on the concept of conducting an annual review of eligible articles for the purpose of graduating competitive beneficiary countries. The administration's bill requires the President to complete such a review, covering all GSP products, by January 1987 and periodically thereafter. The GSP's annual product review procedures would also be maintained, providing interested parties an opportunity to request modifications on specific products on a more regular basis. I support your proposal to hold public hearings as part of the 1987 and periodic reviews.

You suggested that examinations of countries' competitiveness should take into account the volume and value of the country's exports to the United States and worldwide, the U.S. and world market share of the country's exports, and the development level of the industry in the country. Such information (to the extent it is available) is already taken into consideration in such examinations and I would support legislative history clarifying our practices in this regard.

I hope that I have been able to answer your questions and concerns. You have represented your agricultural community admirably. Many of your suggestions demonstrate a keen interest in making the program more effective and equitable and could represent important improvements to the GSP program. For this I am grateful to you and your staff.

I know that you understand the importance of this legislation to President Reagan's commitment to the international trading system. We must all keep in mind that GSP imports account for only 4 percent of total U.S. imports and that GSP imports of agricultural products account for well under 1 percent of total U.S. imports. On the other hand, the GSP program is of enormous importance to the lesser developed countries of the world which purchase $14 billion of U.S. farm goods each year.

Thank you again for your thoughtful letter. I look forward to working with you both toward Congressional approval of a renewed GSP program.

Very truly yours,

WILLIAM E. BROCK.

AMENDMENT NO. 4287

(Purpose: To modify the definition of industry under title VII of the Tariff Act of 1930)

Mr. WILSON. Next, Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from California [Mr. WILSON] proposes an amendment numbered 4287.

Mr. WILSON. Next, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 34 of the matter proposed to be inserted, between lines 2 and 3, insert the following:

SEC. . PROCESSED AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS.

(a) Section 771(4) of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1677 (4)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(E) SPECIAL RULE FOR PROCESSED AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—In the case of a processed agricultural product, the term 'industry' means—

"(I) the domestic producers of such product; and

"(II) the domestic producers of the principal raw agricultural commodity which is a part of such product (as determined on the basis of the volume or value of such commodity produced), but only if producers of such raw agricultural commodity allege that they are materially injured, or threatened with material injury, by reason of the imports concerned.

"(ii) PROCESSED AGRICULTURAL PRODUCT DEFINED.—For purposes of clause (i), the term 'processed agricultural product' means any product of farm, forest, or fishery which has undergone processing beyond that customarily required to prepare such product for marketing in such product's natural form.".

(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any petition for relief under section 702 or section 732 of the Tariff Act of 1930 which was filed prior to the date of enactment of this Act may be refiled under such section.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. President, this amendment would make a small but important procedural change in the Tariff Act of 1930. This change would benefit farmers who wish to come forward and petition the International Trade Commission that they are being harmed by reason of imported products being dumped or subsidized into our domestic market. This amendment would give farmers standing to be heard which is the legitimate right of due process under our laws. The amendment would not dictate the outcome of the ITC decision. It would however, ensure that agricultural producers are able to present their allegations of injury to the Commission and have their data considered in a fair manner.

The International Trade Commission has taken a position that frequently denies producers of raw agricultural products access to the remedies provided by the Tariff Act, particularly the antidumping and countervailing duty provisions. The ITC has interpreted the term "domestic industry" so as to exclude producers of raw agricultural products when the imported product in dispute is a processed agricultural product.

Therefore, the ITC would not look at information as to injury provided by producers in determining whether to take a case for full investigation.

This amendment would merely ensure that the ITC would review producer information before making a determination. This is only fair since producers themselves are many times the party which is injured the most by unfair foreign trading practices involving processed agricultrual products. This amendment will protect the rights of all parties to an allegation of unfair trading practices and injury.

Mr. President, I should add that the amendment I have offered will in no way prevent the International Trade Commission [ITC] from examining the affect of imports of a processed product on a segregable portion of the raw product industry where that is possible. If a portion of the raw product industry has not been effected by imports of the processed product under investigation and can be separated from the investigation, it may be. Separate examination, where that is possible, will prevent the situation where a distinct group of producers clearly uneffected by imports would give a distorted view of the condition of the raw product industry. Where differentation among raw product producers is not possible, the ITC should proceed in its discretion to determine the real impact of imports on our raw material producers. I do not intend by this amendment to give any group gratuitous protection. On the other hand, I do intent that, where necessary, these producers be given the full protection of our trade laws.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, this amendment is of great interest to farmers across the country. Specifically, it would provide an opportunity for agricultural producers to have a full and fair hearing before the International Trade Commission when the ITC considers trade disputes.

Under current law, antidumping and countervailing duty measures may be used to counter unfair foreign trading practices if the ITC finds that imports have caused injury to a domestic industry. However, because the ITC has defined "industry" very narrowly, farmers have at times been excluded by the ITC from seeking a legal remedy to problems caused by damaging imports. This has occurred in several trade disputes involving processed agricultural products, where the ITC has considered the damage done by imports to the processor, but not the producer of the raw commodity.

A change in the definition of "industry" such as is proposed in this amendment, is needed so that agricultural producers will have standing to challenge unfair foreign trading practices involving processed agricultural products. Such a change would not dictate the outcome of an ITC investigation, but it would ensure that concerns of agricultural producers would be fully heard.

It should be emphasized that this amendment is of interest to a wide variety of farmers, not just to wine grape growers. Apple growers in North Carolina, for example, have been facing unfair competition from foreign apple juice imported in concentrated form for reconstitution in this country.

Since 1976, the quantity of apple juice imported into the United States has grown dramatically—from 34.38 million gallons—single strength equivalent—in 1976 to 103.7 million gallons in 1982. Our 1982 imports equaled 30.9 million bushels, or 10 times the total North Carolina apple crop of that year.

The dramatic increase in apple juice imports are of major concern to U.S. apple growers. These farmers are generally not opposed to competing with other growers in other countries on a fair basis.

However, there is evidence that the major exporter of apple juice to the United States, Argentina, is providing a substantial subsidy to the processors and exporters of that product. Imports from Argentina, I might add, make up over 40 percent of our total apple juice imports.

Over the past couple of years, apple growers across the Nation have been attempting to deal with the Argentine situation through normal trade procedures. However, among the problems they have faced in seeking relief is that they have been unable to bring a petition before the International Trade Commission because of the Commission's narrow interpretation of the word "industry".

Let me reiterate that this amendment would not dictate the outcome of any ITC investigation, rather it would simply require that the ITC consider the producer as part of the industry if the producer contends that imports have caused injury.

Mr. President, to me, it seems only fair that farmers should be allowed access to the trade remedies now available to industry. The Wilson amendment would accomplish this, and I urge its adoption.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. President, I am pleased to sponsor the pending amendment. The amendment allows producers of raw agricultural products to seek relief against unfair trade practices involving processed agricultural products by allowing them to pursue such cases before the U.S. International Trade Commission. At the present time, agricultural producers do not have to stand before the ITC to petition for relief from subsidized and dumped imports of processed agricultural products.

Under the amendment, "processed agricultural product" would be defined to mean any agricultural product that has undergone processing beyond that customarily required to prepare it for marketing in its natural form. Further, the definition of "affected industry" would be amended to include both producers of a processed agricultural product and the producers of the principal raw agricultural product—determined on either a volume or value basis—that is included in the processed agricultural product subject to investigation.

The amendment would make certain that the ITC reviews all relevant information—including the consequences for producers of agricultural products if import competition involving unfair trade practices continues.

The amendment provides farmers in this country access to an established procedure for resolving trade-related disputes.

It would not interfere with ITC determinations. It will be a constructive step toward the elimination of unfair trade practices by foreign suppliers of processed agricultural products.

I urge my colleagues to support the amendment.

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I am very pleased to join with my able colleague from California, Senator PETE WILSON, in support of the modified wine equity provisions.

I wish to emphasize to my colleagues that our amendment is exclusively export oriented. It is not a protectionist measure. It does not mandate the President to do anything that would violate our trade agreements, and, in fact, it is totally up to the President's own judgment as to what he will or will not do to seek access for American wines in foreign markets.

Our amendment is procompetition. If adopted, it will serve as a reminder to foreign nations that their wines enjoy liberal access to the world's largest free market for wines and that we do expect some consideration for our wines to gain access to other markets.

The amendment has been substantially modified since it was first introduced by Senator WILSON and myself with Senators D'AMATO and MOYNIHAN. That bill was in fact a reciprocity measure and did require the President to act upon findings of different treatment of American wines in foreign markets.

The bill has been rewritten by the House Subcommittee on Trade and reported last week as H.R. 3795. It is drafted to provide a legislative basis for the commendable efforts recently undertaken by the Office of Special Trade Representative to obtain a reduction in the Japanese tariff on wine imports and a similar success in reducing nontariff barriers imposed by the European Community.

In its present form our amendment is endorsed by a major agricultural commodity producing association, the Soybean Growers, as well as the AFL–CIO.

A key provision of our proposal would encourage the President to establish a U.S. Wine Export Promotion Program. This is the spirit and the intent of our amendment—a concerted effort to seek opportunities for American wines in the wine-consuming markets of nonwine producing nations, such as Japan, Great Britain, Sweden, Norway, including such wine producing countries as West Germany, which consumes more than it produces for domestic use, and even France, the home of the great noble wines, a market in which we believe the best American wines can compete evenly with the extremely costly French chateau-bottled vintages.

I urge my colleagues to support our amendment.

I repeat, ours will not injure other commodities through threats of retaliation because in no way will our amendment limit, restrict or harm the imports of wine into the United States.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a "Dear Colleague" letter dated September 19, 1984.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

U.S. SENATE, COMMITTEE ON AGRICULTURE, NUTRITION, AND FORESTRY,
Washington DC, September 19, 1984.

DEAR COLLEAGUE: Today many American farmers are being hurt by subsidized imported processed agricultural products. Our farmers are efficient but cannot and should not be required to compete against the treasuries of foreign governments. Yet American farmers have been denied the right to petition their own government for relief from subsidized and dumped imports by a bureaucratic interpretation of our trade laws. To remedy this situation, we urge that you support an amendment which would allow farmers to petition the International Trade Commission (ITC) for relief from this kind of unfair competition. Farmers must have the right to be heard when they are threatened by unfair competition.

The amendment would modify U.S. countervailing duty and antidumping laws to help ensure that complaints filed by U.S. agricultural industries with the International Trade Commission are given fair and uniform consideration. It would provide standing to agricultural growers in investigations involving processed agricultural products, provided that the growers allege injury as a result of imports of such processed agricultural products. The amendment fully comports with GATT interpretation and the legislative history of U.S. import relief statutes, both of which establish that standing should not be so narrowly defined as to prevent consideration of an investigation. The ITC has itself ruled in several previous cases that growers should be considered part of the domestic industry. Because the Commission's treatment of growers has been inconsistent, however, this amendment is necessary to ensure uniformity and fairness to our agricultural producers.

The amendment also defines "processed agricultural products" using the definition as it appears in the GATT and permits the refiling of petitions to ensure that former petitioners benefit from these statutory changes.

We hope that you will cosponsor this amendment. Farmers should not be denied access to laws designed for their protection if they can make a case that they are being injured. American farmers are hurting. We must take positive steps to ensure that they do not have to contend with unfair competition.

Sincerely,

PETE WILSON,
THAD COCHRAN,
BILL COHEN,
ALAN CRANSTON,
JESSE HELMS,
WALTER D. HUDDLESTON,
DAVID L. BOREN.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Senators DOLE, HELMS, HUDDLESTON, COCHRAN, and COHEN be added as cosponsors to the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WILSON. I am pleased to announce support from the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives, the American Farm Bureau, and the American Soybean Association. I believe that this amendment has been cleared on both sides. I move its adoption.

Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, I have examined this amendment.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I have no objection to the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from California.

The amendment (No. 4287) was agreed to.

Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BENTSEN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 4288

Mr. WILSON. Next, Mr. President, I should like to move to consideration of the Israel Free Trade Act. Specifically, Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from California [Mr. WILSON] proposes an amendment numbered 4288.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the appropriate place in the bill, add the following:

"SEC. Adverse Economic Impact Study.

"At the end of subsection (b) of section 102 of the Trade Act of 1974, add the following new paragraph:

"'( )(A) Prior to negotiating a trade agreement for the elimination or reduction of duties imposed by the United States, the President shall request of and receive from the International Trade Commission a determination as to each article about which the President intends to negotiate, which is or is likely to be imported into the U.S. upon implementation of any such agreement, and about which the International Trade Commission has received substantial allegations, whether or not the importation of such article is likely to cause a significant adverse impact on the industry in the United States producing such article. Each such determination, and the reasons therefore, shall be transmitted to the Congress.

"'(B) The President shall have no authority to negotiate a trade agreement for the elimination or reduction of any duty imposed by the United States on any article about which an affirmative determination is made pursuant to subparagraph (A).

"'(C) Notwithstanding the provisions of subparagraph (B), not prior to five years after entering into a trade agreement pursuant to the provisions of this subsection, the President may request of the International Trade Commission a reveiw of the affirmative determinations made pursuant to the provisions of subparagraph (A). If, at that time, the International Trade Commission makes a negative determination as to an article so reviewed, the prohibitions in subparagraph (B) shall not apply to such article. If, at that time, the International Trade Commission makes an affirmative determination as to an article so reveiwed, the prohibitions is subparagraph (B) shall remain in effect as to such article.'.".

Mr. WILSON. Mr. President, it may not be necessary to offer this amendment. What I really wish to do is to express my concern and the concern of many of my colleagues regarding the negotiations with the Government of Israel on the establishment of a free trade agreement.

I am a supporter of the agreement, and so testified before the Finance Committee. However, I do have some reservation over aspects of the agreement affecting commodities which the U.S. International Trade Commission has found to be import sensitive.

It is my understanding that the U.S. Trade Representative has expressed the U.S. position that articles which the ITC has found to be import sensitive will not be subject to duty-free import for 5 years. At the end of the 5 years, the ITC will review these articles to determine if they remain import sensitive. In the mind of this Senator, and others, it is not clear as to what will then happen regarding those articles which are found to still be import sensitive.

It does not make sense to eliminate tariffs on goods, when that elimination will, according to the ITC, have significant adverse economic impact on the U.S. industries producing those goods. According to ITC standards, "significant adverse impact" means that U.S. output will significantly decline, producers will go out of business, and a significant proportion of the workers producing the goods will be left unemployed.

Mr. President, as I have said, I support a free-trade agreement with Israel, but that bill should not be one that will almost immediately occasion the need for relief through filing under section 201 of the Trade Act by U.S. industries which have been found by the ITC to be import sensitive. The agreement will benefit both countries, but only if we can take care to assure that any burden occasioned by the bill shall not fall on any one group of people or industries.

It is my position that the ITC should have continuing review responsibility, at 5-year intervals, over articles which are likely to be affected by a free-trade agreement. Should the ITC make a finding that goods were no longer import sensitive, the President would have the authority to negotiate duty reductions on them. However, if the ITC found continued sensitivity, the President would have no such authority.

Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, if the Senator from California will yield, I should like to express my full support for the position he is taking. We must proceed carefully with regard to any tariff agreement. Certainly industries which are subject to significant adverse economic impact from increased imports of the goods they produce should not be subjected to the elimination of duties on those goods. I have in mind in this case, for example, certain agricultural products and bromine chemicals. It is my intention, and I will press this point in the Conference Committee for inclusion in the statement of managers, that as long as the ITC finds that certain goods are import sensitive, it would be inappropriate to reduce duties on them.

I would note that any agreement with Israel negotiated under the authority of this bill must be sent to the Congress for legislative action. I would further note that, as the Senator and I have discussed, the authority under which the Israel free-trade agreement will be negotiated will expire in a little more than 3 years. As a result, any reductions in tariffs on import sensitive articles, beyond those initially agreed to, could only be negotiated with new statutory authority. I make these points to make clear that there will be other opportunities for the Senator to press this point, as the need arises, and to assure the Senator that no further tariff reductions would be made without full congressional consideration.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished floor manager for his support on this matter and for his willingness to work with me on an issue that is of great importance to the State of California, as well as many other regions of the country.

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I wish to associate myself with the remarks of my colleague from California with respect to import sensitive crops.

Mr. QUAYLE. Mr. President, I would like to discuss an aspect of the trade bill that deals with import sensitive products. I want to assure the Senator from Missouri that I am an admirer of his accomplishment in compiling a complex piece of legislation and in bringing it to the Senate floor for consideration. I believe that the United States must take thoughtful action to improve its trade situation and that this legislative body must make corresponding adjustments to trade laws and custom rules. This is essential if we want the economy to continue to improve. I specifically endorse the initiatives to reduce barriers to exchange of services and goods between the United States and its already great trading partners, Israel and Canada.

However, I am concerned about the need to develop a clear understanding of what is entailed in the grant of negotiating authority to the office of U.S. Trade Representative [USTR] and what its implications are for certain product categories. It has been said that the United States, Israel, and Canada all will benefit from establishing these free trade agreements [FTA's]. Now while this is true in a general sense and it is true for the vast majority of products, it is not true across the board. The question is, what would be done about those few products that would be suddenly and severely impacted by the establishment of new FTA's.

Already, in the United States, there have been hearings before the International Trade Commission [ITC] and the Interagency Trade Policy Staff Committee [TPSC] relating to the impact of the proposed FTA with Israel. Several industries, including some from the agricultural and natural resource industries in my State, have argued they will suffer "significant adverse impact" if duties on Canadian or Israeli imports are reduced or eliminated precipitously.

It is my understanding, and this is what I would like to have clarified, that, if the ITC finds these claims to be true, that Ambassador Brock has given personal assurances, that products that fall into this narrowly drawn category would receive special and appropriate consideration during negotiations. Furthermore, if need be, that duties could be frozen for up to 5 years and that at the end of this period of time, renegotiations would occur under advice of the ITC about the future status of these products.

It seems to me, if the free-trade area is intended to benefit the economies of all three countries, there is no reason why those few sensitive industries that will be hurt by this arrangement should not have special adjustments made. It also seems to me that it would not be in our best national interest to reach an international agreement for the benefit of our export industries, only to harm other U.S. producers.

The concept that I am asking the Senator to affirm is a narrow one and would include only those industries that have been deemed by the ITC to be sensitive to duty-free Israeli imports. As the Senator from California has pointed out, it is not clear what will happen to products still deemed import sensitive after 5 years. It is my understanding that in this regard the President will seek the advice of the ITC after this period has passed and that we can expect the administration to show the same sensitivity at that future point in time to products that fall into the ITC-defined sensitive category. This is to say that there will continue to be negotiating room regarding import sensitive products. In other words, the U.S. position should neither imply that all products will be duty free at some point in the future nor imply that products identified as sensitive will remain dutiable indefinitely. It says what it means, that problem products, which are expected to be very few, will remain negotiable and that ITC findings will have significant impact on the U.S.'s negotiating positions.

An approach of this sort is consistent with the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade [GATT] which permits free trade areas that cover "substantially all" of the goods traded between countries that have agreed to such an arrangement. This language indicates that the originators of GATT correctly recognized that, if FTA's were negotiated, there could be a need for special considerations related to sensitive products. In this case those products would be identified by the ITC.

My understanding of the proceeding colloquy is that USTR would have the type of authority, reiterated above, under provisions of the bill.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. President, I withdraw the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is withdrawn.

AMENDMENT NO. 4289

(Purpose: To require that bills implementing trade agreements with Israel contain certain provisions)

Mr. WILSON. Mr. President, I have one more amendment, and I send it to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from California [Mr. WILSON] proposes an amendment numbered 4289.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 62 of the matter proposed to be inserted, between lines 18 and 19, insert the following:

(d) Paragraph (1) of section 151(b) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2191(b)(1)) is amended—

(1) by striking out "and" at the end of subparagraph (B),

(2) by striking out the period at the end of subparagraph (C) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and", and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(D) If such agreement is with Israel—

"(i) provisions which requires articles imported from Israel to meet requirements similar to the requirements provided in section 213(a) of the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act, and

"(ii) provisions which establish emergency relief similar to the emergency relief provided in section 213(f) of the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act from articles imported from Israel which are like, or directly competitive with, perishable products produced in the United States, with the term "perishable products" meaning the following—

"(1) vegetables provided for in Schedule 1, Part 8 of the TSUS;

"(2) edible nuts and fruits provided for in Schedule 1, Part 9 of the TSUS;

"(3) fresh cut flowers provided for in items 192.17, 192.18, and 192.21 of the TSUS; and

"(4) concentrated citrus fruit juice provided for in items 165.25 and 165.35 of the TSUS.".

Mr. WILSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the name of the Senator from Florida [Mr. CHILES] be listed as a cosponsor of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. President, my amendment would require that any free trade agreement negotiated with Israel and Canada contain a provision against transshipment. In other words, it would require that any free trade agreement apply only to those articles that are truly the product of the country with which we have negotiated an agreement.

My amendment would also establish an expedited procedure for handling petitions filed under section 201 of the Trade Act of 1974 on certain agricultural products. It would allow for what amounts to an almost immediate remedy when it is determined that a 201 action is likely to be affirmatively decided, pending full investigation by the ITC.

I should note that provisions were added to the bill in the Ways and Means Committee.

Mr. President, the language in my amendment makes reference to provisions contained in the Caribbean Basin Initiative passed only last year. The provisions constitute the proverbial ounce of prevention, in that they would put in place safeguards and expedited remedies should the best laid plans of all those who support the Israel free trade agreement, including this Senator, go awry.

Due to the limited time we have to deal with the trade bill on the floor of the Senate, I will not take the time to expand on my comments. I will simply say that the reasons underlying my amendment are well known and were fully explored during consideration of the CBI.

It is my understanding that this amendment is agreeable to the manager on this side of the aisle, and I would hope that it can be quickly agreed to.

Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, I thank the Senator for his comments and state that the Senator has correctly set out the situation. I fully support his insistence that tight rules of origin ensure that only products of Israel receive the benefits of this agreement. I understand that Ambassador Brock is making a special point of transshipment in his discussions with the Israelis.

I also believe that due to the nature of certain agricultural production in the United States, it makes a good deal of sense to have a special procedure for handling 201 cases filed by farmers affected by a surge in imports under the Israel free trade agreement.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. President, I thank my colleague, the distinguished manager of the bill, for his favorable comments on my amendment, and I move its adoption.

This amendment has been cleared on both sides.

Mr. CHILES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WILSON. I yield to the Senator from Florida.

Mr. CHILES. Mr. President, the amendment I am offering with Senator WILSON simply seeks to add assurances that country of origin and emergency relief provisions similar to those in the Caribbean Basin Initiative are included in this bill. I understand such provisions were added to the recently considered House companion measure.

These provisions are important because of the sensitivity and volatility of perishable product prices to import competition. Citrus provides a good example of this. The citrus industry was greatly concerned about the possibility of transshipment of Brazilian citrus products through the Caribbean countries when we considered CBI. Their concern remains in regard to this bill because the significant tariff reductions available to the beneficiary countries could make it attractive to try and transship third-party citrus products through Israel. Such transshipments would provide unintended benefits to third-party countries and could have an extremely destabilizing effect on the domestic market. I believe to safeguard against this possibility it is essential to make sure now that we include language that guarantees the imports we receive from Israel will be substantially theirs and not a transshipment of someone else's products.

I believe it is also important to have a fast track emergency relief provision in this bill. This will provide sensitive perishable products the quick, efficient relief they need if they find they are being materially hurt by new import competition from a beneficiary country. Under existing trade remedies it can take many months or even years to get relief. Perishable products need access to a faster track. Again, citrus may serve as an example since duty free treatment on frozen concentrated orange juice imports would result in a direct savings to the importer of almost $487 per metric ton. Such a pricing change could have a significant impact on this highly sensitive commodity. Therefore, I believe it is important to make sure fast track relief is available to deal with any situation causing real harm.

Mr. President, I believe the country of origin and fast track relief provisions make this a better bill and will help guarantee producers of perishable products they will not be adversely affected by it. I urge the adoption of this amendment.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the distinguished Senator from Texas, the ranking minority member of the committee, Mr. BENTSEN, be added as a coauthor to this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. TRIBLE). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, the amendment of the Senators from California and Florida is acceptable. I congratulate him on the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from California.

The amendment (No. 4289) was agreed to.

Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 4290

Mr. WILSON. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from California [Mr. WILSON] for himself and Mr. CRANSTON proposes an amendment numbered 4290.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the end of the matter proposed to be inserted, add the following:

TITLE VI—WINE TRADE

SEC. 601. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Wine Equity and Export Expansion Act of 1984".

SEC. 602. CONGRESSIONAL FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) there is a substantial imbalance in international wine trade resulting, in part, from the relative accessibility enjoyed by foreign wines to the United States market while the United States wine industry faces restrictive tariff and nontariff barriers in virtually every existing or potential foreign market;

(2) the restricted access to foreign markets and the continued low prices for United States wine and grape products adversely affect the economic position of our Nation's winemakers and grape growers, as well as all other domestic sectors that depend upon wine production;

(3) the competitive position of United States wine in international trade has been weakened by foreign trade practices, high domestic interest rates, and unfavorable foreign exchange rates;

(4) wine consumption per capita is very low in many major non-wine producing markets and the demand potential for United States wine is significant; and

(5) the United States winemaking industry has the capacity and the ability to export substantial volumes of wine and an increase in United States wine exports will create new jobs, improve this Nation's balance of trade, and otherwise strengthen the national economy.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this title are—

(1) to provide wine consumers with the greatest possible choice of wines from wine-producing countries;

(2) to encourage the initiation of an export promotion program to develop, maintain, and expand foreign markets for United States wine; and

(3) to achieve greater access to foreign markets for United States wine and grape products through the reduction or elimination of tariff barriers and nontariff barriers to (or other distortions of) trade in wine.

SEC. 603. DEFINITIONS.

For purposes of this title—

(1) The term "Committees" means the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Finance of the Senate.

(2) the term "grape product" means grapes and any product (other than wine) made from grapes, including, but not limited to, raisins and grape juice, whether or not concentrated.

(3) The term "major wine trading country" means any foreign country, or group of foreign countries, designated as such under section 604.

(4) The phrase "nontariff barriers to (or other distortion of)", in the context of trade in United States wine, includes any measure implemented by the government of a major wine trading country that either gives a competitive advantage to the wine industry of that country or restricts the importation of United States wine into that country.

(5) The term "Trade Representative" means the United States Trade Representative.

(6) The term "United States wine" means wine produced within the customs territory of the United States.

(7) The term "wine" means any fermented alcoholic beverage that—

(A) is made from grapes or other fruit;

(B) contains not less than 0.5 percent alcohol by volume and not more than 24 percent alcohol by volume, including all dilutions and mixtures thereof by whatever process produced; and

(C) is for nonindustrial use.

SEC. 604. DESIGNATION OF MAJOR WINE TRADING COUNTRIES.

(a) DESIGNATION OF COUNTRIES.—The Trade Representative shall designate as a major wine trading country each foreign country, or group of foreign countries represented as an economic union, that, in the judgment of the Trade Representative—

(1) is a potential significant market for United States wine; and

(2) maintains tariff barriers or nontariff barriers to (or other distortions of) trade in United States wine.

(b) DESIGNATION FACTORS.—In deciding, for purposes of subsection (a)(2), whether a foreign country or group of countries maintains nontariff barriers to (or other distortions of) trade in United States wine, the Trade Representative shall take into account—

(1) the review and report required under section 854(a) of the Trade Agreements Act of 1979 (19 U.S.C. 2135 note);

(2) such relevant actions that may have been taken by that country or group since that review was conducted; and

(3) such information as may be submitted under section 606 by representatives of the wine and grape products industries in the United States, as well as other sources.

SEC. 605. ACTIONS TO REDUCE OR ELIMINATE TARIFF AND NONTARIFF BARRIERS AFFECTING UNITED STATES WINE.

(a) TRADE REPRESENTATIVE CONSULTATIONS.—The President shall direct the Trade Representative to enter into consultations with each major wine trading country to seek a reduction or elimination of that country's tariff barriers and nontariff barriers to (or other distortions of) trade in United States wine.

(b) PRESIDENTIAL REPORTS.—(1) the President shall notify each of the Committees regarding the extent and effect of the efforts undertaken since the submission of the report required under section 854(a) of the Trade Agreements Act of 1979, and during the 12-month period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act, to expand opportunities in each major wine trading country for exports of United States wine. Such notification, which shall be in the form of a separate written report (that must be submitted within 30 days after the close of that 12-month period) for each major wine trading country, shall include—

(A) a description of each act, policy, and practice (and of its legal basis and operation) in that country that constitutes a tariff barrier or nontariff barrier to (or other distortion of) trade in United States wine (and that description shall be based upon an updating of the report that was submitted to the Congress under section 854(a) of the Trade Agreements Act of 1979);

(B) an assessment of the extent to which each such act, policy, or practice is subject to international agreements to which the United States is a party;

(C) information with respect to any action taken, or proposed to be taken, under existing authority to eliminate or reduce each such act, policy, or practice, including, but not limited to—

(i) any action under the Trade Act of 1974, and

(ii) any negotiation or consultation with any foreign government;

(D) if action referred to in subparagraph (C) was not taken, an explanation of the reasons therefor; and

(E) recommendations to the Congress of any additional legislative authority or other action which the President believes is necessary and appropriate to obtain the elimination or reduction of foreign tariff barriers or nontariff barriers to (or other distortions of) trade in United States wine.

(2) The reports required under paragraph (1) shall be developed and coordinated by the Trade Representative through the interagency trade organization established by section 242(a) of the Trade Expansion Act of 1962.

(c) PRESIDENTIAL ACTION.—If the President, after taking into account information and advice received under subsections (a) and (b), section 606; or from other sources, determines that action is appropriate to respond to any act, policy, or practice of a major wine trading country constitutes a tariff barrier or nontariff barrier to (or other distortion of) trade in United States wine and—

(1) is inconsistent with the provisions of, or otherwise denies benefits to the United States under, any trade agreement; or

(2) is unjustifiable, unreasonable, or discriminatory and burdens or restricts United States commerce;

the President, shall take all appropriate and feasible action under the Trade Act of 1974 to enforce the rights of the United States under any such trade agreement or to obtain the elimination of such act, policy, or practice.

SEC. 606. REQUIRED CONSULTATIONS.

The Trade Representative shall consult with the Committees and with representatives of the wine and grape products industries in the United States—

(1) before identifying tariff barriers and nontariff barriers to (or other distortions of) trade in United States wine and designating major wine trading countries under section 604;

(2) in developing the reports required under section 605(b); and

(3) for purposes of determining whether action by the President is appropriate under any provision of the Trade Act of 1974 with respect to any act, policy, or practice referred to in section 605(b)(1).

SEC. 607. UNITED STATES WINE EXPORT PROMOTION.

In order to develop, maintain, and expand foreign markets for United States wine, the President is encouraged to—

(1) utilize, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985, the authority provided under section 135 of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1982 to make available sufficient funds to initiate, in cooperation with non-governmental trade associations representative of United States wineries, an export promotion program for United States; and

(2) request, for each subsequent fiscal year, an appropriation for such a wine export promotion program that will not be at the expense of any appropriations requested for export promotion programs involving other agriculture commodities.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. President, the amendment offered here today is the result of intense negotiations between the wine industry, other agriculture interests, and governmental officials. In its original version of the Wine Equity Act provided for reciprocal treatment in the wine industry with our trading partners, it had several GATT problems which we concede and it caused some agricultural community members to oppose the bill.

But the version offered here today was offered by Chairman SAM GIBBONS and reported out of his Trade Subcommittee in the House of Representatives and that bill overcomes those problems.

This amended bill has the complete support of the Soybean Association, the National Council on Farmer Cooperatives, as well as organized labor. It utilizes existing U.S. trade laws and directs the President to use them only when he finds unfair trade practices.

The bill is entirely GATT-compatible.

The U.S. Trade Representative and the administration earlier voiced objections and have withdrawn them. The authority given the President by this is purely discretionary. It is in fact existing authority. This really directs attention to the problem.

Mr. President, I move adoption of the amendment.

Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, I have discussed the question of wine equity with the Senator from California over a period of months. I am personally opposed to the concept. The administration is opposed to the concept. Most, if not all, farm groups are opposed to the concept. Many wine growers are opposed to the concept.

But over the period of months, the Senator from California has been very flexible in putting together his proposal and while I personally am not enthusiastic about the idea or even the name "wine equity," I think that the present form of this amendment is one which is not injurious particularly to the interest of the country and, therefore, for the sake of facilitating progress on the bill, I have no objection to adoption of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no further debate on the amendment, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from California.

The amendment (No. 4290) was agreed to.

Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. KENNEDY and Mr. BYRD addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia, the distinguished minority leader, is recognized.

AMENDMENT NO. 4291

(Purpose: To provide for the preservation of the ferroalloy, Industry in the United States)

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I have an amendment which I shall send to the desk shortly.

Mr. President, we are all familiar with the debilitating effects of increased foreign imports on key sectors in our economy. The steel, auto, footwear, and copper industries have been victims of increased foreign products, often sold here with the assistance of subsidies from foreign governments or other unfair trade practices. These are enormous industries. They account for hundreds of thousands of jobs and many billions of dollars in annual sales.

I want to call my colleagues' attention to an industry that is not an enormous industry. It is an American industry that has lost 60 percent of the U.S. market to unfairly priced foreign goods. This industry has sales of less than $1 billion annually; yet, its products are indispensable to the manufacture of everything from aluminum to computer chips. Every kind of specialty metals—including those employed in the aerospace and defense industries—is dependent upon these products. I am speaking of the American ferroalloys industry.

Ferroalloys are a group of metals with broad industrial applications. Chromium alloy products, including ferrochrome, are used in the production of stainless steel, making up about 10 percent of that steel. Chromium is necessary to the production of superalloys for jet aircraft, powerplants, and a host of materials which must resist corrosion and high temperatures. Manganese alloys—the largest group of ferroalloys—are absolutely essential to the production of steel. Without these products to neutralize the sulphur, steel cannot be forged.

Manganese in aluminum gives that metal the increased strength and toughness needed for many of its modern uses from airplane coverings to beverage cans. Silicon alloys are needed to impart steels with qualities needed in electrical products such as transformers and generators.

The American ferroalloy industry has led the world in developing new and marketable products that have changed the way we live, and has given other American industries a competitive edge by supplying the new metals technologies they need to produce advanced aircraft, drilling equipment, and a host of lighter, stronger machinery and parts. The American industry has been the most advanced in the world, pioneering computer-controlled production and cogeneration technologies that permit capture and reuse of heat produced by ferroalloy furnaces. Everyone agrees that the American industry is the most innovative, technologically advanced, and efficient in the world. So how can it be that foreign producers have garnered 60 percent of our own market?

The answer to that question is simple, and it is becoming all too familiar as this country struggles to maintain leadership in the international market. Many foreign ferroalloy producers are developing countries—or Communist countries—that need foreign exchange earnings. The sale of ferroalloy products brings in American dollars, and those countries are willing to take a loss on the cost of production if the result can be counted in currency they can use in the world money market. Moreover, many developing country producers keep obsolete or unproductive plants in operation as a matter of domestic social and economic policy. Even if the plants are not profitable, the people are working, and not on direct government assistance, or out of work and adding to the social unrest. Other foreign producers seek a stable, predictable market, even though they attain this at very low rates of return.

Sellers who engage in this kind of unfair and predatory pricing are not interested in profitability or innovation. They sell high-volume commodity grade ferroalloys and they do not bother investing in research and development into new or improved products. By skimming the most profitable and easiest portion of the market, they are foreclosing the American producers who are trying to develop new products to meet the needs of their customers. Because American producers lose the commodity grade market to foreign suppliers, they lose the profitability necessary to support research and innovation.

Ultimately, subsidized products will force the American producers to stop production altogether. In the past several years, four companies have closed permanently, another is shut down, yet another is in chapter XI, and the remaining 10 firms are operating at much reduced capacity. Of course, this has cost us jobs. The current ferroalloys work force is at less than half its 1979 level.

If unfair competition is the problem, why does not the American industry avail itself of our trade relief laws? It has. The industry continues to seek relief for dumped and subsidized products. But this is a very expensive process, and we are talking about a small market that is very price-sensitive. The countervailing duty remedies are clearly inadequate to the constant flow of foreign products.

To reach the larger issue of the threat that cheap imports present to our national security, the industry filed a petition under section 232 of the Trade Act of 1962. That statute affords relief, as permitted under article XXI of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, when imports of a product undermine the national security of the United States. After more than 1 year's delay, the President rejected the industry's petition on May 10 of this year without a meaningful discussion of the reasons for that refusal.

That brings us to the present, with the near certainty that the industry will continue down the road of involuntary liquidation unless there is some comprehensive remedy. The United States has the lowest tariff structure for ferroalloys of any country in the world. And we are the only significant market that does not maintain a pricing structure to assure the survival of our domestic industry in the face of antifree market practices. In the European Community, the Davignon Plan for steel covers ferroalloys and establishes a minimum fair market price to avoid the destruction of European domestic producers by subsidized imports. The Japanese Government relies on an informal system of dual pricing to achieve the same result. Of the major world markets, only the United States permits unfairly priced competition to disrupt the market and artificially undercut the domestic industry.

My amendment would amend the U.S. Tariff Schedules to accomplish an objective similar to those of the European and Japanese systems. It will impose "breakpoint" duties on imports below a fair market price. This price would be determined by the Secretary of Commerce and would be based on reasonable costs of production in the United States, plus general expenses and profit margin. This remedy addresses the American industries problem by requiring that imports be priced at a fair, free-market level that neutralizes the effects of foreign government subsidies and other export incentives available to foreign producers.

This legislation will have a very minimal effect on the U.S. economy, because the resulting increase in ferroalloy prices will amount to only one sixth of 1 percent of the sales of user industries. Without such action, the involuntary liquidation of this very important industry, which is certainly vital to the national security, will continue with an untold cost to our defense preparedness. Some of the most modern and efficient producers of ferroalloys in the world are located in West Virginia and, may I say parenthetically, in Senator BAKER's State of Tennessee and Senator SASSER's State of Tennessee.

I understand this amendment has been cleared by the committee members of the both sides. Mr. BENTSEN has indicated that it is cleared on this side of the aisle. I believe it is cleared on the other side of the aisle.

I would ask Mr. DANFORTH to respond but at this point, before he does so, I will send the amendment to the desk and ask it be stated by the clerk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from West Virginia [Mr. BYRD] proposes an amendment numbered 4291.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment reads as follows:

On page 11 of the matter proposed to be inserted, between lines 9 and 10, insert the following:

SEC. 126. FERROALLOYS.

(a) Congress hereby finds that—

(1) ferroalloys are products which impart distinctive qualities to steel, especially alloys, iron, and aluminum and are essential to the production of those products;

(2) the economic health and national defense of any modern industrial nation rest on its having a secure supply of ferroalloys, and the United States can assure that supply only if it maintains the capacity to produce a significant portion of its needs domestically;

(3) the domestic ferroalloy industry has suffered from the unremitting pressure of low-priced imports for many years, and consequently it has suffered massive losses and its capacity has dwindled in recent years;

(4) imports have caused this result not because of any superiority—since the American industry is as technologically modern and efficient as any in the world—but rather because of artificial advantages afforded by subsidies, by non-free-market pricing policies, and by other policies of their governments;

(5) the application of existing trade laws has not prevented imports from causing the industry's severe decline;

(6) unless effective import relief is promptly forthcoming, the industry will soon shrink to where it will be able to supply only a small portion of the Nation's needs;

(7) such a result would gravely damage the national security and the economic and international interests of the United States; and

(8) the additional tariffs enacted by this section would preserve the Nation's essential capacity to produce the large volume products high carbon ferromanganese, high carbon ferrochrome, 50 percent ferrosilicon, 75 percent ferrosilicon, silicon metal, and silicomanganese and also chromium metal, a smaller volume product especially crucial to the national security.

(b)(1) Item 606.24 is amended—

(A) by striking out "1.9% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential + 1.9% ad val.", and

(B) by striking out "7.5% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential + 7.5% ad val.".

(2) Item 606.30 is amended—

(A) by striking out "1.6% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential + 1.6% ad val.",

(B) by striking out "1.5% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential + 1.5% ad val.", and

(C) by striking out "10.5% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential + 10.5% ad val.".

(3) Subpart B of part 2 of schedule 6 is amended—

(A) by redesignating items 606.36, 606.37, 606.39, and 606.40 as items 606.38, 606.39, 606.40, and 606.41, respectively, and

(B) by striking out item 606.35 and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"606.35	Containing over 8 percent but not over 30 percent by weight of silicon.	Free	2¢ per lb. on silicon content
	Containing over 30 percent but not over 60 percent by weight of silicon:
606.36	Containing over 2 percent by weight of magnesium.	Free	2¢ per lb. on silicon content
606.37	Other	Fair price differential.	Fair price differential + 2¢ per lb. on silicon content".

(4) Item 606.39 (as redesignated by paragraph (3)(A) of this subsection) is amended—

(A) by striking out "1.6% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential + 1.6% ad val.",

(B) by striking out "1.5% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential + 1.5% ad val.", and

(C) by striking out "11.5% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential + 11.5% ad val.".

(5) Item 606.44 is amended—

(A) by striking out "4.7% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential + 4.7% ad val.",

(B) by striking out "3.9% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential + 3.9% ad val.", and

(C) by striking out "23% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential +23% ad val.",

(6) Item 632.18 is amended—

(A) by striking out "4.2% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential +4.2% ad val.",

(B) by striking out "3.7% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential +3.7% ad val.", and

(C) by striking out "30% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential +30% ad val.",

(7) Item 632.42 is amended—

(A) by striking out "5.3% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential +5.3% ad val.", and

(B) by striking out "21% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential +21% ad val.",

(8) Item 632.86 is amended—

(A) by striking out "9% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential +9% ad val.", and

(B) by striking out "45% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential +45% ad val.".

(C) The headnotes to part 2 of schedule 6 are amended by adding at the end thereof the following new headnote:

"5. (a) For purposes of this part, the term 'fair price differential' means, with respect to any article, the amount equal to the excess, if any, of—

"(i) the fair price of such article, over

"(ii) the duty declared value of such article (including cost, insurance, and freight) at the United States port of entry.

"(b)(i) For purposes of this headnote, the term 'fair price' means, with respect to an article, the sum of—

"(A) the amount determined by the Secretary of Commerce to be the average cost incurred by producers in producing such article in the United States at technologically efficient facilities, plus

"(B) an amount prescribed by the Secretary of Commerce with respect to such article for general expenses and profit.

"(ii) The amount prescribed by the Secretary of Commerce under subdivision (i)(B) shall not be less than the amount determined with respect to such article under section 773(e)(1)(B) of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1677b(e)(1)(B)) at the time such amount is prescribed under subdivision (i)(B).

"(iii) By no later than December 31 of 1984, and of each year thereafter, the Secretary of Commerce shall determine, and publish in the Federal Register, the fair price for each of the following items of this part: 606.24; 606.30; 606.37; 606.39, 606.44; 632.18; 632.42; and 632.86.

"(iv) The fair price determined under subdivision (iii) shall apply during the calendar year that succeeds the calendar year in which such determination is made.".

(d) The provisions of Presidential Proclamation 4707 of December 11, 1979, which would otherwise be applicable to articles entered, or withdrawn from warehouse, for consumption after December 31, 1984, shall not apply with respect to the following items of the Tariff Schedules of the United States: 606.30; 606.37 (as added by subsecton (b)(3)(B) of this section); 606.39 (as redesignated by subsection (b)(3)(A)); 606.44; 632.18; and 632.42.

On page 24 of such matter, between lines 32 and 33, insert the following:

(4) The amendments made by section 126 shall apply to articles entered after December 31, 1984.

Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, I have discussed this matter with Senator BYRD this afternoon. He has made a very persuasive case. I know of no Senator who is more diligent in representing the interests of his constituents than the distinguished minority leader. This amendment is acceptable.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator for his kind words and I thank him for his acceptance of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from West Virginia.

The amendment (No. 4291) was agreed to.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DANFORTH. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

TITLE IV AND THE CITRUS 301 CASE

Mr. GOLDWATER. Mr. President, I had planned to offer an amendment, No. 4207, relative to title IV and citrus. But I am pleased to note that the senior Senator from California [Mr. CRANSTON] succeeded yesterday in winning approval of an amendment on the same subject. As I understand it, his amendment requires the United States, in conducting negotiations to implement title IV, to take fully into account the trade case brought by the United States challenging illegal discriminatory tariff arrangements of the European Community. These preferential duties awarded to U.S. competitors, but denied to our growers, have been very harmful to U.S. citrus exports.

The problem has been with us for over 12 years and it took that long for the U.S. Government to finally bring an official case under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade challenging the present discriminatory preferences as illegal.

In my opinion, title IV of the trade bill, in its original form before the addition of the Cranston amendment, may have interfered with the U.S. presentation of our GATT case. It could have conveyed the impression that we are not serious about it. I say this because Israel has always been one of the major beneficiaries of the illegal European preferences.

In these circumstances, it would have seemed contradictory to confer duty free treatment upon Israeli citrus under title IV at the same time the citrus 301 citrus case is pending before GATT. In that case, the United States is seeking the elimination of tariff preferences which have benefited Israel at the expense of U.S. growers. This contradiction may have detracted from our country's arguments in the GATT case, and after 12 or 13 hard years of efforts to bring this case before GATT, I do not think the Congress should do anything now that may possibly undermine that case. That is why I am especially pleased that the Cranston amendment was adopted yesterday to reaffirm the strong U.S. position against the European Community discriminatory tariffs.

Mr. President, I would point out that Israel is a major producer and exporter of citrus and citrus products. It is true that some citrus orchards are being chopped down in Israel because of declining profits, but even so its citrus production remains a mammoth industry.

Israel is the second largest fresh orange exporter in the world and the second largest exporter of grapefruit. While Israel has not shipped huge quantities of citrus to the United States and Canada in the past, it could do so in the future. In fact, if all Israeli production of sweet oranges were to be shipped to the United States, it would almost equal the entire amount consumed in Canada and the United States.

Until now Israel has targeted the European Community as its primary market. But Spain, another major citrus producer, is about to enter the Common Market. When that happens, most citrus exports from Israel may be redirected to the United States.

Now, I am not asking that we withhold citrus forever from the proposed free trade area with Israel. I am merely explaining why the subject is of interest to the American citrus industry and why I hope the U.S. negotiations will interpret the Cranston amendment to mean that citrus duties will not be reduced or eliminated until the GATT case is decided and satisfactorily resolved.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I support the United States-Israeli free trade area amendment contained in the bill, because I believe this measure will significantly benefit both the United States and Israel, our Nation's stable and reliable democratic ally in the Middle East.

The establishment of a United States-Israeli free trade area will eliminate duties and nontariff barriers on virtually all two-way trade now existing between our two nations. This will serve to expand U.S. trade with Israel, help improve the position of U.S. exporters to Israeli markets relative to their European counterparts, and provide a key ally now in financial straits with some assistance in stabilizing its economic affairs.

It is important to note that currently some 90 percent of Israeli exports to the United States are duty free, either through most-favored-nation status or through the generalized system of preferences. Conversely, only about 50 to 55 percent of American exports to Israel are duty free. Clearly, the establishment of a free trade area will allow American businessmen substantial new benefits in terms of increased access to the Israeli market—a market which, excluding defense imports, now takes in some 8 billion dollars' worth of goods, overall, from other nations.

A free trade area between the United States and Israel will also serve to protect U.S. traders against recent initiatives undertaken by European exporters as a result of a free trade area now being implemented by the European Community and Israel. If a United States-Israeli free trade area is not agreed to, European competitors will enjoy a significant advantage in the Israeli market.

The free trade area arrangement will provide the United States with national security benefits, in addition to these economic gains. By providing Israel with a stable market for Israeli exports by giving Israel an opportunity to expand its trade and improve its balance of payments, we will be strengthening our key regional ally, as we foster bilateral cooperation.

Some criticism of this bill has been heard from the U.S. agricultural producers, who fear that the agreement will open up the U.S. agricultural market to a massive wave of Israeli exports. I have studied this issue and believe these fears are unfounded. Israeli agricultural limits have been nearly attained, and increased production in these areas would seem difficult. Even if productivity were to increase substantially in Israeli agricultural sectors, the percentage of the U.S. market that they would take from domestic producers would be so small as to be of negligible impact, in my view.

The administration has strongly endorsed this measure as it now stands. I urge my colleagues' support for it as well.

UNITED STATES-ISRAEL FREE TRADE AREA

Mr. DENTON. Mr. President, during consideration of H.R. 3398, the Congress has a rare opportunity to act on a provision of the legislation that will help strengthen the economy of one of our strongest allies and at the same time help American exporters. I am referring to the provisions of title IV, which authorize the negotiation of a United States-Israel free trade area [FTA], eliminating the barriers on all goods traded between the two nations.

Israel is taking the courageous step of offering to remove all duties on goods imported from the United States, and in return we will provide that same duty-free access to Israeli exporters. Almost half of United States exports to Israel are now subject to duties, while only 10 percent of Israeli exports to the United States face tariffs. Moreover, Israel's tariff rate is about twice the level of the U.S. tariff rate.

The United States stands to benefit from such a trade arrangement with Israel. If we do not take advantage of this opportunity, however, it is likely that American companies will be edged out of the $8 billion Israeli import market by European firms. Because of a free trade agreement between the European Community [EC] and Israel, which is now being implemented, all EC manufactured goods will enter Israel duty free by 1989. Thus, without a United States-Israel FTA, European goods will become cheaper and more attractive than American products. This process is now occurring, I am told, as the European Community-Israeli tariff cuts are beginning to be implemented. Already, the EC's share of the Israeli import market has significantly increased, from 33.7 percent in 1980 to 40.9 percent in 1983.

American exports mean jobs, and Israel has traditionally been one of the biggest markets for U.S. products. In 1983, Israel bought $1.7 billion worth of civilian goods alone from the United States. This is over $400 million more than we imported from Israel. The goods purchased from our country run the gamut, from grains and soybeans to heavy machinery and transportation equipment. It is in our interest to maintain and even increase this market.

Despite the traditional trade surplus that the United States has had with Israel, the extremely small size of the Israeli economy in comparison with the United States, and the benefits that we stand to gain from the FTA arrangement, various industries and groups in the United States have sought special exemptions from the proposed free trade area. I believe these exemptions are counterproductive.

Some of these groups cite the precedent that they were excluded from the Caribbean Basin Initiative and that, therefore, they should be excluded from this agreement as well. This FTA proposal, however, has a far different purpose and addresses a completely different set of circumstances. Whereas the CBI was a form of foreign assistance—a one-way preference for the products of Caribbean nations—the FTA is a reciprocal program designed to benefit American exporters as much, if not more than, Israeli firms.

I believe, therefore, that the provisions of title IV should be approved without any exemptions for certain product sectors. The danger of allowing one sector to receive an exemption is that other groups might then call for a similar exemption. If there are too many exceptions, the entire concept of a free trade area is undermined and the mutual benefits eroded. Since Israel already receives duty-free treatment for many of its goods, there would be little benefit to Israel to make the considerable concessions she is currently prepared to make to obtain a free trade agreement. I fully support the legislation authorizing the President to negotiate a United States-Israel free trade area. I believe it is in the economic interests of our Nation, and I believe it demonstrates our continuing commitment to and support for Israel.

ILLEGAL SUBSIDIES

Mr. WILSON. Mr. President, I had intended to offer an amendment requiring a study of subsidies by the International Trade Commission of any country with which the President intended to negotiate a free trade agreement. It certainly makes no sense for the United States to eliminate its duty on a particular article if that article is being illegally subsidized. It would only require that a U.S. producer petition the ITC, at his own expense, under our countervailing duty laws, and prove both subsidy and injury.

I will not offer my amendment, because I have been informed by Ambassador Brock, the U.S. Trade Representative, that the U.S. position is to seek elimination of Israeli subsidies with regard to their exports to the United States. Further, that any agreement by the Israelis to phase out subsidies which is not fully implemented would subject the agreement to suspension as would be the case with any violation of the accord.

I also understand from the manager from the bill that it is his understanding that it is improbable that the authority granted by this legislation will be used to negotiate any trade agreements other than Israel and Canada.

I would appreciate hearing the comments of the distinguished manager of the bill, the Senator from Missouri, regarding the subject of subsidies.

Mr. DANFORTH. I want to thank the Senator for his comments and State that the Senator has correctly set out the situation. It is the intention of Ambassador Brock, as I understand it, to oppose Israeli subsidies for goods which it exports to the United States. And, it is, indeed, improbable that any free trade agreement beyond those with Israel and Canada will be negotiated under the authority of this bill.

Mr. WILSON. I want to thank the Senator for his assurances on this matter.

Mr. GORTON. I have a concern about a tariff issue about which I want to ask the distinguished manager of the bill. As the Senator may know, a court case is now pending in which the current Customs Service practice of classifying for tariff schedule purposes tongue and groove or shiplap plywood not as plywood, but rather as building boards, is being challenged. The House of Representatives yesterday passed, in its new tariff bill, a provision which would clarify the intent of Congress that tongue and groove and shiplap are to be treated as plywood—in my view, an eminently reasonable provision.

The intent of the House language, which I support, is not to erect a new protectionist barrier, but merely to make a proper and clarifying revision to the U.S. schedules, which I understand is permissible under GATT. This is a desirable change; one which I think should be made regardless of the pending court case.

As I indicated, the measure is contained in the House bill, so the Senator will probably confront it in Conference. I would hope that he would consider this issue carefully, and not reject the proposal simply because litigation is pending.

Mr. DANFORTH. I am aware of the Senator's concern in this matter. This certainly appears to be a reasonable matter to investigate. I do not necessarily regard objections based on pending litigation as a decisive reason for opposing the provision. I can assure the Senator that I will consider the merits of the proposal sympathetically in conference.

Mr. GORTON. I thank the Senator.

ROUTINE MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I believe it can be announced that there will be no further votes this evening.

I now ask that there be a period for the transaction of routine morning business, during which the two leaders may speak therein as required, and other Senators may speak for not to exceed 2 minutes each, and the time for routine morning business expire no later than 7 p.m.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Saunders, one of his secretaries.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

As in executive session, the Acting President pro tempore laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(The nominations received today are printed at the end of the Senate proceedings.)

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

The following bills and joint resolutions were introduced, read the first and second time by unanimous consent, and referred as indicated:

By Mr. ARMSTRONG:

S. 3008. A bill to recognize the organization known as the Retired Enlisted Association, Inc. to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. HEINZ (for himself and Mr. RANDOLPH):

S. 3009. A bill to authorize appropriations for a 5-year period for training in geriatrics; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

By Mr. NUNN:

S.J. Res. 354. A joint resolution designating the week of January 7 through January 13, 1985, as "National Productivity Improvement Week"; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

SUBMISSION OF CONCURRENT AND SENATE RESOLUTIONS

The following concurrent resolutions and Senate resolutions were read, and referred (or acted upon), as indicated:

By Mr. DODD, from the Committee on Foreign Relations:

S. Res. 447. An original Executive resolution urging the Senate to act on the Genocide Convention prior to adjournment; placed on the Executive Calendar.

By Mr. McCLURE, from the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources:

S. Res. 448. An original resolution waiving section 402(a) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 with respect to the consideration of H.R. 2889; to the Committee on the Budget.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. ARMSTRONG:

S. 3008. A bill to recognize the organization known as the Retired Enlisted Association, Inc.; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

RETIRED ENLISTED ASSOCIATION, INC.

● Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, today I am introducing a bill which would grant a national charter to the Retired Enlisted Association, Inc.

TREA is a not-for-profit retired military veteran's organization that seeks to promote and assist its members professionally and culturally, both locally and nationally, to uphold the Constitution of the United States, to defend the United States from all her enemies, to improve the relationship between the military and civilian populace, and to maintain liaison with the active personnel of the Armed Forces.

Started in my home State of Colorado, TREA has gained some 26,000 members from all 50 States, Guam, the Virgin Islands, Puerto Rico, and overseas. Its members are made up of retired enlisted personnel from the U.S. Armed Forces. In a practical sense, TREA serves its members by lobbying Congress to protect the rights and benefits of retired military personnel and to alert members to legislation that affects them. It also promotes national security objectives and support for our Armed Forces.

The members of TREA are those men and women who answered the call of their country when they were needed, and who served with honor, dedication and personal sacrifice. It is appropriate that we in Congress gratefully acknowledge the service they have given to this great country.

Therefore, I urge you to join me in cosponsoring this bill to charter TREA so that it may further its work on behalf of enlisted retirees, and that Congress will act on it expeditiously.

Mr. President, I ask unaimous consent that the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 3008

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

CHARTER

SECTION 1. The Retired Enlisted Association, Inc., organized and incorporated under the laws of the State of Colorado, is hereby recognized as such and is granted a charter.

POWERS

SEC. 2. The Retired Enlisted Association, Inc. (hereinafter referred to as the "corporation") shall have only those powers granted to it through its bylaws and articles of incorporation filed in the State or States which it is incorporated and subject to the laws of such State or States.

OBJECTS AND PURPOSES OF CORPORATION

SEC. 3. The objects and purposes for which the corporation is organized shall be those provided in its articles of incorporation.

SERVICE OF PROCESS

SEC. 4. With respect to service of process, the corporation shall comply with the laws of the States in which it is incorporated and those States in which it carries on its activities in furtherance of its corporation purposes.

MEMBERSHIP

SEC. 5. Eligibility for membership in the corporation and the rights and privileges of members shall, except as provided in this Act, be as provided in the constitution and bylaws of the corporation, and terms of membership and requirements for holding office within the corporation shall not be discriminatory on the basis of race, color, religion, or national origin.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS; COMPOSITION; RESPONSIBILITIES

SEC. 6. The board of directors of the corporation and the responsibilities thereof shall be as provided in the articles of incorporation of the corporation and in conformity with the laws of the State or States in which it is incorporated.

OFFICERS OF CORPORATION

SEC. 7. The officers of the corporation, and the election of such officers shall be as is provided in the articles of incorporation of the corporation and in conformity with the laws of the State or States wherein it is incorporated.

RESTRICTIONS

SEC. 8. (a) No part of the income or assets of the corporation shall insure to any member, officer, or director of the corporation or be distributed to any such person during the life of this charter. Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to prevent the payment of reasonable compensation to the officers of the corporation or reimbursement for actual necessary expenses in amounts approved by the board of directors.

(b) The corporation shall not make any loan to any officer, director, or employee of the corporation.

(c) The corporation and any officer and director of the corporation, acting as such officer or director, shall not contribute to, support, or otherwise participate in any political activity or in any manner attempt to influence legislaiton.

(d) The corporation shall have no power to issue any shares of stock nor to declare or pay any dividends.

(e) The corporation shall not claim congressional approval or Federal Government authority for any of its activities.

(f) The corporation shall retain and maintain its status as a corporation organized and incorporated under the laws of the State or States wherein it is incorporated.

LIABILITY

SEC. 9. The corporation shall be liable for the acts of its officers and agents when acting within the scope of their authority.

BOOKS AND RECORDS; INSPECTION

SEC. 10. The corporation shall keep correct and complete books and records of account and shall keep minutes of any proceeding of the corporation involving any of its members, the board of directors. The corporation shall keep at its principal office a record of the names and addresses of all members having the right to vote. All books and records of such corporation may be inspected by any member having the right to vote, or by any agent or attorney of such member, for any proper purpose, at any reasonable time. Nothing in this section shall be construed to contravene any applicable State law.

AUDIT OF FINANCIAL TRANSACTIONS

SEC. 11. The first section of the Act entitled "An Act to provide for audit of accounts of private corporations established under Federal law", approved August 30, 1964 (36 U.S.C. 1101), is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(66) The Retired Enlisted Association, Inc.

ANNUAL REPORT

SEC. 12. The corporation shall report annually to the Congress concerning the activities of the corporation during the preceding fiscal year. Such annual report shall be submitted at the same time as is the report of the audit required by section 11 of this Act. The report shall not be printed as a public document.

RESERVATION OF RIGHT TO AMEND OR REPEAL CHARTER

SEC. 13. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this Act is expressly reserved to the Congress.

DEFINITION OF "STATE"

SEC. 14. For purposes of this Act, the term "State" includes the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and the territories and possessions of the United States.

TAX-EXEMPT STATUS

SEC. 15. The corporation shall maintain its status as an organization exempt from taxation as provided in the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. If the corporation fails to maintain such status, the charter granted hereby shall expire.

TERMINATION

SEC. 16. If the corporation shall fail to comply with any of the restrictions or provisions of this Act the charter granted hereby shall expire.●

By Mr. HEINZ (for himself and Mr. RANDOLPH):

S. 3009. A bill to authorize appropriations for a 5-year period for training in geriatrics; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

GERIATRIC MANPOWER ACT

● Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, for many years now the Special Committee on Aging and other congressional committees have received testimony expressing grave concern about the ability of physicians and other health care professionals to care for and manage the health problems of older Americans. Earlier this year, we received firm evidence concerning this problem when the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services issued its report on education and training in geriatrics and gerontology. This report, the product of the combined efforts of many Federal agencies with an interest in these problems, confirms that there is an enormous shortage of health personnel who are trained in geriatrics and gerontology to meet the needs of a burgeoning elderly population.

Mr. President, the problems that we already experience in caring for older Americans will reach crisis proportions with the unprecedented growth of the elderly population. By 1990, the population aged 65 and older will be 25-percent greater than it was in 1980. This group will grow yet another 10 percent by the turn of the century. This sudden growth will place heavy demands on hospital, long-term care and community services. We are unable to meet the health needs of older Americans today and the situation will be much worse in the years to come.

As chairman of the Special Committee on Aging, I firmly believe that we cannot afford to wait any longer to set forth an agenda to ensure quality health care for all older Americans.

Today, I am introducing comprehensive legislation to improve the adequacy of Federal support for geriatric training and education programs. This increase in funds will supplement existing programs within the Administration on Aging, the Health Resources and Services Administration, the National Institute on Aging, and the National Institute of Mental Health. These agencies are already contributing in a number of ways to the education and training of geriatric specialists. But, as the HHS report acknowledges, the present level of effort satisfies only a small portion of the demand.

A few facts will illustrate what I believe to be the inadequacy of geriatric medical training. For one thing, we have 127 medical schools in this country, but only 15 of these schools require their students to take courses in geriatric care. And while these 127 schools are affiliated with 417 teaching hospitals, only 6—I repeat, only 6 of 127—are affiliated with teaching nursing homes. As another indicator, in a 1981 survey of physicians, fewer than 700 out of 480,000 physicians claimed to have any expertise in geriatric medicine.

What does this means for older patients? In my home State of Pennsylvania, according to a recent survey, three out of five physicians know very little about the specific effect of prescription drugs on their elderly patients. Tragically, we know that the lack of geriatric training can lead to drug misuse, misdiagnosis and even death.

All of these figures add up to one untenable conclusion: Physicians are simply ill-prepared to provide the kind of specialized care that the graying of America needs. Unfortunately, the same holds true for other nonphysician health professionals. The HHS report summarized recent studies that estimate the personnel needed to provide critical services to the aging in future years. Based on these studies, HHS projects the following personnel needs by the year 1990:

A more than tenfold increase in geriatric physicians, from 700 today to 8,000 in 1900.

A fivefold increase in geriatric medicine faculty, from 275 to 1,350.

A doubling of registered nurses with at least some training in geriatrics, from an estimated 77,000 to 150,000.

A substantial increase in geriatric nurse faculty; 750 nurse faculty are needed for general nursing courses and 450 are needed for psychiatric nursing in geriatrics.

A sixfold increase in geriatric dentistry faculty, from a mere 20 to 120.

A doubling of geriatric community health nurses, from 53,000 to 106,000.

A substantial increase in geriatric social workers; at present only about 6 percent of 50,000 practicing social workers have training in gerontology.

A doubling of biomedical, behavioral, and social scientists by 1990, from 1,700 to 2,600.

An enormous increase in social gerontologists and gerontological aides; by the year 2000, as many as 900,000 will be needed.

A tenfold increase in occupational therapist faculty, from 10 to 108.

As you can see Mr. President, there is a critically short supply of personnel needed to care for our aging population. Right now, we don't have sufficient faculty within health professional schools to teach professionals or even retrain people and to prepare researchers on aging and the aged. We don't even have enough established programs, courses and curriculum needed to extend knowledge and skills concerning the aging process and the delivery of services to the aged. Based on these severe deficiencies, I have developed a bill which will bring training and education allotments to a level which will take us a long way toward filling these gaps. My bill will authorize a substantial increase in appropriations over a 5-year period to get this major Federal initiative underway.

In sum, $227 million in additional funding authorized by this legislation will triple our present level of manpower and training effort.

This legislation will give enhanced support to programs under the Health Resources and Services Administration, which prepares doctors, dentists, and nurses to provide services, especially primary care services, to elderly Americans. Over a 5-year period, HRSA would receive an additional $35 million, divided among the variety of professional training programs on the basis of past allocation.

The Administration on Aging will receive a substantial increase to support the long-term care gerontology centers. These centers help to develop the continuum of care that emphasizes the provision of community based care for older persons. This bill will also make additional funds available to AOA for other professional development and in-service training programs.

The training and recruitment of more teachers and professionals with special competence in the field of aging is a step in the right direction; but this alone is not enough. Only through intensive research initiatives can we begin to learn to prevent, cure, and treat the devastating diseases that affect the elderly. My bill will encourage interest in aging-related research and will increase funds to train professional researchers.

The current allocation of Federal dollars to aging research is shockingly limited. Estimates show that aging ranks at the very bottom in outlays for specific areas—accounting for only 1 percent of total Federal research expenditures. The elderly now constitute 11 percent of the population and 30 percent of health care dollars are expended on the elderly. According to the Institute of Medicine, there is almost a thousandfold difference between estimated expenditures for research in aging—$42 million—and the outlay for health services for the aged—$41 billion. I believe that an investment in aging-related research today will reap dividends and budget savings in the future. To accomplish the needed research, however, we will need a much larger pool of trained researchers.

The National Institute on Aging currently supports research training and career development in biomedical, behavioral and clinical fields. In 1984, however, an estimated appropriation of $6.8 million provided support for only 50 new research trainees and 20 new faculty positions. This is less than 10 percent of the projected need. This act would increase these funds tenfold by 1990 to foster research and careers in the field of aging. Likewise, my legislation would give greatly needed support to the National Institute of Mental Health for both research and clinically oriented training in geriatrics and gerontology.

As we expand our research efforts in aging, Mr. President, I would hope that we might also pay closer attention to the procedures for allocating research dollars. Historically, we have relied almost solely on a peer review system by which scientists review and evaluate each others proposals as the main determinant of funding decisions. This has proven to be successful in many areas and has produced some spectacular results. To complement this peer system, however, we need to enlarge our directed research efforts. Directed research projects can grow out of the community-based needs of people, from clinicians and practitioners who are in daily contact with patients and from those who recognize the fiscal and political implications of specific diseases and social problems. I would hope that the directors of each of the institutes addressed by this bill would develop plans for expanding their directed research efforts.

Mr. President, I am acutely aware of the very real pressure felt by this Congress to decrease Federal expenditures, but my better judgment in this case dictates that action is required now before it is too late. Everything we know tells us that there will be a greatly increased demand for persons trained and prepared to care for the growing elderly population. We want that care to be good. I urge my colleagues to join me in addressing the needs of present and future generations of older Americans.

Mr. President, I ask that the text of my legislation be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 3009

Be it enacted by the Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "Geriatric Manpower Act of 1984".

FINDINGS AND PURPOSE

SEC. 2 (a) The Congress finds and declares that—

(1) the population age 65 and over is growing faster than any other age group. The elderly will increase by 10 million between 1980 and the year 2000, with the largest increase occurring among persons age 85 and older;

(2) this unprecedented growth will place heavy demands on hospital, long-term care and community services. Unless we act, the problems that we experience today in providing appropriate care for older Americans will reach crisis proportions in the future.

(3) according to the 1984 "Report on Education and Training in Geriatrics and Gerontology" prepared by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, there is an enormous shortage of personnel trained in geriatrics and gerontology to meet the needs of this burgeoning elderly population. Studies summarized in the report, project the following personnel needs:

A more than ten-fold increase in geriatric physicians, from 700 today to 8,000 in 1990; a five-fold increase in geriatric medicine faculty, from 275 to 1,350; a doubling of registered nurses with at least some training in geriatrics, from 77,000 to 150,000; a substantial increase in geriatric nurse faculty—750 nurse faculty are needed for general nursing courses and 450 are needed for psychiatric nursing in geriatrics; a six-fold increase in geriatric dentistry faculty, from 20 to 120; a doubling of geriatric community health nurses, from 53,000 to 106,000; a substantial increase in geriatric social work faculty members—1,000 general social work faculty and 450 faculty with expertise in mental health problems of the aged will be needed; a substantial increase in geriatric social workers; a survey among 50,000 trained social workers found that only 5 percent indicated services to the elderly as their primary field of interest; a doubling of biomedical, behavioral and social scientists—by 1990, between 1,700 and 2,600 will be needed; an enormous increase in social gerontologists and gerontological aids—by the year 2000, as many as 900,000 will be needed; a ten-fold increase in occupational therapist faculty will be needed to train therapists to work with the elderly, from 10 to 108.

(4) according to the 1978 Institute of Medicine Report, the potential areas of research in aging greatly exceed the pool of competent researchers and funds for training and researchers in aging are disproportionately low;

(5) by appropriating more resources for training, education and research in geriatrics and gerontology, we can better diagnose, treat and care for older Americans in the future.

SEC. 2(b) It is the purpose of this bill, therefore, to—

(1) authorize an increase in appropriations for a five-year period for training and education in geriatrics and gerontology. The increased appropriations will supplement existing programs within the Administration on Aging, the Health Resources and Services Administration, the National Institute on Aging, and the National Institute of Mental Health.

INTERNAL MEDICINE

SEC. 3. Section 784(b) of the Public Health Service Act is amended—

(1) by striking out "and" after "1983,";

(2) by inserting before the period a comma and "$19,500,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1986, $21,500,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1987, $22,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1988, $22,500,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1989, and $23,500,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990"; and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "Of the amounts appropriated to carry out this section—

"(1) $1,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1986,

"(2) $1,200,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1987,

"(3) $1,400,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1988,

"(4) $1,600,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1989, and

"(5) $1,800,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, shall be available for grants and contracts for programs, traineeships, and fellowships which provide specialized training in geriatric medicine.".

FAMILY MEDICINE

SEC. 4. Section 786(c) of the Public Health Service Act is amended—

(1) by striking out "and" after "1983," in the first sentence;

(2) by inserting before the period in the first sentence a comma and "$37,500,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1986, $39,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1987, $41,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1988, $43,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1989, and $45,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990"; and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "Of the amounts appropriated to carry out this section—

"(1) $2,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1986,

"(2) $2,400,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1987,

"(3) $2,800,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1988,

"(4) $3,200,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1989, and

"(5) $3,600,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, shall be available for grants and contracts under subsection (a) for programs, traineeships, and fellowships which provide specialized training in geriatric medicine.".

SPECIAL PROJECTS

SEC. 5. Section 788(f) of the Public Health Service Act is amended—

(1) by striking out "and" after "1983;";

(2) by inserting before the period a semicolon and "$6,500,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1986; "$7,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1987; "$7,500,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1988; "$8,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1989; and $8,500,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990"; and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "Of the amounts appropriated to carry out this section—

"(1) $35,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1986;

"(2) $42,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1987;

"(3) $49,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1988;

"(4) $56,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1989; and

"(5) $63,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, shall be available for grants and contracts under subsection (d).".

ADVANCED NURSE TRAINING

SEC. 6. Section 821(b) of the Public Health Service Act is amended—

(1) by striking out "and" after "1983,";

(2) by inserting before the period a comma and "$18,500,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1986, $19,500,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1987, $20,500,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1988, $21,500,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1989, and $22,500,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990"; and

"(3) by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "Of the amounts appropriated to carry out this section—

NATIONAL INSTITUTE ON AGING

SEC. 8. Part H of title IV of the Public Health Service Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR TRAINING

"SEC. 465. To carry out training and instruction activities and traineeships and fellowships under this part, there are authorized to be appropriated $10,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1986, $13,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1987, $14,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1988, $15,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1989, and $16,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990.".

MENTAL HEALTH

SEC. 9. Section 303 of the Public Health Service Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(e) For training, instruction, and traineeships under subsection (a)(1) relating to the mental health problems and illnesses of the elderly and the care, treatment, and rehabilitation of mentally ill elderly individuals, there are authorized to be appropriated $5,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1986, $7,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1987, $8,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1988, $9,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1989, and $11,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990.".

ADMINISTRATION ON AGING

SEC. 10. (a) Section 431(a) of the Older Americans Act of 1965 is amended—

(1) by striking out "and" after "1983,";

(2) by inserting before the period a comma and "$30,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1986, $32,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1987, $34,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1988, $36,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1989, and $38,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990"; and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "Of the amounts appropriated under this section—

"(1) $9,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1986,

"(2) $13,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1987,

"(3) $17,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1988,

"(4) $21,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1989,

"(5) $24,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, shall be available for training and instruction activities under parts A and B of this title.".●

By Mr. NUNN:

S.J. Res. 354. Joint resolution designating the week of January 7 through January 13, 1985, as "National Productivity Improvement Week"; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

NATIONAL PRODUCTIVITY IMPROVEMENT WEEK

● Mr. NUNN. Mr. President, for several years it has been my pleasure to introduce a Senate resolution designating a week as "National Productivity Improvement Week." Because one of the most important issues facing our Nation is the urgent need to gain a better understanding of the crippling effect of declining or stagnating productivity on the economic health of the United States, I am pleased once again to offer this resolution on behalf of the American Institute of Industrial Engineers. This resolution calls on the President of the United States to proclaim January 7 through January 13, 1985, as "National Productivity Improvement Week" for 1985.

Lagging productivity during the past decade has finally shown an upturn. For the second quarter of 1984, America's nonfarm productivity grew at an annual rate of 4.7 percent. It is very important that American productivity continues to increase. When there is an increase in wages and salaries without an accompanying increase in productivity, the result is more dollars chasing fewer goods and services. This is one of the root causes of inflation. Therefore, it is extremely important that we recognize the need to continually increase productivity in order to help combat the reemergence of inflation.

Many have joined in the efforts to make citizens more aware of productivity's vital role and this may have helped the recent turnaround. So may have the fact that countries blessed with far fewer resources were showing consistently higher levels of productivity gains using methods originated in the United States and imported to good advantage. Over a period of years in this adverse direction, the overseas shift in genius has resulted in a serious unbalance in the international marketplace.

Productivity is something everyone needs to understand. Everyone has a stake in the level of productivity where they work. What's the individual's personal stake? For one thing, the higher the level of productivity, the more satisfying job one has. This satisfaction translates into monetary rewards as well as how a person generally feels about his or her work environment.

Let's look at what productivity really is. Simplified, productivity is a measured relationship between the output of goods and services, and the amount of investment it took to create those goods and services. That investment not only includes cost of labor but also the cost of energy, raw materials, and equipment. When an organization produces more from a given investment, then the rate of productivity goes up. When the output is less from the same investment, productivity goes down.

As a result of higher levels of output for a given investment, an enterprise is better able to sell its goods or services because a more competitive price is allowed. This keeps jobs thriving and makes better pay possible. Just as importantly, by giving the consumer of the goods and services more value for a given price, improved productivity fights inflation.

Even within governmental units or nonprofit associations, productivity improvement contributes to the overall well-being of those inside such organizations, because those outside give their votes and financial support ultimately to those who utilize resources soundly.

Quantity hasn't been the only consideration in the movement by employers and employees to rejuvenate their cooperative spirit toward a better productivity record. Quality is a factor just as important. In fact, the modern consumer's demand for quality usually has a higher priority than simply a lower price tag.

Productivity and quality—the two work together. Most jobs today are interdependent. While each individual can contribute to productivity improvement, even greater results come when an entire work force conscientiously applies the concept.

Productivity awareness can make a tremendous difference to all types of organizations—in industry, business, and government. Throughout the month of January, the Institute of Industrial Engineers will conduct its sixth consecutive annual productivity improvement awareness campaign as a public information service, and the Nation's media will join in the public information crusade. In fact, the National Association of Broadcasters has established its own Broadcasting Industry Council to Improve American Productivity, and literally thousands of radio and television messages are pledged by the stations urging our citizens to emphasize productivity improvement in their workplaces.

"Productivity and Quality Work Together" is the theme for the 1985 campaign. Sharing a national enthusiasm on this subject can help spread the productivity fever. And when everybody participates, our work environment as well as our overall quality of life will improve.

I am pleased that National Productivity Improvement Week was first recognized by Congress and the President last year, and I once again ask that you join me in cosponsoring a resolution designating "National Productivity Improvement Week" during the week of January 7 to 13, 1985.●

Mr. DODD from the Committee on Foreign Relations reported the following original executive resolution; which was placed on the Executive Calendar:

S. RES. 447 (EXECUTIVE)

Resolved, That the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations hereby urges the Senate Leadership to proceed immediately to the consideration of the Genocide Convention (Ex. O, 81-1) and seek to complete action on it prior to adjournment.

SENATE RESOLUTION 448—WAIVING THE CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET ACT WITH RESPECT TO THE CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 2889

By Mr. McCLURE, from the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, reported the following original resolution; which was referred to the Committee on the Budget:

S. RES. 448

Resolved, That pursuant to section 402(c) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, the provisions of section 402(a) of such Act are waived with respect to the consideration of H.R. 2889, to amend the National Historic Preservation Act, and for other purposes. H.R. 2889, as reported, authorizes the enactment of new budget authority which would first become available in fiscal year 1985.

The waiver of section 402(a) of such Act is necessary to permit congressional consideration of H.R. 2889. Such bill was not reported on or before May 25, 1984, as required by section 402(a) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 for such authorizations.

AMENDMENTS SUBMITTED

OMNIBUS TRADE ACT

GORTON (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 4276

(Ordered to lie on the table.)

Mr. GORTON (for himself, Mr. EVANS, Mr. ROTH, Mr. HEINZ, Mr. ANDREWS, Mr. TRIBLE, Mr. BOSCHWITZ, and Mr. DENTON) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by them to the bill (H.R. 3398) to change the tariff treatment with respect to certain articles, and for other purposes; as follows:

At the appropriate place insert the following:

SEC. 208. ARTICLES RETURNED FROM SPACE.

(a) Headnote 5 of the general headnotes of the Tariff Schedules of the United States (19 U.S.C. 1202) is amended—

(A) by striking out "media; and" in subdivision (e) and inserting in lieu thereof "media,";

(B) by adding after subdivision (e) the following new subdivision:

"(f) articles returned from space within the purview of section 484a of this Act; and"; and

(C) by redesignating subdivision (f) as subdivision (g).

(b) Part III of title IV of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1481 et seq.) is amended by adding the following new section:

"SEC. 484a. ARTICLES RETURNED FROM SPACE NOT TO BE CONSTRUED AS IMPORTATION.

"The return of articles from space shall not be considered an importation, and an entry of such articles shall not be required, if:

"(1) such articles were previously launched into space from the customs territory of the United States aboard a spacecraft operated by, or under the control of, United States persons and owned—

"(A) wholly by United States persons, or

"(B) in substantial part by United States persons, or

"(C) by the United States;

"(2) such articles were maintained or utilized while in space solely on board such spacecraft or aboard another spacecraft which meets the requirements of paragraph (1) (A) through (C) of this section; and

"(3) such articles were returned to the customs territory directly from space aboard such spacecraft or aboard another spacecraft which meets the requirements of paragraph (1) (A) through (C) of this section;

without regard to whether such articles have been advanced in value or improved in condition by any process or manufacture or other means while in space.".

(c) The amendments made by this section shall apply with respect to articles launched into space from the customs territory of the United States on or after December 31, 1984.

MERCHANT MARINE ACT AMENDMENTS

PACKWOOD (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 4277

(Ordered to lie on the table.)

Mr. PACKWOOD (for himself, Mr. LONG, Mr. GORTON, Mr. STEVENS, Mr. JOHNSTON, Mr. COCHRAN, and Mr. CRANSTON) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by them to the bill (H.R. 5505) to amend title XII of the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, as follows:

On page 1, line 3, strike "That section" and insert in lieu thereof "SECTION 1. Section".

On page 1, insert the following immediately after line 5:

SEC. 2. The Secretary of Transportation is authorized and directed to enter into a contract with a vessel operator receiving operating-differential subsidy for the operation of liner vessels between the United States and all coasts of South America which contract shall provide for the termination and settlement of all obligations of the government (except for the payment of subsidy accrued to, and to be accrued for voyages in progress on, the date of termination) and of the operator arising under or by reason of the operating-differential subsidy contracts or under the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, by reason of receipt of operating-differential subsidy and providing for six equal annual payments in the amount of $32,500,000. The contract shall provide that the operator agrees to the following contractual conditions: (i) the operator shall transfer title to four LASH vessels their respective complements of barges and five break-bulk vessels to the United States; (ii) $25,000,000 of the amount received by the operator under the contract shall be used for labor pension fund payments, health benefits, retraining and similar items for the benefit of the officers and crews of the operator's ships; (iii) the operator shall construct three vessels to be delivered to it after June 30, 1984, and contracted for prior to the date of the last payment; (iv) the operator shall provide regular U.S.-flag liner service between the United States and South America for a period of at least six years; and (v) the operator shall not use the proceeds of the settlement for operations in the domestic trades or to pay for vessels constructed in a foreign shipyard. The first annual payment of $32,500,000 shall be paid on the date of the execution of the contract and the remaining five payments shall be paid on the first through fifth anniversaries thereof.

● Mr. PACKWOOD. Mr. President, on behalf of myself and a bipartisan group of Senators, I am offering an amendment to H.R. 5505, a bill extending the life of the War Risk Insurance Program. The purpose of the amendment is to provide a legislative termination of the existing operating differential subsidy [ODS] contract between Delta Steamship Lines and the Federal Government.

The anticipated result will be a savings of hundreds of millions of dollars for the Federal Government, the acquisition of militarily useful vessels for the National Defense Reserve Fleet, and the termination of numerous constraints on the viable operation of an important U.S.-flag carrier.

Due to the importance of this legislation and desirability of these objectives, this proposal has bipartisan support within the Senate and the House, and most importantly, is supported by both management and the labor organizations affected.

The terms of the contract termination are as follows:

First, the Federal Government's obligation to make payments to Delta Steamship Lines, as required by the 20-year ODS contracts, would be terminated. Under these contracts, the liability of the Federal Government is between $800 million and $1.2 billion.

Second, Delta Steamship would transfer a fleet of nine vessels, composed of four lash vessels (and their complement of nearly 400 barges) and five break-bulk vessels to the Federal Government for use in the National Defense Reserve Fleet. The military is presently operating lash vessels identical to these in the Indian Ocean in support of the pre-position forces. The Maritime Administration's Vessel Evaluation Committee has valued these vessels at a total of $83.5 million.

Three, Delta agrees to maintain regular service between the United States and Latin America for at least 6 years, and our expectation is that this amendment will allow it to do so permanently.

Four, the Federal Government would pay $195 million in six equal annual installments of $32.5 million to Delta Steamship.

Fifth, none of the funds Delta will receive will be used either for domestic operations or for acquisition of foreign vessels.

Sixth, of the amounts to be received by Delta, $25 million is intended to be distributed to the union labor currently employed by Delta. As employment opportunities for the U.S. merchant marine have shrunk in the past decades, fewer working seamen are supporting the pensions of large numbers of retired mariners. This has caused significant pressure on the pension funds of the unions, and the $25 million will address this growing concern.

Seventh, finally, and most importantly to a number of us, is that Delta Steamship Lines will be able to operate in a flexible, commercially viable manner, free from the constraints of Federal intervention in its operations.

It is important that the Senate realize that this bill and amendment are not, and should not, be used as a vehicle for other measures. The sponsors were persuaded to add this provision because the urgent needs of the steamship line, of Government for these vessels, as well as for the beneficial impact on maritime policy and the cost savings to the Federal Government. The sponsors believe that any attempt to expand the bill to address other maritime concerns would simply lead to its defeat. The reason for amending this important war risk insurance legislation is because of the extreme urgency of the situation. I and my colleagues have no intention of adding other amendments on other matters, and will adamantly resist any efforts to do so either in the Senate or the House.

In sum, the specific need for this legislation by the steamship line is apparent. The benefits to the Nation of reducing the Federal deficit and improving the competitiveness of our merchant marine are clear. This legislation enjoys bipartisan support in the committee, the Senate, and the House. Of critical importance, both management and the labor organizations affected by this proposal support it. I urge my colleagues to join me in voting in favor of it when it is brought to the floor in the near future.●

HUMPHREY AMENDMENT NO. 4278

Mr. HUMPHREY proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 3398, supra; as follows:

On page 41, between lines 18 and 19, insert the following:

SEC. . USER FEE FOR CUSTOMS SERVICES AT CERTAIN SMALL AIRPORTS.

(a) The Secretary of the Treasury shall make customs services available and charge a fee for the use of such customs services at—

(1) the airport located at Lebanon, New Hampshire, and

(2) any other airport designated by the Secretary of the Treasury under subsection (c).

(b) The fee which is charged under subsection (a) shall be paid by each person using the customs services at the airport and shall be in an amount equal to the expenses incurred by the Secretary of the Treasury in providing the customs services which are rendered to such person at such airport (including the salary and expenses of individuals employed by the Secretary of the Treasury to provide such customs services).

(c) The Secretary of the Treasury may designate 4 airports under this subsection. An airport may be designated under this subsection only if—

(1) the Secretary of the Treasury has made a determination that the volume or value of business cleared through such airport is insufficient to justify the availability of customs services at such airport, and

(2) the Governor of the State in which such airport is located approves such designation.

(d) Any person who, after notice and demand for payment of any fee charged under subsection (a), fails to pay such fee shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and if convicted thereof shall pay a fine that does not exceed an amount equal to 200 percent of such fee.

(e) Fees collected by the Secretary of the Treasury under subsection (a) with respect to the provision of services at an airport shall be deposited in an account within the Treasury of the United States that is specially designated for such airport. The funds in such account shall only be available, as provided by appropriation Acts, for expenditures relating to the provision of customs services at such airport (including expenditures for the salaries and expenses of individuals employed to provide such services).

HEINZ AMENDMENT NO. 4279

Mr. HEINZ proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 3398, supra; as follows:

At the end of title III of the amendment, add the following new section:

SECTION (a) Section 203(a) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2253) is amended to read as follows:

"(a)(1) If the President proclaims the import relief recommended by the Commission, or announces his intention to negotiate one or more orderly marketing agreements pursuant to the Commission's recommendation, the President shall on the date such proclamation is made transmit to Congress a document setting forth the action he is taking under this section.

"(2) If, on the basis of advice received under section 202(b), the President determines that the provision of the import relief recommended by the Commission is not in the national economic interest of the United States or that there are alternative recommendations which offset the material injury or threat thereof to the industry to the same extent to which the Commission's recommendations offset such injury or threat thereof, the President shall transmit to Congress a document which sets forth—

"(A) such determination,

"(B) the reasons why providing the import relief recommended by the Commission is not in the national economic interest,

"(C) information with respect to—

"(i) what actions (other then adjustment assistance programs immediately available), if any, the President proposes to take to help the industry overcome material injury or threat thereof and the workers to find productive employment, and

"(ii) how such actions will overcome such material injury or threat thereof to the same extent as the Commission's recommendations, and

"(D) any proposed legislation needed to implement the President's recommendations.

"(b) Section 203(b) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2253) is amended to read as follows:

"(b)(1) The President's recommendation under subsection (a)(2)(D) shall be treated as an implementing bill pursuant to the provisions of section 151, except that, for purposes of section 151(c)(1), no trade agreement shall be required and the day on which the implementing bill is submitted shall be treated as the day on which the trade agreement is submitted; and for purposes of section 151(e)(1), and (2) the 45-day period shall be reduced to 15 days.

"(2) The President shall no later than the 31st day after the submission of such proposal—

"(A) proclaim the actions recommended by the Commission under section 201(d) if Congress fails to adopt the implementing bill submitted pursuant to paragraph (1), or

"(B) take the action recommended by him if the Congress has adopted and the President has signed the implementing bill submitted pursuant to paragraph (1).

DANFORTH AMENDMENT NO. 4280

Mr. DANFORTH proposed an amendment to amendment No. 4279 proposed by Mr. HEINZ to the bill H.R. 3398, supra; as follows:

In lieu of language proposed, insert:

SEC. . DISAPPROVAL OF PRESIDENTIAL DETERMINATIONS UNDER SECTION 203 OF THE TRADE ACT OF 1974.

(a)(1) Paragraph (1) of section 203(c) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2253(c)(1)) is amended to read as follows:

"(1) If the President reports under subsection (b) that he is taking action which differs from the action recommended by the Commission under section 201(d)(1)(A), or that he will not provide import relief, the action recommended by the Commission shall take effect (as provided in paragraph (2)) upon enactment of a joint resolution described in section 152(a)(1)(A) within the 90-day period beginning on the date on which the document referred to in subsection (b) is transmitted to the Congress.".

(2) Paragraph (2) of section 203(c) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2253(c)(2)) is amended—

(A) by striking out "adoption of such resolution" and inserting in lieu thereof "enactment of the joint resolution referred to in paragraph (1)", and

(B) by striking out "section 201(b)" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 201(d)".

(b) Subparagraph (A) of section 152(a)(1) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2192(a)(1)(A)) is amended by striking out "concurrent resolution" and inserting in lieu thereof "joint resolution".

BENTSEN AMENDMENT NO. 4281

Mr. BENTSEN proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 3398, supra; as follows:

Substitute for section 121 of the Committee amendment the following:

"SEC. 121. NAPHTHAS.

Subpart B of part 1 of schedule 4 of the Tariff Schedules of the United States (19 U.S.C. 1202) is amended by inserting the following in numerical order and at the same level of indentation as item 407.09:

	Naphthas derived from petroleum, shale oil, natural gas, or combinations thereof, containing by weight over 5 percent of any product described in this part:
407.11	For not over 190,000,000 pounds entered during the 12-month period beginning January 1 in any year.	0.25¢ per gal.	0.5¢ per gal.

SPECTER (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 4282

Mr. SPECTER (for himself, Mr. RANDOLPH, Mr. BYRD, and Mr. HEINZ), proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 3398, supra; as follows:

On page 41 of the matter proposed to be inserted, between lines 18 and 19, insert the following:

SEC. . RELIEF FROM UNFAIR COMPETITION.

(a) Section 1 of the Clayton Act (15 U.S.C. 12) is amended by inserting after the words "nineteen hundred and thirteen;" the words "section 801 of the Act of September 8, 1916, entitled 'An Act to raise revenue, and for other purposes' (39 Stat. 798; 15 U.S.C. 72);".

(b)(1) Section 801 of the Act of September 8, 1916 (39 Stat. 798; 15 U.S.C. 72) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 801. (a)(1) If—

"(A) any article manufactured or produced in a foreign country is imported or sold within the United States at a United States price which is less than the foreign market value or constructed value of such article,

"(B) such importation or sale—

"(i) causes or threatens material injury to industry or labor in the United States, or

"(ii) prevents, in whole or in part, the establishment or modernization of any industry in the United States, and

"(C) any person is injured in his business or property by reason of such importation or sale, such person may bring a civil action against any manufacturer or exporter of such article or any importer of such article into the United States who is related to such manufacturer or exporter in the district court of the District of Columbia.

"(2) In any action brought under paragraph (1), upon a finding of liability on the part of the defendant, the plaintiff shall—

"(A) recover damages for the injury sustained or be granted such equitable relief as may be appropriate, and

"(B) recover the costs of the action, including reasonable attorney's fees.

"(b) The standard of proof in any action filed under subsection (a) is a preponderance of the evidence. upon a prima facie showing of the elements set forth in subsection (a), or upon a final determination by the Department of Commerce or the International Trade Commission under section 735 of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1673d) relating to imports of the article in question for the country in which the defendant is located, which final determination shall be considered a prima facie case for purposes of this Act, the burden of rebutting such prima facie case thus made shall be upon the defendant.

"(c) Whenever it shall appear to the district court of the District of Columbia that justice requires that other parties be brought before the court, the court may cause them to be summoned, whether they reside in the district or not, and the subpenas to that end may be served and enforced in any district of the United States.

"(d) The acceptance by any foreign manufacturer, producer or exporter of any right or privilege conferred upon him to sell his products or have his products sold by another party in the United States shall be deemed equivalent to an appointment by the foreign manufacturer, producer, or exporter of the District Director of the United States Customs Service of the Department of the Treasury for the port through which the article is commonly imported to be the true and lawful agent upon whom may be served all lawful process in any action brought under this section.

"(e)(1) An action may be brought under this section only if such action is commenced within four years after the date on which the cause of action accrued.

"(2) The running of the statute of limitations provided in paragraph (1) shall be suspended while any administrative proceedings under sections 731, 732, 733, 734, or 735 of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1673-1673d) relating to the importation in question, or any appeal of a final determination in such proceeding, is pending and for one year thereafter.

"(f) If a defendant in any action brought under subsection (a) fails to comply with any discovery order or other order or decree of the court, the court may—

"(1) enjoin the further importation into, or the sale or distribution within, the United States by such defendant of articles which are the same as, or similar to, those articles which are alleged in such action to have been sold or imported under the conditions described in subsection (a) until such time as the defendant complies with such order or decree, or

"(2) take may other action authorized by law or by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, including entering judgment for the plaintiff.

"(g)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the confidential or privileged status accorded by law to any documents, evidence, comments, or information shall be preserved in any action under this section.

"(2) The court in any action brought under this section may—

"(A) examine, in camera, any confidential or privileged material,

"(B) accept depositions, documents, affidavits, or other evidence under seal, and

"(C) disclose such material under such terms and conditions as the court may order.

"(h) Any action brought under this section shall be advanced on the docket and expedited in every way possible.

"(i) For purposes of this section—

"(1) The terms 'United States price', 'foreign market value', 'constructed value', 'subsidy', and 'material injury', shall have the respective meaning given such terms by title VII of the Tariff Act of 1930.

"(2) If—

"(A) a subsidy is provided to the manufacturer, producer, or exporter of any article, and

"(B) such subsidy is not included in the foreign market value or constructed value of such article (but for this paragraph).

the foreign market value of such article or the constructed value of such article shall be increased by the amount of such subsidy.".

(2) It is the sense of the Congress that the provisions of this section are consistent with, and in accord with, the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

BINGAMAN (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 4283

Mr. BINGAMAN (for himself, Mr. DOMENICI, Mr. HEINZ, Mrs. HAWKINS, Mr. BUMPERS, Mr. HART, and Mr. EAGLETON) proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 3398, supra; as follows:

At the end of the committee amendments add the following:

SECTION 1. This Act may be cited as the "International Trade and Export Policy Study Commission Act of 1984".

ESTABLISHMENT

SEC. 2. (a) There is established the International Trade and Export Policy Study Commission (hereafter in this Act referred to as the "Commission").

(b)(1) The Commission shall be composed of eighteen members as follows:

(A) Six members appointed by the President in accordance with paragraph (2)(A).

(B) Six members appointed by the President pro tempore of the Senate from members of the Senate in accordance with paragraph (2) (B), upon the recommendation of the majority leader or the minority leader of the Senate, as the case may be, with respect to members appointed from the political party of that leader.

(C) Six Members of the House of Representatives appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives in accordance with paragraph (2) (B).

(2)(A) The President shall appoint individuals to serve as members of the Commission under paragraph (1) (A) who are especially qualified to serve on the Commission due to the education, training, or experience of such individuals. Of the members appointed by the President under such paragraph, at least five members shall be individuals who are not officers or employees of the United States, and at least two members shall be representatives of businesses or labor organizations. Not more than three members of the Commission appointed under such paragraph shall be members of the same political party.

(B)(i) In appointing members to the Commission, the President pro tempore of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives shall give special consideration to the appointment of members of the Senate or the House of Representatives, as the case may be, who are members of the committees of their respective Houses which have legislative jurisdiction over, or special concerns with respect to, matters relating to international trade.

(ii) Not more than three members of the Commission appointed under paragraph (1) (B) shall be members of the same political party, and not more than three members of the Commission appointed under paragraph (1)(C) shall be members of the same political party.

(3) The first eighteen appointments to the Commission shall be made within thirty days after the date of the enactment of this Act. A vacancy in the Commission shall be filled in the manner in which the original appointment was made.

(4) Members of the Commission shall be appointed to serve for the life of the Commission.

(5) Each member of the Commission appointed under paragraph (1)(A) who is not an officer or employee of the United States shall be compensated at a rate equal to the daily equivalent of the annual rate of basic pay prescribed for grade GS-18 of the General Schedule under section 5332 of title 5, United States Code, for each day (including travel-time) during which such members are engaged in the actual performance of the duties of the Commission. All members of the Commission who are officers or employees of the United States shall serve without additional compensation.

(B) While away from their homes or regular places of business in the performance of services for the Commission, all members of the Commission shall be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, at rates authorized for employees of agencies under sections 5702 and 5703 of title 5, United States Code.

(c)(1) Nine members of the Commission shall constitute a quorum, but a lesser number may hold hearings.

(2) The Chairman and Vice Chairman of the Commission shall be elected by and from the members of the Commission for the life of the Commission.

(3) The Commission shall meet at the call of the Chairman or a majority of its members.

(d)(1) The Chairman of the Commission, in consultation with the Vice Chairman, and without regard to the civil service laws, rules, and regulations, is authorized to appoint and fix the compensation of a staff director and such other additional personnel as may be necessary to enable the Commission to carry out its functions.

(2) Any Federal employee may be detailed to the Commission without reimbursement, and such detail shall be without interruption or loss of civil service status or privilege.

(3) The Commission may procure temporary and intermittent services under section 3109(b) of title 5, United States Code, at rates for individuals which do not exceed the daily equivalent of the annual rate of basic pay prescribed for GS-18 of the General Schedule under section 5332 of such title.

(e)(1) The Commission may, for the purpose of carrying out this Act, hold such hearings, sit and act at such times and places, take such testimony, and receive such evidence, as the Commission considers appropriate.

(2) The Commission may secure directly from any department or agency of the United States information necessary to enable the Commission to carry out this Act. Upon request of the Chairman of the Commission, the head of such department or agency shall furnish such information to the Commission.

(3) The Commission may accept, use, and dispose of gifts or donations of services or property.

(4) The Commission may use the United States mails in the same manner and under the same conditions as other departments and agencies of the United States.

(5) The Administrator of General Services shall provide to the Commission on a reimbursable basis such administrative and support services as the Commission may request.

DUTIES

SEC. 3. (a) The Commission shall study and make recommendations concerning international trade and export policies and practices of the United States, including recommendations for such changes in laws and regulations as may be required in order to—

(1) facilitate the administration of the trade and export functions of the Federal Government;

(2) enhance export growth;

(3) provide for removal of trade barriers;

(4) provide for common understanding of international trade by businesses;

(5) develop expertise on foreign business practices and trade issues; and

(6) accomplish such other purposes as the Commission considers appropriate.

(b) In conducting the study required by subsection (a), the Commission shall review and make recommendations concerning—

(1) existing impediments to exporting by American industries, including—

(A) regulations, paperwork requirements, and procedures imposed by the United States Government, especially export controls;

(B) the impact of the antitrust laws on exports;

(C) insufficient financing, Government credits, and incentives for export expansion, uncertainty as to the continuation of the special tax treatment for Domestic International Sales Corporations, and the lack of Export-Import Bank and the Foreign Credit Insurance Association support and responsiveness;

(D) the lack of a unified, coherent, and clearly enunciated United States Government policy which supports the export community and which is carried out by all Federal agencies; and

(E) the lack of research and development capabilities to help improve the ability of American industries to compete with foreign industries;

(2) the needs of American industry for information and opportunities to enhance exporting, particularly the needs of small and medium sized firms, including needs for—

(A) specific sales or representation leads;

(B) specific information on market conditions, practices, and potentials;

(C) information about and lists of individual foreign buyers and foreign representatives

(D) opportunities to meet directly in the United States with individual foreign buyers and foreign representatives;

(E) opportunities for publicity of companies, products, and interests abroad;

(F) opportunities to display or otherwise expose products abroad;

(G) assistance in making successful bids for major overseas contracts;

(H) general information on methods of exporting and on countries to which products can be exported; and

(I) information on the benefits of exporting;

(3) methods for improving export incentives for United States businesses, including—

(A) export financing;

(B) export insurance;

(C) tax benefits; and

(D) the facilitation of the creation of trading companies;

(4) the need for a closer integration of trade and international monetary policy, including the need to relieve trade policy of major burdens created by the recurrence of currency exchange rate misalignments;

(5) the need to coordinate American trade policies and practices with the promotion of industrial revitalization in the United States;

(6) the need for high quality data in order to identify markets, new products, and industries, and the failure to effectively communicate such data to American industry;

(7) the need for directing Federal resources to provide sustained economic growth and employment;

(8) the need for cooperation and support among the principal sectors of the economy, including business, labor, government, and the public;

(9) the impact of, and the proper role for, international trade activities by State and local governments, including export promotion activities, State export-import banks, and State export trade companies;

(10) the organizational structures under which other industrial nations, such as Japan, Great Britain, Canada, and West

Germany, carry out the international trade activities of those nations;

(11) the organizational structure of Federal agencies which make and carry out trade policies, including the need for strengthened and integrated implementation of international trade functions and improvements in the Foreign Commercial Service; and

(12) the need to promote institutional and noninstitutional educational activities that will contribute to the ability of United States businesses to succeed in the marketing of United States goods and services abroad, such as—

(A) government-sponsored work-study programs which allow United States representatives of business, labor, and government to live overseas and analyze foreign market opportunities, study existing trade and cultural barriers, and develop expertise on foreign business practices and trade issues; and

(B) the promotion of foreign language capabilities to facilitate United States commerce by overcoming language and marketing barriers.

FINAL REPORT

SEC. 4. Not later than July 1, 1985, the Commission shall transmit to the President and to the Congress a report containing a detailed statement of the study conducted by the Commission under this Act and the recommendations of the Commission with respect to the matters specified in section 3, including any recommendations for legislation the Commission considers appropriate.

TERMINATION

SEC. 5. The Commission shall terminate on July 1, 1985.

AUTHORIZATION

SEC. 6. For fiscal years 1984 and 1985, there are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out this Act.

SEC. 4. The amendments made by subsections (a) and (b) of section 2 shall be effective upon enactment of this Act and shall apply with respect to any requests for records, whether or not such request was made prior to such enactment, and shall apply to all civil actions not commenced prior to February 7, 1984.

OMNIBUS TRADE ACT

BAUCUS AMENDMENT NO. 4286

Mr. BAUCUS proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 3398, supra; as follows:

On page 34 of the matter proposed to be inserted, between lines 2 and 3, insert the following:

SEC. . CUSTOMS BROKERS.

(a) Section 641 of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1641) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 641. CUSTOMS BROKERS.

"(a) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) The term 'customs broker' means any person granted a customs broker's license by the Secretary under subsection (b).

"(2) The term 'customs business' means those activities involving transactions with the Customs Service concerning—

"(A) the entry and admissibility of merchandise,

"(B) the classification and valuation of such merchandise,

"(C) the payment of duties, taxes, or other charges assessed or collected by the Customs Service upon merchandise by reason of its importation, or

"(D) the refund, rebate, or drawback of such duties, taxes, or other charges.

"(3) The term 'Secretary' means the Secretary of the Treasury.

"(b) CUSTOM BROKERS LICENSES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—No person may conduct customs business (other than solely on such person's own behalf) unless such person holds a valid customs brokers license issued by the Secretary under paragraph (2) or (3).

"(2) LICENSES FOR INDIVIDUALS.—The Secretary may grant an individual a customs brokers license only if that individual is a citizen of the United States. Before granting the license, the Secretary may require an applicant to provide any information that the Secretary determines to be necessary to establish that the applicant is of good moral character and qualified to render valuable service to others in the conduct of customs business. In assessing the qualifications of an applicant, the Secretary may conduct an examination to determine the applicant's knowledge of customs and related laws, regulations and procedures, bookkeeping, accounting, and any other appropriate matters.

"(3) LICENSES FOR CORPORATION.—The Secretary may grant a customs brokers license to any corporation, association, or partnership that is organized or existing under the laws of any of the several States of the United States if at least one officer of the corporation or association, or one member of the partnership, holds a valid customs brokers license granted under paragraph (2).

"(4) DUTIES.—A customs broker shall exercise responsible supervision and control over the customs business that the customs broker conducts.

"(5) LAPSE OF LICENSE.—If a corporation, association, or partnership that is licensed as a customs broker under paragraph (3) fails to have, for any continuous period of 120 days, at least one officer of the corporation or association, or at least one member of the partnership, validly licensed under paragraph (2), in addition to any other sanction under this section (including paragraph (6)), the customs brokers license of such corporation, association, or partnership shall expire at the close of such 120-day period.

"(6) PROHIBITED ACTS.—Any person who intentionally transacts customs business (other than solely on such person's own behalf) without holding a valid customs brokers license granted to such person under this subsection shall be liable to the United States for a monetary penalty not to exceed $10,000 for each such transaction as well as for each violation of any other provision of this section. This penalty shall be assessed in the same manner and under the same procedures as the monetary penalties provided for in subsection (d)(2)(A).

"(c) CUSTOMS BROKERS PERMITS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Each person granted a customs brokers license under subsection (b) shall—

"(A) be issued a permit, in accordance with regulations prescribed under this section, for each customs district in which that person conducts customs business; and

"(B) regularly employ in each customs district for which such a permit is issued at least one individual who is licensed under subsection (b)(2) to exercise responsible supervision and control over the customs business conducted by that person in that district.

"(2) LAPSE OF PERMIT.—If a customs broker granted a permit under paragraph (1) fails to employ, for any continuous period of 120 days, at least one individual who is licensed under subsection (b)(2) within the district for which a permit was issued, in addition to any other sanction under this section (including any sanction imposed under subsection (d)), such permit shall expire at the end of such 120-day period.

"(d) DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS.—

"(1) GENERAL RULE.—The Secretary may impose a monetary penalty in all cases (other than in the case of infractions described in subparagraph (B)(iii)) or revoke or suspend a license or permit of any customs broker, if the Secretary determines that the broker—

"(A) has made, or caused to be made, in any application for any license or permit under this section, or in any report filed with the Customs Service, any statement which was, at the time and in light of the circumstances under which it was made, false or misleading with respect to any material fact, or has omitted to state in any such application or report any material fact which was required to be stated therein;

"(B) has been convicted at any time after the filing of an application for license under subsection (b) of any felony or misdemeanor which the Secretary finds—

"(i) involved the importation or exportation of merchandise;

"(ii) arose out of the conduct of the customs business of the customs broker; or

"(iii) involved larceny, theft, robbery, extortion, forgery, counterfeiting, fraudulent concealment, embezzlement, fraudulent conversion, or misappropriation of funds;

"(C) has violated any provision of any law enforced by the Customs Service or violated the rules or regulations issued under any such provision;

"(D) has counseled, commanded, induced, procured, or knowingly aided or abetted the violations by any other person of any provision of any law enforced by the Customs Service or of the rules or regulations issued under any such provision;

"(E) has knowingly employed, or continues to employ, any person who has been convicted of a felony, without written approval of such employment from the Secretary; or

"(F) has, in the course of the customs business of such broker and with the intent to defraud, willfully and knowingly deceived, misled, or threatened any client or prospective client.

"(2) PROCEDURES.—

"(A) MONETARY PENALTY.—

"(i) NOTICE.—Unless action has been taken under subparagraph (B), the appropriate customs officer shall serve notice in writing upon any customs broker to show cause why the broker should not be subject to a monetary penalty not to exceed $30,000 in total for a violation or violations of this section. Such notice shall advise the customs broker of the allegations or complaints against him and shall explain that the broker has a right to respond to the allegations or complaints in writing within 30 days of the date of the notice.

"(ii) CONSIDERATION OF ALLEGATIONS AND RESPONSES.—Before imposing a monetary penalty, the customs officer shall consider the allegations or complaints and any timely response made by the customs broker and issue a written decision.

"(iii) REMISSION OR MITIGATION OF PENALTIES.—A customs broker against whom a monetary penalty has been issued under this section shall have a reasonable opportunity under section 618 to make representations seeking remission or mitigation of the monetary penalty.

"(iv) WRITTEN DECISION.—After the conclusion of any proceeding under section 618, the appropriate customs officer shall provide to the customs broker a written decision which sets forth the final determination and the findings of fact and conclusions of law on which such determination is based.

"(B) REVOCATION OR SUSPENSION.—

"(i) NOTICE OF COMPLAINT.—The appropriate customs officer may, for good and sufficient reason, serve notice in writing upon any customs broker to show cause why a license or permit issued under this section should not be revoked or suspended. Such notice shall be in the form of a statement specifically setting forth the grounds of the complaint, and shall allow the customs broker 30 days to respond.

"(ii) NOTICE OF HEARING.—If no response to the notice provided under clause (i) is filed, or the appropriate customs officer determines that the revocation or suspension is still warranted after receiving such a response, the appropriate customs officer shall notify the customs broker in writing of—

"(I) a hearing to be held within 15 days, or at a later date if the broker requests an extension and shows good cause therefor, before an administrative law judge appointed pursuant to section 3105 of title 5, United States Code, who shall serve as the hearing officer, and

"(II) the right of the customs broker to be represented by counsel at such hearing.

"(iii) TESTIMONY; CROSS EXAMINATION.—Testimony presented at the hearing described in clause (ii), including the proof of the charges and the response thereto, shall be taken under oath and the right of cross-examination accorded to both parties at such hearing.

"(iv) TRANSCRIPT.—A transcript of the hearing described in clause (ii) shall be made and a copy shall be provided to the appropriate customs officer and the customs broker.

"(v) POST-HEARING BRIEF.—The customs broker and the appropriate customs officer shall be provided a reasonable period of time after receipt of the transcript in which to file a post-hearing brief.

"(vi) WAIVER OR ABSENCE.—If the customs broker waives the hearing, or the broker or his designated representative fails to appear at the appointed time and place, the hearing officer shall make findings and recommendations based on the record submitted by the parties.

"(vii) TRANSFER OF RECORD.—The hearing officer shall promptly transmit the record of the case along with the findings of fact and recommendations of the hearing officer to the Secretary for decision.

"(viii) DECISION OF THE SECRETARY.—The Secretary will issue a written decision based solely on the record which sets forth findings of fact and the reasons for the decision of the Secretary. Such decision may provide for the sanction contained in the notice to show cause or any lesser sanction authorized by this subsection, including a monetary penalty not to exceed $30,000, than was contained in the notice to show cause.

"(3) SETTLEMENT AND COMPROMISE.—The Secretary may settle and compromise any disciplinary proceeding which has been instituted under this subsection according to the terms and conditions agreed to by the parties, including but not limited to the reduction of any proposed suspension or revocation to a monetary penalty.

"(4) LIMITATION OF ACTIONS.—Notwithstanding section 621, no proceeding under this subsection or subsection (b)(6) shall be commenced unless such proceeding is instituted by the appropriate service of written notice within 5 years from the date the alleged violation was committed; except that if the alleged violation consists of fraud, the 5-year period of limitation shall commence running from the time such alleged violation was discovered.

"(e) JUDICIAL APPEAL.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—A customs broker, applicant, or other person directly affected may appeal any decision of the Secretary denying or revoking a license or permit under subsection (b) or (c), or revoking or suspending a license or permit or imposing a monetary penalty in lieu thereof under subsection (d)(2)(B), by filing in the Court of International Trade, within 60 days after the issuance of the decision or order, a written petition requesting that the decision or order be modified or set aside in whole or in part. A copy of the petition shall be transmitted promptly by the clerk of the court to the Secretary or his designee. In cases involving revocation or suspension of a license or permit or imposition of a monetary penalty in lieu thereof under subsection (d)(2)(B), after receipt of the petition, the Secretary shall file in court the record upon which the decision or order complained of was entered, as provided in section 2635(d) of title 28, United States Code.

"(2) CONSIDERATION OF OBJECTIONS.—The court shall not consider any objection to the admission of evidence or testimony or to the decision or order of the Secretary unless that objection was raised before the hearing officer in suspension or revocation proceedings or there were reasonable grounds for failure to do so.

"(3) CONCLUSIVENESS OF FINDINGS.—The findings of the Secretary as to the facts, if supported by substantial evidence, shall be conclusive.

"(4) ADDITIONAL EVIDENCES.—If any party applies to the court for leave to present additional evidence and the court is satisfied that the additional evidence is material and that reasonable grounds existed for the failure to present the evidence in the proceedings before the hearing officer, the court may order the additional evidence to be taken before the hearing officer and to be presented in a manner and upon the terms and conditions prescribed by the court. The Secretary may modify the findings of facts on the basis of the additional evidence presented. The Secretary shall then file with the court any new or modified findings of fact which shall be conclusive if supported by substantial evidence, together with a recommendation, if any, for the modification or setting aside of the original decision or order.

"(5) EFFECT OF PROCEEDINGS.—The commencement of proceedings under this subsection shall, unless specifically ordered by the court, operate as a stay of the decision of the Secretary except in the case of a denial of a license or permit.

"(6) FAILURE TO APPEAL.—If an appeal is not filed within the time limits specified in this section, the decision by the Secretary shall be final and conclusive. In the case of a monetary penalty imposed under subsection (d)(2)(B) of this section, if the amount is not tendered within 60 days after the decision becomes final, the license shall automatically be suspended until payment is made to the Customs Service.

"(f) REGULATIONS BY THE SECRETARY.—The Secretary may prescribe such rules and regulations relating to the customs business of customs brokers as the Secretary considers necessary to protect importers and the revenue of the United States, and to carry out the provisions of this section, including rules and regulations governing the licensing of or issuance of permits to customs brokers, the keeping of books, accounts, and records by customs brokers, and documents and correspondence, and the furnishing by customs brokers of any other information relating to their customs business to any duly accredited officer or employee of the United States Customs Service.

"(g) TRIENNIAL REPORTS BY CUSTOMS BROKERS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—On February 1, 1985, and on February 1 of each third year thereafter, each person who is licensed under subsection (b) shall file with the Secretary of the Treasury a report as to—

"(A) whether such person is actively engaged in business as a customs broker; and

"(B) the name under, and the address at, which such business is being transacted.

"(2) SUSPENSION AND REVOCATION.—If a person licensed under subsection (b) fails to file the required report by March 1 of the reporting year, the license is suspended, and may be thereafter revoked subject to the following procedures:

"(A) The Secretary shall transmit written notice of suspension to the licensee no later than March 31 of the reporting year.

"(B) If the licensee files the required report within 60 days of receipt of the Secretary's notice, the license shall be reinstated.

"(C) In the event the required report is not filed within the 60-day period, the license shall be revoked without prejudice to the filing of an application for a new license.

"(h) FEES AND CHARGES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the Secretary may prescribe reasonable fees and charges to defray the costs of the Customs Service in carrying out the provisions of this section, including, but not limited to, a fee for licenses issued under subsection (b) and fees for any test administered by him or under his direction.

"(2) EXCEPTIONS.—The Secretary shall not impose any fees or charges with respect to audits of individuals or disciplinary proceedings.".

(b) Section 1581(g) of title 28, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(g) The Court of International Trade shall have exclusive jurisdiction of any civil action commenced to review—

"(1) any decision of the Secretary of the Treasury to deny a customs brokers license under section 641(b)(2) or (3) or (c) of the Tariff Act of 1930, or to deny a customs brokers permit under section 641(c)(1) of such Act, or to revoke a license or permit under section 641(b)(5) or (c)(2) of such Act; and

"(2) any decision of the Secretary of the Treasury to revoke or suspend a customs brokers license or permit, or impose a monetary penalty in lieu thereof, under section 641(d)(2)(B) of the Tariff Act of 1930.".

(c) Section 1582(1) of title 28, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(1) to recover a civil penalty under section 592, 641(a)(1)(C), 641(d)(2)(A), 704(i)(2), or 734(i)(2) of the Tariff Act of 1930;".

(d) Section 2631(g) of title 28, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(g)(1) A civil action to review any decision of the Secretary of the Treasury to deny a customs broker's license under section 641(b)(2) or (3) of the Tariff Act of 1930, or to deny a customs broker's permit under section 641(c)(1) of such Act, or to revoke such license or permit under section 641(b)(5) or (c)(2) of such Act, may be commenced in the Court of International Trade by the person whose license or permit was denied or revoked.

"(2) A civil action to review any decision of the Secretary of the Treasury to revoke or suspend a customs broker's license or permit or impose a monetary penalty in lieu thereof under section 641(d)(2)(B) of the Tariff Act of 1930 may be commenced in the Court of International Trade by the person against whom the decision was issued.".

(e) Section 2636(h) of title 28, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(h) A civil action contesting the denial or revocation by the Secretary of the Treasury of a customs broker's license or permit under subsection (b) or (c) of section 641 of the Tariff Act of 1930, or the revocation or suspension of such license or permit or the imposition of a monetary penalty in lieu thereof by such Secretary under section 641(d) of such Act, is barred unless commenced in accordance with the rules of the Court of International trade within sixty days after the date of the entry of the decision or order of such Secretary.".

(f) Section 2640(a)(5) of title 28, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(5) Civil actions commenced to review any decision of the Secretary of the Treasury under section 641 of the Tariff Act of 1930, with the exception of decisions under section 641(d)(2)(B), which shall be governed by subdivision (d) of this section.".

(g) Section 2643 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding the following new subsection:

"(e) In any proceeding involving assessment or collection of a monetary penalty under section 641(b)(6) or 641(d)(2)(A) of the Tariff Act of 1930, the court may not render judgment in an amount greater than that sought in the initial pleading of the United States, and may render judgment in such lesser amount as shall seem proper and just to the court.".

(h) Section 564 of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1564) is amended by adding the following sentence at the end thereof: "The provisions of this section shall apply to licensed customs brokers who otherwise possess a lien for freight, charges, or contribution in general average upon the merchandise under the statutes of common law of any State or by reason of an order of any court of competent jurisdiction.".

(i) Section 520(a) of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1520(a)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(4) PRIOR TO LIQUIDATION—Whenever it is ascertained prior to the liquidation of an entry that excess duties, fees, charges, or exactions have been deposited or paid by reason of a clerical error.".

(j)(1) The amendment made by this section shall take effect upon the close of the 180th day following the date of enactment of this Act with the following exceptions:

(A) Section 641(c)(1)(B) and Section 641(c)(2) of the Tariff Act of 1930, as added by this Act, shall take effect three years after the effective date of this Act.

(B) The amendments made to the Tariff Act of 1930 by subsections (h) and (i) shall take effect on the date of enactment of this Act.

(2) A license in effect on the date of enactment of this Act under section 641 of the Tariff Act of 1930 (as in effect before such date of enactment) shall continue in force as a license to transact customs business as a customs broker, subject to all the provisions of this subsection and such licenses shall be accepted as permits for the district or districts covered by that license.

(3) Any proceeding for revocation or suspension of a license instituted under section 641 of the Tariff Act of 1930 before the effective date of this Act shall continue and be governed by the law in effect at the time the proceeding was instituted.

(k) If any provision of, or amendment made by, this section or its application to any person or circumstances is held invalid, it shall not affect the validity of the remaining provisions of their application to any other person or circumstances.

WILSON AMENDMENT NO. 4287

Mr. WILSON (for himself, Mr. DOLE, Mr. HELMS, Mr. HUDDLESTON, Mr. COCHRAN, and Mr. COHEN) proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 3398, supra; as follows:

On page 34 of the matter proposed to be inserted, between lines 2 and 3, insert the following:

SEC. . PROCESSED AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS.

(a) Section 771(4) of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1677(4)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(E) Special rule for processed agricultural products.—

"(i) In general.—In the case of a processed agricultural product, the term 'industry' means—

"(I) the domestic producers of such product; and

"(II) the domestic producers of the principal raw agricultural commodity which is a part of such product (as determined on the basis of the volume or value of such commodity produced), but only if producers of such raw agricultural commodity allege that they are materially injured, or threatened with material injury, by reason of the imports concerned.

"(ii) Processed agricultural product defined.—For purposes of clause (i), the term 'processed agricultural product' means any product of farm, forest, or fishery which has undergone processing beyond that customarily required to prepare such product for marketing in such product's natural form.".

(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any petition for relief under section 702 or section 732 of the Tariff Act of 1930 which was filed prior to the date of enactment of this Act may be refiled under such section.

WILSON AMENDMENT NO. 4288

Mr. WILSON proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 3398, supra; as follows:

At the appropriate place in the bill, add the following:

"SEC. . Adverse Economic Impact Study.

"At the end of subsection (b) of section 102 of the Trade Act of 1974, add the following new paragraph:

"'( )(A) Prior to negotiating a trade agreement for the elimination or reduction of duties imposed by the United States, the President shall request of and receive from the International Trade Commission a determination as to each article about which the President intends to negotiate, which is or is likely to be imported into the U.S. upon implementation of any such agreement, and about which the International Trade Commission has received substantial allegations, whether or not the importation of such article is likely to cause a significant adverse impact on the industry in the United States producing such article. Each such determination, and the reasons therefore, shall be transmitted to the Congress.

"'(B) The President shall have no authority to negotiate a trade agreement for the elimination or reduction of any duty imposed by the United States on any article about which an affirmative determination is made pursuant to subparagraph (A).

"'(C) Notwithstanding the provisions of subparagraph (B), not prior to five years after entering into a trade agreement pursuant to the provisions of this subsection, the President may request of the International Trade Commission a review of the affirmative determinations made pursuant to the provisions of subparagraph (A). If, at that time, the International Trade Commission makes a negative determination as to an article so reviewed, the prohibitions in subparagraph (B) shall not apply to such article. If, at that time, the International Trade Commission makes an affirmative determination as to an article so reviewed, the prohibitions in subparagraph (B) shall remain in effect as to such article.'.".

WILSON (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 4289

Mr. WILSON (for himself, Mr. CHILES, and Mr. BENTSEN) proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 3398, supra; as follows:

On page 62 of the matter proposed to be inserted, between lines 18 and 19, insert the following:

(d) Paragraph (1) of section 151(b) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2191(b)(1)) is amended—

(1) by striking out "and" at the end of subparagraph (B),

(2) by striking out the period at the end of subparagraph (C) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and", and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(D) if such agreement is with Israel—

"(i) provisions which require articles imported from Israel to meet requirements similar to the requirements provided in section 213(a) of the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act, and

"(ii) provisions which establish emergency relief similar to the emergency relief provided in section 213(f) of the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act from articles imported from Israel are like, or directly competitive with, perishable products produced in the United States, with the term "perishable products" meaning the following—

"(1) vegetables provided for in Schedule 1, Part 8 of the TSUS;

"(2) edible nuts and fruits provided for in Schedule 1, Part 9 of TSUS;

"(3) fresh cut flowers provided for in items 192.17, 192.18, and 192.21 of the TSUS; and

"(4) concentrated citrus fruit juice provided for in items 165.25 and 165.35 of the TSUS.".

WILSON-CRANSTON AMENDMENT NO. 4290

Mr. WILSON (for himself and Mr. CRANSTON) proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 3398, supra; as follows:

At the end of the matter proposed to be inserted, add the following:

TITLE VI—WINE TRADE

SEC. 601. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Wine Equity and Export Expansion Act of 1984".

SEC. 602. CONGRESSIONAL FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) there is a substantial imbalance in international wine trade resulting, in part, from the relative accessibility enjoyed by foreign wines to the United States market while the United States wine industry faces restrictive tariff and nontariff barriers in virtually every existing or potential foreign market;

(2) the restricted access to foreign markets and the continued low prices for United States wine and grape products adversely affect the economic position of our Nation's winemakers and grape growers, as well as all other domestic sectors that depend upon wine production;

(3) the competitive position of the United States wine in international trade has been weakened by foreign trade practices, high domestic interest rates, and unfavorable foreign exchange rates;

(4) wine consumption per capita is very low in many major non-wine-producing markets and the demand potential for United States wine is significant; and

(5) the United States winemaking industry has the capacity and the ability to export substantial volumes of wine and an increase in United States wine exports will create new jobs, improve this Nation's balance of trade, and otherwise strengthen the national economy.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this title are—

(1) to provide wine consumers with the greatest possible choice of wines from wine-producing countries;

(2) to encourage the initiation of an export promotion program to develop, maintain, and expand foreign markets for United States wine; and

(3) to achieve greater access to foreign markets for United States wine and grape products through the reduction or elimination of tariff barriers and nontariff barriers to (or other distortions of) trade in wine.

SEC. 603. DEFINITIONS.

For purposes of this title—

(1) The term "Committees" means the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Finance of the Senate.

(2) The term "grape product" means grapes and any product (other than wine) made from grapes, including, but not limited to, raisins and grape juice, whether or not concentrated.

(3) The term "major wine trading country" means any foreign country, or group of foreign countries, designated as such under section 604.

(4) The phrase "nontariff barrier to (or other distortion of)", in the context of trade in United States wine, includes any measure implemented by the government of a major wine trading country that either gives a competitive advantage to the wine industry of that country or restricts the importation of United States wine into that country.

(5) The term "Trade Representative" means the United States Trade Representative.

(6) The term "United States wine" means wine produced within the customs territory of the United States.

(7) The term "wine" means any fermented alcoholic beverage that—

(A) is made from grapes or other fruit;

(B) contains not less than 0.5 percent alcohol by volume and not more than 24 percent alcohol by volume, including all dilutions and mixtures thereof by whatever process produced; and

(C) is for nonindustrial use.

SEC. 604. DESIGNATION OF MAJOR WINE TRADING COUNTRIES.

(a) DESIGNATION OF COUNTRIES.—The Trade Representative shall designate as a major wine trading country each foreign country, or group of foreign countries represented as an economic union, that, in the judgment of the Trade Representative—

(1) is a potential significant market for United States wine; and

(2) maintains tariff barriers or nontariff barriers to (or other distortions of) trade in United States wine.

(b) DESIGNATION FACTORS.—In deciding, for purposes of subsection (a)(2), whether a foreign country or group of countries maintains nontariff barriers to (or other distortions of) trade in United States wine, the Trade Representative shall take into account—

(1) the review and report required under section 854(a) of the Trade Agreements Act of 1979 (19 U.S.C. 2135 note);

(2) such relevant actions that may have been taken by that country or group since that review was conducted; and

(3) such information as may be submitted under section 606 by representatives of the wine and grape products industries in the United States, as well as other sources.

SEC. 605. ACTIONS TO REDUCE OR ELIMINATE TARIFF AND NONTARIFF BARRIERS AFFECTING UNITED STATES WINE.

(a) TRADE REPRESENTATIVE CONSULTATIONS.—The President shall direct the Trade Representative to enter into consultations with each major wine trading country to seek a reduction or elimination of that country's tariff barriers and nontariff barriers to (or other distortions of) trade in United States wine.

(b) PRESIDENTIAL REPORTS.—(1) The President shall notify each of the Committees regarding the extent and effect of the efforts undertaken since the submission of the report required under section 854(a) of the Trade Agreements Act of 1979, and during the 12-month period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act, to expand opportunities in each major wine trading country for exports of United States wine. Such notification, which shall be in the form of a separate written report (that must be submitted within 30 days after the close of that 12-month period) for each major wine trading country, shall include—

(A) a description of each act, policy, and practice (and of its legal basis and operation) in that country that constitutes a tariff barrier or nontariff barrier to (or other distortion of) trade in United States wine (and that description shall be based upon an updating of the report that was submitted to the Congress under section 854(a) of the Trade Agreements Act of 1979);

(B) an assessment of the extent to which each such act, policy, or practice is subject to international agreements to which the United States is a party;

(C) information with respect to any action taken, or proposed to be taken, under existing authority to eliminate or reduce each such act, policy, or practice, including, but not limited to—

(i) any action under the Trade Act of 1974, and

(ii) any negotiation or consultation with any foreign government;

(D) if action referred to in subparagraph (C) was not taken, an explanation of the reasons therefor; and

(E) recommendations to the Congress of any additional legislative authority or other action which the President believes is necessary and appropriate to obtain the elimination or reduction of foreign tariff barriers or nontariff barriers to (or other distortions of) trade in United States wine.

(2) The reports required under paragraph (1) shall be developed and coordinated by the Trade Representative through the interagency trade organization established by section 242(a) of the Trade Expansion Act of 1962.

(c) PRESIDENTIAL ACTION.—If the President, after taking into account information and advice received under subsections (a) and (b), section 606 or from other sources, determines that action is appropriate to respond to any act, policy or practice of a major wine trading country constitutes a tariff barrier or nontariff barrier to (or other distortion of) trade in United States wine and—

(1) is inconsistent with the provisions of, or otherwise denies benefits to the United States under, any trade agreement; or

(2) is unjustifiable, unreasonable, or discriminatory and burdens or restricts United States commerce;

the President, shall take all appropriate and feasible action under the Trade Act of 1974 to enforce the rights of the United States under any such trade agreement or to obtain the elimination of such act, policy, or practice.

SEC. 606. REQUIRED CONSULTATIONS.

The Trade Representative shall consult with the Committees and with representatives of the wine and grape products industries in the United States—

(1) before identifying tariff barriers and nontariff barriers to (or other distortions of) trade in United States wine and designating major wine trading countries under section 604;

(2) in developing the reports required under section 605(b); and

(3) for purposes of determining whether action by the President is appropriate under any provision the Trade Act of 1974 with respect to any act, policy, or practice referred to in section 605(b)(1).

SEC. 607. UNITED STATES WINE EXPORT PROMOTION.

In order to develop, maintain, and expand foreign markets for United States wine, the President is encouraged to—

(1) utilize, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985, the authority provided under section 135 of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1982 to make available sufficient funds to initiate, in cooperation with non-governmental trade associations representative of United States wineries, an export promotion program for United States; and

(2) request, for each subsequent fiscal year, an appropriation for such a wine export promotion program that will not be at the expense of any appropriations requested for export promotion programs involving other agriculture commodities.

BYRD AMENDMENT NO. 4291

Mr. BYRD proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 3398, supra; as follows:

On page 11 of the matter proposed to be inserted, between lines 9 and 10, insert the following:

SEC. 126. FERROALLOYS.

(a) Congress hereby finds that—

(1) ferroalloys are products which impart distinctive qualities to steel, especially alloys, iron, and aluminum and are essential to the production of those products;

(2) the economic health and national defense of any modern industrial nation rest on its having a secure supply of ferroalloys, and the United States can assure that supply only if it maintains the capacity to produce a significant portion of its needs domestically;

(3) the domestic ferroalloy industry has suffered from the unremitting pressure of low-priced imports for many years, and consequently it has suffered massive losses and its capacity has dwindled in recent years;

(4) imports have caused this result not because of any superiority—since the American industry is as technologically modern and efficient as any in the world—but rather because of artificial advantages afforded by subsidies, by non-free-market pricing policies, and by other policies of their governments;

(5) the application of existing trade laws has not prevented imports from causing the industry's severe decline;

(6) unless effective import relief is promptly forthcoming, the industry will soon shrink to where it will be able to supply only a small portion of the Nation's needs;

(7) such a result would gravely damage the national security and the economic and international interests of the United States; and

(8) the additional tariffs enacted by this section would preserve the Nation's essential capacity to produce the large volume products high carbon ferromanganese, high carbon ferrochrome, 50 percent ferrosilicon, 75 percent ferrosilicon, silicon metal, and siliconmanganese and also chromium metal, a smaller volume product especially crucial to the national security.

(b)(1) Item 606.24 is amended—

(A) by striking out "1.9% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential + 1.9% ad val.", and

(B) by striking out "7.5% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential + 7.5% ad val.".

(2) Item 606.30 is amended—

(A) by striking out "1.6% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential + 1.6% ad val.",

(B) by striking out "1.5% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential + 1.5% ad val.", and

(C) by striking out "10.5% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential + 10.5% ad val.".

(3) Subpart B of part 2 of schedule 6 is amended—

(A) by redesignating items 606.36, 606.37, 606.39, and 606.40 as items 606.38, 606.39, 606.40, and 606.41, respectively, and

(B) by striking out item 606.35 and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

606.35	Containing over 8 percent but not over 30 percent by weight of silicon. Containing over 30 percent but not over 60 percent by weight of silicon:	Free	2¢ per lb. on silicon content.
606.36	Containing over 2 percent by weight of magnesium.	Free	2¢ per lb. on silicon content.
606.37	Other	Fair price differential.	Fair price differential +2¢ per lb. on silicon content".

(4) Item 606.39 (as redesignated by paragraph (3)(A) of this subsection) is amended—

(A) by striking out "1.6% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential +1.6% ad val.",

(B) by striking out "1.5% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential +1.5% ad val.", and

(C) by striking out "11.5% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential +11.5% ad val.".

(5) Item 606.44 is amended—

(A) by striking out "4.7% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential +4.7% ad val.".

(B) by striking out "3.9% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential +3.9% ad val.", and

(C) by striking out "23% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential +23% ad val.".

(6) Item 632.18 is amended—

(A) by striking out "4.2% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential +4.2% ad val.".

(B) by striking out "3.7% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential +3.7% ad val.", and

(c) by striking out "30% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential +30% ad val.".

(7) Item 632.42 is amended—

(A) by striking out "5.3% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential +5.3% ad val.", and

(B) by striking out "21% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential + 21% ad val.".

(8) Item 632.86 is amended—

(A) by striking out "9% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential + 9% ad val.", and

(B) by striking out "45% ad val." and inserting in lieu thereof "Fair price differential + 45% ad val.".

(c) The headnotes to part 2 of schedule 6 are amended by adding at the end thereof the following new headnote:

"5. (a) For purposes of this part, the term 'fair price differential' means, with respect to any article, the amount equal to the excess, if any, of—

(i) the fair price of such article, over

(ii) the duty declared value of such article (including cost, insurance, and freight) at the United States port of entry.

"(b)(i) For purposes of this headnote, the term 'fair price' means, with respect to an article, the sum of—

"(A) the amount determined by the Secretary of Commerce to be the average cost incurred by producers in producing such article in the United States at technologically efficient facilities, plus

(B) an amount prescribed by the Secretary of Commerce with respect to such article for general expenses and profit.

"(ii) The amount prescribed by the Secretary of Commerce under subdivision (i)(B) shall not be less than the amount determined with respect to such article under section 773(e)(1)(B) of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1677b(e)(1)(B)) at the time such amount is prescribed under subdivision (i)(B).

"(iii) By no later than December 31 of 1984, and of each year thereafter, the Secretary of Commerce shall determine, and publish in the Federal Register, the fair price for each of the following items of this part: 606.24; 606.30; 606.37; 606.39; 606.44; 632.18; 632.42; and 632.86.

"(iv) The fair price determined under subdivision (iii) shall apply during the calendar year that succeeds the calendar year in which such determination is made.".

(d) The provisions of Presidential Proclamation 4707 of December 11, 1979, which would otherwise be applicable to articles entered, or withdrawn from warehouse, for consumption after December 31, 1984, shall not apply with respect to the following items of the Tariff Schedules of the United States: 606.30; 606.37 (as added by subsection (b)(3)(B) of this section); 606.39 (as redesignated by subsection (b)(3)(A)); 606.44; 632.18; and 632.42.

On page 24 of such matter, between lines 32 and 33, insert the following:

(4) The amendments made by section 126 shall apply to articles entered after December 31, 1984.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

LET US ALL BE AMERICANS

● Mr. GOLDWATER. Mr. President, in a speech made by Henry Cabot Lodge way back in 1888, he touched on a subject that I think every American should understand, and I am going to put this into the RECORD because it will give more Americans a chance to see what that great man thought about this problem so many years ago.

It gets down to one plain, simple fact, that while every American has an ancestor, or maybe two, and in my case three, who came from a foreign country, I don't believe that we should forever be classifying ourselves as hyphenated Americans. I guess if I wanted to, I could call myself a Polish-English-Scotch-American but, in my heart, I feel I'm just plain American and that's all I ever want to be.

I submit this quotation from Henry Cabot Lodge for the RECORD:

Let every man honor and love the land of his birth and the race from which he springs and keep their memory green. It is a pious and honorable duty. But let us have done with British-Americans, Irish-Americans, German-Americans and so on, and all be Americans. If a man is going to be an American at all, let him be without any qualifying adjectives and if he is going to be something else, let him drop the word from his personal description.●

CIGARETTE LABELING REQUIREMENT

● Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I rise is support of H.R. 3979, an act that will undoubtedly save the lives of many American citizens. This year in the United States, cigarette smoking will be responsible for the premature unnecessary deaths of hundreds of thousands of men and increasing numbers of women. Unfortunately, the effects of smoking are not limited to adults who can choose not to smoke. We now know that almost 50 percent of all women do not know that smoking during pregnancy increases the risk of stillbirth and miscarriage. Forty percent of high school seniors do not believe that there is a great health risk in smoking, and their perception of those risks has continued to decline.

The financial costs of smoking are staggering as well. Billions of dollars each year are spent on medical care, lost productivity, and medicare and medicaid costs. With H.R. 3979, we are given the rare opportunity to reduce health care costs and to save lives. To abandon this opportunity would be irresponsible.

I have led many efforts for this type of legislation for a number of years. Our Committee on Labor and Human Resources, of which I am ranking minority member worked very hard at this legislation. It is, therefore, an honor for me to join the enormous group of supporters who are choosing to endorse H.R. 3979. The American public deserves the additional information and education that this measure will provide. We can all take pride in what our dedication in passing this legislation will offer to our fellow citizens.●

POLITICAL DOWNGRADING OF OUR MILITARY

● Mr. GOLDWATER. Mr. President, the efforts to downgrade, belittle, and actually insult our military I guess will never end. Recently, in Aerospace Daily, I read a release by the House Democratic Study Group—whoever they are—stating that, following up a House Appropriations Committee staff report which has already been thoroughly and properly chastised as being, not only untrue, but dishonest, has come out with a "hard-hitting followup." The report does not break any new ground, they say, but puts together an extensive list of major quality problems and defective weapons. It further goes on to blame the Reagan administration. These reports never seem to end.

Now, the interesting thing about this report is that it was written by one man—a man who has never been in the military, has never worked in the Department of Defense, who has an undergraduate degree and a Ph.D. and worked at the Library of Congress on foreign policy issues. How this man could possibly pose as an expert in defense and foreign policy is beyond me and, frankly, I am getting a little bit fed up with people commenting on and criticizing the military who have never been in uniform.

I am not belittling the academic approach to an issue, but an academic approach on military issues is not sufficient. There has to be some practical experience to serve as a base for the critic.

I offer these remarks for the RECORD and I will continue to do so with every political effort I see made solely to make our military look bad.●

GRANTING U.S. CITIZENSHIP TO VLADIMIR YAKIMETZ

● Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, by concurring in the technical amendment added in the House to S. 1989, the Senate has now cleared for the President's signature a bill to confer U.S. citizenship on Mr. Vladimir V. Yakimetz.

Mr. Yakimetz, recently a citizen of the Soviet Union, worked until December 1983 as an international civil servant in the U.N. Secretariat in New York City. With U.S. citizenship, he may soon be reappointed to his post as budget officer in the Office of Program Planning and Coordination. And it will be clear to the world that a U.N. employee is able to abide by the charter and continue to work at the United Nations.

S. 1989 is a private bill with a public purpose. The purpose is to encourage employees of the United Nations to believe in—and to uphold—the charter of the United Nations.

Passage of S. 1989 will not make the United Nations perfect. But it would be a tangible demonstration of congressional support for the noble principles enshrined in the charter. It would represent a small step toward enabling the United Nations to live up to those principles.

The case for the bill before us may be put simply:

Mr. Yakimetz is a man who has lived up to the charter, and—due to the intervention of the Soviet Government—has lost his job at the United Nations in consequence. With American citizenship, he will be able to return to his post as a U.N. employee, beholden to no interest other than the United Nations.

I reveal no closely held secret of the intelligence community when I state that it is standard practice for Soviet bloc employees at the United Nations to accept instruction from their governments and to use their privileged diplomatic positions in New York to engage in espionage against the United States and other nations. This is in unambiguous violation of article 100 of the U.N. Charter which states that:

In the performance of their duties the Secretary-General and the staff shall not seek or receive instructions from any government or from any other authority external to the Organization.

It may fairly be said that this provision lies at the very heart of what is required of an international organization if it is to function as intended. If the organization is ever to enjoy the confidence of member states, the Secretariat must be truly international in character.

Vladimir Yakimetz merits our attention precisely because he has sought to live up to the principle expressed in article 100.

In 1982, while serving, as he had for several years, as a program officer responsible for budget planning in the Department of International Economic and Social Affairs, Mr. Yakimetz was instructed by officials of the Soviet mission at the United Nations to engage in activities he knew to be inconsistent with his oath as an international civil servant. He refused, and was consequently ordered back to Moscow.

Mr. Yakimetz thereupon requested, and received, on February 9, 1983, political asylum in the United States. The Soviets, not surprisingly, sought to have him dismissed from the United Nations.

To his great credit, Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar decided to permit Mr. Yakimetz to remain at the United Nations through the conclusion of his employment contract, despite the fact that the country which had seconded him to the United Nations—the U.S.S.R.—no longer wanted him to remain there.

While this represented a certain measure of victory for the principle of independence in the international civil service, it was only an interim solution. When Mr. Yakimetz's contract expired on December 26, 1983, the Secretary General was bound by the precedents of the United Nations not to employ him unless he were to be seconded by a member country of the United Nations.

In order to be seconded, Mr. Yakimetz must be a citizen of said member country. For a number of reasons, the logical choice is the United States—not least because it would be in the American national interest to see that the often-abused principle of an independent U.N. civil service is strengthened in practice, as it would be by retention of Mr. Yakimetz in the U.N. Secretariat.

Thus S. 1989, and the proposal to expedite the citizenship process for Vladimir Yakimetz. With American citizenship, he will promptly be seconded and rehired. And the employees of the United Nations will see that it is possible to abide by the charter.

It is important to note that Vladimir Yakimetz does not seek early citizenship for personal gain or convenience. Having been granted political asylum, he could look forward to becoming an American citizen in the course of time through the normal procedures. With his background as a physicist, linguist, and administrator, he could also expect to fare well in the American job market.

Yet Mr. Yakimetz believes in abiding by the U.N. Charter, and would like to continue to do so, an employee of the Secretariat. If he did not, he could easily have cooperated with the Soviet mission at the United Nations in violating that charter.

The permanent representative of the United States to the United Nations, Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, has written me in support of this effort, noting in her letter that "the immediate bestowal of U.S. citizenship on this worthy individual who has chosen freedom seems to me not only warranted but essential."

The principles of the U.N. Charter, the noble goal of an international civil service and the personal courage of Vladimir Yakimetz deserve the recognition this bill accords.

I ask that the full text of S. 1989, as passed, and the text of a recent article from the New York Times about Vladimir Yakimetz be printed in the RECORD.

The material follows:

S. 1989

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That in the naturalization of Vladimir Victorovich Yakimetz under chapter 2 of title III of the Immigration and Nationality Act, notwithstanding section 310(d) of that Act, section 313 of that Act shall not apply and for purposes of section 316 of that Act periods of residence in the United States before the date of the enactment of this Act shall be considered periods of residence after being lawfully admitted for permanent residence.

RUSSIAN EX-U.N. EMPLOYEE SAYS SOVIET VIOLATES CHARTER

(By Richard Bernstein)

UNITED NATIONS, NY, July 16.—A former Soviet employee here who defected rather than return to Moscow says the Soviet Mission is violating the United Nations Charter by requiring Soviet citizens who work for the Secretariat to follow the mission's orders.

They also must provide a host of services for the Soviet Government, according to the former Secretariat employee, Vladimir V. Yakimetz.

Mr. Yakimetz, 47 years old, held a middle-level position in the Office of Program Planning and Coordination, which makes long-range plans for the administration of the United Nations.

According to United Nations rules, the Soviet Government should have had no control over Mr. Yakimetz. According to Article 100 of the Charter, a Secretariat employee is forbidden to "seek or receive instruction from any government."

Yet, in interviews here recently, Mr. Yakimetz detailed what is privately conceded by diplomats and officials: that Soviet citizens working in the Secretariat are expected to provide services to their Government.

"UNDER MISSION'S ORDERS"

I functioned directly under the mission's orders," he said. "I did not lift a finger without the Soviet Mission knowing about it. We might be asked to analyze a certain report or to prepare materials for a particular agenda item at the General Assembly. You can be asked to spy on your division at the U.N. Certainly, you are asked to report on transfers and promotions, to find out where there might be chances to get in more Soviet employees."

For two years, Mr. Yakimetz was on a six-member committee that advised the appointments and promotions board of the Secretariat. In that post, he said, he operated directly under instructions from the Soviet Mission.

"It was my direct responsibility to see that every Russian proposed by the Government was admitted," he said. Another obligation was to block action on people the mission deemed undesirable.

Mr. Yakimetz, a former physics instructor at the Moscow Physical-Technical Institute in a northern Moscow suburb, said Soviet employees were asked to collect scientific and technical data, and for that purpose he became a member of the American Physical Society.

"I sent a lot of stuff to Moscow," he said. "They were pretty interested in it. As a member of the American Physical Society, I received newsletters and magazines."

PRODUCTS ON STRATEGIC LIST

He added that, as a member of the Secretariat, he found himself in communication with American companies involved in high technology.

Not one of the papers that Mr. Yakimetz saw was secret. But, he said, "some of the products, I presume, are on the strategic list, because some of the manufacturers I correspond with were among the companies that were selling strategic equipment to Moscow through third countries."

A spokesman for the Soviet Mission, Anatoly N. Khudyakov, said he had no comment on Mr. Yakimetz's remarks.

Mr. Yakimetz said he defected because he feared that the Soviet Government was trying to cut short his career at the United Nations. He said that, in late 1982 and early 1983, the personnel director of the Soviet Mission pressed him to seek a leave of absence to return to Moscow and train a replacement. He was granted political asylum in February 1983.

CONTRACT EXTENSION DENIED

Last December, under pressure from the Soviet Mission, the office of Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar refused to extend Mr. Yakimetz's contract. A spokesman for Mr. Perez de Cuellar said that Mr. Yakimetz, having been temporarily assigned to the United Nations by his Government, could not stay against its will.

Most Western employees of the Secretariat are private citizens, although many have earlier served in their governments. But citizens of most Communist countries are employed by their governments and are detached to work for the Secretariat.

Some senior Secretariat officials concede that the Russians do not technically adhere to the rules on the independence of international civil servants, and staff members with knowledge of Soviet practices say that, in effect, even when Eastern bloc citizens serve in the Secretariat they are treated as if they are still members of their own government bureaucracies.

APPEAL IS UNSUCCESSFUL

Mr. Yakimetz appealed the decision of the Secretary General's office to a three-person administrative tribunal headed by a Hungarian. Last month, the tribunal, meeting in Geneva, denied the request.

In the interview, Mr. Yakimetz said that he had spent nearly 15 years pursuing his career. "I see my life as completely disrupted by this decision," he said. "Of course, the Soviet Government will be glad to hear that."

Mr. Yakimetz began his career at the United Nations in 1969 when he left his teaching post to become a technical translator in the Secretariat. After five years, he returned to Moscow to study at the Academy of Foreign Trade. He returned to New York in 1977, again as a United Nations translator. Three years ago he was transferred to the Office of Planning and Coordination.

Mr. Yakimetz left his job when his contract expired in December, its renewal having been rejected by Mr. Perez de Cuellar. Since then, he said, his only income has come from occasional translation jobs. Mr. Yakimetz said he and his wife, Alla, a dentist who worked in the Soviet Mission before his defection, have been denied contact with their daughter and their parents in Moscow.●

LORAIN COUNTY SENIOR VOLUNTEERS

● Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I am pleased to recognize the valuable work of 400 senior volunteers in Lorain County, OH, who participate in the Retired Senior Volunteer Program [RSVP]. The Lorain County RSVP Program will hold their eighth annual volunteer recognition luncheon on October 11, 1984. At this luncheon, 400 senior volunteers will be honored for their 68,000 hours of service during 1984.

Under the leadership of Constance Garrett, director, and her capable staff, these senior volunteers are providing valuable services in 76 nonprofit organizations and governmental agencies in Lorain County. In addition to assignments in schools, hospitals, and senior centers, Lorain County's senior volunteers serve in a number of innovative areas. For example, RSVP volunteers have put together a retirement planning program to help employees of local industries and businesses. Volunteers also work at Genesis House, a home for battered women. Through assignments with the local courts system, senior volunteers supervise juveniles and adult offenders participating in the community service "payback" programs. All of the RSVP volunteers have given generously of their time, talents, patience and wisdom to benefit their community.

As the ranking Democratic member of the Senate Special Committee on Aging, I strongly support the Retired Senior Volunteer Program and the other Older American Volunteer programs. The RSVP Program was created in 1969, and has grown to support 345,200 volunteers in 730 projects throughout the country. The program is designed to provide volunteer opportunities for persons age 60 and over in a variety of community settings. Volunteers serve in such areas as youth counseling, literacy enhancement, long-term care, crime prevention, housing rehabilitation, and nutrition. RSVP sponsors include State and local governments, schools, hospitals, community organizations, and senior centers.

Congress recently passed legislation reauthorizing the Older American Volunteer programs for an additional 3 years. We recognize that volunteer participation in human services is necessary in meeting community and national needs. The contributions of older Americans are particularly vital during the current economic period when demand for services has grown but Government assistance has been frozen at current levels or cut back.

I know my colleagues in the Senate join me in congratulating the RSVP volunteers in Lorain County for their fine work.●

MART NIKLUS, PRISONER OF CONSCIENCE, TURNS FIFTY

● Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, on September 22, Mart Niklus will mark his 50th birthday. Such an occasion is, for many men and women, a time for taking stock: For reviewing one's past life and contemplating one's future. In Mr. Niklus' case, this occasion has a special poignancy. He will spend his 50th birthday as a Prisoner of Conscience in the notorious Soviet Chistopol prison, where Anatoly Shcharansky is also incarcerated.

Mart Niklus was born in Tartu, Estonia, on September 22, 1934. Graduated from Tartu University with a degree in biology-zoology in 1957, he was imprisoned for the first time just 1 year later. In January 1959, he was sentenced to 10 years in a labor camp and 3 years of internal exile for sending photographs of Estonia to the West. Released in 1966, he was unable to pursue his career, working first as a laborer and subsequently as a teacher of foreign languages. In 1975 a new period of harassment and imprisonment began. Dismissed from his job in 1979, he sought unsuccessfully to emigrate to join relatives in Sweden in 1980. Formally tried in January 1981, Mart Niklus was found guilty of anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda and sentenced to 10 years in a special regime hard labor camp and 5 years' internal exile. His friend and colleague Juri Kukk, who was tried and sentenced with him, has since died.

Apart from the 1966–75 period, Mart Niklus has spent virtually all of his adult life in prison. A courageous spokesman for his Estonian heritage, he has been condemned repeatedly for anti-Soviet activities. Even while imprisoned, he has remained outspoken in his protests against Soviet violations of human and national rights.

More than 2 years ago, Congress approved House Concurrent Resolution 218, calling on the Soviet Government to release Mart Niklus from prison and permit him to emigrate. Today, on his 50th birthday, our thoughts are with him. We must renew our call for his freedom, and reaffirm the principles of liberty, human dignity, and the rule of law which he continues so valiantly to represent.●

PAWSOX TAKE GOVERNOR'S CUP

● Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, last week, the Pawtucket Red Sox, a triple-A a minor league baseball team from Pawtucket, RI, won the International League's highest prize, the Governor's Cup, in a stunning come-from-behind victory over the Maine Guides.

The PawSox ranked fourth in the league during the regular season. After defeating the Columbus Clippers of Ohio in the semifinals, the PawSox went on to take the championship from the Maine Guides in a dramatic five-game series. The PawSox lost the first two home games against the Guides, but came from behind to trounce the Guides in the final three games of the series, making the PawSox league champions for the first time since 1973.

In just 2 short years, manager Tony Torchia has taken the PawSox from "cellar dwellers" to league champions. Under Tony Torchia's guidance, the PawSox have become the kind of team that has made baseball America's favorite sport.

Mr. President, I would like to heartily commend PawSox owner Ben Mondor for the remarkable job he has done in developing a top-notch ball club. Every year, when PawSox fans flock to McCoy Stadium in Pawtucket to see their team play, they are greeted by new improvements initiated by Ben Mondor. Whether it's a new scoreboard or a better playing field, McCoy Stadium has taken on an air of professional sports seldom associated with a minor league baseball team. Ben Mondor has made McCoy Stadium and the Pawtucket Red Sox a source of great pride for all Rhode Islanders, sports fans or not.

Mr. President, I would also like to note that the two teams vying for the championship in the International League were the only two New England teams in that League. In fact, the Pawtucket Red Sox and the Maine Guides are the only two triple-A teams in New England. May I commend the players, coaches, and owners of both teams for an outstanding season of minor league baseball.●

SATIRE AND CIGARETTE SMOKING

● Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. President, humor and satire can often give us valuable perspective in dealing with controversial matters. Garrison Keillor does just that for the smoking controversy in his witty story "End of the Trail," which appears in the current issue of the New Yorker. I ask that Mr. Keillor's story be printed in the RECORD.

END OF THE TRAIL

The last cigarette smokers in America were located in a box canyon south of Donner Pass in the High Sierra by two federal tobacco agents in a helicopter who spotted the little smoke puffs just before noon. One of them, the district chief, called in the ground team by air-to-ground radio. Six men in camouflage outfits, members of a crack anti-smoking joggers unit, moved quickly across the rugged terrain, surrounded the bunch in their hideout, subdued them with tear gas, and made them lie face down on the gravel in the hot August sun. There were three females and two males, all in their mid-forties. They had been on the run since the adoption of the Twenty-eighth Amendment.

The chief, a trim, muscular man in neatly pressed khakis who carried a riding crop, paced back and forth along the line of motionless shoe soles. "What are you people using for brains? Can't you read?" he snapped, flicking the crop at their ankles. He bent down and snatched up an empty pack of Marlboros and thrust it in the face of a pale, sweaty man whose breath came in short, terrified gasps. "Look at this! This warning has been there for decades! Want me to read it to you? Want me to give you the statistics? What does it take to make you understand? Look at me! Speak up! I can't hear you!"

In fact, the smokers had been very subdued long before the acrid tear-gas fumes drifted into their hideout, a narrow cave near the canyon mouth. They knew the end was near. Days before, they had lost radio contact with the only other band of smokers they knew of: five writers holed up in an Oakland apartment. It had been three weeks since the Donner group's last supply drop from the air, forty pounds of barbecued ribs, ten Picnic Tubs of Jimbo deep-fried chicken, and six cartons of smokes, all mentholated. Agents who searched the cave found exactly two cigarettes. There was not a single shred of tobacco found in any of the thousands of discarded butts. The two cigarettes were hidden in the lining of a sleeping bag, and the general disorder in the cave—clothing and personal effects strewn from hell to breakfast—indicated that some smokers had searched frantically for a smoke that very morning. Blackened remnants of what appeared to be cabbage leaves lay in the smoldering campfire.

"Move 'em out of here!" the chief said. "They disgust me."

Among the personal effects were four empty packs, carefully slit open, the blank insides covered with handwriting. An agent picked them up and put them in a plastic bag, for evidence. They read:

DEAR LINDSAY & MATT—This is to let y. know I'm OK & w. friends tho how this w. reach you I dont know. 5 of us are in the mts (dont know where). I never thot it wld come to this. All those yrs as ashtrays vanishd fr parties & old pals made sarc remarks & FAA crackd down & smoke sect. became closet, I thot if I just was discreet & smokd in prv & took mints I'd get by but then yr dad quit & I had to go undergrnd. Bsmnt, gar., wet twls, A/C, etc. Felt guilty but contd, couldnt stop. Or didnt. Too late for that now. Gotta go on midnt watch. More soon. Love, Mother.

MY DEAR CHILDREN—Down to 1 cart PlMls. Not my fav. Down to 1 cg/day. After supper. Hate to say it but it tastes fant. So rich, so mild. I know you never approvd, Sorry. In 50s it was diffrnt, we all smokd. Felt like movies. So gracefl, tak'g cg from pk, the mtch, the lite, one smooth move. Food, sex, then smoke. Lng drags. Lrnd Fr. exh. Then sudd. it was 82 and signs apprd (Thanx for Not S). In my home! Kids naggng like fishwives & yr dad sudd. went out for track. I felt ambushed. Bob Dylan smokd, Carson, Beatles. I mean WE'RE NOT CRIMINALS. Sorry. Too late now. More soon. Love, Mother.

DEAR KIDS—This may be last letter, theyre closing in. Planes o'head every day now. Dogs in dist. Men w. ldspkrs. Flares. Oakland chapt got busted last pm. Was w. then on radio when feds came. Love, Mother.

DEAR L & M—This is it. They saw us. I have one left and am smoking it now. Gd it taste gd. My last cg. Then its all over. I'm OK. I'm ready. Its a better thng I do now than I hv ever done. I love you both. . . .

The five smokers were handcuffed and transported to a federal detention camp in Oregon, where they were held in pup tents for months. They were charged with conspiracy to obtain, and willful possession of, tobacco, and were convicted in minutes, and were sentenced to write 20,000 words apiece on the topic "Personal Integrity" by a judge who had quit cigarettes when the price went to 35 cents and he could not justify the expense.

The author of the letters was soon reunited with her children, and one night, while crossing a busy intersection near their home in Chicago, she saved them from sure death by pulling them back from the path of a speeding car. Her husband, who had just been telling her she could stand to lose some weight, was killed instantly, however.●

KIDNAPED CHILDREN INFORMATION ANNOUNCEMENTS

● Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, I rise today to join as a cosponsor of Senate Concurrent Resolution 133, which expresses the sense of the Senate that major television networks, their affiliates, and independent stations should broadcast information on kidnaped children as public service announcements.

Every year in America 150,000 children disappear forever. Statistics show that we have a better chance of finding a stolen car than we do of finding a stolen child. This outrageous situation must not be tolerated.

Our children are at risk: no family is immune to this vicious threat. Innocent children are being snatched from backyards, schoolyards, and neighborhood streets.

On July 16, Antonella Mattina disappeared from the streets of Flushing, NY. This very responsible 12-year-old was running an errand for her father. Shortly after she made a deposit at a local bank, she vanished into thin air. There are no witnesses and no clues to help in tracing her. Antonella's family has entered an unceasing nightmare. Their only hope is that publicity about Antonella's plight may produce a lead for the police to follow. We must do all we can to help Antonella and every other child caught in a similar trap.

Consider the fate of the 150,000 children who disappear each year. Many are taken by divorced or separated parents and live the life of fugitives under assumed names, never to see their other parent again. Another 20,000 to 50,000 are abducted by strangers and never seen alive again. Many of these children who are abducted by strangers are sexually abused, forced into prostitution and child pornography, or murdered. Each year, 5,000 of these stolen children are later found murdered and sexually abused.

Television broadcasts are one of the most effective methods of locating missing children. One measure of their effectiveness was seen in the first telecast of "Adam," a docu-drama about the kidnaping and murder of a 6-year-old boy. At the end of this TV program, pictures of 55 missing children were shown. As a result of the thousands of calls received after this broadcast, 13 missing children were reunited with their families—a 24 percent return.

Mr. President, let us remember Antonella Mattina and all the thousands of stolen children. Let us heed their voices crying out for help. Let us find these missing children and return them to their families. I urge my colleagues to join with me in supporting this important resolution.●

SENATE CONSIDERATION OF THE GENOCIDE CONVENTION

● Mr. DODD. Mr. President, today the Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted to report to the Senate the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, known in short as the Genocide Convention, and recommended to the Senate that it give advice and consent to its ratification. The vote was unanimous with one Senator voting "present." This is the fifth time that the full committee decided to report this treaty favorably, and this action opens the way to remove a painful embarrassment from our country's otherwise outstanding record as a leader in international law and the protection of human rights.

We have a propitious historic moment when a President, who is a self-professed conservative, declares his full support for the long overdue ratification of this treaty, meeting thereby the consensus of the overwhelming majority of this body.

We cannot let this opportunity slip by and let this treaty go back into deep coma once again. After the vote on the Convention, I proposed a committee resolution urging the Senate leadership to take up the consideration of the Genocide Convention immediately and seek to bring it to a final vote prior to adjournment.

Mr. President, I am pleased to notify my colleagues that, with the support of the chairman and the ranking minority member of our committee, Senators PERCY and PELL, my resolution passed unanimously, with no dissenting vote. I am making this statement to let all Senators know of the urgency and importance the Foreign Relations Committee assigns to this matter, and that not one Senator disagrees with the notion that this treaty should be acted on promptly.

I ask that the text of the resolution be included here at the end of my remarks.

Resolved, That the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations hereby urges the Senate leadership to proceed immediately to the consideration of the Genocide Convention (Ex. O, 81-1) and seek to complete action on it prior to adjournment.●

PRESIDENT REAGAN'S REJECTION OF THE INTERNATIONAL TRADE COMMISSION'S RECOMMENDATIONS OF IMPORT RELIEF FOR THE STEEL INDUSTRY

● Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I am deeply disappointed with President Reagan's rejection of the International Trade Commission's recommendations of import relief for the American steel industry. In 1980, candidate Reagan traveled to Youngstown, OH, and promised to get the steel industry back on its feet. Four years later, under President Reagan, steel imports have surged to an incredible 33 percent of our domestic market; thousands of steelworkers are unemployed and countless other jobs are at risk. The American steel industry is flat on its back—beaten down by a relentless tide of unfairly traded foreign steel—and all the President offers is a shrug of his shoulders and a sleight of hand. In short, President Reagan's latest steel policy can be summarized as three "H's." It is hokum, ho-hum, and hoodwink.

It is hokum because the President's ill-defined call for the negotiation of restraints on steel imports fails to provide meaningful, comprehensive relief for the steel industry and its workers.

It is ho-hum because it leaves the steel industry, its workers, and their communities vulnerable to continued injury by imports for an indefinite period of time.

It is hoodwink because the President portrays this decision as an example of his "fair trade" policy when, in fact, he could have spared the steel industry, its workers, and the taxpayers needless suffering and expense if he had only kept the promise he made 4 years ago to enforce our trade laws against unfair imports.

News accounts of the President's decision have described it as a "major victory" for Budget Director David Stockman, who had been advocating this course of inaction. Well, the President may have handed a major victory to David Stockman—but he has dealt a crushing defeat to America's steelworkers, their families, and their communities.●

COMMEMORATING THE 50TH ANNIVERSARY OF SALVE REGINA—THE NEWPORT COLLEGE

● Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, today Salve Regina—the Newport College—is celebrating the 50th anniversary of the granting of its charter by the Rhode Island General Assembly. Although the charter was granted in 1934, the college didn't open its doors until 1947. Salve Regina was founded as a women's college devoted to promoting virtue and piety and learning by 11 Catholic nuns from the Sisters of Mercy.

These nuns worked diligently to obtain the finances and property needed to fulfill their dreams. Throughout the 13-year period between the granting of the charter and the school's opening, these dedicated religious women gathered books for the library and trained other members of their order as professors. Finally, through a gift to the Catholic diocese of Rhode Island of "Ochre Court," an oceanfront mansion in Newport by financier Robert Goelet, the dream of the first Catholic women's college in Rhode Island became a reality. Salve Regina opened the doors of its single building with 58 women students. Today there are 2,000 students, both men and women, and the campus includes 65 acres of land and several buildings.

Mr. President, at today's ceremonies, nine individuals are being awarded honorary degrees for their contributions as role models for young people. Among the recipients are four Sisters of Mercy: Sister Mary Noel Blute who currently serves as provincial administrator of the Sisters of Mercy in the Providence Province and is the grand niece of Sister M. Teresita Corrigan whose name appears on the Salve Regina charter; Sister Mary Philemon Banigan, who has taught at Salve Regina since 1950; Sister M. Rosalina Flaherty, the principal of St. Paul's School in Cranston, RI; and Sister Susanne Breckel who is director and counseling psychologist at the Consultation Center of the Albany Roman Catholic Dioceses. In addition to these outstanding women who have devoted their lives to education, five others will receive honorary degrees for their contribution as role models: Ray Meyer, retired basketball coach from DePaul University; Carl and Rachel Rossow, the founders of Alpha and Omega, Inc., which provides care to the severely disabled; actress Betty Hutton; and Joseph Gerard Brennan, educator, author, and scholar.

I would like to join with my colleague from Rhode Island, Senator PELL, who spoke so eloquently last Monday on behalf of Salve Regina, in congratulating this fine college on its 50th anniversary. The dedication and devotion of its administrators has never waned and the quality of its education has always been sustained.

Salve Regina and all of the students who pass through its halls should look forward to a bright future and at least another 50 years of growth.

I ask that this editorial from today's Providence Journal be included in the RECORD following my remarks.

The editorial follows:

[From the Providence Journal, Sept. 19, 1984]

AS SALVE REGINA OBSERVES ITS 50TH ANNIVERSARY

The title of that old wartime ditty, "Comin' In on a Wing and a Prayer," is an apt description of the infancy of Salve Regina—The Newport College. Now a mature, solidly-established coeducational institution, it celebrates today the 50th anniversary of the granting of its charter.

"Salve," as it is known to its friends and neighbors, is a tribute to faith, the solidarity of Catholic education and an extraordinary cooperative effort by nuns and lay people.

The financial and logistical odds against the college's birth and survival were heavy. The charter approved in 1934 by the General Assembly lay dormant for 13 years, but there was no quenching of the hope in the hearts of a determined group of the Sisters of Mercy of the Union. When Mr. and Mrs. Robert Goelet of Newport gave their French-style chateau, Ochre Court, to the diocese, the college found a home.

Opening the doors in 1947 was one thing; staying open was another. Salve could have become just an elitist shelter for well-to-do young women. Such a course of exclusivity would have been fatal; instead, the nuns had a much higher concept of mission. They saw Salve as part of a worldwide community of persons educated in Catholic values that would, in the words of Vatican Council II, help them in "constructing the temporal order rightly."

Salve Regina (the words, "Hail Queen!" open one of the Church's great popular prayers to Mary) has become a welcome part of the Newport scene. The administration has skillfully molded a flexible and responsive curriculum, while keeping expansion within a manageable scale. When its 100th anniversary rolls around, the Salve concept of a college will still 'work,' because it is based on the changing (and yet immutable) needs of new generations of men and women.●

ORDERS FOR THURSDAY

ORDER FOR RECESS UNTIL 11 A.M. TOMORROW

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate stands in recess today, it convene at the hour of 11 a.m. tomorrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ORDER FOR RECOGNITION OF CERTAIN SENATORS

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that following the time of the two leaders under the standing order, there be a special order for the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. PROXMIRE] to be recognized for not to exceed 15 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ORDER FOR ROUTINE MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. STEVENS. Following that special order, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there be a period for the transaction of routine morning business not to extend beyond the hour of 11:30 a.m., with statements therein limited to not more than 5 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROGRAM

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I might state for the information of the Senate that following the period for the transaction of routine morning business tomorrow, the Senate will resume consideration of the trade bill, H.R. 3398.

Following the conclusion of the trade bill, the Senate will resume consideration of TV in the Senate, Senate Resolution 66.

At some point tomorrow, it will be the intention of the leadership to proceed to the highway bill.

Mr. President, I announce at the request of the majority leader that tomorrow is expected to be a late, late night.

Does my good friend from West Virginia have any further business?

Mr. BYRD. No. I thank the distinguished acting majority leader.

RECESS UNTIL 11 A.M. TOMORROW

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, if there is no further business to come before the Senate, I move that the Senate stand in recess in accordance with the previous order.

The motion was agreed to; and, at 6:32 p.m., the Senate recessed until tomorrow, Thursday, September 20, 1984, at 11 a.m.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate September 19, 1984:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Wednesday, September 19, 1984

The House met at 12 o'clock noon. The Chaplain, Rev. James David Ford, D.D., offered the following prayer:

We recognize, O God, that lives are filled with all the emotions of the human heart—moments of joy and saddness, of tears and laughter. Our days are touched by visions of hope and glimpses of despair, and we turn to You, O God, in the assurance that our lives have eternal significance. In this our prayer, we give thanks that Your loving and forgiving spirit is with us wherever we walk and Your abiding presence comforts and encourages us always. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Sparrow, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed joint resolutions of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S.J. Res. 201. Joint resolution to provide for the designation of the week of November 25 through December 1, 1984, as "National Epidermolysis Bullosa Awareness Week";

S.J. Res. 304. Joint resolution to designate the month of October 1984 as "National Quality Month"; and

S.J. Res. 321. Joint resolution to designate the week of October 14, 1984, through October 21, 1984, as "National Housing Week."

The message also announced that pursuant to sections 1928a–1928d of title 22 of the United States Code, as amended, the Vice President appoints the following Senators as members of the Senate delegation to the North Atlantic Assembly fall meeting, to be held in Brussels, Belgium, November 11 through November 16, 1984: Mr. RANDOLPH, Mr. PELL, Mr. STEVENS, Mr. EAGLETON, Mr. ROTH, Mr. BENTSEN, Mr. ZORINSKY, Mr. CHAFEE, Mr. SARBANES, Mr. HATCH, Mr. HEFLIN, Mr. ANDREWS, and Mr. MURKOWSKI.

APPPOINTMENT OF CONFEREES ON H.R. 5743, AGRICULTURE RURAL DEVELOPMENT AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS, FISCAL YEAR 1985

Mr. WHITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 5743) making appropriations for Agriculture, rural development, and related agencies programs for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985, and for other purposes, with Senate amendments thereto, disagree to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi? The Chair hears none, and appoints the following conferees: Messrs. WHITTEN, TRAXLER, MCHUGH, NATCHER, AKAKA, WATKINS, HIGHTOWER, SMITH of Iowa, and ALEXANDER, Mrs. SMITH of Nebraska, and Messrs. ROBINSON, MYERS, ROGERS, and CONTE.

CHANGING DATE FOR COUNTING OF ELECTORAL VOTES IN 1985

Mr. WRIGHT. Mr. Speaker, I send to the desk a joint resolution (H.J. Res. 649) changing the date for the counting of the electoral votes in 1985, and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

H.J. RES. 649

Whereas section 15 of title 3, United States Code, provides that the procedure for counting electoral votes set forth in such section is to take place on the sixth day of January, and

Whereas January 6, 1985, is a Sunday: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That, in carrying out the procedure set forth in section 15 of title 3, United States Code, for 1985, "the seventh day of January" shall be substituted for "the sixth day of January" in the first sentence of such section.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GETTING OUT THE VOTE

(Mr. WYDEN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. Speaker, Mr. Mondale and President Reagan have agreed to a proposal of mine that could help encourage millions of Americans to get out and vote.

Earlier this month I asked both major party Presidential candidates to pledge that they would refrain from making an official proclamation of victory or admission of defeat on election night until after the polls had closed on the west coast.

Democratic candidate Walter Mondale has consented to my request, and late yesterday, I received a letter from President Reagan's chief of staff, James A. Baker III, that the President has also agreed to my proposal.

Now that both candidates have pledged to hold their announcements until after 11 p.m. eastern standard time on the night of the election, we have taken a huge step toward ensuring that the voters on the west coast will not be unnecessarily discouraged from going to the polls because of an early conclusion of the Presidential race.

With a simple pledge to hold off on any election night announcements until the polls close in the West, both major candidates for President have made it clear that every single vote is important.

I think the candidates' pledges make a direct statement that even in the high tech era of computer projections and exit polls, elections aren't over til they're over.

I am sure many Members will remember that in the 1980 election, the race was conceded long before the polls had closed in the Pacific time zone, including my home State of Oregon. There's no doubt that many west coast voters simply stayed at home once they understood the Presidential race was over. The agreement of President Reagan and Walter Mondale to hold off on early election night statements is an important step toward getting out the vote in 1984.

Now that both candidates have pledged to refrain from putting any official seal of approval on network projections before the polls close, I hope the networks get the message that there is tremendous bipartisan concern that the importance of voting not be diminished.

POLITICAL INSULTS

(Mr. HYDE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, last evening the Democrats trotted out

Jane Fonda, Hanoi's favorite pinup girl, at a fundraiser. This calculated insult to our colleagues such as JEREMIAH DENTON in the other body and JOHN MCCAIN who were being tortured in North Vietnam prison camps while Ms. Fonda was sitting and getting her picture taken in North Vietnamese gun turrets, this calculated insult will not be missed by the rest of America.

Second, Walter Mondale has made a charge that reaches a new low in political debate when he said President Reagan would rather win a nuclear war than prevent one. Considering the hundreds of millions of people that would be killed in a nuclear war, I would suggest his speech writers get some antirabies shots.

TULANE UNIVERSITY CELEBRATES ITS SESQUICENTENNIAL YEAR

(Mrs. BOGGS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. BOGGS. Mr. Speaker, a very important event for the future of Louisiana and the United States occurred 150 years ago this month. In 1834 seven young doctors started the Medical College of Louisiana to teach others how to combat the diseases that plagued the region.

From its roots as a pioneering medical college, that institution grew over the next 50 years, adding a liberal arts and sciences college and a law faculty. In 1884 it became Tulane University, named in honor of Paul Tulane, a noted merchant and philanthropist who was its benefactor.

From those simple beginnings has come a flourishing university that, through teaching and research in 11 schools and colleges and through the accomplishments of almost 75,000 alumni, has made significant contributions to life and culture—in the South, throughout the United States, and across the world.

As an alumna of Newcomb College, I am very proud of the education I received at Tulane. The wide variety of academic courses, complemented by multiple civic, cultural, and social opportunities, provided me with an understanding of human nature and a respect for the cultural attitudes and customs of all people. I am grateful that Newcomb and Tulane are keeping pace with the changing role of women and continuing to provide students with the skills necessary for successful competition.

In 1984 Tulane University has become one of the foremost private universities in the Nation. I am proud of Tulane's contributions and I salute it as it celebrates its sesquicentennial year.

IMMIGRATION REFORM ACT

(Mr. PACKARD asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PACKARD. Mr. Speaker, this afternoon the conference committee for the Immigration Reform Act will be resuming their hearings and their debate. It is extremely important that we have a bill on immigration policy. The existing policy does not work and is creating serious problems for the farmers throughout this country as well as for guest workers.

Inherent within the bill are the provisions known as the Panetta-Morrison amendment that would protect the farmers of perishable crops. We trust that the leadership of the House will use their influence to help to bring a successful bill out of the conference committee.

ELIMINATING NEW HAMPSHIRE PRIMARY

(Mr. D'AMOURS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. D'AMOURS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to note that it is embarrassing and distressing to me that with all of the problems facing this country today: deficits, the threat of nuclear war, economic and social problems, the time of this institution shall be taken up by the House Administration Committee and the time of the Members of this institution shall be taken up in trying to prevent my State of New Hampshire from conducting its traditional first in the national Presidential primary.

I can understand the pique and the frustrations and perhaps even the anger of many Members of this body over the current political state of affairs. But why attack the State of New Hampshire simply because it has over the past 32 years through its primary shown that it is totally in tune with the United States by accurately selecting every President who has been elected in the past 32 years.

Mr. Speaker, we can only hope that this foolishness will pass quickly.

NEW HAMPSHIRE PRIMARY

(Mr. GREGG asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. GREGG. Mr. Speaker, I rise with my colleague to address the action of the committee today which wants to take up the elimination of the New Hampshire primary.

To eliminate the New Hampshire Presidential primary will have a clear chilling effect on the openness of the Presidential selection process in this country. Individuals without resources, individuals who have not been annointed by the Washington power base will not be able to seek public office and will not be able to seek the Presidency of the United States without the New Hampshire primary.

□ 1010

If you eliminate the New Hampshire primary you will eliminate one of the few opportunities the candidates of lesser national attention have to participate in national politics. If you eliminate the New Hampshire primary you significantly tarnish that fundamental American dream which is that everyone in this country has an opportunity to grow up to be President.

WE NEED TO REGULATE BANKS, NOT DEREGULATE THEM

(Mr. ROEMER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ROEMER. Mr. Speaker, why should we worry about the more than 10,000 relatively small banks scattered around our country? I mean the leading economic journals predict that if the administration wins its deregulation push for banks, we could end up with only 50 large money center banks controlling financial resources for 90 percent of the country by the turn of the century.

Won't that be great? You would not have to look your local banker in the eye; he will be in New York or on the computer.

You would not have to sort through competing financial relationships. I mean the big boys will specialize by type of loan and limit your confusing choices. You will not have to maintain a variety of business contacts to insure growth in your small business—no insurance company C, no real estate firm B, no securities dealer F. No problem, your big brother bank will handle your loan at a reasonable rate of interest, a couple of points above the prime with the requirement that you realize your real estate insurance and securities needs within their corporate umbrella.

We need to reregulate banks, not deregulate them.

Fifty large money center banks? This administration is wrong when it comes to bank deregulation.

DEMOCRATIC PARTY EMBRACES JANE FONDA

(Mr. HUNTER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Speaker, I find it unusual that only a few days after we honored America's POW and MIA families the Democratic Party could not wait to embrace Jane Fonda, the person who is charged by many POW's with making their stay in North Vietnam's prisons more miserable and more agonizing.

I quote from the Washington Post:

Bring Jane Fonda into a room of Democrats and an odd thing happens, suddenly they all look a little dazed, a little giddy and then they start spending money. Later on in auctioning off a pin it was stated "Anybody want to buy this pin now?" was called out by auctioneer and campaign committee representative Tony Coelho, "Jane touched it."

My advice to these Democratic candidates who would take money from the Democrat congressional campaign committee is "Don't take it, Jane touched it."

THE DEVASTATING IMPACT OF IMPUTED INTEREST PROVISIONS IN 1984 TAX BILL

(Mr. REID asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. REID. Mr. Speaker, more than 6,000 pieces of legislation have been introduced during the 98th Congress, each with finely tuned details to define its direction.

One especially complex bill—the Tax Reform Act of 1984—which was recently enacted, however, was somewhat misdirected and needs to be revised. Fortunately, we can still do something to correct the devastating and unintended impact of the imputed interest provisions contained in the law.

These rules go far beyond our intent to close loopholes and eliminate tax abuses. If left unresolved, however, these new provisions will seriously erode the ability of Americans to use lower rate seller financing to cope with unaffordably high conventional interest rates.

If we don't change this provision the new law will require an increase in the current 9-percent safe-harbor rate to 110 percent of applicable Federal security rates. At today's rates that means a seller could be forced to charge 15 or 16 percent to comply with the law.

There's still time to clarify existing law and, at the same time, strike a balance between the need for flexibility in seller financing and the need to end abuses in this area.

INSANITY DEFENSE LEGISLATION DEFEATED

(Mr. GEKAS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, and Members of the House, yesterday this Chamber rejected an insanity defense piece of legislation for two reasons: First, that it was brought up on suspension and thus choked off any possibility for debate and the possibility of amendments that would have made the legislation a little bit better; and second, because on the merits had the bill been passed in the form that it was finally printed, it would have made the situation much worse than already-existing law.

I now urge the Committee on Rules to act promptly to discharge that piece of legislation from its domain and to allow the process to come to the floor in an orderly manner so that we can fully debate it and finally present to the American people something for which they have been yearning for a long time, a piece of legislation that would prevent the unjust result of the Hinckley case from ever happening again.

Mr. Speaker, it is time, and we have plenty of time in the remaining few weeks of this session, it is time for the Committee on Rules to release that bill so that we can fully debate it.

I thank the Speaker.

THE COMPASSIONATE PAIN RELIEF ACT

(Mr. LIVINGSTON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, the Compassionate Pain Relief Act, a bill to make heroin available for treatment of terminally ill cancer patients, is as its name implies, extremely well intentioned. But time and time again we in Congress have proved that the best intentions often beget the worst of legislation.

This proposal is no exception to that premise.

Most importantly, whatever benefits may be derived from this bill and from the use of heroin for cancer patients can be derived from such alternative sources—as, for example, dilaudid HP.

But the dangers far outweigh the potential benefits. Already there is a high incidence of crime associated with hospital and hospice pharmacies. Law enforcement authorities—and among those—ranking members of the New Orleans police force in my hometown, insist that the allocation of heroin to these pharmacies will vastly increase the potential for disastrous criminal consequences.

Furthermore, the American Medical Association, the American Society of Hospital Pharmacies and the American Society of Internal Medicine all strongly oppose this legislation.

Finally, proponents allege that the bill is only temporary, but our experience with such social innovations tells us that this program will be far easier to implement than it will be to curtail.

Mr. Speaker, this is bad legislation, and it ought to be rejected.

REPUBLICANS ARE TALKING ABOUT WINNING A NUCLEAR WAR

(Mr. COELHO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. COELHO. Mr. Speaker, one of our previous speakers in the well today talked about the fact that our Democratic candidate for President had made some comments about Mr. Reagan trying to win a nuclear war and asked that maybe Mr. Mondale should go back to the files.

I think that the gentleman in the well should just go back to the Republican platform that was recently adopted in Dallas, TX.

In that platform it says that, "We Republicans pledge to do everything necessary so that in case of nuclear conflict the United States would clearly prevail."

Mr. Speaker, I do not think it takes much imagination to look at what Mr. Mondale said and look at what the Reagan Republicans are saying and understand that Mr. Reagan and the Republicans are talking about winning a nuclear war.

Mr. Speaker, need I say more?

WHAT WILL THE NEXT 4 YEARS BRING US IN FOREIGN POLICY

(Mr. GEJDENSON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GEJDENSON. I thank the Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, one of the questions that I think all of us as Americans have to answer is: What will the next 4 years bring us in the way of foreign policy? It is clear that in South America we now find ourselves in a situation in which things have deteriorated considerably over the last 4 years. There seems to be no progress in the situation in El Salvador, or very little; there seems to be a worsening situation in our relationship with Nicaragua, and in Guatemala there is no visible progress toward democracy.

In looking further down the hemisphere we find ourselves with a situation in Chile that has steadily worsened despite the administration's efforts at "quiet diplomacy."

□ 1020

As the American people look forward to the election, I think it is important to focus on who has a real policy for Central America, a policy that will give Americans some hope for progress, and give the people of Central and South America some hope.

America has always been a symbol and a force for democracy. It has been a force behind countries moving toward a policy of human rights. That has been missing, I feel, in the last 4 years.

What we need to do in this Chamber is to focus on Latin America and to provide the kind of leadership that the region needs. Many of those countries are our allies, and given threats to peace that exist, it is, I feel, necessary for America's to take a position of leadership in our foreign policy.

We can no longer continue the kind of misguided policy that has alienated many of our friends, policies that include the mining of the harbors in Nicaragua and the misguided support for the Contras against the Nicaraguan Government. It is a situation that has certainly not enhanced America's image in Central and South America.

We find ourselves in a position in which we have alienated many of our friends. America's position has deteriorated throughout Latin America and has, in effect, even strengthened the hands of the Soviets in the region. What we must do, as a nation, is see that we have a policy that is not simply reactive to the problems of endemic injustice, rampant hunger, and the crisis of overpopulation, but that is an activist policy that draws on the best of President Kennedy's ideas like the Peace Corps, and the Alliance for Progress.

"NO" VOTE ON H.R. 5164 IS NEEDED

(Mr. WEISS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WEISS. Mr. Speaker, the American public first learned that the CIA spied on Martin Luther King, Jr., from documents obtained through the Freedom of Information Act. The same is true of the CIA's recruitment of American blacks in the late sixties and early seventies to spy on Black Panthers, and of the CIA's continued involvement with the National Student Association.

Enactment of the CIA Information Act (H.R. 5164), a bill we will be voting on later today, will make future discoveries of this nature and others that quickly come to mind more difficult—if not impossible.

H.R. 5164 would also dangerously intrude on the power of the courts to review CIA actions and both a plaintiff and the courts would be effectively prevented from forcing the CIA to disclose improperly withheld information.

Only a few months ago the CIA was caught withholding vital information from congressional Intelligence Committees regarding the mining of Nicaragua's harbors and at this very moment appear to have violated congressional prohibitions on transferring airplanes to the Contras for use over Nicaragua.

I believe the CIA requires not less, but even closer oversight by the Congress, the courts, and the American people. I urge my colleagues to join me in voting against an unjustified increase in secrecy.

ADMINISTRATION SAYS "NO" TO FAIR TRADE IN STEEL ACT

(Mr. KOSTMAYER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KOSTMAYER. Mr. Speaker, yesterday the administration announced its long-awaited response to the steel industry's pleas for help. The President responded to the recommendations of his International Trade Commission that tough import restrictions were justified and needed.

President Reagan had the chance to say "yes" to 150,000 steelworkers who have lost their jobs since 1980—"yes, we will help."

He said, "No."

President Reagan had the chance to say "yes" to fairness and equity for an industry devastated by heavily subsidized imports.

He said, "No."

President Reagan had the chance to say "yes" to a plan, backed by both management and labor, to reinvest and revitalize a steel industry desperately in need of modernization.

He said, "No."

Mr. Speaker, the President got bad advice.

Over 200 Members of Congress, Republicans and Democrats, have cosponsored the Fair Trade in Steel Act. The bill lays out a moderate, fair, and responsible plan for 5 years of comprehensive import relief in return for a commitment by the industry to reinvest the capital generated back into plant modernization.

The President had the opportunity to implement this legislation himself. Since he has chosen not to, Mr. Speaker, I urge the Ways and Means to bring this legislation to the floor as soon as possible so that the Congress has the opportunity to address the needs and the future of this industry which is so vital to our country.

WITHDRAWAL OF NAME OF MEMBER AS COSPONSOR OF H.R. 5377

Mr. YATRON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that my name be withdrawn as a cosponsor of H.R. 5377.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 5297, CIVIL AERONAUTICS BOARD SUNSET ACT OF 1984

Mr. MINETA. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H.R. 5297) to amend the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 to terminate certain functions of the Civil Aeronautics Board, to transfer certain functions of the Board to the Secretary of Transportation, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Pursuant to the rule, the conference report is considered as having been read.

(For conference report and statement, see proceedings of the House of September 14, 1984, at page 25488.)

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California [Mr. MINETA] will be recognized for 30 minutes and the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California [Mr. MINETA].

Mr. MINETA. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I urge adoption of the conference report on the Civil Aeronautics Board Sunset Act of 1984. The conference has reported a good bill which includes all the essential provisions of the bill which passed the House by a voice vote on June 5. The conference bill will help ensure that there is a smooth transition when the Civil Aeronautics Board sunsets on December 31 and CAB's functions are taken over by the Department of Transportation.

The basic decision to sunset the CAB was made in the Airline Deregulation Act of 1978 and the bill now before us assures that this sunset can be carried out without any adverse effect on airline passengers. Of particular importance, the bill will preserve the CAB's authority to protect airline consumers. The areas in which CAB has adopted regulations to protect consumers include overbooking and denied boarding compensation, liability for lost and damaged baggage, protections on the sale of charters, smoking, and discrimination against the handicapped. Without legislation, some of these regulations would lapse and the authority of the Government to act in these areas would be ambiguous at best. The bill now before us gives the Department of Transportation authority to continue to protect consumers in all of these areas after CAB sunset.

The bill further provides that CAB's existing regulations will continue in effect, subject to future modification under rulemaking procedures.

The conference bill will also preserve the CAB's authority to deal with competitive abuses. Under this authority CAB has taken action to ensure that there are no competitive abuses by airlines which market computer reservations systems to travel agents. In recent months there have also been concerns that the larger carriers in the industry might use the right to interline with them as a device to restrict competition. This could be accomplished by selective refusals to interline or by selective refusals to interline on reasonable terms, based on competitive considerations. Under section 411 of the Federal Aviation Act CAB has authority to act against unfair competitive practices arising from agreements to interline. The conference bill transfers this authority to the Department of Transportation and we expect the Department to carefully monitor interlining practices to be sure that there are no abuses. This will help preserve the system of interlining and the major benefits it brings to consumers.

Mr. Speaker, the legislation now before us is widely supported in the aviation community, including representatives of airline passengers. The bill passed both the House and the Senate by voice votes. The bill will bring substantial benefits to consumers and to the airlines themselves, and will help minimize the problems associated with the transition to the Department of Transportation. I urge approval of the conference report.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. GLICKMAN].

Mr. GLICKMAN. I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

Mr. Speaker, I do support this bill. I want to make sure that the surviving agency, the Department of Transportation, does have the same powers that the CAB currently has to protect passengers from being bumped from overbooking or a variety of other consumer rights which a lot of people fear have been lost as a result of deregulation.

Because of airline deregulation incredible things are happening. Flights today are no longer flights tomorrow; people are not sure where they are going to end up through the hub and spoke network of the airline system, which changes very frequently. So I would like the gentleman just to assure me that those powers will be held by the Department of Transportation.

Mr. MINETA. The gentleman from Kansas is correct. All of the authority in law is being transferred to the Department of Transportation including the rules and regulations that the CAB has in effect right now.

Mr. GLICKMAN. I thank my colleague.

Mr. MINETA. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I want to associate myself with the remarks of our distinguished chairman and my good friend, the gentleman from California [Mr. MINETA].

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report on H.R. 5297, the Civil Aeronautics Board Sunset Act of 1984.

As my colleagues are aware, the Civil Aeronautics Board [CAB] will "sunset" at the end of this year. H.R. 5297 would ensure the orderly phaseout of that agency and, more importantly, would protect the traveling public from any adverse effects which might otherwise result from that change.

The sunset of the CAB is the final act in a process begun by the Airline Deregulation Act of 1978. This deregulation process was designed to try to improve airline efficiency, help to hold down average air fares, and improve air service in much of the Nation. The Deregulation Act also provided for the transfer of many of the CAB's current functions, primarily to the Department of Transportation [DOT]. These include administration of international aviation responsibilities and the small community essential air service program.

But there are many other important CAB functions, such as consumer protection, insuring the fairness of industry competitive practices, and evaluating airline fitness, on which the Deregulation Act is silent. Without the passage of H.R. 5297, there may be no agency that could assume these responsibilities. This could mean that passengers who are bumped off flights or whose luggage is lost would not receive the compensation to which they are now entitled. It could also result in the termination of CAB rules that protect nonsmoking passengers and passengers who are handicapped.

To assure that this does not happen, the conference report on H.R. 5297 will preserve these important protections by transferring existing CAB consumer regulations, as well as the Board's underlying statutory authority, to DOT. In addition, the CAB has recently issued a final rule to prevent bias in the airline computer reservations systems used by travel agents. This bill would transfer those rules to the DOT as well.

This legislation also transfers to DOT the CAB's authority over antitrust matters. This involves approval of mergers, interlocks, and agreements, and the authority to grant immunity to these transactions where necessary. The exercise of this authority frequently requires a determination of whether the transportation benefits of a particular transaction outweigh its anticompetitive effects. Given DOT's expertise in transportation matters generally, I believe it is in the best position of all the Government agencies to exercise the antitrust authority with respect to air transportation. Furthermore, consolidating the antitrust function at DOT with the other CAB functions I mentioned before would avoid the confusion and inefficiencies that would occur if they were dispersed to different Federal agencies.

Finally, the bill would transfer CAB's authority to determine a carrier's fitness to the DOT. Although the domestic fitness function was not specifically transferred by the Airline Deregulation Act, I believe it is important that the thorough inquiry now conducted by the CAB be continued after sunset. With the entry of many new airlines into the system, it is extremely important to assure the traveling public that carriers have the requisite managerial and financial capabilities and the proper compliance disposition to undertake their responsibilities. Accordingly, the legislation would require DOT to perform this function and to continue issuing separate certificates under section 401 of the act.

Mr. Speaker, this legislation results from several hearings we conducted on the economic issues associated with airline deregulation and the sunset of the Civil Aeronautics Board. As a result of this thorough inquiry, I firmly believe that it is essential that the phaseout of the CAB and the transfer of its functions be done in an orderly way, and that the traveling public continue to be protected after that phaseout is complete.

Because I am confident that the conference report on H.R. 5297 accomplishes these objectives, I urge my colleagues to support it.

□ 1050

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MINETA. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Georgia [Mr. LEVITAS] of the Aviation Subcommittee of the Committee on Public Works and Transportation.

Mr. LEVITAS. Mr. Speaker, first of all I want to thank the distinguished gentleman from California, chairman of the Aviation Subcommittee, for yielding this time to me, and I want to commend him and the ranking minority member, the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT], for the excellent work they have done in bringing this conference report to us today.

I rise in support of the conference report on the CAB sunset bill and urge my colleagues to vote in favor of it at the appropriate time.

This matter is being handled with dispatch and apparently with little fanfare or controversy. Nevertheless, it is an extremely important piece of legislation, not only for what it does in terms of the transfer of authorities to the Department of Transportation and to dealing with matters such as consumer protection and temporary continuation of the antitrust immunity procedures, but also by this legislation we are "staying the course." We are staying on the course of deregulation. We are staying on the course of sunsetting—that is, abolishing—the Civil Aeronautics Board.

In 1978 when I offered the sunset provision as an amendment to the Airline Deregulation Act, many people, both in the Congress, in the administration, and in the press said that it was not offered with any seriousness. They said that nobody was seriously going to abolish an agency of Government. They said that just was not done in Washington.

Everybody talks about sunset. Everybody makes reference to reducing the size of Government in terms of reducing its agencies, but, they said, nobody ever really did it and it was suggested that the proposal I made to sunset CAB was not offered with seriousness.

When I said time and again that the only way you deregulate is by getting rid of the regulatory agency I was serious. I was serious then, and I am serious today.

This action by going forward with CAB sunset means that at the end of this year an agency of Government. A large agency of Government will no longer exist and only those essential residual functions which are necessary to continue the functioning of the aviation industry and its commercial ecomomic aspects will be continued and even some of those will sunset themselves in just a few years.

So what do we say today to our colleagues and what do we say to the American people? We say, "It can be done." We can reduce agencies. We can sunset programs. We can sunset authority. We can get better Government through less Government. We can rely on the private sector. We can do a better job through competition and through the free-enterprise system. This legislation is a further commitment that to get the job done by having less Government, not more Government.

I personally feel this bill is, in a sense, a vindication of what I said and did. In 1978 when we were talking about airline deregulation, there were high officials in the administration and individuals in the other body who were only talking about reregulation, not deregulation. We, now, can say to the American people our promise has been fulfilled. We have kept the faith. The sunset will occur. CAB will be abolished. I want to congratulate the chairman of the subcommittee and his ranking member for making this possible, for going forward, for picking up the challenge and making it a reality.

Sunset of CAB, the abolition of an agency of Government, is not a certainty.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. MINETA. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. LEVITAS] for his leadership and help with his service on the Aviation Subcommittee.

Mr. BROYHILL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MINETA. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. BROYHILL. I appreciate the gentleman yielding to me.

Mr. Speaker, perhaps the question I have has nothing specifically to do with this bill, but it does generally, and that is the operation of National Airport.

We have been discussing the air traffic congestion at National and other major airports, but what about the automobile traffic congestion at National Airport? Every time I go out there you get to the edge of the airport within minutes and then it takes you 20 to 30 minutes to get up to the place where you check in your bags.

I wonder if the gentleman, as the chairman of the subcommittee, has been working with the FAA with respect to coming up with a different auto traffic plan at National.

Mr. MINETA. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from North Carolina raises a great issue because as a user of that airport as well, it is really a frustrating experience to try and negotiate all of the traffic to get to National.

There are some improvements that are being looked at by the FAA for National, but there is nothing in this bill that addresses the question that the gentleman raises. This is something I have talked to our colleagues from Virginia about because there is also going to have to be some help from the State of Virginia in terms of some of the relief for the traffic issues there.

Mr. BROYHILL. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman would continue to yield, and I appreciate his response to my question, I am sure that any long-range solution to this problem would take some major alteration of the roads. However, it would seem to me that on an interim basis that we could come up with some different traffic patterns that will help alleviate the problem because particularly going into that north terminal area, you have got traffic going in both directions. It seems to me that just a slight change of making it one way would alleviate the traffic congestion in that one area.

I would urge that the chairman and the ranking minority member sit down with the FAA officials who have control over National to see if they cannot get some engineers to start working on some interim plans to help relieve the auto congestion not only at the north terminal but at the main terminal as well.

Mr. MINETA. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman's comments are well taken and we will follow up with the FAA.

● Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report on H.R. 5297, the Civil Aeronautics Board Sunset Act of 1984, and urge this body to adopt this important measure.

At the outset, I would like to inform my colleagues that this bill passed the House by voice vote earlier this year and substantially the same legislation was recently adopted by the Senate by unanimous consent. What few issues remained in dispute were resolved by the conferees in a brief meeting last week and I think it is fair to say that we have produced a bill which will serve the public and the industry quite well in the years ahead.

As my colleagues are aware, the Airline Deregulation Act of 1978 [ADA] set the timetable for the deregulation of the domestic airline industry. The Civil Aeronautics Board's authority to regulate domestic pricing and entry was gradually eliminated and today airlines have the freedom to charge what they want and fly essentially wherever they want within the United States.

The ADA also provided that at the end of 1984, the CAB would sunset and those functions which were going to be retained would be transferred to other agencies. Although the deregulation act specified where most of the Board's functions would be transferred, some issues were not specifically addressed, such as consumer protection, unfair trade practices regulation and domestic carrier fitness certification. Because we felt that it was particularly important to continue these functions after sunset, H.R. 5297 explicitly transfers these responsibilities to DOT, rather than leaving it up to the litigators and the courts to decide just what Congress really intended to do.

Mr. Speaker, the conference report we are considering today can best be characterized as a consumer protection bill, primarily because it would assure that those CAB regulations which have been adopted through the years to protect air travelers will continue after the Board sunsets.

Regulations issued under these provisions include overbooking and denied boarding compensation, liability for lost or damaged baggage, protections governing the advance sale of charters, notices to passengers and airline computer reservations systems. In addition, the Board also regulates smoking aboard aircraft and prohibits discrimination in the transportation of handicapped passengers.

Unless we act to preserve the authority contained in these sections, consumers would likely find themselves without any agency to regulate in these areas. Because we believe that the protections which exist today for airline passengers are essential and must be continued, H.R. 5297 would retain the existing CAB rules, as well as the Board's underlying statutory authority, and transfer them to DOT at sunset.

In addition, the bill would continue the air carrier fitness determinations as they are now performed by the CAB under section 401 of the Federal Aviation Act, and transfer this responsibility to DOT. These determinations, which are in addition to the safety certification function performed by the FAA, involve checking a carrier's managerial competence, financial resources and the likelihood that it will comply with the appropriate laws and regulations. These inquiries have provided the traveling public with added protection by assuring that an extensive investigation into a new carrier's background will be conducted before an airline can hold itself out to the public as a common carrier.

I believe this fitness function is extremely important—and probably even more so in today's deregulated environment than ever before. While there is nothing we can do to guarantee that existing carriers will not experience financial or other difficulties after they have been around a while, I think it is incumbent upon the Federal Government to do all it can to make sure that those seeking to start an airline possess at least a minimum level of financial fitness and managerial ability.

The bill accomplishes some other important objectives which should also be specifically mentioned. The CAB's authority over mergers, acquisitions, interlocking relationships, and agreements would also be transferred to DOT, as well as the authority to grant antitrust immunity to these transactions in appropriate cases. However, the authority to grant antitrust immunity would expire on January 1, 1989 (except for cases involving agreements affecting domestic air transportation), unless Congress believed, after evaluating a DOT report on the issue, that the public interest required DOT to retain this authority beyond that time.

Mr. Speaker, the legislation before us today makes few substantive changes to the provisions of the original Airline Deregulation Act of 1978. Rather, it continues those policies which resulted in the economic deregulation of the airline industry and at the same time preserves those provisions which are necessary to assure that the traveling public will continue to be protected as it is today. Moreover, the bill has widespread support throughout the aviation community and both industry and consumer groups have urged its adoption.

For the foregoing reasons, I urge my colleagues to support the conference report on H.R. 5297.●

● Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report. The House conferees have brought back to the House a bill that is nearly identical to the original House-passed legislation. The chairman of the Subcommittee on Aviation has described the terms of the bill and the agreement reached by the conference, so I will refrain from going into detail at this point.

I will point out though that this legislation is absolutely necessary to ensure that the traveling public will continue to be protected on a number of fronts after the Civil Aeronautics Board goes out of existence at the end of this year. In areas such as denied boarding compensation, baggage liability, charters, smoking, access for the handicapped, and regulation of anticompetitive behavior, we have concluded after extensive hearings that there is a need for a Federal role on behalf of the traveling public. Without this legislation, protections in these areas will lapse or be so ambiguous as to provide no protection. To put it another way, without legislation, the traveling public would be subjected to discrimination, economic harm, and unwarranted inconvenience with little or no recourse.

Mr. Speaker, this is very important legislation. I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting the conference report.●

Mr. MINETA. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time.

Mr. MINETA. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the conference report.

The previous question was ordered.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. MINETA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the conference report on H.R. 5297, just considered and agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. FOLEY). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, would the Chair tell us where we are at the present time?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In a moment, the Chair intends to recognize an appropriate member of the Committee on Energy and Commerce for the purpose beginning debate in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union on the compassionate pain bill.

Mr. WALKER. Do we need another quorum call, Mr. Speaker?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. No; the Chair does not feel we need another quorum call at this time.

Mr. WALKER. I thank the Speaker.

PRESIDENT MISLEADS FARMERS ON NEW FARM ANNOUNCEMENT

(Mr. GLICKMAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GLICKMAN. Mr. Speaker, I would like to just make a comment about the President's announcement yesterday of a variety of programs to help the family farmer, credit programs.

I would like to make the record clear that, for the most part, these were all programs that repeatedly Members of both parties here in the House and to some extent in the Senate have been pushing upon the President of the United States for the last 3 years all to no avail. The House has passed a farm loan moratorium and deferral, help for the family farmer so that he will not have his loans foreclosed.

We have held hearings on this issue. We have pleaded. We have cajoled. We have prayed for the President to offer relief for the farmer, and now, 6 weeks before the election, the President does a 180-degree turn, after promising to veto and not agree with these programs, and now decides that the American farmer needs this kind of relief.

Some of the programs may be pretty good. We will accept what we can, even if it is 6 weeks before a general election. Unfortunately, what we need for the family farmer is an election every 3 months in this country. Then perhaps we would have real help for the family farmer. But I do not think the American public is going to be misled by this patent election year gimmick to the family farmer when, in fact, the last 3 years we have seen nothing but no, no, no by this administration to the very same help for the farmer that is contained in his announcement.

LET US LOOK AT THE WHOLE FARM ISSUE

(Mr. NIELSON of Utah asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. NIELSON of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I was very interested in the speech we just heard, but I do not think it tells the whole story.

I just received from the American Farm Bureau, a listing of 19 votes that have been taken on farm issues. The only Member in the entire House who voted against the American Farm Bureau position on every vote was Representative GERALDINE FERRARO, the Democrat nominee for Vice President. Everyone else supported the Farm Bureau position at least three or four times.

So I think that if we are talking about aid to the farmer, and looking at agricultural policy in general, we ought to look at the whole spectrum of issues and not just the actions of the President yesterday.

COMPASSIONATE PAIN RELIEF ACT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 508, and rule XXIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill, H.R. 5290.

□ 1105

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 5290) to establish a temporary program under which parenteral diacetylmorphine will be made available through qualified pharmacies for the relief of intractable pain due to cancer, with Mr. WEISS in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the first reading of the bill is dispensed with.

Under the rule, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALGREN] will be recognized for 30 minutes and the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BROYHILL] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALGREN].

Mr. WALGREN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, as the House knows, H.R. 5290, entitled "the Compassionate Pain Relief Act," would set up a temporary program to explore the benefits of access to heroin for those who are terminally ill cancer patients and suffering terrible pain.

Under this program, heroin is to be provided by the Government to a limited number of hospitals and hospices that are involved in treating people suffering from terminal cancer. We have provided in the bill for the monitoring of the program, and the termination of the program automatically within 4 years when we get some experience with it.

There are many reasons to support H.R. 5290. The legislation will permit those few terminally ill cancer patients whose pain cannot be relieved by conventional medications to be treated with an analgesic that is regarded by medical experts as one of the most powerful known to science. The sad thing, of course, in these cases is that patients respond differently to various methods to relieve pain. There are some who find no relief in those methods that are presently available in this country whose pain could be eased by methods that have been traditionally available in other countries.

This bill would provide some relief to those few patients who face this dilemma. The legislation is temporary. It does not legalize heroin in any sense of the word. It permits pharmacologic dosages of the drug to be used by a limited number of cancer patients and cancer physicians in hospitals under strict controls to treat those terminally ill who suffer pain that is not relievable in any other way.

Heroin is used, as most know, extensively in England in the treatment of cancer. Physicians there find it indispensable in relieving the pain of many of their seriously ill patients. Heroin used in this limited program will be carefully controlled to prevent illicit use and will be manufactured under this strict supervision of the Food and Drug Administration to assure its therapeutic quality. The General Accounting Office will closely monitor the program.

I have heard arguments that we do not want to engage in even the smallest program because it will somehow lead to unauthorized abuse of heroin in our society. The truth of the matter is that heroin is now available in such large quantities in so many avenues that to argue that some limited, controlled program in this area would add to the overall problem seems to me to be misdirected.

Every avenue of pain control should be explored in ending the agony that is often associated with cancer in its terminal stages. No medication as powerful and effective as heroin should be arbitrarily withheld from those who are suffering in this way and really, particularly, those who are terminally ill.

□ 1110

Public support for this legislation is broad. It has the endorsement of a wide range of newspapers, including the New York Times, the Richmond Times-Dispatch, the St. Paul Sunday Pioneer Press, the Los Angeles Times, the Sarasota Herald-Tribune, the Plain Dealer, the Arizona Daily Star, the San Jose Mercury-News, the Union Leader, and the Honolulu Star-Bulletin. I urge our colleagues to join with the American Nurses Association, the National Committee on the Treatment of Intractable Pain, and the hundreds of cancer patients and their physicians who ask only that they be able to consider this as an alternative if they face such circumstances that none of us would want to contemplate. We at least could give them this alternative.

Mr. Chairman, I would defer at this point to the chairman of the subcommittee or, in the alternative, the other side.

Mr. BROYHILL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. ROWLAND].

Mr. ROWLAND. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, I reluctantly rise to oppose this legislation. I say, "reluctantly," because I know that those who support this legislation do so from the heart. They do it because they are concerned about those people who are having severe pain with terminal cancer, and they want to do what they can do to help relieve this situation.

Members of families who have had those who die with this type of disease know what the problem is. There are some things that we know and some things that we do not know if this legislation passes. We say that there may be more break-ins in pharmacies and there may be more robberies. We say that this drug may get on the street more. I do not know that; I do not think anyone knows that. We are just making a conjecture when we say that will happen. I think perhaps that will happen.

But there are some things we do know. We do know that we now have in our armamentarium drugs that can effectively be used to relieve pain, and we do not need to have another drug. We do not need to legitimize a drug that we know has been causing a great deal of problems in this country already. We are opening the door for the manufacture of diacetylmorphine or heroin in this country and all that may go along with that. So we need to be very careful in doing that.

I can tell the Members this now: that diacetylmorphine is broken down into monoacetyl morphine and into morphine, which is an active ingredient. They say we need this drug because it will act more quickly. Well, we do know that it passes the blood-brain barrier more quickly because it is fat-soluble. But all we need to do is put morphine in an IV drip, which will give an immediate effect. We have much better control of that, and we can control the pain better.

There are other drugs we can use to potentiate or make more effective the morphine, such as thorazine and drugs of this class.

I say that the problem is not having proper management of the pain. It is not the fact that we do not have the drugs we need. We already have those drugs. I have been in this situation many times with families who have had members who were dying with terminal cancer, and I have always been able to give relief of the pain. If they cannot take morphine, they can take pantopon, they can maybe take dilaudid, or they can take leratine or Demerol. There are several drugs that we have available to us.

So it is not that we do not have adequate drugs available now. We do have adequate drugs available at this time. So I think to legitimize a drug that has been causing so many problems in our country already would be an inappropriate thing for us to do.

Mr. Chairman, I urge this House not to pass this legislation based on emotion—and it certainly is an emotional issue. Again let me say that I understand that. I appreciate that, and I respect that position.

But I want to share with my colleagues a story of how one of my constituents dealt with this emotional issue. Danny Green is a pharmacist in the Coliseum Park Hospital in Macon, GA. His wife, Katherine, is a registered nurse. These are two people who are intimately acquainted with both human suffering and the drugs that are available to relieve it.

Just recently, Danny's father, Joseph D. Green of Gray, GA., died from terminal cancer. He suffered great pain. If ever there were two people who would be inclined to believe that there was some way that their loved one could have been spared some unnecessary pain, Danny and Katherine would be those people.

But Danny and I talked about this and about how the availability of heroin might have made it easier for this father. For Danny, an experienced pharmacist, and his wife, an experienced nurse, the answer was simple. Heroin would not have offered any relief not already available to Joseph Green. Heroin has no unique medical advantages over any other analgesic.

The tools to end human suffering in cancer are there. Adding one more tool to the heap will not ensure that the needed sensitivity and attention to pain is there.

I remain convinced that this legislation should be defeated, but I close by commending those who have spearheaded this legislative proposal for bringing the issue of better pain management to the forefront of our consciousness. Hopefully, those health care professionals who are involved in the treatment of terminal cancer patients will be more cognizant of the important responsibility they have to use all the medical knowledge available to ease the suffering of those in their care.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN] is recognized for the purpose of controlling the debate.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I might consume.

Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to present to the House H.R. 5290, the Compassionate Pain Relief Act. The legislation requires the Secretary of Health and Human Services to establish a temporary, 4-year research program through which the drug di-a-cetal-morphine (heroin) would be made available for the treatment of terminally ill cancer patients suffering intractable pain. The drug would be provided through a limited number of hospital pharmacies upon the written prescription of a licensed physician. The program is limited in scope and will require individual registration of participating hospitals and physicians.

Each year the Federal Government seizes hundreds of pounds of heroin illegally smuggled into this country. This legislation would permit the Secretary to use a small portion of this contraband for a compassionate and humane program.

Heroin has a negative connotation in this country—and it should. It has wreaked havoc upon our cities and has cost the lives of thousands of our young people. I know this to be true. Our subcommittee has created programs providing billions in Federal aid to assist in the treatment and rehabilitation of these drug abuse victims and the criminal prosecution of the drug pushers.

The legislation before the House today has nothing to do with heroin the street drug. It has everything to do with the treatment of intractable pain. It has everything to do with assuring that nothing is held back from physicians which might aid them in relieving the suffering of their dying patients.

The American Cancer Society estimates that over 800,000 Americans will die of cancer this year. Cancer is the second leading cause of death and the illness most feared by the public.

As many as 50 percent of cancer patients will experience moderate to severe pain during the course of their illness—often during the last days and weeks of life. For many the pain of cancer is so severe, and their physical condition so deteriorated, that powerful narcotic painkillers must be administered by injection.

Heroin is one of the most powerful painkillers known to medical science. In testimony before our subcommittee there was unanimous consensus that heroin was a safe and effective medication for the treatment of severe pain. In fact, Assistant Secretary for Health, Edward N. Brandt, wrote in the August 23 issue of the New England Journal of Medicine that "there is no dispute over heroin's ability to help control pain* * *."

While not legally available in the United States, heroin is widely used in England in the treatment of pain due to cancer. The British Home Office has informed the committee that the use of heroin in England for the treatment of pain has grown significantly in recent years.

U.S. policy toward heroin developed in the 1920's when Congress prohibited its use in medicine. It was thought the drug was more addicting than other painkillers and that its availability in medicine was the cause of street abuse. Today we know prohibiting heroin's therapeutic use has had little effect on the incidence of abuse. Yet it has impacted upon those who might benefit from its use in the treatment of intractable pain.

Research at the Georgetown Medical Center, funded by the National Cancer Institute, concluded that heroin is highly effective in the control of cancer pain and no more addicting than other painkillers like morphine or dilaudid. This research revealed that heroin is 2½ times more potent than morphine. But let me point out that all these drugs are addictive. Morphine is addictive; dilaudid is addictive, and heroin is addictive. We are talking about using something that is addictive in a person's last moments of life to avoid the agony of pain that accompanies this moment for some unfortunate people.

Several additional points should be made about this legislation.

First, H.R. 5290 would not legalize heroin. Distribution or possession of heroin outside the limited, carefully controlled scope of this program would continue to constitute a violation of the Federal Controlled Substances Act. Violators would be subject to maximum penalties of 15 years imprisonment and a $125,000 fine. We are not legalizing heroin.

Second, heroin provided through this program will be available in only a limited number of hospitals and only if the hospital requests to participate in the program. Individual hospitals, physicians, or patients are not required to participate. Participation is strictly voluntary.

The American Medical Association says that heroin isn't needed in medicine. Since they feel that way, then their members—representing less than half of all physicians—need not participate. The committee has received letters from physicians across the country—perhaps not AMA members—who believe a limited experiment of this kind would be appropriate. They feel this drug might potentially help in treating a few of their patients and they are all for it.

Third, stringent safeguards have been built into this program. The committee has included a series of provisions that will protect against illegal diversion. Oral dosages are prohibited. The drug is prohibited from being dispensed through retail or community pharmacies. The General Accounting Office is charged with monitoring administration of the program. The program sunsets at the end of 4 years.

Fourth, no one should assume that heroin is a wonder drug or that passage of H.R. 5290 will eliminate very real deficiencies that exist in clinical knowledge about pain management. We are not suggesting that heroin is the answer for every cancer patient with severe pain. Drugs like morphine or dilaudid may be the analgesic of choice for most cancer patients. Yet for a few—perhaps only 1 out of 1,000—heroin may offer benefits not available with conventional medications.

We are not suggesting that we don't need to do more research. Of course we need to do more research.

A basic but little understood fact of medicine is that patients respond differently to medications. We encourage the availability of a variety of medications to permit physicians to tailor a course of treatment which is most effective for a given patient.

We simply don't know how heroin would compare with dilaudid-HP. No clinical trials comparing their effectiveness have been conducted. But when this program expires we will know whether U.S. physicians find heroin as useful in the treatment of their terminally ill patients as do their colleagues in England.

Remember, physicians would prescribe heroin only after conventional painkillers like dilaudid-HP have been tried and found lacking.

Finally, there is nothing unprecedented about the program established by this bill. Provisions were included to assure the active involvement of the Food and Drug Administration in assuring the safety and effectiveness of the drug's formulation. There is nothing authorized by the legislation that could not be accomplished administratively if this administration were willing to act.

The program proposed by the Compassionate Pain Relief Act is virtually identical to an existing Federal program. This program provides therapeutic dosages of THC—the active ingredient of marijuana—to physicians for prescription to cancer patients suffering nausea due to chemotherapy. THC is carefully controlled and its distribution is limited to a small number of hospital pharmacies.

Mr. Chairman, nothing should be held back in relieving the intractable pain of cancer. Those who would oppose this limited, carefully controlled program argue that therapeutic heroin may be diverted to the street. I agree with William F. Buckley who writes in this week's National Review that such arguments "pale in the face of the dry agony of the dying cancer patient."

I urge support for the legislation.

Mr. BROYHILL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WHITEHURST].

Mr. WHITEHURST. Mr. Chairman, I believe it is critically important to put this legislation in perspective. I've read the legislation and the committee report but to hear the opponents arguments one would think an entirely different bill is on the floor.

I believe those who suggest that conventional drugs like morphine or dilaudid-HP are effective in the treatment of pain. I also believe that a major problem in effective pain management is inadequate physician education. Yet these conclusions seem entirely consistent with the purpose of the legislation.

The legislation requires the Department of Health and Human Services to conduct a research trial in which heroin could be prescribed to terminally ill cancer patients in whom conventional analgesics have been found inadequate. No one doubts that heroin is a safe and effective painkiller. In many respects it is the standard against which analgesics are measured. At issue seems to be whether heroin is superior to all other painkillers.

Two points should be made. Any of us who have had our physician change our prescription knows that often one drug works better than others. I don't know why this is—neither do the doctors.

Second, we can't ignore the fact that heroin has been used and is currently being used safely and with great success in England for the control of intractable pain. Since 1975 the amount of heroin used by English physicians for this purpose has increased threefold.[1]

We shouldn't blindly endorse the English experience but I do believe a carefully controlled temporary experiment to determine whether heroin has a place in American medicine is warranted.

There is nothing unprecedented about this legislation. It is consistent with the existing Federal drug law regarding research and will require the Food and Drug Administration to assure the safety, effectiveness, and purity of the drug distributed through this program. THC—the active ingredient in marijuana—is already distributed nationwide through a program almost identical to that proposed by the legislation.

Those who believe heroin is unnecessary in the treatment of pain may be right. But we won't know for sure until after the legislation has passed. If they are wrong and we fail to support this bill, thousands of Americans whose suffering may be relieved through the knowledge gained will have paid a terrible price.

I urge my colleagues to support the legislation.

Mr. BROYHILL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. FISH], who is the ranking member of the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Chairman, H.R. 5290 is opposed by the Department of Health and Human Services, the Department of Justice and the Drug Enforcement Administration.

Cancer has touched many of us in this body, and I am certain that the lives of all Congresspersons have been indirectly affected by the heartbreak of this disease. I know that every Member approaches the victims of this disease with the highest form of human compassion.

But Mr. Chairman, calling the legalization of heroin for the treatment of pain in terminal cancer cases compassionate is a misnomer. Telling cancer patients that heroin will provide some new or greater relief not now available is a false promise. The medical evidence available clearly shows that heroin can do no more than currently available medicines.

The truly compassionate response to this problem is to correct the admitted failure of the medical profession to understand pain and to properly prescribe the potent drugs available today. Surely doctors who are now underprescribing the available drugs for fear of addicting patients, would continue this practice with heroin, and doom this effort to failure as well.

Is this Congress ready to accept the consequences of legalizing heroin? Should this body approve H.R. 5290, and send a signal to the youth of this Nation that "heroin is OK"?

This bill is inconsistent with the attempts of this Congress to reduce drug trafficking and drug abuse. Mr. Chairman, I do not need to remind this body of the serious drug problem we face in this Nation. The availability of controlled substances is rampant and its effect on our economy is staggering. This Nation has a serious and growing problem with the diversion of legitimately manufactured drugs into the drug abuse market. H.R. 5290 compounds the problem. It sets up a heroin distribution system which is exempted from all Federal drug trafficking laws. Someone participating in this program cannot be charged with Federal criminal penalties if he or she diverts heroin into the abuse system. The threat of diversion is so great that physicians and pharmacist groups do not want the responsibilities imposed by this program.

According to the Department of Justice, in a letter to me dated July 24, 1984:

> This bill is unnecessary from a medical standpoint and would seriously undermine our ability to control heroin by creating a major new loophole in Federal controlled substance laws. The American Medical Association, the National Association of Retail Druggists and the American Pharmacists Association oppose H.R. 5290.

Mr. Chairman, this Congress recently passed a pharmacy crime bill which is now public law. I sponsored the pharmacy robbery bill because the attack on pharmacies to obtain their stock of drugs for abuse purposes has become a serious problem. Surely stocking heroin in hospital and hospice pharmacies will further endanger pharmacists and their customers.

This bill offers no advantage to the cancer patient, but it legitimizes a serious drug of abuse. On balance, I must oppose H.R. 5290, and I urge the House to defeat this measure.

□ 1130

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALGREN].

Mr. WALGREN. Mr. Chairman, as we debate today this trial program to provide pain relief to hospitalized, terminally ill patients, I want to emphasize the lack of sensitivity to pain that often confronts cancer patients.

We have received a number of letters from representatives of the administration opposing this bill arguing that the bill is misguided by not addressing the root of the problem: Pain management by health professionals. Testimony before our Health Subcommittee did in fact verify that effective pain management is lacking in many hospital settings and that there is a substantial lack of understanding of proper pain management by those in the position to ease pain. We were told that there is an alarming lack of formal training of health professionals in pain management. And with increasing specialization in medical education, we were told we can anticipate less attention to pain management training than in the past.

This lack of training leads to overdosing, underdosing, and the underuse of effective nondrug methods of pain relief. I am afraid we face an unconscious avoidance of the subject since pain is so difficult to ease and so unpleasant to deal with.

While the administration opposes this bill because training and effective pain management are needed, what is the administration doing? My question to the NIH on their efforts produced the information that only one institute, the National Cancer Institute, could identify specific 1984 dollars ($98,000) spent on pain management training.

There is in this bill an amendment I offered directing the Department of Health and Human Services to report on how the Federal Government currently supports training in pain management with recommendations for improving the training of all health personnel to better control pain. If pain management is the root of the problem, we should be doing something about it.

In our hearing, the comments of Dr. John J. Bonica of the Department of Anesthesiology, University of Washington, struck me as particularly important.

> There has been a lack of sufficient scientifically trained persons working on * * * understanding pain. Related to this has been the meager amount or total lack of funds for research or research training in this field. Consequently, there has existed a vicious circle of inadequate scientific manpower, and thus an inadequate number of grant applications submitted to the research agencies, and thus inadequate amount of funds budgeted for pain research and research training, and thus discouragement of scientists to pursue cancer pain research and causing them to investigate other areas, and thus inadequate scientific manpower.

[1] The Chief Inspector of the Home Office wrote the subcommittee that "It is not correct that the use of heroin for the relief of pain has been declining in the United Kingdom in recent years; in fact the contrary is true and the domestic consumption of heroin has steadily increased. * * * Most of this will have been used for the relief of pain whereas the use of heroin in the treatment of addiction has declined. * * *

If this bill were enacted, my amendment could be a start toward closing a very tragic job in our medical treatment. The administration should be pushed to improve medical training in pain management as a necessary part of this bill. If this bill goes down the tubes, so does this small effort to do something about pain management training.

Mr. BROYHILL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN] who also serves as the ranking minority member on the Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to H.R. 5290, the Compassionate Pain Relief Act, which would authorize the use of heroin to relieve pain for terminally ill cancer patients.

Mr. Chairman, I am very sympathetic to those who suffer from the agony of cancer. A member of my immediate family, succumbed to this dreaded disease. I know from firsthand experience the anguish that terminally ill cancer patients endure and the emotional appeal for some relief for those who suffer from this wretching disease. But the use of heroin, as proposed by this legislation, is not the answer for the terminally ill patient, and it is not the answer for society to utilize illicit heroin from the marketplace.

Under current law, heroin is a schedule I drug, which, among other things, means that it has not currently accepted medical use in treatment in the United States. For a drug to be used medically for treatment, it must be approved by the Food and Drug Administration [FDA].

H.R. 5290 would bypass this congressionally mandated procedure. Under the proposed legislation, heroin would still remain a schedule I drug, but it would be exempt from the regulations of the Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act and the Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act of 1970 regarding the importation of opium and the manufacture, distribution, and dispensing of heroin.

H.R. 5290 would, however, authorize the Secretary of Health and Human Services to provide for the manufacture of heroin that would be stored in hospital and hospice pharmacies through which physicians could prescribe heroin to terminally ill cancer patients.

The irony of H.R. 5290, is that the medical and the pharmaceutical communities and those responsible for administering this program—the Department of Health and Human Services—are opposed to this measure.

The American Medical Association, the American Society of Internal Medicine, the Association of American Medical Colleges, the American Society of Anesthesiologists, the American Academy of Otolaryngology—head and neck surgeons, the American Pharmaceutical Association, the American Society of Hospital Pharmacists, the Arizona State Council of Hospital Pharmacists, the National Hospice Association, and the Connecticut Hospice oppose H.R. 5290. The National Federation of Parents for Drug-Free Youth also oppose this measure.

Mr. Chairman, it would be different if the Food and Drug Administration recommended that heroin be reclassified to a nonschedule I category but it hasn't. It would be different if existing law permitted the importation, manufacture, distribution and dispensing of heroin, but it doesn't.

Rather, in January of 1984, the Food and Drug Administration approved dilaudid-HP, a new highly potent analgesic for medical treatment, thereby conforming to congressionally mandated procedures. On the other hand, H.R. 5290 would circumvent this medical acceptability requirement for treatment purposes, and heroin would still remain an "outlaw drug."

Heroin itself is not a panacea to treat terminally ill cancer patients. Research conducted on the comparative value of heroin and other drugs by the Vincent T. Lombardi Cancer Research Center at Georgetown University and by the Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York concluded that heroin, which is a synthetic derivative of morphine and is converted by the body into morphine, has no unique advantages or disadvantages for the relief of pain for cancer patients. It has no analgesic superiority over morphine.

FDA approved drugs, such as morphine, dilaudid, and codeine, are already on the market and available to terminally ill cancer patients. Furthermore, the recently FDA approved dilaudid-HP is highly soluble, more potent than heroin, reaches its peak effect sooner, and last longer than heroin.

There are those who cite the English experience with heroin, where the manufacture and use of that drug is legal, as a rationale for our Nation to use this illicit drug to treat terminally ill cancer patients. But the English experience is not comparable to ours since dilaudid is not marketed in Great Britain and research by two physicians from St. Christopher's Hospice showed "no substantive difference" between heroin and morphine. According to their research, heroin and morphine are equally effective to treat terminally ill cancer patients. Rather the physicians concluded:

> The heroin controversy distracts attention from substantive issues in the care of patients with advanced cancer—namely, the need to improve the general standard of care and symptom control and to ensure that adequate doses of analgesics are correctly employed from among the many opiate and non-opiate drugs that are already available.

In this regard, Mr. Chairman, agencies of our Federal Government responsible for research on cancer, pain management and drug abuse are opposed to H.R. 5290, specifically, the National Institutes of Health, including the National Cancer Institute, and the National Institute on Drug Abuse. Dr. Edward N. Brandt, Jr., Assistant Secretary for Health, stated before the Energy and Commerce Subcommittee on Health and the Environment:

> We believe that the overwhelming majority of patients can be effectively treated now with improved pain management strategies and the analgesics that already have been approved under the existing statutory mechanisms. For the small numbers who cannot be effectively treated, it is extremely unlikely that heroin would offer any relief. For such individuals, other classes of drugs and new pain management techniques are needed.

Commenting upon the use of heroin to treat cancer patients in Great Britian, Dr. Brandt also stated:

> We do not dispute heroin's ability to help control pain; however, for us, the availability of Dilaudid and now Dilaudid-HP, heroin is superfluous.

Hospitals, physicians, pharmacies, and hospices are rightfully fearful that this legislative proposal would open up the door to diversion and theft, which is why the American Medical Association, the American Society of Internal Medicine, the American Pharmaceutical Association, the American Society of Hospital Pharmacists, the Association of American Medical Colleges, the National Hospice Association, and other similar groups are opposed to this measure.

At a time when heroin, cocaine, marijuana, and other illicit drugs are inundating our shores by the plane load and by the boat load, now is not the time to bypass congressionally mandated procedures to use heroin to treat terminally ill cancer patients when we already have on the market a variety of pain killers, including the newly FDA approved more potent, highly soluble dilaudid-HP.

In short, there does not appear to be any significant advantage in opening up the use of this illicit drug to treat terminally ill cancer patients when the medical community is against this proposal, when the pharmaceutical community is against this proposal, when the health and research communities of the Department of Health and Human Services are against this proposal, and when the law enforcement community, which, among other activities, would be called upon to investigate hospital and pharmacy thefts, is against this proposal.

Although I am sympathetic to those who are reaching out for relief from the intractable pain caused by cancer, and to those who are trying to find a legislative "answer," including my colleagues on the distinguished Subcommittee on Health and the Environment, chaired by the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN], I urge my colleagues to vote against this proposal and call upon the medical community to help find better ways to treat those who are undergoing the agony of this dreaded disease.

Mr. Chairman, in an effort to better inform those who misguidedly believe that heroin is a panacea to treat terminally ill cancer patients, I am inserting at this point in the RECORD a statement of Margaret M. Heckler, Secretary of Health and Human Services, entitled "Heroin Is Not the Solution," which appeared in the op-ed section of the Washington Post on July 28, 1984, and which cogently summarizes the Department's opposition to H.R. 5290.

HEROIN IS NOT THE SOLUTION

With too little public understanding, no national consensus, and only a soupcon of discussion in and out of the media ["Let Them Have Heroin," editorial, July 26], the House of Representatives is about to debate and decide the fate of a bill that would legalize the use of heroin for terminally ill cancer patients.

I wholeheartedly share the objective of compassionate pain relief. No patient, young or old, should have to suffer pain when we have the means available to provide relief. But the premise that only heroin can provide relief, especially for the small number of cancer patients who have lost a great deal of weight and muscle mass and are, therefore, unable to tolerate frequent, high-volume injections of drugs such as morphine, is simply not true.

The medical profession, the pharmaceutical profession and America's hospice movement all agree that heroin is not needed to relieve pain, and they oppose legislation to legalize heroin. Why?

First off, a better drug, Dilaudid-HP, is now available. Because it has been on the market only since February, many of the proponents of the bill may not be aware of Dilaudid-HP's effectiveness. It is highly soluble, more potent, achieves its peak effect sooner and has a longer duration of action than heroin.

Additionally, the legalization of heroin would surely pose serious public safety, enforcement and security problems. Manufacturers and pharmacists, as well as health care professionals, cancer patients and their families, would be placed in jeopardy by legalizing heroin that is directly linked with criminal activity and yet has no medical advantages over Dilaudid-HP.

Further, making heroin available in the manner set forth in HR 5290 would run contrary to the federal drug review and approval process that has long been in place to ensure the safety and effectiveness of drug products before they are marketed. The bill would explicitly bypass this process, setting a poor precedent for ensuring safety and effectiveness in future drug development efforts.

Heroin is not the solution to the problem of intractable pain. The root of the problem is the lack of appropriate pain management of patients suffering from all the diseases that induce suffering and agony. The correct answer is a national educational program that brings modern pain management techniques into the mainstream of medical practice. I will spearhead and pursue that kind of endeavor. We will, simultaneously, continue our research activities at our national institutes to better understand the basis of pain even as we explore the development of new and more potent analgesic drugs.

Defeat of HR 5290 will not leave terminally ill cancer patients adrift on a sea of agony. I am optimistic that the widespread use of Dilaudid-HP and other available powerful analgesics along with a growing awareness by physicians and other health care professionals of effective pain management strategies will resolve many of the problems that have led to the introduction of this well-intentioned but flawed legislation.—Margaret M. Heckler.

Mr. BROYHILL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLILEY], a member of the committee.

Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time.

Mr. Chairman, there's no doubt that this legislation has merit. It is indeed a "compassionate" approach to the relief of intractable pain. I thought that last year when the bill was introduced, and that's why I cosponsored it.

However, time has eclipsed the need for this bill. When the bill was introduced, there simply were no other choices for the treatment of intractable pain. Today there are. High potency dilaudid was approved last February and can now meet the needs that spawned this legislation.

I would like to point the Members attention to the "dear colleague" that our colleague Chairman WAXMAN sent out yesterday that has all the newspaper articles and editorials in it. Members should take note that a majority of those articles predate the FDA's approval of dilaudid-HP. In fact, three of those articles are well over 2 years old.

I congratulate the chairman for pressing for this legislation, but the need for the bill has been overcome by events.

And I want my colleagues to understand that we are not against compassion and providing the treatments to patients with intractable pain. As an original cosponsor of the bill before us today, I only offer that there is now a better way to treat that pain than there was when the bill was introduced.

Mr. BROYHILL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SHAW].

Mr. SHAW. I thank the gentleman from North Carolina for yielding.

For the almost 4 years that I have spent in the Congress of the United States, I have served on the Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control. For approximately the last 3 years I have been privileged to serve on the Judiciary Committee, more particularly on one of the crime subcommittees.

I never thought in my wildest dreams that we would someday be approaching the subject of legalization of an insidious drug as we are today in looking at the possible merits of heroin. I would say to my colleagues that there is nothing compassionate about heroin. Heroin has left its destructive tracks across this country in the form of broken homes, broken lives, and people without futures, and yes, deaths.

For us to fucus only upon the needs of the dying while absolutely disregarding the needs of the living would be a travesty and a tragedy and something that would not be befitting to this House.

We must talk about what is going to happen to these drugs. Is there any Member here that can tell me that the legalization of heroin will not cause legally produced heroin to make its way into the streets? They cannot because it will.

The supply of heroin will increase. It will increase in the streets.

Our trading partners in other parts of the world that we are trying to convince to put an absolute stop on the deportation of heroin into this country will be confused. Illegal production would increase as well, as then they would be competing with legally produced heroin.

This is a bad bill. This is a terrible bill. This bill absolutely ignores the needs of the living.

I ask that this House resoundingly defeat this bill so it will never come to us again. There is no place in future of this country for this drug.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New York [Mr. RANGEL].

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Chairman, I supported this rule because I thought that I would have an opportunity to debate against this bill. I have been advised by the manager that the time is being allocated for those who support the bill and that I should go on the other side of the aisle for time.

I have this 1 minute for the purpose of opposing this bill because I think it violates every principle we have as we try to negotiate with countries that are involved in illicit drug production. I cannot for the life of me make where we are supposed to get the drugs, under this bill, the heroin for these terminally ill patients. Yesterday when the question was raised it appeared as though we had to go to the illicit market or perhaps purchase it from the Drug Enforcement Administration and we were advised by the manager of the bill that no, that is not the case, that Mr. HUGHES is going to amend the bill to clarify this issue.

□ 1140

Mr. BROYHILL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 additional minute to the gentleman from New York [Mr. RANGEL] if he would like to complete his statement.

Mr. RANGEL. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, everyone says that we are only dealing with a handful of small people and that we should allow them the opportunity to get this heroin because, after all, we have been unable to stop this heroin from flowing into the United States.

I have never heard a more ludicrous argument against legalizing a drug that we have opposed the growing of opium throughout the world and it just seems to me that if this Congress is going to do something for the sick that we ought to take our advice, at least from the doctors who organized and have sworn to take care of the ill. I cannot think of a medical association that is asking us to open the door to legalized heroin. But I tell you one thing, I think behind this there are a lot of people who believe that the entire drug situation is completely out of hand and they would openly advocate that we just take the profits out of heroin and just start legalizing the entire illicit drug manufacturing and transactions in the United States.

Mr. BROYHILL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. FIELDS].

Mr. FIELDS. Mr. Chairman, I would like to make several points in opposition to the Compassionate Pain Relief Act. First of all, heroin will not offer benefits that are not now available. Heroin is a morphine derivative and acts like morphine. Dilaudid-HP approved by the the FDA in January of 1984 is highly soluble and more potent than heroin. Dilaudid-HP gets into the bloodstream faster and lasts longer than heroin, allowing for fewer injections in smaller amounts. It is six times as potent as morphine and two times as potent as heroin. Three milligrams of heroin have a peak effect of 1.2 hours and lasts 4 hours; 1.5 milligrams of dilaudid in a smaller amount has a peak effect at 1 hour and lasts 5 hours, a longer time. Dilaudid-HP may last two times as long as heroin.

A second point: H.R. 5290 circumvents the present statutory scheme which requires the FDA to determine a drug's safety and effectiveness before being effectively marketed to the public. This sets an unwanted precedent.

Point No. 3: H.R. 5290 would enhance illegal trafficking, a point Chairman RANGEL was making just a moment ago, and endanger the public's safety. Heroin is the drug most preferred by narcotics addicts. Many pharmacists claim they will refuse to stock heroin for fear of killings or maimings associated with possible armed robberies for the drug. Patients with heroin supplies will be in danger of robbery or injury.

Since this legislation was reported from the Committee on Energy and Commerce numerous medical and antidrug organizations have come out in opposition to this bill. Among the groups in active opposition to the legislation of H.R. 5290 are the Department of Justice, Department of Health and Human Services, the American Medical Association, the Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control, the American Society of Hospital Pharmacists, the American Society of Internal Medicine, the American Society of Anesthesiologists, the National Federation of Parents for Drug-Free Youth, the Association of American Medical Colleges, and the Texas Medical Association.

In summary, Mr. Chairman, I believe the benefits of this well-intentioned legislation are far outweighed by the potential negative consequences and we should reject H.R. 5290.

Mr. BROYHILL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Utah [Mr. NIELSON], a member of the committee.

Mr. NIELSON of Utah. Mr. Chairman, I thank the chairman for yielding.

I shall not take much time.

Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to H.R. 5290, the Compassionate Pain Relief Act.

I make four points, Mr. Chairman:

First, in several "double blind" tests the Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center conducted with heroin versus morphine the results indicated that the relative effectiveness of the two drugs are similar.

Second, the FDA approved this year a new drug called dilaudid-HP which is highly soluble and more potent than heroin and thus more desirable. As physicians and health care professionals become more aware of effective pain management strategies then the problems currently experienced in treating cancer patients will be solved.

Third, this bill would set an undesirable precedent by eliminating the statutory requirements for the approval of new drugs by the FDA.

Fourth, by placing heroin in hospitals they become targets of organized crime and others who seek to acquire this drug and distribute it for illicit purposes and for financial gain.

When this bill was being marked up it was indicated that maybe it would add only 1 or 2 percent to the heroin which is already on the street. I do not want to add even one-tenth of 1 percent, let alone 1 or 2 percent that they admit.

I note that the American National Hospice Organization which is charged with treating people who are in latter stages of illness have come out strongly opposed to it.

Our own Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control is also opposed to it.

I would like to suggest that if you check with your medical experts of any kind in any State you would find they are unanimously or almost unanimously opposed to this bill.

Mr. Chairman, I therefore ask for its defeat.

Ms. FIEDLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. NIELSON of Utah. I am glad to yield to the gentlewoman from California.

Ms. FIEDLER. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, I was very concerned about this particular bill because I wanted to do what I thought was right for my constituents and for those people suffering pain. So I decided to talk with some physicians in the area.

Just yesterday I had a chance to talk with the head of the UCLA Oncology Department who is an individual who handles tens of thousands of cases of cancer victims every single year. He indicated to me that he felt that there were no advantages whatsoever to having heroin, that it created additional problems in terms of law enforcement problems and that it would be a major mistake on the part of Congress to pass this bill.

Based upon his expert testimony to me I feel strongly that I can confidently vote against this bill and not create additional problems for those people who are trying to help people with pain.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 1 minute.

I would like to point out that saying on the one hand that the problem is that doctors do not know what they should about pain management and therefore we ought to spend our time educating doctors on the use of drugs we now have; and then on the other hand say that these same doctors tell us they do not need to have a stronger drug, I find that just tremendously ironic.

The fact of the matter is that there are some patients that are not being relieved from their agony by the drugs that are now available. Doctors tell us that heroin is just another part of the armament in controlling pain for a limited population of dying cancer patients. And that is what we are trying to accomplish by this legislation.

Mr. Chairman, might I inquire how much time I have remaining?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN] has 9 minutes remaining; the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BROYHILL] has 13 minutes remaining.

Mr. WAXMAN. Let me conclude with one other thought: If a doctor does not think it is appropriate to prescribe heroin, he need not prescribe heroin. If a pharmacy is worried about theft, that pharmacy may reject having heroin on its premises. And besides, we do not say that every pharmacy is even allowed under this bill to have heroin stocked at their pharmacy. It is only limited to hospitals that voluntarily want it, hospitals only, hospices only, only if they are willing to accept heroin on the premises to be used only for this narrow purpose.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES], the distinguished chairman of the Subcommittee of the Committee on the Judiciary which deals with the problem of drug abuse.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Chairman, I find myself somewhat uncomfortable being on the other side of this issue from some of my colleagues with whom I have often joined to wage battle against the problem of illegal drug trafficking and production. I must say that no issue in the Congress, in this term in particular, has given me more pause to reflect than this particular issue. And, without an amendment that I am going to offer to this bill which would put in place the law enforcement protections that I think are essential, I would not support the legislation.

But I have heard so much misinformation and misdescription in today's debate that I was not sure we were talking about the same legislation. In the first place, if you really want to do away with diversion, we probably should dry up, that is prohibit, the prescription of a lot of controlled substances. If you look at the facts and figures, 60 percent of the drug overdoses in this country are caused by prescription drugs that are being diverted into the illicit market. An enormous number of those drugs are the things that are finding their way into the school yards. Nobody is suggesting that the way to deal with that problem is to make it impossible for people to get these prescription drugs that they need to treat their ailments and diseases. One of the reasons why we have advanced as a society is because we have provided the kind of medications that make life richer and the endurance of pain a little easier.

Now, when they talk about the legalization of heroin I am not sure what they are talking about; nobody is going to be legalizing heroin in this bill.

We are talking about making it possible, for maybe 1 in 500 people, to receive a drug that might help them through the last days of their life. Now, I was very careful to listen to what the medical societies throughout the country are saying about it, the people who have the expertise. I am not a doctor. I do not know. I have to rely upon what they say to me and they say that dilaudid, in many instances, really is not adequate to relieve pain for some people; they really do not respond to dilaudid or the other drugs. And that heroin, in those instances, may help people who are dying.

Now, I am not one to say that those scientists are incorrect. The medical community is divided on this issue and I have to come down on the side of trying to provide some relief to those in their last days who need some relief.

Now dilaudid is one of the commonly diverted drugs into the illicit market. It is certainly one of the most sought after drugs on the street. Is anybody suggesting here today that we should forbid the dispensing of dilaudid? On a dose-by-dose basis, the addict will pay more for dilaudid, I say to my colleagues, than they would pay for heroin.

Codeine, a major pain reliever, comes from opium. I say to my colleagues, are you suggesting that we do away with codeine? In fact, we buy much of the opium that we use in this country for medical purposes from India, Turkey, and other countries that grow it. Nobody is suggesting, by our import of medicinal opium, that we are sending any inappropriate or conflicting signals to the countries in which opium is grown for the illicit market—which we are trying to discourage. No one is suggesting that our use of opium derivatives such as codeine, morphine, or thebaine in some fashion works against our efforts to stem the flow of illicit drugs into the marketplace.

So in the final analysis this bill makes vitally necessary pain relief available to those who are suffering in their last hours of life. We do so in a very limited program. We put in place the same protections indeed, even greater protections than we have in place for things like morphine that we use all the time in hospitals. Why not, if in fact heroin does provide some relief, why not provide a test period to see if we can reasonably make it available? That is all this legislation does.

Mr. BROYHILL. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 6 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong opposition to this bill. I am proud to be joined in this opposition to this bill by a very broad-based group of very distinguished colleagues from both sides of the aisle and from various committees that have had the opportunity to carefully review the evidence with respect to this legislation. These colleagues, I hope those who are listening back in their offices, will listen carefully, have had the opportunity to listen to learned witnesses, as well as to their knowledgeable constituents about this program and they are now speaking out in opposition to this ill-conceived legislation.

Mr. Chairman, I am pleased that the very capable chairman of the Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control, the gentleman from New York [Mr. RANGEL] and supported by the ranking minority member of that subcommittee, the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN] are leading opponents to the passage of this legislation. They bring to this debate not only a great deal of knowledge, but a great deal of experience with respect to this subject matter.

No one is for pain. We all want to do something about controlling pain for those who are experiencing severe excruciating pain in their final days of their life. Certainly pain, regardless of its cause, should be aggressively attacked.

I listened to the gentleman from New Jersey and his arguments. It seemed to me that what he was saying was that we have problems with the diversion of pain relievers under the present law. He is somehow arguing, then, what difference does it make if we put another pain reliever out there and we should have problems with that.

It seems to me that that is not the way that we should be going.

There are potent pain relievers available for the relief of severe pain for terminally ill cancer patients. All of us have been referring to these in the debate. There is no need for me to list them. Dilaudid is one of them. All of our learned witnesses, particularly from the medical community, have testified that the availability of these pain relievers makes the use of heroin unnecessary.

Mr. Chairman, very quickly, let me list a few of the experts who have a working knowledge of how this program works, why they are opposing this legislation.

The American Society of Hospital Pharmacists say this:

> Heroin availability in both community and hospital pharmacies will produce an increased risk of diversion and pharmacy crime.

The National Federation of Parents for Drug-Free Youth say:

> To falsely legitimize heroin sends the wrong message about this devastating and illegal drug to our children.

Listen to what these people are saying.

From the American Society of Internal Medicine, physicians who have day-to-day experience with dealing with patients who are in pain. They say:

H.R. 5290 would circumvent established FDA procedures for the approval of new drugs.

And, my colleagues, that is exactly what this bill does.

From the Department of Justice. They say:

H.R. 5290's total lack of safeguards against abuse makes it an unacceptable vehicle for achieving the end sought.

Listen to what the researchers at Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York say, one of the very few research centers, I might say, that have had hands-on experience with the use of heroin as a reliever of pain. They say:

Heroin has no unique advantages for the relief of pain in patients with cancer.

We have written communications from the American Medical Association and also testimony from that association before our subcommittee that states that there are equally effective medications available for pain control.

Now, the experience in England has been cited, but all of the scientists from England are saying—they were talking about the issue of whether heroin offers distinct advantages of pain control—they clearly state that current evidence provides no justification for the legalization of heroin.

Mr. Chairman, I am very concerned about the inevitable liabilities that would develop with wider availability of heroin. I know that this is the argument that has been put forward by the gentleman from New York [Mr. RANGEL]. I very much agree with the arguments that he makes, the risk of diversion of this popular street drug, the increased likelihood of pharmacy theft. It does not warrant the expanded use of this dangerous substance.

I would urge my colleagues to join me in voting against this unnecessary and undesirable bill.

Mr. RUDD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROYHILL. I yield to the gentleman from Arizona.

Mr. RUDD. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, I compliment the gentleman on his scholarly, responsible statement.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to H.R. 5290, which would legalize the medicinal use of heroin for terminally ill cancer patients in the United States.

First of all, whether or not a drug is safe and effective for medicinal use should be determined through the existing regulatory drug approval process. Congress has neither the scientific expertise nor medical experience to make such a determination. We cannot legislate a drug's safety.

The Food and Drug Administration [FDA], which we have charged with protecting the health of the Nation against unsafe drugs, recently approved an alternative new drug [dilaudid-HP] which has proven to be just as effective for pain relief as heroin. This drug has been subjected to all of the new drug approval procedures.

Well-controlled clinical studies have also clearly demonstrated that morphine is just as effective for pain relief as heroin.

While the intent of this legislation is no doubt good—to provide relief to terminally ill patients—we must also recognize that legalizing heroin would turn every hospital, every hospice and pharmacy, and patients themselves into targets for addicts and criminals involved in black market drug traffic.

This legislation is opposed by a wide range of health professionals including the American Medical Association, the American Society of Hospital Pharmacists, and the American Society for Clinical Oncologists whose members specialize in the treatment of cancer.

I urge the defeat of this measure. We ought to instead turn our attention to promoting greater efforts toward truly effective treatments for terminal and nonterminal disease.

□ 1200

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. MCKINNEY].

Mr. MCKINNEY. Mr. Chairman, yesterday I spoke during the rule about our colleague here, Ella Grasso and Bill Cotter, and the terrible painful deaths that they went through from cancer, and I am not going to pull out any of those towels because it seems to me that we have had them out today, and it seems to me, also, that what we have done is we have had a fog, sort of a miasma, like Ichabod Crane and "Sleepy Hollow," about all of these terrible things.

Let us look at a few facts. Heroin exists. Why does heroin exist? Because governments and the medical community designed it and discovered it and found it to take the place of morphine because morphine was so evil.

Dilaudid exists. Dilaudid exists because it was discovered because they needed new things, new analgesics, to solve the problem of pain. It also is a substance that can be terribly, terribly abused.

We have done this throughout the history of medicine. But the fact of the matter is that heroin is a tool. It is one more tool for people who are dying. Are we going to really turn around, in a nation where 4.3 metric tons-plus of illegal heroin is sold on the streets of the United States of America, turn around to an American citizen who is dying, in pain, and say we are going to take away this tool? What if the tool is never used? Fine. What if the doctor does not want to prescribe it? Fine. The fact of the matter is, we are turning around to these terminally ill patients and saying, "We are going to deny you this possible answer."

Every single human being reacts differently to an analgesic pain reliever, every single human being, whether you go down to the level of aspirin or up to the level of morphine. Let us give them the tool.

It really is strange, because I have heard "community pharmacies." This bill does not allow heroin to be in a community pharmacy. It allows it to be in hospitals. And I would suggest that if you want to look at why kids are overdosing and suburban housewives are committing suicide, go to the local pharmacy, walk in and see the plastic jars full of valium and full of all of those other little goodies, uppers, downers, rounders, and bouters. Go down to Kennedy Airport in New York and watch the stuff being stolen by the thousands of pounds on a monthly basis and put on the illicit market.

We are talking not about saying heroin is good. It is evil. But heroin is a drug which can give therapeutic relief to pain in someone's final days. It is a drug that can leave a person lucid and able to communicate with their children or their spouses or their friends during their last days, rather than turning them into a vegetable within the hospital syndrome, which is now the American medical way of doing it.

I support the bill.

Mr. BROYHILL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. SAWYER].

Mr. SAWYER. I thank the gentleman from North Carolina for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, I have listened to the arguments both during the rule and most of them here today. Very frankly, I became concerned because I heard there was some kind of a dispute in the medical profession on the efficacy of heroin as opposed to dilaudid and other drugs. I telephoned the chief of the Oncology Department, University of Michigan Hospital, and he goes right down the line with the American Medical Association. He said if there is any shortcoming in the use of dilaudid or the other analgesics that are now available, it is because of the lack of experience of doctors using them or their unwillingness to take a chance of addiction and possible malpractice suits by giving too little too late and not enough near the end. And he feels it is just one more problem if we inject heroin into the picture.

One other thing that was mentioned during the discussion on the rule was that the supplies of heroin were going to be taken from the confiscated heroin held by enforcement authorities. Well, my heavens, if you ever saw how they make morphine base and the conditions under which they make it, which go into heroin, you would never dream of giving even a test animal a shot of it. Just absolutely filthy conditions. And I am sure that those addicts who now use heroin would be turned off just by being given a tour of how it was made in pots and pans out in the jungle.

The other thing is, you are allowing not only the use of heroin, but we are circumventing all of the protective devices that we use for any other drug. There is no Food and Drug application involved here. No human testing, no prescription of the conditions under which it is made. So not only is it unnecessary in creating a tremendous addition to the law enforcement problems, but it is also being excused from all of the regulatory authorities that are there.

The point suggested by Mr. HUGHES that there is illegal heroin out in the market now or other drugs that are diverted, like dilaudid, it seems to me that is like saying, "What in the heck, why not make a dozen more of them available on the streets?" And I just cannot buy that kind of philosophy—and it is very seldom that I disagree philosophically with the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SAWYER. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. GILMAN. I thank the gentleman for yielding, and I commend him for his remarks in opposition to this measure.

Permit me to underscore that there is an effective pain relieving drug on the market dilaudid-HP, which is highly soluble and more potent than heroin.

We must also consider the secondary problems of making heroin medically available, and we must concern ourselves about diversion of the heroin made available. We should also be concerned about the fact that virtually the entire medical community has joined in opposition: the American Medical Association, the American Academy of Otolaryngology, the American Society of Anesthesiologists, the American Pharmaceutical Association and the American Society of Hospital Pharmacists.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. SAWYER] has expired.

Mr. BROYHILL. I yield 1 additional minute to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. GILMAN. If the gentleman will yield further, I urge my colleagues to closely examine the impact of this measure. There is no need to prescribe heroin when there is an effective drug such as dilaudid available. We must be concerned about diversion of heroin at a time when heroin is flooding our shores and creating an epidemic of drug abuse throughout our Nation.

Accordingly, I urge my colleagues to oppose this measure. Let us try to find better ways of relieving pain through more extensive research and not by extending a cloak of legality to heroin.

Mr. SAWYER. When you go up and visit the hill tribes in Thailand, which I had the privilege of doing, and see them tearing up their fields of opium poppies, at great expense to us who provide substitute crops and the market for them, in order to hold down the production of morphine base, the expense we have gone through developing substitute crops which they can grow in those high arid hills, and then to think that we now are proposing to use it ourselves. The first thing we are going to hear and the first thing the dope peddlers are going to say or the big runners in southeast Asia and southwest Asia, is, "sure, the reason they want you to destroy your crop is because they want to sell their own to surgeons for use in their hospitals."

Mr. BROYHILL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California [Mr. LAGOMARSINO].

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the legislation, H.R. 5290, the Compassionate Pain Relief Act. As you know, this legislation would establish a 4-year program to make heroin available for terminally ill cancer patients. I have serious concerns about the bill and would urge my collegues to vote against it.

Scientific evidence shows that heroin is no more effective in managing pain from cancer than are other currently available drugs, such as morphine and dilaudid-HP. Patients can be effectively treated now with improved pain management strategies and the analgesics that already have been approved under the existing statutory mechanisms.

The bill would establish an inappropriate precedent by preempting, through legislation, consumer-protection features of the Food and Drug Administration's process which insure that only drugs that have been proved to be safe and effective through controlled scientific studies can be marketed. Heroin has not met this standard. Use of legislation to make a drug available circumvents the protective mechanisms of the FDA process and could subject the public to undue risk.

The security problems of hospitals and hospices would inevitably become more severe in the event that heroin is used in these institutions. Since equally effective medications are presently available, there is no reason to risk the adverse social and criminal implications of making heroin available.

This is a dangerous piece of legislation. Again, I would urge my colleagues to consider these concerns and vote "No" on H.R. 5290.

Mr. BROYHILL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON].

Mr. SOLOMON. I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to this bill and I do so with some mixed emotions. Several years ago, my own mother suffered through a long-term illness with cancer. She suffered terribly and the horrible disease subsequently took her life. Having suffered with her through that terrible time, I knew I would support any legislation that would help to relieve any human being from that kind of pain. This legislation does not relieve that pain and may indeed even cause pain and suffering.

I find this to be an unnecessary and potentially dangerous bill for a number of reasons:

First, this measure was introduced when there was no other drug available for the treatment of pain in terminal cancer patients who could no longer tolerate frequent injections. But there is such a drug now. Dilaudid-HP has been approved by the FDA and is currently in use. It is twice as potent as heroin, and its effects last much longer.

Second, congressional approval of heroin for medical use bypasses the traditional channels of testing and screening which are used by the FDA to protect the public.

Third, the presence of heroin in our hospital and hospice pharmacies poses a serious risk to their security, particularly since heroin is among the most desirable of today's street drugs.

Finally, this measure is widely opposed by several prominent groups of health professionals, including those who would be responsible for prescribing and distributing the drug. The American Medical Society, the American Society of Hospital Pharmacists, and the National Federation of Parents for Drug-Free Youth all publicly oppose this bill.

The Compassionate Pain Relief Act may appeal to our emotions through its attempt to help the terminally ill. But it does not appeal to our commonsense. H.R. 5290 is simply no longer necessary, with the availability of better pain killers.

We no longer need to consider the approval of a drug which will create more problems than it will solve. We must vote our commonsense in this matter, and vote against this unnecessary and unwise bill.

● Mr. OTTINGER. Mr. Chairman, as a member of the Subcommittee on Health and the Environment, I am pleased to speak in strong support of H.R. 5490, a bill to establish a temporary program under which heroin would be made available to terminally ill cancer patients for the treatment of intractable pain.

I have heard many of the arguments against this bill, including claims that the heroin might be diverted for illicit trade, or that it is not necessary because we have other legal drugs that are just as good or better than heroin for the treatment of intractable pain. These arguments lack scientific support, sound reasoning, and, most important, human compassion for terminal cancer patients and their families.

The quantities of heroin involved would be miniscule in comparison with the massive amounts already available in the illegal markets. In fact, under this legislation heroin would be available strictly to patients with physician prescriptions at hospital pharmacies, and its use would be permitted only in accordance with the strict provisions of this program, with peer review required for any doctor's decision to use it.

Heroin widely used in England for the treatment of pain due to cancer, and recently approved in Canada for experimental use, is one of the most effective analgesics known to medical science. Research has shown that there remain specific cases of extreme pain that respond only to heroin. I'm sure that each and every one of us has been touched in some way by the ravaging effects of cancer, and know only too well the anguish it can cause. The pain associated with advanced cancer is often excruciating and unbearable, and can greatly aggravate the physical and psychological deterioration of the patient caused by the disease itself. How would you feel if a member of your family or a friend was suffering, and you knew there was a way to alleviate the pain, but you could not use it? I think you would be as outraged and frustrated as are many others whose tragic stories we have heard in the process of researching this tragic situation.

Mr. Chairman, the number of patients who may actually benefit from the passage of this legislation is admittedly small. But if we can alleviate the unnecessary suffering of even one individual, it will be well worth the effort. I urge my colleagues to show their compassion by voting for the Compassionate Pain Relief Act.●

● Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Chairman, today the House considers H.R. 5290, the Compassionate Pain Relief Act. I am an original cosponsor of H.R. 5290, and I strongly support this important measure.

The Compassionate Pain Relief Act will once again allow doctors to prescribe heroin injections for patients suffering from intractable pain. This program will be temporary, and is intended to allow a comprehensive evaluation on the medical usefulness of this drug. At this time, I believe available studies support the individual use of heroin for debilitating pain which accompanies terminal cancer. The variations in individual reaction to drug intolerances enforces the need to have the option of utilizing a more potent drug treatment than now available in pain management therapy.

The bill establishes safeguards to prevent the diversion of heroin into illegal uses. The use of heroin would be permitted only for treatment of terminal cancer patients, and only upon a prescription written by a physician authorized to prescribe controlled substances. In addition, to minimize the risk of loss through pharmacy robberies, storage of the drug would be limited to duly authorized hospice and hospital pharmacies. Retail pharmacies would not be permitted to carry the drug.

As the title of H.R. 5290 states, this is a bill of human compassion. I cannot justify denying the most powerful and effective painkiller to patients suffering from severe pain.●

● Mr. WEISS. Mr. Chairman, a vote in favor of the Compassionate Pain Relief Act, H.R. 5290, is exactly what the name of the bill implies: an act of compassion. It is an act of mercy for thousands of terminally ill cancer patients, whose last moments on Earth might otherwise be spent in agony, except for the use of a drug now used legally in 48 other countries for the relief of pain. That drug is heroin.

It is clear that opposition to this bill would be minimal if that drug was called by any other name. But a fear bordering on paranoia of anything that could be distorted to suggest support for the legalization of heroin has prompted many to oppose a bill that would permit doctors to make small amounts of heroin available under very limited and controlled conditions for the relief of pain.

Opponents of the bill make three chief claims, none of which is legitimate. First, they claim that heroin is unnecessary due to the availability of other potent narcotics, such as dilaudid. But the claims made on behalf of dilaudid are irresponsible. There is no medical evidence that dilaudid is preferable to heroin. In fact, some studies show dilaudid to be considerably more toxic and less effective than heroin. Moreover, there is reason to believe that the euphoric state produced among heroin users may counteract the depression experienced by chronic users of other painkillers.

But what is at issue here is not really which drug is preferable as a painkiller. This has not been established. Indeed, different drugs have different effects on different people, and at varying times, the same drug may have a different effect on the same person. What is of consequence is the idea that doctors should have every resource available to them for the management of pain. And the regimen of drugs available for that purpose should include heroin, which is known to be one of the most effective painkillers ever developed by scientists.

Second, opponents of the bill claim that it unnecessarily circumvents FDA regulations designed to determine the safety and effectiveness of new drugs. However, this claim amounts to reaching for straws at a time when thousands are suffering needlessly. There is no need for the study of heroin as a new drug, because it is not new. It has been used for more than 100 years in England, where it is increasingly becoming the drug of choice for pain relief. The existing precautions contained in the bill are surely sufficient to deal with this substance, and further delay would be unnecessary and tragic.

Finally, opponents argue that there is a significant danger of diverting the heroin available for medical purposes to illegal uses. However, this charge, too, is baseless. The total amount of heroin made available under the temporary program amounts to only 2 to 3 percent of the 8 tons of illicit heroin which is available annually on the streets. Moreover, there is no reason to believe that the lawful availability of heroin in hospital pharmacies poses a greater security threat than any other similar drug. And it is worth noting that significant additional safeguards are mandated under the bill.

Clearly, our Nation faces a significant problem with a growing influx of drugs and a rising incidence of drug abuse. However, the legislation before us today does not impact on that problem. The availability of heroin for medical uses will not increase drug abuse or the criminal activity which is associated with drug abuse. It will merely represent a blessing and a reprieve for those in constant pain and their anguished friends and relatives.

Today, we must send a message that the control of pain is a priority in our Nation and that an unwarranted fear of diversion will not keep us from making small amounts of heroin available for medical use. The American Nurses Association, which represents those who experience on a day-to-day basis the trauma of dying cancer patients, has endorsed this legislation, and I am convinced that a short trip to a hospital bedside would convince us all of the importance of this bill. I urge my colleagues to join me in a vote of compassion for the dying and to vote in favor of H.R. 5290.●

Mr. BROYHILL. Mr. Chairman, to close debate, I would like to again say that we are strongly in opposition to H.R. 5290.

What this bill does is to require, it is a mandatory requirement on the part of the Secretary of Health and Human Services, to establish this program to provide heroin to hospital and hospice pharmacies for use by a terminally ill cancer patient.

I want to point out again, as has been pointed out time and again in this debate, that heroin is not the answer for the relief of pain for terminally ill cancer patients. Not only are we bypassing all of the FDA procedures as was pointed out so ably by the gentleman from California, but the use of this dangerous, addictive drug for pain management is not necessary.

It has been pointed out time and again that there are other pain relievers that are as potent if not more potent than heroin; pain relievers more effective in treating severe and long-term pain. I would also point out that all of the people in the health care industry are opposed to this: The American Medical Association, The American College of Physicians, The American Society of Hospital Pharmacists, and The Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association, and many, many more oppose this bill! Also, this program will be expensive for the Department of Health and Human Services to administer. It is not necessary to spend millions of dollars to control the manufacturing and distribution of heroin as a pain reliever when more potent drugs are currently available.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, there are two arguments that have been advanced against this legislation: First, that there are other drugs available, and many of our colleagues have come forward and said dilaudid is the answer. I do not know is that is true or not. All I do know, and I looked at the New England Journal of Medicine, an August issue, where there was an article by Dr. Monza that said that heroin has an earlier onset of action than dilaudid; it causes less nausea and vomiting; it induces more sedation; it is more rapidly and completely absorbed; and for some patients, heroin is the only drug that will be effective.

I do know whether it is true or not; let us let the medical people dispute this. But let us at least let them have another tool at their disposal to help with people who are suffering intractable pain.

The second argument against the bill is that there is a fear of diversion. I respect that fear of diversion; we tried to address it as carefully as possible. But even if every bit of heroin we make available for dying cancer patients is diverted into the streets, it will be less than 2 percent of what is already there. If we want to send signals around the world to other nations or signals to teenagers, let us stop the drug traffic in our cities and let us stop the importation of illegal drugs into this country. But let us not do that by saying we are going to start by denying it to dying cancer patients.

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired.

Pursuant to the rule, each section of the bill is considered as having been read for amendment under the 5-minute rule.

The Clerk will designate section 1.

The text of section 1 is as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "Compassionate Pain Relief Act".

The CHAIRMAN. Are there any amendments to section 1?

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the remainder of the bill be printed in the RECORD and open to amendment at any point.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The text of the remainder of the bill, H.R. 5290, is as follows:

SEC. 2. The Congress finds the following:

(1) Cancer is a progressive, degenerative, and often painful disease which afflicts one out of every four Americans and is the second leading cause of death.

(2) In the progression of cancer, a significant number of patients will experience levels of severe, intense, and intractable pain which cannot be effectively treated by presently available medication.

(3) The therapeutic use of parenteral diacetylmorphine is not permitted in the United States but extensive clinical research has demonstrated that it is a potent, highly soluble painkilling drug when properly formulated and administered under a physician's supervision.

(4) Making parenteral diacetylmorphine available to patients through controlled channels as a drug for the relief of intractable pain due to cancer is in the public interest.

(5) The availability of parenteral diacetylmorphine for the limited purposes of controlling intractable pain due to cancer will not adversely effect the abuse of illict drugs or increase the incidence of pharmacy thefts.

(6) The availability of parenteral diacetylmorphine will enhance the ability of physicians to effectively treat and control intractable pain due to cancer and promote further research.

(7) It is appropriate for the Federal Government to establish a temporary program to provide pharmaceutical dosage forms of parenteral diacetylmorphine for the control of intractable pain due to cancer in those limited circumstances in which conventional analgesics are ineffective or contraindicated.

SEC. 3. (a) Not later than October 1, 1984, the Secretary of Health and Human Services (hereinafter in this Act referred to as the "Secretary") shall issue regulations establishing a program under which parenteral diacetylmorphine shall be made available to pharmacies for dispensing pursuant to written prescriptions of physicians to individuals for the relief of intractable pain due to cancer (hereinafter in this section referred to as "the program").

(b) The Secretary shall provide for the manufacture of parenteral diacetylmorphine for dispensing under the program using adequate methods in, and adequate facilities and controls for, the manufacturing, processing, and packing of such drug to preserve its identify, strength, quality, and purity.

(c) Under the program parenteral diacetylmorphine may only be made available, upon application, to pharmacies registered under section 302 of the Controlled Substances Act which meets such qualifications as the Secretary may by regulation prescribe. An application for parenteral diacetylmorphine shall—

(1) be in such form and submitted in such manner as the Secretary may prescribe; and

(2) contain assurances satisfactory to the Secretary that—

(A) the applicant meets such special requirements as the Secretary may prescribe respecting the storage and dispensing of parenteral diacetylmorphine; and

(B) parenteral diacetylmorphine provided under the application will be dispensed through the applicant upon the written prescription of a physician registered under section 302 of the Controlled Substances Act to dispense controlled substances in schedule II of such Act.

Requirements prescribed by the Secretary under paragraph (2)(A) shall be designed to protect against the diversion into illicit channels of parenteral diacetylmorphine distributed under the program.

(d) A physician registered under section 302 of the Controlled Substances Act may prescribe parenteral diacetylmorphine for individuals for the relief of intractable pain due to cancer. Any such prescription shall be in writing as prescribed by the Secretary by regulations.

(e) The Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act and titles II and III of the Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act of 1970 shall not apply with respect to—

(1) the importing of opium,

(2) the manufacture of parenteral diacetylmorphine; and

(3) the distribution and dispensing of parenteral diacetylmorphine, in accordance with the program.

SEC. 4. (a) Not later than the third month beginning after the date of the enactment of this section and every third month thereafter until the program is established under section 3, the Secretary shall report to the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate on the activities undertaken to implement the program; and each year after the program is established and while it is in effect, the Secretary shall report to such committees on the activities under the program during the period for which the report is submitted.

(b) Upon the expiration of four years after the date the program is established, the Comptroller General of the United States shall report to the committees referred to in subsection (a) on the activities under the program during such four years.

SEC. 5. The program established under section 3 shall terminate upon the expiration of sixty months after date the program is established.

COMMITTEE AMENDMENTS

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the committee amendments.

The Clerk proceeded to read the committee amendments, as follows:

Committee amendments: Page 2, in lines 10 and 22, strike out "cancer" and insert in lieu thereof "terminal cancer"; page 3, in lines 1, 6, 11, and 22, strike out "cancer" and insert in lieu thereof "terminal cancer"; and page 5, line 11, strike out "cancer" and insert in lieu thereof "terminal cancer".

Page 3, line 14, strike out "October 1, 1984" and insert in lieu thereof "six months after the date of enactment of this Act".

Page 3, line 19, and page 4, line 10, strike out "pharmacies" and insert in lieu thereof "hospital and hospice pharamacies".

Page 3, insert after the period in line 23 the following:

For purposes of the program, an individual shall be considered to have terminal cancer if there is histologic evidence of a malignancy in the individual and the individual's cancer is generally recognized as a cancer with a high and predictable mortality.

Page 6, line 9, strike out "four years" and insert in lieu thereof "three years" and in line 13 on page 6 strike out "four years" and insert in lieu thereof "three years".

Page 6, line 15, strike out "sixty months" and insert in lieu thereof "forty-eight" months".

Page 6, add after line 16 the following new section:

SEC. 6. The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall report to the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Labor and Human Services of the Senate not later than six months after the date of the enactment of this Act—

(1) on the extent of research activities in the management of pain which have received funds through the National Institutes of Health,

(2) on the ways in which the Federal Government supports the training of health personnel in pain management, and

(3) recommendations for expanding and improving the training of health personnel in pain management.

Mr. WAXMAN (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the committee amendments be considered en bloc, considered as read, and printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the committee amendments considered en bloc.

The committee amendments were agreed to.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I think it is important that first we understand what it is that the committee is debating today. What we are debating today is a bill which will make available, under the strictest controls available under law, heroin for the treatment of hopeless cancer victims, to abate their pain.

A definition of those who are eligible under this bill is included. The charge has been made that good manufacturing practices of the Food and Drug Administration are abated. That is not true; they are in this bill at page 4, line 3, subsection b. The committee thought enough that those particular practices with regard to safeguards and with regard to care in manufacture should be there.

It is argued that the testing provisions of Food and Drug have been dispensed with. Heroin has been used in every nation in the world. It is probably, after aspirin, our best tested drug. My colleagues have said that this would cause enormous amounts of diversion. I listen to that with genuine amusement, because at the time that this administration is opposing making this drug available as a drug of last resort to hopeless cancer victims whose ease and relief may be dependent only upon this drug, it is reducing the number of customs offices who are at our shores to protect us against a flood of illegal drugs, and who are there to protect us against a flood of other illegal imports.

I say that if this administration is really opposed to this kind of legislation, if they are really opposed to the import of drugs, and if they are really opposed to illegal imports of commodities of any kind, let them see to it that the laws are properly enforced by the required and the necessary number of customs officers at our shore to protect us against heroin and other illegal imports.

Let us take a little bit of a look at the question of diversion; 4.3 tons of illegal heroin come into this country. That is the equivalent two elephants in weight. If you were to take the entire amount of heroin that is going to be coming into this country under carefully controlled conditions to meet the needs of hopelessly dying cancer patients, you would probably have the equivalent of a pimple on the posterior of one of those elephants.

My colleagues talk about diversion. There is not going to be any diversion; the streets are full of heroin, and available at far cheaper and more advantageous prices and at lower cost and with less inconvenience than diverting it out of the custody of hospitals. Remember, hospitals handle right this minute, under the same processes; and I have heard no complaint in this debate today, morphine, handle dilaudid, and handle all manner of addictive and other dangerous drugs.

There is not going to be any diversion, and the amount involved is so small as to be insignificant, 4.3 tons come in every year. This heroin use is going to be just a pimple on the posterior of the elephant.

Now, why do we have this huge conflict in the House about this bill? Because the administration has been lobbying illegally. The administration has been lobbying illegally, and I will be putting into the RECORD the letters that they were sending around telling how the different agencies of the Department should be communicating with mayors, chiefs of police, community leaders, and Members of Congress.

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES,
Washington, DC, July 13, 1984.

Memorandum to: Regional Directors (I–X).

The attached packet is self-explanatory. Please start by reading the "fact sheet" on the top.

The Secretary and the Assistant Secretary have asked our help in defeating HR 5290 when it comes to a vote on the House floor sometime in the last two weeks of July.

Please do the following, in order:

1. Contact (in person, if possible, by phone, if necessary, given the shortness of time) the state narcotics enforcement office and/or drug abuse offices in each of your states and ask them to contact their congressional delegation to ask for a "No" vote.

2. In the same fashion, contact the Office of the Governor in each of your states to ask them to do the same.

3. In the same fashion, contact each major city mayor in each of your states to ask them to contact their local congressman to ask for a "No" vote.

4. Telephone or visit as many district congressional offices in your region as possible in the time allowed to urge a "No" vote. Make direct contact with as high-ranking a person in the district office as possible.

Please feel free to duplicate any or all of the attached material to send directly to those whom you contact. Use express mail or Federal Express, as appropriate.

On Friday, July 20, I or a member of my staff will telephone you directly to ask for a report from you on the contacts you have been able to complete and the reactions from each contact. Please try to get a response, even if it means telephoning back after the initial contact. I want to be able to report results, if we have them, before the vote on the House floor is made.

Public Affairs Directors will be contacted directly for their separate instructions in this effort regarding media contacts, placing op-ed pieces, etc. by the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Public Affairs.

Please call me or Bill Triplett if you have any questions. Also, this item will be on the agenda of our regular weekly conference call on Wednesday, July 18.

Thank you, in advance, for your assistance.

DIXON ARNETT,
Deputy Under Secretary for Intergovernmental Affairs.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL] has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. DINGELL was allowed to proceed for 5 additional minutes.)

Mr. DINGELL. I called them to task. I said, "You are violating the law." In my formal remarks will be a citation to the law which the administration is violating. In their communication the administration says, "This bill, in essence, legalizes heroin." They lie. It does not legalize heroin. What this bill does is it makes available to hopeless patients suffering the last pains of cancer the possible relief provided under the most careful controls and restrictions.

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES,
Denver CO, July 17, 1984.

MS. BETTY J. MILLER,
District Representative, Office of Representative Timothy E. Wirth, Westminster, CO.

DEAR MS. MILLER: As Regional Director of the United States Department of Health and Human Services for Region VIII, I feel it is important to keep the public advised as to pending legislation that impacts you as a citizen.

In this vein, there is in Congress today, a bill referred to as the "Compassionate Pain Relief" Bill, or specifically HR 5290. This bill, in essence, legalizes heroin!!

Enclosed you will find a fact sheet concerning this important legislation. I feel that it would be in your best interest to read the material and then to contact your Congresspeople as you see fit.

Again, please do not ignore this pending legislation. Educate yourself to the issue and respond accordingly. Congress will be acting on this issue within days. It is important to act now.

As noted on the second page of the fact sheet, the Administration and the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services is solidly against passage of HR 5290. Please act today.

Sincerely,

PATRICK C. ALLISON,
Regional Director.

□ 1220

They lie. They lie. It does not legalize heroin. What this bill does is, it makes available to hopeless patients suffering the last pains of cancer the possible relief provided under the most careful controls and restrictions.

Heroin could ease those last pains and suffering that they are going to know. That is what the bill does. It does not legalize heroin. They lie. And I will put in the provisions of law.

§ 1913. Lobbying with appropriated moneys

No part of the money appropriated by any enactment of Congress shall, in the absence of express authorization by Congress, be used directly or indirectly to pay for any personal service, advertisement, telegram, telephone, letter, printed or written matter, or other device intended or designed to influence in any manner a Member of Congress, to favor or oppose, by vote or otherwise, any legislation or appropriation by Congress, whether before or after the introduction of any bill or resolution proposing such legislation or appropriation; but this shall not prevent officers or employees of the United States or of its departments or agencies from communicating to Members of Congress on the request of any Member or to Congress, through the proper official channels, requests for legislation or appropriations which they deem necessary for the efficient conduct of the public business.

Whoever, being an officer or employee of the United States or of any department or agency thereof, violates or attempts to violate this section, shall be fined not more than $500 or imprisoned not more than one year, or both; and after notice and hearing by the superior officer vested with the power of removing him, shall be removed from office or employment.

June 25, 1948, c. 645, 62 Stat. 792.

And when they were caught I said the matter must be referred to the Inspector General. The matter was referred to the Inspector General and the Inspector General has referred the matter to the U.S. attorney for prosecution in two cases.

And what else did the administration do? The administration sent around then a second letter that said disregard the first communication. But then they said go ahead and lobby anyway and I will put that communication in the RECORD.

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES,
Washington, DC, July 16, 1984.

Memorandum to: Regional Directors (I–X).
From: Dixon Arnett, Deputy Under Secretary for Intergovernmental Affairs.

The packet forwarded to you on July 13 express mail is self-explanatory. Please destroy the cover memo in that packet, as it is inoperative. Next, read the "fact sheet" on top of the packet.

The Secretary and the Assistant Secretary for Health have expressed serious concern regarding any move to legalize heroin, for any purpose, in this Country.

Please assure that you, and the regional professional staffs are thoroughly familiar with this information. The information should be disseminated as widely as possible immediately.

For that purpose, please feel free to duplicate the fact sheet and Dr. Brandt's testimony to send directly to those whom you contact. Use express mail or Federal Express, as appropriate.

Since this matter is currently under deliberation, timeliness is of the essence. On Friday, July 20, I or a member of my staff will telephone you directly for a report on the reactions from your dissemination of this information.

If we are talking about law abiding, if we are talking about health, if we are talking about good administration, I think one of the first requirements is that the administration should obey the law and the second requirement is it should tell the truth.

It does not appear to be a popular thing in this town anymore on the part of the administration to talk about compassion, but I think it is a good idea to talk about compassion.

I want to tell you a little bit about compassion and I want to tell you a little bit about those last moments. I hope to God that nobody in this room ever has to go through what the two people I am going to tell you about, that I knew very well and that I loved during their last minutes. I hope that no one in this room has to face the pain and the suffering and the anguish either in person or by watching somebody close to them expire under those conditions.

My mother and my father died. In their concluding days, weeks and hours, each of them was hopelessly under the care of a doctor. They were also hopelessly under treatment for their particular diseases by massive injections of morphine.

I should tell you that in no instance, in those last days, did the injections help abate the pain. They died in agony, each of them. They died under the care of the doctors and the doctors did everything they could to abate that pain and to abate that suffering.

You should know that at a given point in the care of cancer as in the death of my mother or in the care of tuberculosis and heart disease as in the case of my dad, morphine and other pain remedies no longer work for large numbers of people. They do not work and the pain goes on. It is hopeless and you say it is wrong to take life, and I agree with that. But it is also wrong to let somebody die in pain and suffering and anguish and agony and to see the families of those persons suffer during the time of the death and the agony of a loved one.

Now, I do not know whether there are better cures available and I do not think anybody in this Chamber knows. And I do not know whether there is a doctor smart enough to find or to prescribe the necessary treatment to assure pain will be abated and that a measure of comfort will be afforded the dying person. But I do know that when I leave this body and this Chamber today and when I have gone on from this place I want to be able to have on my conscience that I did everything I could to see that within proper, sensible controls—and there are proper, sensible controls in this bill—heroin will be available to dying patients who need it.

Mr. SAWYER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DINGELL. I will yield to my friend in just a minute, but I want to finish my statement.

Mr. SAWYER. Well, you just made a misstatement.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Chairman, I did not yield. I will yield to the gentleman when I am ready. I am not ready.

I want my colleagues to understand what is at stake here. It is not that we are going to flood the country with heroin. It is not that there is going to be all manner of malpractice. It is not that there is going to be any doctor compelled to use it.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL] has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. DINGELL was allowed to proceed for 5 additional minutes.)

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Chairman, it is simply that under the most exquisitely controlled conditions, certain patients in the last throes of cancer are going to be able to know that at least this Congress has done its best to provide every option to their doctors for their protection.

Now, let us try to understand this thing. There is not going to be a flood of heroin coming into the country.

There is not going to be any increased distribution of an illegal substance. It is going to be carefully controlled. It is going to be manufactured under the best manufacturing process.

Doctors are going to dispense it. It is a 3-year program, only 3 years and the General Accounting Office is going to monitor it and it is going to report on how the matter was handled. If it turns out it did not work and it was bad, nothing is lost but maybe it is going to work and it is going to help. And maybe there are going to be some people who are going to get to their knees, either the children or the families of the dying, or the dying and say, somebody thought enough of me that they at least tried to give me some relief during my last minutes.

I now yield to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. SAWYER].

Mr. SAWYER. I appreciate the gentleman yielding to me.

Mr. Chairman, first I want to correct one thing. It is not a 3-year program; it is a 4-year program. Does Mr. DINGELL acknowledge that?

Mr. DINGELL. I will take a look at the bill. My reading of it said 3.

Mr. SAWYER. It is 48 months.

Mr. DINGELL. The chairman of the subcommittee informs me it is 4. So it is a 4-year program. I will concede that point.

Will the gentleman concede the other points I make?

Mr. SAWYER. No; because the other point you made was that it is subject to all the same regulations that all other drugs are, and on page 5, section B(e) there on lines 13, 14, and 15, it expressly exempts it from the Federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act.

Mr. DINGELL. No; if the gentleman will read at page 4 it says in (b):

(b) The Secretary shall provide for the manufacture—

And so forth—

using adequate methods in, and adequate facilities and controls for, the manufacturing, processing, and packing of such drug to preserve its identity, strength, quality, and purity.

Mr. DINGELL. I will inform the gentleman that that is the same thing that is in the food and drug laws in a shorter form.

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Chairman, no; it is not. It expressly provides on page 5 that it is not subject to the Food and Drug Act.

Mr. DINGELL. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. WAXMAN. I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

Mr. Chairman, let me clarify that so there will be no misunderstanding of what we do with the food and drug laws. What we do is provide for the same procedure that is now available for the National Cancer Institute to use a drug that is experimental, that has not yet been approved by FDA. In the case of THC for the relief of nausea during the taking of chemotherapy, its use is administered by the National Cancer Institute.

In many cases they are drugs that are experimental or drugs that are orphan drugs because it is not profitable to have all the investments in there to get final FDA approval, but it is the same procedure that is now available and is under the same criteria that is available.

The Secretary shall provide for the manufacture of this drug using "adequate methods in and adequate facilities and controls for the manufacturing, processing, packing of such drug to preserve its identity, strength, quality and purity." That is the legislation.

Mr. RANGEL. Would the gentleman yield further?

Mr. DINGELL. I will yield to my friend, the gentleman from New York.

Mr. RANGEL. I fail to understand that response.

Mr. Chairman, on page 5 of this bill it clearly says that the existing law shall not apply as it relates to the importing of opium and the manufacture and distribution.

Now, if you are trying to tell me that you are substituting this with something in the bill that is just as good, I do not see it.

Now, where in this bill does it say that you are treating this as any other drug that it is against the existing law to have imported into this country?

Mr. DINGELL. Well, I have told the gentleman that it will be subject to all of the controls of any of the controlled substances now.

Mr. RANGELL. I am saying that on page 5, Mr. DINGELL——

Mr. DINGELL. The gentleman may read the bill any way he so desires. I have told the gentleman how it is going to be done and that is the way the matter will be handled.

And let me just inform the gentleman and some of the others that are opposing this legislation, when you go home tonight think about what might happen to you or what might happen to you if you were to lose a mother or a loved one without the benefit of pain relief because good pain control agents are not available. I hope it does not happen to any of your loved ones and I hope it does not happen to you.

I urge that the bill be adopted. It was a carefully drawn piece of legislation which affords an abundance of protection and which affords a greater abundance of compassion.

□ 1230

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL] has again expired.

(On request of Mr. GILMAN and by unanimous consent, Mr. DINGELL was allowed to proceed for 3 additional minutes.)

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DINGELL. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. GILMAN. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman recited his concern for finding a proper drug relief for intractable pain, and that is something we are all concerned about, particularly for the terminally ill. But how does the gentleman respond to this opinion by the American Medical Association, which recites in their report to the Congress of June 4, 1984:

We do not believe that H.R. 5290 will improve pain management. We oppose this legislation for several reasons.

First, there is no need for this extraordinary legislation making heroin available. We believe scientific evidence shows that heroin has no more effect in managing pain from cancer than any other currently available drugs. Well controlled studies of cancer patients have shown that morphine is as effective as heroin for the management of pain from cancer and has no greater incidence of side effects associated with its use.

Dilaudid HP, which was recently approved by the Food and Drug Administration, is also an effective medication and is more potent than heroin.

Mr. DINGELL. I do not quarrel with the points because I am not an expert, and I will not produce experts who will quarrel with the gentleman's experts, but I will tell the gentleman that there is a widely held view that heroin is a device which will abate pain in cases where it will not be abated as well by other alternative substances.

That is the point that is important. I am not going to tell the gentleman that it will occur in a large number of cases. I am going to tell the gentleman that in the view of many responsible experts that it will abate pain in a significant number of cases where other agents will not provide the same blessed relief.

I am going to simply observe that the other substances which the gentleman cited are at least as destructive from a moral and a social view if they escape controls as heroin. And I am going to observe to the gentleman that if we err in this, we ought to err on the side of compassion. There is an abundance of heroin in the country now. There is no need for it to be diverted, and I am going to observe to the gentleman that abating the pain of those with terminal cancer, and that is the only case in which this drug is going to be available, is a very important social and national goal.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DINGELL. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. WAXMAN. I thank the gentleman for yielding, because I want to respond to that statement that was just read to us by citing the testimony of Dr. William Beaver, the professor of pharmacology at Georgetown University School of Medicine.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL] has again expired.

(On request of Mr. WAXMAN and by unanimous consent, Mr. DINGELL was allowed to proceed for 1 additional minute.)

Mr. WAXMAN. If the gentleman will yield further, Dr. Beaver talked about the fact that there is a limited patient group that would benefit from the availability of heroin, and he said:

> We are dealing with a small sub-group of patients, mainly two small sub-groups: One, those who are very tolerant to narcotics in general and need very large doses of parenteral medication; and two, those who for some reason, and we do not understand, turn out after a few trials to respond better to heroin than to alternative narcotics.

There is no answer that we could say with certainty that for every single patient morphine is the answer for them. It may well be for most, and we hope it is for most, but for those who are, for some reason or another, and we know this to be a fact, that different people react differently to different drugs, some of those people do not respond to morphine, and as Dr. Beaver, who is professor of pharmacology, indicated to us, there are some who will respond to heroin under those circumstances.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I do not doubt at all that the people who bring this bill before us bring it before us for what they regard as all the right reasons. I think they do believe it is the compassionate direction in which to go. I think that they have a very worthy goal in mind.

The problem is that I end up disturbed by the vehicle by which they propose to bring about what I regard as a legalization of heroin.

First of all, I serve on a subcommittee that has jurisdiction of oversight on FDA. The distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. WEISS], who is in the chair, is the chairman of that subcommittee. We take a very close look at the way FDA performs. I think it can be said that in many instances we nitpick, and rightly so. We are concerned about the way that FDA makes decisions about the drugs that are being used in this country. We are concerned when patients across the country have adverse reactions to those drugs. We are concerned about many, many aspects of the way FDA performs.

Here we have a bill that says that for this particular drug, we are going to ignore that whole process. The process that we look at in detail and literally dot every "i" and cross every "t" in every instance we can, we are going to ignore that process with regard to this drug that most people regard as a dangerous drug. That raises some questions in my mind.

Is that what we should be doing? I heard the chairman of the subcommittee with jurisdiction make the statement a few minutes ago that this is nothing different from the way experimental drugs are handled by NIH and other places. That may be, but this is not an experimental programs we are talking about here. We are talking about mass distribution. We are not talking about limiting it to some institution; we are talking about a mass distribution program across the country. That does, it seems to me, bring it under the perusal of FDA, or at least it should, and yet that is not the direction in which we are going.

We have had a lot of discussion here about pain. This is a bill aimed at the reduction of pain, but I do not think that pain can be described in this instance in a one-dimensional sense. There is a pain that is the agony of addiction that we have got to look at as well.

It is said that there is just a limited amount of heroin that we are going to allow under this program; we are just going to have a little bit flowing out into the country. I do not know this with the kind of direct experience that the gentleman from Michigan mentioned a moment ago, but I would suggest that there is plenty of evidence on the record that pushers across this country are going to use this kind of legalization approach to their own advantage. I would suggest that we are going to have many pushers telling young kids, "Look, this cannot be all that bad for you. After all, doctors and hospitals are using it all over the country." We are going to have that line used all the time. As soon as there is any kind of an indication that marijuana has medicinal effects, it is being used by pushers in communities. We have evidence of that. And we are going to have the same thing. We are going to have people who are going to be led into use of this drug on the false promises and the false contentions of people who wish them ill.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALKER. I would be glad to yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. WAXMAN. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, if I can understand the gentleman's argument, the gentleman believes that we are going to have dope pushers encouraging people to take heroin because they will be told that, after all, it is being used for dying cancer patients and why should they not try it, too? Is that what the gentleman is suggesting?

Mr. WALKER. The gentleman does not really believe that the pusher is going to tell the child what it is being used for, does he? The gentleman does not really believe that he is going to describe it in those terms. The pusher is going to indicate that this is something which doctors and hospitals use; that it certainly cannot cause one any harm if doctors and hospitals feel that this can be used for good in places. The gentleman does not think that the pushers are really going to describe the context in which the legalization of heroin has been permitted, does he?

Mr. WAXMAN. If the gentleman will yield further, does he believe that a drug pusher will cite congressional references during this debate where some people have urged that heroin may be appropriate for a dying cancer patient and distort the words of Members of Congress in order to convince a young person to try heroin? Is that what the gentleman is suggesting, or does the gentleman think that they are willing to say anything, even now, to try to get people to take drugs? If they are, they should be prosecuted. I believe that. I am not for the legalization of heroin.

But it is nonsense to suggest that we are going to have more successful drug pushers because someone dying from cancer is going to be allowed to take heroin to control the pain. I just think that is one of the most incredible arguments I have ever heard.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER] has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. WALKER was allowed to proceed for 3 additional minutes.)

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, I would say to the gentleman that it seems to me it is nonsense to argue that drug pushers would not misuse the congressional deliberations here. To think that the drug pusher is going to adhere to what we have said in legislative history, I think is a nonsensical argument.

I think it is entirely possible that the drug pusher will use every kind of opportunity he can to try to convince the people that he wants to use his product to use it. I would say to the gentleman that I think it is entirely appropriate to suggest that drug pushers are, in fact, going to use a legalized product in a way in which they can entice people into further use of it illegally.

□ 1240

I do not doubt that the gentleman wants also to stop drug pushing. I would not contend otherwise. I simply contend to the gentleman that by legalizing it a little bit, we give the pusher of illegal products an opportunity to say that this may have worthwhile properties to it, and the gentleman, I think, is not representing a pusher very well if he thinks that they are going to repeat what we say in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALKER. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Chairman, cocaine is available for use by hospitals and doctors. Does the gentleman think that the reason we see so much cocaine used by our young people is that they are told it is legal in some hospitals and that doctors sometimes use it?

Mr. WALKER. Well, I say to the gentleman, as a matter of fact, that I have read articles where one of the things that is being told to young people is that "cocaine has no harmful effect on you, and, after all, we know that it has no harmful effect on you because it is used for legitimate pharmaceutical reasons," and so on.

So that argument is a false argument, but it makes sense in the context of somebody who is being pushed into the use of a drug illegally. So I say to the gentleman that that is precisely the kind of experience we can point to.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. WALKER. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. WAXMAN. In communities where the heroin supply is low, dilaudid, which has been claimed as the drug that solves this whole problem, has become the drug of abuse. Does the gentleman think that perhaps we ought to say that dilaudid should not be available for use for dying cancer patients either because it could be pushed by pushers on the argument that it is a drug that is used in the hospitals and administered by physicians?

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, I would ask the gentleman, was dilaudid something that went through the regular FDA processes?

Mr. WAXMAN. Indeed it has.

Mr. WALKER. Then that is the basis of my argument. What I have been saying is that we are talking about a harmful drug here that the gentleman wants to remove completely from the FDA processes. That is the basis of my argument.

I am saying that, given the nature of the drug and its wide availability as a drug, that is something we have got to be very mindful of as we proceed with the gentleman's bill.

Mr. PARRIS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, all compassionate individuals share the objective and yearn for a legitimate search for compassionate pain relief expressed as a desireable principle in this legislation. No patient should have to suffer pain when we have the means available to provide relief. We all have had family and friends who have been terminally ill and for whom our heart is torn.

I would hope, Mr. Chairman, that those of us who do not support this particular approach to the solution of this problem would not be categorized as uncaring and failing in compassion. That simply is not true.

So while I am very supportive of efforts to provide the terminally ill with relief from extreme pain, I believe there are more desirable alternatives available to us, and I strongly oppose the passage of this legislation to legalize the use of heroin for pain management.

I have the privilege of serving as a member of the Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control, and in that capacity, I have been particularly concerned about the escalation in drug trafficking and the alarming increasing in thefts and losses of controlled substance from hospitals, doctors' offices, pharmacies, and other facilities.

Earlier in this Congress, I introduced legislation, H.R. 2929, the so-called Drug Theft legislation. Many of this bill's provisions were incorporated into H.R. 5222, which has now been adopted by the Congress and is the law of the land. My bill contained the provisions for largely increased penalities relating to employee thefts, customers pilerages, robberies, and burglaries of controlled substances from hospitals and other facilities where those drugs are kept.

We have heard earlier in this debate, Mr. Chairman, that there is not going to be any diversion of this substance. I suggest to the Members that that is simply not correct. The problem of the unauthorized disappearance of drugs in this Nation is enormous. Let me give the Members an idea of the extent of the problem we are facing.

According to the Drug Enforcement Administration, in the year 1982 alone, there were 2,861 thefts by night breakins, 1,037 thefts by armed robbery, 876 employee thefts, 247 customer pilferages, and 833 incidents of loss in transit. These are known cases of controlled substances. Imagine the thousands of instances of this kind that we may not know about.

Each of these thefts or losses involves a very large number of drugs. The average night breakin resulted in a loss of over 4,000 dosage units.

This data, in my view, Mr. Chairman, clearly reinforces the need for enactment of legislation which provides a deterrent for unauthorized loss or use. That is the direction that this Congress should be heading instead of encouraging more breakins by legitimizing the use of heroin and making more of this same criminal substance more readily available in more places.

If we legalize the use of heroin for any purpose, no matter how legitimate, we run the risk of jeopardizing, and will have substantially diminished, the progress we have already made in controlling the access to dangerous drugs. The introduction of heroin into American medical practice would surely result in diversion and personal safety problems increasing for drug enforcement agencies. No matter how much control we think we have, we would be encouraging more breakins, more robberies, and more employee thefts.

As has already been said in this debate, we already have other lawful drugs available that are just as effective, that are not criminal substances, and do not pose the drug abuse and crime problem that authorizing the use of heroin will surely cause.

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to oppose this bill.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to this bill, and I certainly hope that those who oppose it are not pictured to be against patients who are dying in pain.

It just surprises me that those who have compassion for people who go through this terrible experience would not have any confidence in those people who have been trained to understand the problem of pain. I recognize that things are done differently in England, but it would seem to me that before we move forward in order to compassionately deal with the medical question of how to treat pain, we would listen to some of the organizations that have given more study to this than any Member or committee or subcommittee of this Congress.

Why should we be rushing into this because we are concerned about pain, especially that of our loved ones, when we have not the slightest idea of how to deal with it? Who here has more knowledge than the collective studies of the American Medical Association that opposes this bill, the American Society of Internal Medicine that opposes this bill, and the American Association of Medical Colleges that opposes this bill? And certainly I do not think that the Archdiocese of New York has been charged with not having compassion for those people who are dying of cancer and other diseases.

Let us not get uptight when we say we are legalizing this drug. It is in the language here. We are not dealing with the same thing as what we are talking about in aspirin.

It says in the committee report that the committee proposal does not legalize the use of heroin. It says in the bill, on page 5, line 13, that "The Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act and titles II and III of the Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act of 1970 shall not apply with respect to—

"(1) the importing of opium,"

"(2) the manufacture of" heroin, and

"(3) the distribution and dispensing of" it.

□ 1250

It says here in the Hughes amendment, which is supported by the Chair, on page 2, that it is not legalization, they say, but it provides that confiscated heroin, which I certainly would hate to tell a loved one that that is where we are getting our medicine, off the street, but confiscated heroin may be made available for the manufacture and purification into heroin for the use of the program, an exception to the current prohibition on the import of opium for the manufacture of heroin according to section 21, United States Code, section 952.

So I do not know—maybe we are saying that we are talking about a restricted legalization of heroin, and I am certainly not going to argue with anyone that is taking that position.

I doubt seriously whether the drug pushers in my district would be saying that they are working for the Federal Government in order to provide it for terminally ill patients, but obviously, it has to be confiscated from someone and I am assuming the confiscation will be by law enforcement officers who down the line have opposed this bill.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. RANGEL. In just 1 minute.

Yesterday, as chairman of the Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control, I had the opportunity to talk with some 200 police chiefs and State law enforcement officials. I think they would know what makes their job more difficult and they asked me to report to this House that this is one of the items that they believe would make their jobs more difficult—and why?

We are told that we cannot obtain this at the local drug store. We are told, I believe, that the Secretary will determine which doctors can prescribe it. The Secretaries will determine which hospitals can store it or which hospices can store it.

Now, if I have not seen a selective method of health treatment in my life, it seems to me that my doctor—if I wanted to shoot up heroin if I were dying and needed it to subsidize pain, that I have to check with the Secretary.

In any event, it is clear to me that the American Society of Hospital Pharmacies do not want to be designated as a place to be storing heroin.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. RANGEL was allowed to proceed for 3 additional minutes.)

Mr. RANGEL. Those of you who recognize the security problems that hospitals have already will not want to be designated by the Secretary, and certainly the Association for Hospices is opposed to that, and I am assuming that they have compassion for those people who are dying in severe pain.

It seems to me that some people believe that we should be using heroin in order to take care of this problem. I received a letter, as most of you did, from Secretary Heckler. She advises me that the National Cancer Institute is supporting a series of investigations into the use of this and they are doing it—where? At Sloan-Kettering Memorial Cancer Center, and that they expect within 1 year the result of that investigation to be known not just to Members of the Congress, but certainly to the medical world. The Canadian Government, I understand, is supporting a national multi-institutional study of this.

I think it would be unwise to start moving ahead of those people who are still in the process of trying to determine whether or not this makes any sense at all.

I have worked very closely with this problem, as many of you have. It seems to me that we will be sending the wrong signal to countries that we feel so proud in telling them that, yes, we do have problems in marijuana production here. The gentleman from Michigan pointed it out yesterday that when we go to these countries and ask them about spraying their marijuana, they say, "We are protecting our own domestic use of it."

I do not know whether there is any prohibition in this bill as relates to the growing of opium. People have talked about that before and I suggest that any problems we find, immediately there will be an amendment to try to take care of it; but it is clear we do not know what we are doing, that the Department of Justice is asking us to give them a break until they can determine what type of protections are going to be had. The Department of Health and Human Services say we do not need this. We find every section of the medical industry that has an association that is studying this, saying that we are moving too fast.

I hope that as it relates to dealing with foreign countries that no Members of Congress would ever have to tell them that we have changed our minds about legalizing heroin for any particular use and that certainly they are not helping us in growing opium for the exportation into the United States so that eventually it could be used for some licit purpose.

Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from California and the chairman of the committee in case there is something that I said that is wrong and that the gentleman can correct it, as I read the bill.

Mr. WAXMAN. Well, I appreciate that. I want to correct some observations the gentleman made that I think are inaccurate, and of course I disagree with the gentleman's conclusions as well.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has once again expired.

(At the request of Mr. WAXMAN, and by unanimous consent, Mr. RANGEL was allowed to proceed for 1 additional minute.)

Mr. RANGEL. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. WAXMAN. The gentleman referred to the language on page 5, which says:

(e) The Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act and title II and III of the Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act of 1970 shall not apply with respect to—

(1) the importing of opium,

(2) the manufacture of parenteral diacetylmorphine, and

(3) the distribution and dispensing of parenteral diacetylmorphine,

And then the gentleman stopped. Then the next language which the gentleman should have put in, says: "in accordance with the program."

This program is going to be very, very limited in scope. I know the gentleman is chairman of the Select Committee on Narcotics Control. I know the gentleman is concerned about narcotics diversion. We tried every way to limit this program, to limit the possibility of diversion and I think we have succeeded. This will not make heroin available at any corner drugstore by prescription to anyone who may want it.

Mr. RANGEL. Why would the gentleman want it if the American doctors do not want it?

Mr. WAXMAN. Why does the gentleman want to say to an American doctor that he cannot if he wants to use it? We have letters from individual doctors who have said to us, "Why don't you have this available to us so that we can prescribe it?"

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, this debate and the main arguments in favor of this bill really strike me as rather strange. There are no medical associations, no research medical associations, no doctors that I know of that support this. As I said, I have talked with the chief oncologist at the University of Michigan Hospital, and there are none that say there is any advantage to be gained by using heroin, and yet people just get up and say, well, they do not really care what any doctors say. Sure, they do not know anything about it they say, but why not have it anyway so a doctor could have it if he changed his mind?

What do we have experts in this field for if we just say notwithstanding what they say, we are so overcome by terminal pain in cancer cases that we will legalize anything, no matter what anyone thinks.

It would be the equivalent of saying you are going to legalize euthanasia. Euthanasia certainly would terminate terminal pain, but none of the law enforcement authorities, and I am sure none of the doctors and I am sure society in general would not think that the end justified the means. And yet the argument in favor of this bill is strictly that the end justifies the means, no matter how dangerous the law enforcement community to a man, is dead against putting legalized heroin into the streets or anyplace they can get it into the streets.

It just strikes me to say that regardless of the danger because we are so overcome with terminal pain that the end will justify the means and no matter how dangerous the means. It seems to me that is a perfect argument to legalize euthanasia, which is certainly more effective even than heroin.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SAWYER. Yes; I yield.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

The gentleman certainly has correspondence from the organizations and the organizations have taken a position against it, but we have heard from physicians, some of whom have testified before our committee. Dr. Beaver, for example, who is professor of pharmacology at Georgetown University. We have had a stack of letters from doctors. Maybe they are not part of the AMA, but they have said to us that they think they ought to have heroin available to them. If there are doctors who think it is not necessary, they ought to be able to do whatever they want. It is all voluntary. They do not have to prescribe it. It is only when a doctor wants to and thinks that all the other medications have not been successful.

Mr. SAWYER. Is that doctor the gentleman cited, that is, the head of pharmacology? Is he a pharmacist or an M.D.?

Mr. WAXMAN. He is a medical doctor. He is at the School of Medicine at Georgetown right here in Washington, DC, one of the leading experts on pain relief.

In fact, the New England Journal of Medicine last month had a colloquy on the subject because they thought it was one where the debate is still open. Let us not close debate here just because we have heard from the AMA.

Mr. SAWYER. If I can recapture my time, it strikes me just by the legalization or the restricted legalization, as the gentleman from New York aptly said, of heroin, the gentleman is opening a Pandora's box.

□ 1300

Countries like Mexico that have done a tremendous job of eliminating the growth of the poppies for opium, the base of heroin, what are we going to tell them when we are providing a market for it here in the United States? What are we going to tell the people of the hill tribes of Thailand and other places when we are creating a market for it?

And do not tell me, because I know, that defendants who are seized with a large amount of opium or heroin are going to claim to a jury that they were doing it because they hoped to get into this market and sell this product to the hospitals. And you are not going to stop them from so claiming. There are going to be some acquittals based on this because juries are not that expert. If they point at this law and make a good pitch you are going to introduce an argument that cannot be introduced now because heroin is per se illegal. In this case the end does not justify the means any more than euthanasia is justified by the problem.

I think we are just letting another serpent out of the box, really, and I think we will find that it is one.

I want to make one comment now that Mr. DINGELL, the gentleman from Michigan, has stated concerning the illegal lobbying by the administration. I have been here now through the tail end of one and two other administrations and I have not known of one where the administration was not the principal lobbyist for or against any bill of importance that was up, no matter what the subject was, and I do not think that anyone would seriously deny that.

Mr. HUGHES. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SAWYER. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. HUGHES. The gentleman and I very seldom have differences of opinion, but we obviously do on this particular one. I wonder if the gentleman would agree that morphine, which is already in very common use and is like dilaudid, in very common use, and I believe probably morphine is used as a painkiller in hospitals even more than most of the other potent painkillers.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. SAWYER] has again expired.

(On request of Mr. HUGHES and by unanimous consent Mr. SAWYER was allowed to proceed for 2 additional minutes.)

Mr. HUGHES. Will the gentleman continue to yield?

Mr. SAWYER. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. HUGHES. But let me just ask the gentleman. Morphine is actually a derivative of opium gum; would not the gentleman agree that morphine enjoys a limited type of legalization for medicinal purposes in the same fashion as heroin would under the program?

Mr. SAWYER. No; if the gentleman will yield back, morphine is not a hypnotic. It is an analgesic and it has no street value at all. Dilaudid does, and we have a tremendous problem on the streets of Detroit. A 25-cent dilaudid pill is selling for between $40 and $60 per pill and it is somewhat pushing heroin out of the Detroit market.

Mr. HUGHES. The gentleman would agree, would he not, that dilaudid is a derivative of opium gum?

Mr. SAWYER. Yes; but it is also a hypnotic and morphine is not.

Mr. HUGHES. It is a derivative of opium gum just like heroin is a derivative of opium gum, and we have decided that it makes sense to provide not just morphine but also dilaudid.

There was a time when we did not provide dilaudid. But for some types of pain dilaudid is more suitable than morphine. There are physicians who feel that heroin is preferable over some forms of morphine and dilaudid.

The issue really boils down to whether or not we want to provide those variations under a controlled circumstance, and I intend to offer such an amendment, to provide relief to those who are in terminal pain.

Mr. SAWYER. If the gentleman will yield back my time, I would just like to point out that the medical profession, the people who are dealing with this, do not agree with you.

Now, you are a good lawyer, but I would not ask your opinion on what is the best painkiller any more than you would ask for my opinion. But I would go out and find out from the sources that are educated in that field. They, to a person, in fact their national association, disagrees with the gentleman.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. SAWYER] has again expired.

(On request of Mr. HUGHES and by unanimous consent, Mr. SAWYER was allowed to proceed for 1 additional minute.)

Mr. HUGHES. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SAWYER. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. HUGHES. I realize that the gentleman is acting in good faith and I do not want to attribute to anybody on either side of this issue anything but the best of motives. I think we have an honest difference of opinion.

But, for instance, Dr. Allen Mondzac, who is the director of the Warwick Cancer Clinic at George Washington University here in the District of Columbia, who is also chairman of the cancer committee of the DC Medical Society, feels very strongly that this particular medication should be available in those select instances where dilaudid or morphine is not appropriate. And the medical community is divided. It is not a case where there is not a difference of opinion. There is a difference of opinion. If there were not a difference of opinion I would not feel as I do.

Mr. SAWYER. Except the gentleman is aware just by the statements of information provided here that they are undergoing tests now at the Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center and other places. So obviously they are not satisfied at this point and the same is true with the Canadians.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. SAWYER] has again expired.

(On request of Mr. DINGELL and by unanimous consent Mr. SAWYER was allowed to proceed for 3 additional minutes.)

Mr. HUGHES. Will the gentleman yield for one additional point?

Mr. SAWYER. I continue to yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. HUGHES. The fact of the matter is that what we are attempting to do is to provide relief for those who are dying today. I have heard the gentleman complain, as I often do, that it takes so long to process these experiments and tests and the test periods for these particular substances and then even longer to implement the results. Here is the situation where we know that we have another derivative of opium that will help in some situations. It is a variant of drugs that we are already using in the hospitals.

Mr. SAWYER. You say we know it. We do not know it and the medical profession apparently as a group does not know that because they are running tests for 1 year to find out.

Mr. WAXMAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SAWYER. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. WAXMAN. I want to cite the fact that there really is no dispute that heroin is effective for controlling pain. Even Dr. Brandt, who is the Assistant Secretary of Health, indicated that.

Mr. SAWYER. I do not have any dispute with that. It is a question of whether it is more effective than Dilaudid or other analgesics that are presently legalized.

Mr. WAXMAN. They are testing at the Cancer Institute to see whether Dilaudid is as effective as morphine and they hope it will be as effective. But about heroin there is no dispute and they do not need to test it any more because, and I quote Dr. Brandt: "There is no dispute over heroin's ability to help control pain."

The dispute is whether we are going to allow it under very limited circumstances as an option for a patient who is not having his or her pain relieved from the other medications.

Mr. SAWYER. Except that is really not addressing the point any more than you can show without dispute that euthanasia will control pain, too. But there are reasons that you do not legalize it and the same thing is true with heroin.

Mr. DINGELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SAWYER. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. DINGELL. The gentleman made the comment a little while back that one of these is not a hypnotic. Let me just inform the gentleman that morphine, that Dilaudid, that heroin are all opium derivatives. They are all alkaloids. They are all narcotic. They are all hypnotic. They are all addictive. And they are all on the street or shortly will be.

Mr. SAWYER. I just disagree with the hypnotic part with morphine. That is why morphine is not sold on the street. Has the gentleman ever heard of a drug peddler who is peddling morphine?

Mr. DINGELL. Yes.

Mr. SAWYER. You know, I was a prosecuting attorney in an urban area and I know that they do not peddle morphine on the street. And the reason that they do not is because it is not a hypnotic.

Mr. DINGELL. I was a former prosecutor, too, I will inform the gentleman.

Mr. WAXMAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SAWYER. I am happy to yield.

Mr. WAXMAN. Morphine has been on the street but the reason it is not as successful among drug pushers is because heroin is more effective and that is why there is a greater market. But all of these are opium derivatives and are known narcotics and are abused. And when heroin is not available the drug pushers are pushing these drugs as well.

What we ought to do is control the traffic.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. SAWYER] has again expired.

(On request of Mr. RANGEL and by unanimous consent Mr. SAWYER was allowed to proceed for 2 additional minutes.)

Mr. RANGEL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SAWYER. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. RANGEL. I think the gentleman from Michigan has effectively closed the argument that we are not attempting to legalize heroin and I think this has been pointed out by the gentleman from New Jersey, because under existing law, is it not a fact that it is illegal to manufacture and distribute heroin in any form?

Mr. SAWYER. That is correct.

Mr. RANGEL. So if we are going to now, as the gentleman from New Jersey suggests, throw this into the category of cocaine and morphine and in addition to that, methadone, then certainly no one can dispute that we put heroin not only in a legal status but subject to the same lack of security as we have with other legal drugs?

Mr. SAWYER. That is right.

Mr. SHAW. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SAWYER. I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. SHAW. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman have 1 more minute in addition to the time he has left.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is premature. The gentleman still has time remaining.

Mr. SHAW. I would like to compliment the gentleman for the comments he has made and associate myself with them, as well as the gentleman from New York [Mr. RANGEL]. I think you have really put your hand on a most important point.

□ 1310

We in the Congress, we in the Federal Government at all levels have worked so hard to try to convince the foreign country, the source countries, the transshipment points and all of these, to please cooperate with us. All of that is going to be unraveled if this bill passes. It is going to send out the worst signals possible.

So we are not only talking about that small portion that may be given to somebody who is terminally ill, we are talking about the tons of that that are going to make their way to the streets. We are talking about the foreign countries who are no longer going to cooperate with us.

The gentleman in the well [Mr. SAWYER] is so right, this bill has to be turned down in any shape or form that it might end up coming out of this committee. I think this is a most important vote and I compliment the speakers who have so, I think, ably opposed this bill on the floor.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The CHAIRMAN. Evidently a quorum is not present.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRIES

Mr. GEKAS. A point of order, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. There is a point of order pending at the moment.

Mr. GEKAS. A point of parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. GEKAS. When the Chair has noted one time during the day that a quorum has not been present, is it proper under parliamentary procedure to restate that kind of inquiry?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman would be right if a quorum call had been conducted in the Committee of the Whole on this bill. There had been no such point made as to this bill, so the gentleman's point of order is sustained. There is no quorum present.

Mr. BROYHILL. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. BROYHILL. Mr. Chairman, will the quorum call be dispensed with when 100 Members appear?

The CHAIRMAN. No. We are having a regular quorum call at this point.

Members will record their presence by electronic device.

The call was taken by electronic device.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mr. FUQUA). Three hundred and sixty-six Members have answered to their names, a quorum is present, and the Committee will resume its business.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, in a few minutes we will have before us an amendment to be offered by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES], as chairman of the Subcommittee of the Judiciary that deals with law enforcement and narcotics abuse.

The Hughes amendment—of course, he will explain it even more adequately than I will—so that there will be an understanding of what this amendment will do in the context of the bill. It will strengthen the law enforcement provisions of the legislation. I think the gentleman has made an enormous contribution in giving us some ideas on how to narrow down, even further, any possibility of diversion of heroin intended for cancer patients to an illicit street traffic. It would deal with the criminal penalties and strengthen those criminal penalties should there be any diversion. Thus it would set up even more protection against any possible abuse of this program.

The bill now provides that when a doctor determines that a terminal cancer patient is not satisfactorily responding to morphine or dilaudid or any of the other drugs that are now available to control pain, the doctor then may decide to prescribe what is known commonly as heroin which, under all scientific opinion, is clearly effective and often more effective than any other drug for the control of pain.

The gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES] will propose that the doctor can make this decision only under those circumstances, and in addition the doctor would have to go to a review board of other doctors to put forward the information that he has as to how his patient is responding before permission would be given to go forward with the prescription of heroin.

This amendment, I think, is a worthwhile amendment. I think it will take care of some of the objections that I have heard from Members about the legislation. The two most common objections to the legislation are the concern about diversion of the heroin to illicit street traffic and, whether other drugs are satisfactory. As to whether other drugs are satisfactory, there is a dispute in the medical world. It is not a closed issue. The New England Journal of Medicine ran a debate just last month on that issue. Dr. Brandt, who is the Assistant Secretary of Health and who opposes this bill because of his fears of the diversion issue, acknowledges that heroin is an effective drug for the control of pain.

There is this debate as to whether heroin would fill in a gap that now exists for some patients. Thank goodness, not all dying patients go through this agony, but some who are going through the horrible misery of intractable pain in their last hours, find that the other drugs, which are successful for most patients, are not successful for them. This legislation would then permit a doctor, after a review board looks at his recommendations, to come forward and prescribe heroin for that patient.

As to the diversion, I respect the concerns about it. I think we ought to narrow that as carefully as possible. We have tried to do that. This will not be available in every pharmacy in the country. It will not be at your neighborhood pharmacy, on every street corner, although I hear that in some cities like New York, heroin on the streets is available on every street corner. The heroin will be available only in hospital pharmacies and hospice pharmacies, and only if they request it. If a hospital is concerned about an increase in crime, if may decide not to have heroin available. But most of the theft of controlled substances are at retail pharmacies, and that is why we have not permitted retail pharmacies to have heroin available. We have tried to narrow availability.

But let me point out again, if we are wrong, if every bit of heroin we make available for dying cancer patients is diverted onto the streets, it will be less than 2 percent of what is already there. But we will not allow that to take place.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN] has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. WAXMAN was allowed to proceed for 2 additional minutes.)

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WAXMAN. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. RANGEL. Let me ask this: Assuming that the patient wanted heroin and the family wanted the patient to have it and the doctor tried other drugs and thought that heroin would be the best thing, he went to the review board and the review board agreed with him, where would he go to get the heroin?

Mr. WAXMAN. It would be provided by the Department of Health and Human Services.

Mr. RANGEL. And under the bill, it would be, as the gentleman pointed out, distributed in a very limited number of circumstances in a very few hospitals and hospices; is that correct?

Mr. WAXMAN. That is correct.

Mr. RANGEL. So notwithstanding all of this, it may not be available to the patient or the doctor? I am asking.

Mr. WAXMAN. If I could reclaim my time, it may not, under some circumstances, because you are trying to be very careful about the distribution. But it would be exactly as THC, which is the active ingredient in marijuana, is controlled now. Patients under chemotherapy have that available to them, but only under very limited circumstances. And we want to limit it, and I know the gentleman from New York wants us to limit it.

Mr. RANGEL. The question is that once you limit it to such an extent that the doctor, the patient and his family cannot get it, I see no reason why the street dealer would not be able to accommodate the family by giving an injection of heroin.

Mr. WAXMAN. That would be a violation of the law. It could be done now, and it would still be a violation of the law. It would be a violation of the law, under any circumstances. We expect that the law would be enforced. We do not want that to happen, and we would do everything we can to prevent it. But what we would learn from this very limited experiment is whether there is a need for heroin, whether in fact doctors decide that for some of their patients heroin would be more appropriate and therefore prescribe it for that patient. It would be under those very limited circumstances that this whole experimental program, which will be wiped out, sunsetted, after 4 years, would be conducted. And after that time we would know more than we know now.

We are hiding our heads in the sand and denying that there is a problem because of the fear that we all have about heroin. I respect that fear, but I think we ought to be dealing with this in a rational and compassionate and humane way.

Mr. LEWIS of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to this bill. And while I am deeply sympathetic to those who have seen close friends and family suffer through painful terminal illness, I oppose this legislation for many reasons.

First, the medical community is against this bill. The doctors and the pharmacists do not want this bill passed. These are the people to whom we must look to control the types of drugs that we have, and these are the people who would be directly involved with the distribution of this potent drug.

Second, the legislation clearly circumvents the critical consumer protection features of FDA's process for approving all drugs. I believe the proper avenue for approving any drug is through FDA procedures rather than through legislation of this kind.

And, third, there are already acceptable painkillers legally available for medical use. Dilaudid-HP, a drug recently approved by FDA, has proved to be more potent, has a faster onset and longer duration of action than does heroin.

Mr. Chairman, successful pain control requires a comprehensive and educated approach to the patient and his family. This includes a knowledgeable use of narcotics agents along with a variety of other medications. Clearly, should heroin become available without the proper education program, the dangers would be immeasurable.

□ 1340

As a member of the Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control, and as a Representative from the State of Florida, a State well known for its fight against illegal drugs, I am concerned that if we legalize heroin, where does this country intend to get its supply? How do we plan to control this supply, by passing H.R. 5290? Are we not only increasing the possibility of purified heroin being diverted for illicit use?

Yes, yesterday this House overwhelmingly agreed to change existing law to prevent the diversion of prescription drugs to illicit markets. But here we are today discussing legislation to legalize heroin. One of, if not the most dangerous drugs available. As it is now, we have legal and controllable painkillers on the market. We must ask ourselves and look into our conscience, are we going to legalize something that currently is degradating our police, our politicians, our children, and disrupting family unity. We cannot continue, as long as we have current painkillers that are available, to allow this bill to be passed that could allow this drug to become uncontrollable on the market.

Therefore, I firmly believe that legalizing heroin is not the answer to the problem of unmanageable pain, and I urge my colleagues to vote against the bill.

Mr. KINDNESS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of Florida. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. KINDNESS. I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to associate myself with the gentleman's remarks in opposition to H.R. 5290. Mr. Chairman, there appears to be a need for greater research and training in the field of pain management, both as regards the drugs used in relieving the intractable pain of terminal cancer patients, and also as to how those drugs are used.

It seems to me that we ought to be addressing that need rather than following the course laid out for us in H.R. 5290, of course, which, to paraphrase H.L. Mencken is, "sensitive, compassionate, and wrong."

Mr. Chairman, I want to express vigorous opposition to H.R. 5290, the Compassionate Pain Relief Act.

No member of this body can be insensitive to the distress of some victims of terminal cancer who suffer intractable pain, as well as the anguish felt by their families and friends. But we would do well to remember that what we ought to be testing here is not our sensitivity or our compassion, but our judgment and our prudence.

Our judgment and prudence ought to suggest that a bill legalizing a drug as widely abused and potentially dangerous as heroin—to however limited a degree—should not be approved without adequate safeguards against diversion to illegal uses. Such safeguards are not provided in H.R. 5290; indeed, section 3(c) of the bill vests responsibility for preventing diversion in the Department of Health and Human Services, which has little expertise in this area.

Furthermore, under section 3(e) the provisions of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act and titles II and III of the Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act of 1970 with regard to the importation, manufacture, and distribution of heroin would not apply, as long as these activities were carried out in accordance with the program set up by H.R. 5290. How are we to regulate heroin manufacturers so as to prevent diversion into illegal channels? What impact will this legislation have on our treaty obligations with respect to international trade in opium and narcotics? The proponents of H.R. 5290 have not answered these questions.

Nor have they explained why it is necessary to bypass the long-established procedures for approval of new drugs by the Food and Drug Administration. The Congress required FDA clearance of new drugs for a very good reason: To protect the public by demonstrating through controlled scientific studies that new drugs are safe and effective. I am not aware of any compelling justification for exempting heroin from FDA approval that could not apply as well to a wide variety of other drugs. Passing H.R. 5290, therefore, would not only subject the public to undue risk, it would set an unfortunate and possibly dangerous precedent.

Finally, Mr. Chairman, there is evidence that already available drugs such as dilaudid-HP—which recently was approved by the FDA—are both more effective than heroin in treating intractable pain and less likely to be diverted into illicit channels. Even if we accept the idea that heroin is a safe and effective treatment for intractable pain, and the idea that the risk of diversion into illegal use is minimal, the medical necessity for this legislation is unclear. In short, H.R. 5290 seems to have been overtaken by events.

AMENDMENTS OFFERED BY MR. HUGHES

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Chairman, I offer amendments.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendments offered by Mr. HUGHES: Page 3, insert before the period in line 23 the following: "which may not be effectively treated with currently available analgesic medications".

Page 4, insert after line 2 the following:

A diagnosis that an individual is ill with such a cancer shall be made as follows:

"(1) The diagnosis shall be initially made by the attending physician of such individual.

"(2) The diagnosis of the attending physician and the appropriateness of prescribing parenteral diacetylmorphine shall be reviewed and approved by a medical review board of the hospital or hospice which will dispense the parenteral diacetylmorphine under the program. The medical review board shall be composed of three physicians.

Page 5, strike out lines 13 through 22 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

(e)(1) The Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act shall not apply with respect to—

(A) the manufacture of parenteral diacetylmorphine, and

(B) the distribution and dispensing of parenteral diacetylmorphine, carried out in accordance with the requirements respecting the manufacture, distribution, and dispensing of parenteral diacetylmorphine under the program established by the Secretary under subsection (a).

(2) The Attorney General shall for purposes of the program—

(A) register, under part C of the Controlled Substances Act, manufacturers of parenteral diacetylmorphine for the program who meet the requirements prescribed by the Secretary under subsections (a) and (b), and

(B) register, under such part, hospital and hospice pharmacies and physicians to distribute and dispense parenteral diacetylmorphine under the program if the pharmacies and physicians meet the requirements prescribed by the Secretary under subsection (a) and the requirements of subsections (c) and (d).

(3) Any person who knowingly violates any regulation of the Secretary respecting the manufacture, distribution, or dispensing of parenteral diacetylmorphine under the program shall be fined not more than $125,000, or shall be imprisoned for not more than 15 years, or shall be both fined and imprisoned.

Page 4, line 3, insert after "(b)" the following: "Heroin confiscated in the enforcement of the Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act of 1970 and the customs laws shall be made available for the manufacture of parenteral diacetylmorphine for the program. If the Secretary determines that the amount of heroin available through confiscation is not sufficient to meet the applications of qualified hospitals and hospices under the program, the Secretary may, notwithstanding section 1002(a) of the Controlled Substances Import and Export Act, import opium for the purpose of manufacturing additional parenteral diacetylmorphine to be distributed under the program.".

Page 4, line 22, strike out "and", and in line 3 on page 5, strike out the period and insert in lieu thereof "; and", and insert after line 3 the following:

(C) the applicant will have a medical review board to make the review required by subsection (a).

Mr. HUGHES (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendments be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Chairman, I want to say to my colleagues that I find myself in a very uncomfortable position, in that, as chairman of the Subcommittee on Crime, all the Members that have been speaking today against this legislation are the folks that I work with, day-in and day-out. I just happen to think they are wrong on this issue. I want to tell you that I will not take a back seat to anybody in this Congress when it comes to efforts to deal with drug trafficking. I think my record stands for itself. I spent 10 years in the pits as a prosecutor fighting drug trafficking and other forms of crime before I was elected to Congress. I just happen to think that they are wrong on this issue.

Now unless the amendment that I offer carries, I can tell you honestly I am not going to support the bill. I searched my own conscience long and hard before I came down as I did. The thing that persuaded me that this legislation makes sense at this time is that there is a split in the medical community. Frankly, I do not know who is right because I am not a doctor, I am not a scientist, I am not a pharmacologist. I do not know whether or not we really need heroin, but I know that a number of years ago we decided to legalize, in a limited form for medicinal purposes, things like dilaudid, which is a derivative of opium gum, just like heroin. Morphine, which is a derivative, again, of opium gum, has been available for over 100 years because we feel that we need it in addition to other pain killers.

Now, distinguished members of the medical community tell us that there are certain types of pain associated with terminal illness that they cannot relieve and make life a little easier for terminally ill cancer patients. You can talk about legalization, if that is what you want to call it. I call it making it medically available to the medical community under certain safeguards as we have done with other substances.

I am not persuaded by the argument that there are going to be tons of this stuff, because we are talking about a limited experiment under controlled circumstances, and with my amendment, with all of the protections of the Controlled Substances Act in place.

We could argue, if you want to talk about diversion, that we should be withdrawing a lot of prescription drugs. If we really want to talk about the market for diversion, it is those prescription drugs, for which doctors write prescriptions every day, that end up sending thousands of people to the overdose units in emergency rooms throughout this country. Sixty percent of the overdoses are caused, not by heroin, not by dilaudid—which is more sought after, really, than heroin on the street—but by the prescription drugs. It is very often the prescription drugs that the kids are using in the schoolyards today, and anybody who would suggest that we are going to have a major new problem as a result of making heroin available only in hospitals, really is, in my judgment, overstating their case.

The fact of the matter is that we have a diversion problem, and as the gentleman from Florida just indicated, we passed a major diversion control bill yesterday to deal with the diversion problem. Let me tell you, Mr. Chairman, I was a prime sponsor of that legislation. I am concerned about diversion of any drug. I am the one who calls the Drug Enforcement Administration in, along with HAL SAWYER, about once every 2 months, to ask them what happened to our diversion investigative units and if we are going to do a better job with diversion.

On this point, you know what OMB did 2 years ago? The diversion investigative units in some 20 States were so successful that they eliminated it. It was so successful that they did away, basically, with the Federal effort in the States in a program that would do something focused and specific about the tremendous amount of diversion.

Mr. Chairman, the amendment that I offer strengthens the criminal and regulatory provisions of the act to prevent diversion of heroin to the black market through the program established by this bill. In my judgment, the criticisms directed at the bill for lack of controls are valid ones. In essence, as reported it did not put in place the controls; it waived the controls of the Controlled Substances Act, and that is found in section 3(e) of the bill.

This exemption concerns me greatly, and I told the chairman and other members of this committee that I had great concern over that, and I would not support the legislation if in fact we do not provide the same controls for heroin that we provide for other controlled substances such as morphine and dilaudid.

This amendment establishes a framework to prevent such a diversion and it assures that violations can be investigated by the Drug Enforcement Administration as violations of the Controlled Substance Act.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES] has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. HUGHES was allowed to proceed for 5 additional minutes.)

Mr. HUGHES. The amendment requires, first, that the pain of the terminal cancer patient is not treatable by the currently available pain medications such as dilaudid or morphine.

Second, the amendment requires that the diagnosis required under the program be made personally by the attending physician and reviewed and confirmed by a medical review board composed of an additional three doctors. This will prevent a physician from dispensing heroin to a person not qualified for heroin under this program who was referred by another physician.

I think in view of the experimental nature of the program, that this is something that we should require.

□ 1350

Third, the amendment brings everyone connected with the program within the system of regulation of the Controlled Substances Act. Currently, as well known body of regulations set forth how security for drugs is to be maintained by manufacturers, distributors, pharmacists, and doctors.

This amendment puts those controls in place. A person who violates these regulations is subject to the strict felony penalties of the Controlled Substances Act, which the House voted to further strengthen when it passed H.R. 4901 last week and H.R. 5656 just yesterday, the Dangerous Drug Diversion Control bill.

In addition, the amendment provides an additional criminal penalty for the knowing violation of a regulation that implements this program of up to 15 years in prison and up to $125,000 fine. The doctors, distributors, manufacturers, and pharmacies under the program will be subject to the supervision of the Drug Enforcement Administration for their conduct under their particular program. This will facilitate any possible criminal investigation of diversion of heroin under this program.

If this amendment is adopted, this program will have the same level of strict supervision as I have indicated as applies to other controlled substances under existing law.

Now, I want to say to my colleagues that I have seen more heat than light generated here today. I have heard misstatements and I am sure that they were done in good faith and in the heat of battle, but this is a modest measure to provide for the medical community one additional controlled substance that is very much akin to what they already have. Some drugs now available are not helpful for everybody or in every single case so members of the medical community tell us.

Mr. WAXMAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HUGHES. I will be happy to yield to my colleague from California.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Chairman, I want to join the gentleman in supporting this amendment. We would not want any ambiguity to be outstanding as to the strict law enforcement standards that he would have us put into place with this legislation.

I think it is very constructive to ask that we have a review panel by other physicians to be sure that we are dealing with, a patient of last resort who otherwise is not responding to the other pharmaceuticals that are available. I think this is a constructive proposal and I join with him in supporting this.

Mr. HUGHES. I thank the chairman of the subcommittee for his support.

Mr. Chairman, I will be happy to yield to the distinguished gentleman from Indiana [Mr. SHARP].

Mr. SHARP. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the gentleman's effort here but do I understand after your amendment is attached here, and I hope the House will do that, that first of all this substance that we would make available for the terminally ill will frankly be similarly treated as other substances except for the fact it would be tougher to use it than Dilaudid or morphine, is that correct?

Mr. HUGHES. That is correct, for the reason that, presently, physicians do not have to go to a three-board medical panel to certify that their particular patient needs this particular medication. That is not required for Dilaudid or morphine.

Mr. SHARP. If the gentleman would yield further, does that mean that if in fact the three drugs that we are talking about, the one that is not available to terminally ill and the two that are, are drugs used for recreational use in some parts of the country despite all our efforts to prevent that?

Mr. HUGHES. I hate to tell the gentleman, but we are up to our eyeballs with heroin. In fact, they had a bumper crop in Southeast Asia. We have very few controls in the Golden Crescent area.

Mr. SHARP. But the question is that morphine is out on the street, too, is it not?

Mr. HUGHES. Yes; and Dilaudid is very popular. You do not hear anybody talking about Dilaudid today but Dilaudid is a very popular drug on the street.

Mr. SHARP. So, if we take this action, this third drug we might make available to people in desperate need will be treated more strictly than stuff right now we treat cancer patients with that is out on the street and used recreationally?

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman is absolutely correct.

Mr. SHARP. That is absolutely incredible, absolutely incredible that if the name were different on this drug all the demagoguery in this House would end. All of it would end.

Mr. HUGHES. I think the gentleman is right. I think what we have gotten caught up in is an emotional debate and unfortunately a failure to look at the facts.

I might say that I just saw a "vote 'no' on Hughes amendment" letter being circulated. I have talked with some Members who have suggested that the name of the game is to defeat Hughes, because it makes the bill more attractive. I say, that is not responsible legislating, because frankly if this bill carries, I think we should have in place the law enforcement protections. A vote against the Hughes amendment is a vote not to put in place the protections to assure that we do not have diversions.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES] has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. HUGHES was allowed to proceed for 3 additional minutes.)

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Chairman, I want to point out to my colleagues that when they vote against this amendment what they are voting against are the controls that would protect us against diversion.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

I do not think the gentleman in the well needs anyone to support the strong fight that he has made over the years against abuse of narcotic drugs.

I ask the gentleman, however, in connection with your amendment, where would the doctor acquire these drugs? You said confiscated drugs. Where would they go?

Mr. HUGHES. Well, as the gentleman well knows, we get opium today from Turkey and India under controlled circumstances. The gentleman well knows because he has visited that part of the world.

Mr. RANGEL. You are saying confiscated drugs.

Mr. HUGHES. Much of the opium that forms the base for codeine and morphine, all of it, comes from places like Turkey.

Mr. RANGEL. Would it come from the Drug Enforcement Administration?

Mr. HUGHES. Well, it is conceivable that when we confiscate heroin, if it is refined or purified it might be usable.

Mr. RANGEL. I think what the gentleman is saying is that your amendment and the bill does not specifically indicate where these confiscated drugs come from but assuming that——

Mr. HUGHES. Let me ask the gentleman a question. Where do we get morphine from?

Mr. RANGEL. Assuming we get the confiscated drugs——

Mr. HUGHES. I do not yield any further.

The fact of the matter is we get morphine, we get Dilaudid, we get a lot of valuable drugs from opium poppies that are grown under controlled circumstances in places like Turkey. That is where we get it.

Mr. RANGEL. But they are not confiscated.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Chairman, we are talking about a drug that is a derivative of opium gum. It comes from the same source. Heroin is just a derivative of opium gum. The gentleman knows that.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will request that Members seeking the person who has the time to yield request that in fact the time be yielded.

Mr. HUGHES. I will be happy to yield to the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. BIAGGI].

Mr. BIAGGI. I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to address a point that the chairman of the subcommittee [Mr. WAXMAN] made in connection with the amount that could be involved in this proposal.

The gentleman said there would be some 2 percent. I think that is an erroneous figure, really. When you consider you have tons of this contraband out in the field, 2 percent is substantial. It would be my experience that it would be an infinitesimal fraction of that 2 percent being utilized.

Mr. HUGHES. I would think so, too.

Mr. Chairman, there seems to be some confusion about what we are doing here. I would say to my colleagues we are talking about making this derivative of opium gum available to people who are terminally ill in hospitals. I have heard Members get up here and say some addict is going to rob the pharmacies. The community pharmacies are not going to have this heroin. The heroin is going to go to the hospitals and the cancer units that are going to dispense this after this regulatory scheme is complied with.

As the gentleman from Indiana correctly pointed out, we are going to put a greater burden on those dispensing heroin under these limited circumstances than we do dilaudid.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has once again expired.

Mr. BROYHILL. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word, and I yield to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. SAWYER].

Mr. SAWYER. I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

Mr. Chairman, I just wanted to point out, to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES] that you do not make morphine from opium. It is made from poppy straw and dilaudid is a synthetic manufactured in laboratories.

Mr. HUGHES. Would the gentleman yield to me?

It is made from poppy straw, but opium gum is also the major raw material for morphine manufactured in the United States.

Mr. SAWYER. We do not import any opium gum for that purpose.

Mr. HUGHES. If the gentleman will continue to yield, no; but the poppy straw and opium gum basically is the raw material from which we manufacture things like morphine, things like Dilaudid, and from which heroin comes.

□ 1400

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Chairman, I would just make one more observation.

The gentleman's amendment, as I read it, makes usable street opium that is seized on the street. I cannot really believe the gentleman from New Jersey intends that, when we have seen how they make the morphine base and how they make the opium in what they call laboratories.

Mr. HUGHES. if the gentleman will yield further, I want to say to the gentleman that I visited some places where they make this stuff in crude form, and I certainly would not want to use it in that form, but as the gentleman well knows, we are talking about a process where they clean it up. The manufacturers can use chemicals, as the gentleman well knows, to take street heroin and create the same quality of laboratory pure heroin as they could make starting directly with opium.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROYHILL. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. GEKAS. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman and Members, I believe that adoption of this amendment would go farther in the legalization of heroin than the provisions of the bill itself. By virtue of the creation of this bureaucracy and methodology that the gentleman from New Jersey proposes here, we are really confirming the legalization of heroin.

What I am concerned about, Mr. Chairman and Members of the House, and what I am fearful about, is that this debate is being reduced to an emotional one where those who would vote no would be daring to vote without compassion for those who are terminally ill. For the record and for the people back home who sent me here to represent them profoundly, when I, as I now intend to do, vote no on this measure, I in no way yield to anybody in compassion for those who are terminally ill.

I just happen to believe that we are creating a monster in the distribution of a dangerous drug that is in question here in such unlimited fashion that our society will experience more harm than good. Every one of us, as an example, in our own districts, has a pharmacy or a hospital or some holder of these drugs being the victim of countless burglaries and robberies and all kinds of security problems, not to mention the street use of these drugs.

I do not want to be part of anything that at this stage of the game would result in the proliferation of this dangerous drug.

Mr. SHARP. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROYHILL. I would be glad to yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. SHARP. I appreciate the gentleman yielding.

Mr. Chairman, it has been said here that this is an emotional debate. You better believe it is an emotional debate, Mr. Chairman. We are talking about one of the most profound experiences that some individuals in this country have to go through. It is of the highest emotional content and it is time we had emotion in its content because we are dealing with men and women and children who go through this experience.

The truth is, despite all of the millions of dollars that we invest in this country in law enforcement to keep drugs off the street, and I support every bit of that, the truth of it is that we cannot seem to keep it out of the hands of a lot of people who should not be getting it, but the one place we are darn successful is keeping it out of the places where it might make a difference for a few minutes, a few hours, to a family, to an individual, with no harm whatever.

This amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES] will help strengthen the bill to make sure heroin does not get into somebody else's hands. Let us start looking at our consciences and at the people who are the patients.

Mr. BROYHILL. Mr. Chairman, I just want to assure the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. SHARP] that this gentleman has not engaged in an emotional debate. If the gentleman wants to, that is fine, but all we are trying to do is to cite from the record, and those who have spoken out with respect to this bill, that they do not believe that this bill is the answer to the issue of improving the management of pain.

In other words, this legislation is being opposed for several reasons and they are all on the record and the people who are opposing this are prestigious people who have had far more experience in dealing with this than the gentleman from Indiana or the gentleman from North Carolina, the gentleman from Pennsylvania, or anyone in this House. They are saying that there is no need for this legislation to make heroin available; that the scientific evidence on the record that has been made thus far does not support the use of heroin as an effective pain reliever and that there are other substances that are available that are as or more effective.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BROYHILL] has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. BROYHILL was allowed to proceed for 3 additional minutes.)

Mr. BROYHILL. Mr. Chairman, I would like to respond to the gentleman from New Jersey with respect to the "Dear Colleague" letter that I did put out. Perhaps I did use the wrong words in asking that the Members reject his amendment.

On second thought, it seems to me that we ought to let the majority amend a bad bill, let them do whatever they want with it. It seems to me that the amendment makes the bill worse. The amendment that the gentleman puts in here will provide for a very cumbersome certification program; that if a physician does want to use this substance, he has to go through a very cumbersome certification program in order to administer the substance.

It seems to me that this is unnecessary and that we should not have it, but if the gentleman wants the amendment, then fine, let them offer this amendment to a program that I think just makes this far more administratively burdensome and far more difficult to administer. It is going to be difficult enough as it is.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROYHILL. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. GEKAS. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, just to add to that, I just cannot conceive of allowing the fact that heroin is now on our streets as rationale for allowing it to further penetrate our society.

Mr. BROYHILL. Also, the gentleman from Pennsylvania knows this amendment would not in any way add back the requirements that the FDA presently requires under present law for the certification of new drugs; that is, that it is safe and that it is effective. These studies are not required under the legislation and the gentleman's amendment does nothing with respect to that as well.

The gentleman knows that animal studies, clinical studies, are required and his amendment does not restore that procedure and safeguard, and it would seem to me that he would want to go at least that far.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROYHILL. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. HUGHES. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, if I understand the gentleman's argument, it is that by setting up this three-doctor medical review panel to review a doctor's decision to dispense, we have created a giant bureaucracy, and so forth. Well, the opposite of that is, of course, to make it freely available.

Is that what the gentleman is advising, that we should have it freely available, because that is precisely what will happen if my amendment does not carry?

Mr. BROYHILL. My argument is that we do not need it, and if the gentleman wants to make the substance freely available, it seems to me that is what his amendment does. It makes a bad bill worse, and as far as I am concerned, let the other side accept his amendment, but we are still opposed to the bill.

Mr. SMITH of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I have followed this debate, as I am sure many of my colleagues have, with a very, very sincere interest. This is obviously not only an emotional issue and a medical issue and a criminal justice issue, but also an issue that affects how we are to balance the equity between those who are in need, in this case in painful, desperate need, and those in the rest of the country who have an interest in maintaining a strong, secure guard against what is a major drug problem in this country.

I have spent my whole political career, both in the State legislature in the State of Florida and in this House, trying to stem the tide of the illicit drug trade in the United States. It is something which infects our society and affects our children.

I am very, very grateful for having been able to serve with people like the chairman of the select committee, the gentleman from New York [Mr. RANGEL] and the chairman of the Subcommittee on Crime, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES]. I am grateful for the leadership that they have shown in this particular area. Of obvious merit are the arguments which both pose on the issue.

But let us examine the issue for a moment without the heat; let us try a little bit of light.

First, from the point of view of people in Florida, Florida has the highest cancer rate of any State in the United States, 250 per 100,000, which means that today 25,000 in Florida can anticipate dying of cancer in the next year; 25,000 just in Florida, with a population of 10 million people.

Second, this is echoed in every State of the country, although not as high, but to a larger degree than any of us would ever care to see cancer occur, but it does.

□ 1410

In Florida alone, we are talking about 25,000 people. Let us put it in perspective just in one State. We are talking about heroin, a drug whose name conjures up the worst images that we can imagine. In response to the gentleman from North Carolina, let me say that the efficacy and the usability of heroin as a painkiller and suppressant has been known for almost a hundred years. It is not necessary to do any more clinical studies on it. I think almost everybody in the medical community agrees with that.

Second, let me state with some feeling of sincerity and knowledge that most doctors will tell us that heroin is in fact the best therapeutic drug for the treatment of pain, intractable pain, especially in cases of cancer, compared with any other remedy now existing on the market. And there are other remedies. We have heard that throughout the course of this debate.

Dilaudid is a remedy made from the same base as heroin. Remember, dilaudid is also available legally on the street by virtue of getting a prescription which can be filled in drugstores. Dilaudid is a legal prescriptive drug. That will not be the case with the heroin which will be used therapeutically under this bill.

Morphine is a drug which is prescribable and fillable by hospital pharmacies and private pharmacies in certain cases. It is prescribable by doctors if they have the Federal and State licensing, and almost all of them do, from BNDD.

That is not the case with this heroin. It will not be fillable at a local pharmacy nor prescribable by a doctor except in very, very small and narrow circumstances.

Third, there is a painkiller which has never been mentioned on this floor today, Brompton's solution. Brompton's solution is today being used by many doctors to kill pain of those who are incurably ill with cancer who have intractable pain. It is a derivative and a mixture of codeine, cocaine, and alcohol, available by a prescription as well. These are all legal drugs, all existing at a local pharmacy. That will not be the case with the heroin which is sought to be allowed to be used under this bill.

So there are a lot of drugs that are available. The problem is that none of them is as therapeutically effective, and they have more side effects than does heroin. Dilaudid and morphine produce severe nausea and other side effects that heroin does not.

Shall we continue to visit more pain and more grief upon those we are trying to help because we refuse to allow another drug on the market for fear that it will be somehow abused?

Let us talk about the abuse. Today in the United States it is anticipated and expected that approximately 20 tons of heroin, illegal, illicit heroin, will be imported into the United States.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SMITH] has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. SMITH of Florida was allowed to proceed for 5 additional minutes.)

Mr. SMITH of Florida. Mr. Chairman, it is anticipated under this bill that approximately 15 pounds of heroin will be manufactured under the strict conditions allowed in this bill. That is 15 pounds into the legal, constricted and restricted pain market for those intractable infected with pain who have cancer, as opposed to 20 tons of the illicit drug. That will not create any real additional problem, even if it were diverted into the illicit market, which it is not going to be, because at this point we need to be very sure and strong on the Hughes amendment.

What the Hughes amendment does is to disallow for all intent and purpose any ability to bring these 15 pounds of this compound into the illicit market. It is only available in a hospice of hospital pharmacy, both of which in every State in the country, if I am not mistaken, are licensed and supervised by the State in which they are located. None of them can be opened without a State license.

Second, it creates a position where the attending physician only can prescribe, and that prescribing is subject to a review by three additional physicians on a board or medical panel so that the attending physician cannot prescribe it for anybody on his own. The doctor has to be reviewed by three peers.

In addition, it brings into play all the other criminal justice provisions that now exist for all other schedule 1 and schedule 2 drugs. Those safeguards are there, and they work.

Diversion does take place, but it is always of the legal prescriptive drugs. The heroin discussed under this bill will not be a legal prescriptive drug in the same sense we are talking about with dilaudid, morphine, Valium, and, up until my bill passed, quaaludes, et cetera. It is not the same thing at all. Let us please make that distinction. It will not be readily available to anybody.

Mr. SHARP. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Florida. I will yield in a moment.

Mr. Chairman, finally, let us look at the record. Heroin is available in Great Britain as one of the drugs used to treat intractable pain for cancer victims. There is no evidence whatsoever that there has been any diversion of that heroin into the illicit market in Great Britain—none whatsoever.

I understand how people feel about this. I have fought illicit and illegal drugs with my breath and body since I was able to do anything about it, but in this case we are looking at literally a speck of a problem compared to the gigantic, compassionate good that can be done by allowing this to become available under such strict, limited, supervised circumstances.

Finally, on the brouhaha about where they are going to get the drug; anything that is confiscated that is impure can be made pure by a process without any problem whatsoever. There is no problem whatsoever with that. And if they choose to have it manufactured, it will be under very strict licensing conditions.

I do not believe that we are going to have the major problem that is being predicted here, and I would urge my colleagues to think about these arguments when they think about whether or not they are going to vote for the Hughes amendment, which I believe we must support if we support this bill.

I cannot support the bill without the Hughes amendment. I would urge those Members who have some compassion to vote for it. I would urge them to remember that the opposing arguments being offered here—and they are offered in good faith—are not based on sound medical fact, nor are they based on the reality of the drug market in the United States.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Florida. I yield to the select committee chairman.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Chairman, would the gentleman be able to tell us whether the Hughes amendment or the original bill could let us know just where the heroin would be available, that is, at what hospitals, what pharmacies, and what hospices?

Mr. SMITH of Florida. Mr. Chairman, my reading of the bill says that HHS would set up a 4-year pilot project, with the allowing of hospitals to opt into the program. So it would be up to the Department of Health and Human Services to set the rules and regulations.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to me on that?

Mr. SMITH of Florida. I yield to the chairman of the subcommittee.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Chairman, I will state to the gentleman that that is exactly right. This is not a program that would be available on a widespread basis. It is under the control of the Department of Health and Human Services. It is not available to any pharmacy, but only hospital or hospice pharmacies, and only if they choose to participate. They are not forced to participate.

No doctor has to prescribe heroin. It is only if he chooses to. Even if he chooses to under the Hughes amendment he has then got to go through three of his peers to convince them of the need for the drug.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SMITH] has again expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. SMITH of Florida was allowed to proceed for 2 additional minutes.)

Mr. SMITH of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I will yield in just a minute again, but first let me reclaim my time and answer the gentleman this way as well:

The heroin or other drugs which would be made available would be available from pharmacies that are already supervised, but it remains to be seen as to which hospitals and which hospices would come into the program.

Mr. RANGEL. We do not know that.

Mr. SMITH of Florida. But we as the Congress still have the right under our rules to overview the rules and regulations which the Department of Health and Human Services will put into place.

I would certainly believe, Mr. Chairman, that that would be the place for our committee to look at this, as to what rules and regulations HHS comes up with, to determine whether or not in our estimation, as the Congress and as the Select Committee on Narcotics, they are making those regulations too broad and there are too many loopholes. But until they do that, I think it is premature of us to condemn this program, and I would hope that we would look at that.

Mr. Chairman, that would be my response to the gentleman.

□ 1420

Mr. MADIGAN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, if I may have the attention of the distinguished gentleman from North Carolina, I would like to very briefly ask him two questions, perhaps three.

The gentleman from New Jersey, who is the sponsor of this amendment, indicated that there was a point in our history when we legalized two drugs, one being morphine and the other I forget the name that the gentleman used; but I would ask the gentleman from North Carolina if it is not true that at about that same time we made heroin illegal.

Mr. BROYHILL. That is correct. It seems to me that was back in the twenties.

Mr. MADIGAN. So when the gentleman from New Jersey makes the argument that we should make heroin legal because we have made these other things legal, in fact we made heroin illegal when we made these other things legal; is that not correct?

Mr. BROYHILL. That is also correct.

Mr. MADIGAN. And is it also not correct, I would ask my colleague from North Carolina, if the illegality attached to heroin at that time was because it was thought to be and proven to be a more addictive drug than those which were caused to be legal; is that not correct?

Mr. BROYHILL. I think that is a matter of record.

Mr. MADIGAN. Well, I want to thank the gentleman for his participation.

I rise in opposition to the bill and say, Mr. Chairman, that it is not significantly material to me whether or not the Hughes amendment is adopted, because I regard that as being a political ploy here to make this very bad bill more acceptable or to cause the perception that it is more acceptable.

I come at this issue with some experience, because I was the first member of this committee to introduce in 1980 a bill to legalize heroin for the purpose that is contemplated in the bill offered by the chairman of my subcommittee, the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN] but I would say that there is a considerable amount of difference between what exists today and what existed in 1980. In 1980 there was hardly anyone paying attention to the issue of intractable pain and today in these ensuing 4 years through this type of legislation and through other types of activity, we have caused a lot of attention to be focused in the medical community on the issue of intractable pain.

There are therapies now available and legal that were not legal and were not available in 1980.

I think it is important that we continue to focus attention on this issue of intractable pain, but I think it would be a very bad mistake to legalize heroin even for this limited purpose, because as Tallyrand said, "We in legislative politics deal in perception, not in reality." The perception here will be that we are legalizing heroin for some purpose and equating it with the other types of therapy that are available, when in fact it is a very dangerous and addictive drug.

Now, I understand that we are not concerned about addiction with people who are terminally ill with cancer, but we are concerned about addiction with everybody else in this country and if we create the perception that this drug is no different than any other drug, then we are making a very, very serious mistake.

For that reason, I would hope that the Members of this Chamber would reject this bill (H.R. 5290) and as I have said, the adoption or not adoption of the Hughes amendment is immaterial to me, because I see that purely as being a political thing, designed to try to make or create the perception within this Chamber that we can somehow take this very bad idea and make it a better idea.

Mr. SHARP. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MADIGAN. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. SHARP], a member of the committee.

Mr. SHARP. Mr. Chairman, I know the gentleman to be a compassionate individual. We have worked together many times.

Mr. MADIGAN. Mr. Chairman, I am sorry, I cannot hear the gentleman.

Mr. SHARP. I have known the gentleman to be a compassionate individual and I realize that he was the original cosponsor or sponsor of legislation along these lines because of his concerns, but what I have difficulty accepting is the notion that there is a real difference here between some of the drugs that we make legal now for pain killers, which I certainly would not want my children to be exposed to unless they were suffering intractable pain, nor would I want anybody else's children to be exposed to, which are controlled substances; namely, morphine, dilaudid, and others, that are available now.

The problem is that heroin is being treated differently under this debate and everywhere else only because of perceptions, only because it is known to be a political hot potato.

Mr. MADIGAN. Well, if the gentleman will allow me to reclaim my time for just a moment. There is a difference beyond perception and the difference is that heroin is a considerably more addictive drug and that is the reason why it was made illegal in this country to begin with. It once was legal and at the time other things were legalized, heroin was caused to be made illegal.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MADIGAN. I would be happy to yield to the chairman of the subcommittee.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Chairman, I want to correct the record here, because there is no evidence whatsoever that heroin is more addictive than morphine or any other form. What we are talking about, if we did not call it heroin, we could call it diacetylmorphine. We are talking about a form of morphine.

In 1924 the Congress thought, based on what they heard at that time, that there was a danger to this.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

(At the request of Mr. WAXMAN, and by unanimous consent, Mr. MADIGAN was allowed to proceed for 2 additional minutes.)

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will continue to yield, in 1924 the perception was that heroin was more addictive than morphine and that is why the Congress acted to outlaw the substance, but we have learned since 1924 that morphine and any of its derivatives are just as addictive, and heroin is a derivative of morphine.

Mr. MADIGAN. I would say to the gentleman that there is a great deal of debate about that, a great deal of debate, and as the gentleman knows, I sat through all the hearings with the gentleman and heard people argue just the opposite of what the gentleman has just said.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MADIGAN. I would be happy to yield to the chairman of the full committee.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman. I have great respect for my good friend, the gentleman from Illinois. I do not want this debate to be clouded by any contrary impression.

First of all, Dr. Beaver at Georgetown Unversity says it is equally addictive as heroin, and this is one of the substances which is now available within the prescribed regimens for delivering controlled substances, with which the gentleman is well familiar; I do not know whether heroin is more addictive or less addictive than morphine. I would observe that they are both addictive and in that, they are both dangerous. Whether we quarrel about a minute difference in the addictive character of the two drugs is not really important, because what is really important here is that we resolve the question of intractable pain for persons who are at death's door from cancer. That is the real question.

I think the question of perceived addictiveness is totally unimportant when we deal with that very fundamental and important question of how useful heroin would be, for purposes of treating that kind of pain.

I thank my good friend for yielding.

Mr. MADIGAN. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for his contribution.

In summary, I would just remind the gentleman that I sponsored the original heroin legislation in 1980. I did that on behalf of the National Committee on Intractable Pain. I am concerned about that issue. I continue to be concerned about that issue, but as I said in my opening remarks, there have been a lot of advances made since 1980, a lot of attention focused on the issue of intractable pain.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has again expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. MADIGAN was allowed to proceed for 1 additional minute.)

Mr. MADIGAN. There is considerably more attention being focused on that issue, not only by the medical community, but also by the FDA, by the Department of Health and Human Services and others. I think all of that attention being focused on that issue is very proper and I support it, but I also say to the gentleman from Michigan that I do not support legalizing heroin at this point in time.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I certainly hope that people who oppose this bad legislation are not labeled as being against compassion, against the sick and those people dying with cancer.

I always thought that when they talked about the House physician, it was Dr. Cary. It is apparent that we have more physicians here in this legislative body than we have with the American Medical Association.

All I am saying is do not say that the National Hospice Organization lacks compassion. Do not say that the American Medical Association and the American Society of Internal Medicine lacks compassion. They are saying that they agree with you, that there are serious problems, but they disagree with you and the handful of British doctors that we should open up the door to legalized heroin for this restricted purpose at this time. They are asking this legislative body, not this medical body, to wait until the results are in and their association is prepared to tackle this problem, unless what you are trying to say to us is that the few doctors that have testified in front of the committee have more knowledge about this sensitive subject matter than all of the American associations we have.

They say, and I suspect there are experts that disagree with the National Hospice Organization, that there is no justification for the allocation of public funds at this time for the development and implementation of a heroin distribution program.

Now, this is a bad bill, but let me go on to say that this is a bad amendment, because the amendment agrees that we should now get into the business of the legalization for the first time in the history of the United States of heroin. It points out that heroin confiscated in the enforcement of the Comprehensive Drug Abuse Preventive and Control Act of 1970 and the Customs laws shall be made available for the manufacture of heroin for the program, and if the Secretary determines that the amount of heroin available through confiscation is not sufficient to meet the application of qualified hospitals and hospices under the program, the Secretary may—which we now substitute the Secretary for the Drug Enforcement Administration—notwithstanding the sections of the Controlled Substances Act to import and export opium for the purpose of manufacturing additional opium to be distributed under the program.

□ 1430

What we are saying, and I dare someone to dispute it, you are saying that the Secretary of Health and Human Services will be authorized, when he or she finds out there is not enough junk being confiscated, to start not only importing it for the first time illegally but they will be able to start getting involved in the manufacturing of the drug.

If you think you have lobbied on this bill now, you wait until the American pharmaceutical companies come in to tell you is it not better for our sick and our aged and our dying to have the pharmaceutical companies manufacturing this than to be using that dirty junk that is available on the street.

Let me tell you something, for all of the compassion that you have, if I really need you, because I am convinced that it is going to make it easier for someone to die with heroin, you are not telling me where I will be able to get the heroin because I am now subjected not to the American Medical Association where I know the doctors, but I have to go now to Health and Human Services because they will designate which hospital, which hospices, which communities, which would allow heroin to be made available.

Listen: I do not have close ties with this administration and certainly if there are doctors in my community that believe it is a good deal, suppose I do not get the hospice, suppose I do not get the hospital, suppose I do not get the pharmacist who is qualified according to whatever standards there are? And there are no standards. There are no standards in the bill. But the Secretary, who does not want the bill, will be empowered to decide the standards and the communities that will be allowed to use legal heroin.

I suggested to you one thing: No child is going to allow their mother or grandmother to die under the pain that has been described here on the floor, and to be able to say in the communities where heroin is immediately available in the tons, as the proponents of the bill would say, that you start opening the door for the Secretary to allow certain doctors and certain hospitals to legally use heroin for those who are dying, I am suggesting to you, and especially those of you that have the responsibility of prosecuting cases under the law, that you let me find a jury that is going to convict a young man that had just enough heroin to take for his dying grandmother because he understood that it was being used throughout the United States, but the Secretary had not designated his community.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York [Mr. RANGEL] has expired.

(By unanimous consent Mr. RANGEL was allowed to proceed for 2 additional minutes.)

Mr. RANGEL. You let this handful of doctors designated by the Secretary be able to pursuade the Nation that we can start getting involved in deciding which people at which hospitals this should be made available to, and I am suggesting that the guy on the street would make it available for the people that are dying in his community if that drug is not being made available by others

You are saying that you are narrowing this. You are saying that you are restricting this. But if I read the gentleman's amendment correctly, what he is doing in this bill is substituting the Health and Human Services Administration for the Drug Enforcement Administration. In addition to that, what the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES] is doing in this bill is allowing for the manufacture of heroin and the distribution of heroin under the auspices of HHS.

Mr. HUGHES. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANGEL. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. HUGHES. Just a couple of points.

First of all, the gentleman argues that any drug pusher is going to be able to argue that all of a sudden this is available for him for pain for his dying grandmother. I do not know of any situations where we have had to meet that problem with Dilaudid. Dilaudid is on the streets and it is one of the derivatives of opium gum.

Mr. RANGEL. Let me respond to that and then I will yield further.

We are talking about how many tons of heroin is available on the street. This is the first time—I have met none of your doctors that advocated use of heroin. Obviously they have not been able to persuade any of the national associations. You people are nodding your heads that you know the doctors. I am saying that when you get to my community they are not talking about the available drugs that you are talking about, but they understand what you are talking about when you are saying that for the first time in the history of the United States you want heroin distributed in the hospitals. That, Mr. HUGHES, is understood.

Mr. HUGHES. Will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. RANGEL. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. HUGHES. I think the gentleman's argument is circular. But getting back to the question of whether we are going to be manufacturing heroin in this country, the gentleman knows that under existing law that we are processing all of the opiates that we use in this country today, all of them.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York [Mr. RANGEL] has again expired.

(By unanimous consent Mr. RANGEL was allowed to proceed for 30 additional seconds.)

Mr. RANGEL. The gentleman from New Jersey's bill says that the Secretary may, notwithstanding existing narcotics laws, import opium for the purpose of manufacturing additional heroin to be distributed, and nowhere in the United States of America has this been allowed to happen before.

Mr. HUGHES. Will the gentleman yield further? The gentleman misreads the amendment.

Mr. RANGEL. I hope the gentleman would read it correctly.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words and rise in support of the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I have heard it said that this is a bad bill and this is a bad amendment.

Clearly you must analyze whether or not either statement is correct. I have heard it said this is going to legalize heroin. It is not going to legalize heroin any more than the Controlled Substances Act legalizes marijuana or legalizes morphine or any of your other addictive or dangerous drugs which are cataloged as controlled substances under that act.

As a matter of fact, the amendment offered by the distinguished gentleman from New Jersey sees to it that stern penalties are imposed for the diversion of heroin from this temporary program which is authorized by the legislation before us.

The amendment does several other things. It requires that there be a three-doctor review before heroin is administered. As I mentioned, it imposes stern criminal sanctions, a $125,000 fine for violation, and 15 years in jail.

It does not waive the Controlled Substances Act. The Controlled Substances Act and all of the penalties and all of the strictures and all of the controls under that statute which is our basic criminal and regulatory statute in the field of narcotics and addictive substances would continue to apply. The Attorney General would simply be directed to deal with heroin use within the provisions of the Controlled Substances Act.

Last, it would allow the use of seized heroin in the conduct of the program.

I have heard great complaints from many of my colleagues saying this is going to encourage a tremendous proliferation in opium production in Southeast Asia and other places. We seize plenty of heroin, and remember that 4.3 metric tons of this stuff comes into this country every year and has not been controlled. So the diversion, as I have mentioned to my colleagues before, of the amount of heroin that constitutes this entire program will not amount to more than a pimple on the bottom of an elephant.

Mr. RANGEL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DINGELL. Of course, I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. RANGEL. Because I am agreeing with what you are saying.

Mr. DINGELL. I am delighted. And I urge the gentleman to support the amendment and support the bill, and it will be one of the great revelations of our day.

Mr. RANGEL. I agree with the gentleman. The reasons you have given as to why we should support the bill are the very same reasons why I oppose the bill and the amendment.

You have indicated that what you would want to do is to treat heroin the way we do any other narcotic.

Mr. DINGELL. I have not indicated that at all, and if the gentleman is interpreting my statement that way he is misinterpreting it to himself and he is misinterpreting it to this body.

I want to see heroin—really, let me just tell the gentleman what I want because I think he needs to know what it is this bill is for and what it is I want—I want under the most carefully controlled circumstances to see to it that when somebody is in intractable pain, and when they are dying of cancer, and that is the only conditions under which this drug would be available, that it is available to control that pain.

Mr. RANGEL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DINGELL. And I think if the gentleman really reflects on it he will join me in that desire.

Mr. RANGEL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DINGELL. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. RANGEL. Why don't we get to the amendment?

Mr. DINGELL. I have dealt with the amendment.

Mr. RANGEL. Does the gentleman have the amendment where it says that the heroin confiscated, and the enforcement of the Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act of 1970, and the Customs laws shall be made available for manufacture of heroin? Give the gentleman a copy there. It concludes by saying that if the Secretary decides that there is not enough junk available in the hospitals and in the pharmacies, that notwithstanding existing law that she would be able to have an exception under the Controlled Substances Import and Export Act and import opium for the purpose of manufacturing additional heroin to be distributed.

□ 1440

Mr. DINGELL. Now just a minute. The gentleman has made an important point. I have yielded to the gentleman. I just want the gentleman [Mr. RANGEL] to know first of all I think that is a good idea. I happen to think that if you are going to make this stuff available and I recognize that it can be evil and that it can be used for evil purposes, but understand that your friendly roadside merchant who deals in this stuff, your pusher, is not going to be making it available in hospitals for the purposes we are talking about.

Mr. RANGEL. Very good, would the gentleman yield further?

Mr. DINGELL. No; I do not yield further.

Mr. RANGEL. We are in accord.

Mr. DINGELL. I will yield in good time. We are talking about having doctors making a controlled substance available for a medical judgment, for purposes that are necessary to cure intractable pain of persons dying of cancer.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman [Mr. DINGELL] has expired.

(On request of Mr. HUGHES, and by unanimous consent, Mr. DINGELL was allowed to proceed for 2 additional minutes.)

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. DINGELL. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES] and then to my dear friend from New York [Mr. RANGEL].

Mr. HUGHES. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, there is nothing secret about how we process opium gum into morphine.

Mr. DINGELL. If the gentleman will yield, the process of producing morphine and heroin and other substances from morphine—rather from opium gum, are almost identical. The products are about the same in terms of every single resulting consequence of their use and existence.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. DINGELL. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey, certainly.

Mr. HUGHES. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, right now the law forbids us to import opium gum to be used as a substance to get the derivative that we call heroin. We in fact process in this country opium gum that we import so that we can process it into morphine, codeine, thebaine, and many other drugs, and also into Dilaudid, which has more side effects than heroin.

So that is what that provision is addressing.

Mr. DINGELL. That makes eminent good sense.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DINGELL. I yield to my good friend from New York.

Mr. RANGEL. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, my good friend from Michigan has adequately pointed out with the support of the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES] that this act would allow for exceptions under the legal narcotic laws to allow the importation of opium for the manufacture of heroin. OK.

Once that is accepted, I am asking the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL], does this bill point out which pharmaceutical companies would be involved in the manufacture of heroin? And is there any company in the country that is manufacturing heroin illegally today?

Mr. DINGELL. The answer is, There is no one manufacturing it legally now in the country.

Mr. RANGEL. I see.

Mr. DINGELL. It is also a fact, however, that other opium derivatives are now being processed into usable drugs in this country legally under the Controlled Substance Act.

Now I think a couple of points are necessary in responding to the gentleman [Mr. RANGEL].

If the Controlled Substance Act is authorizing massive diversions of now-controlled substance, other opium derivatives, then it needs the immediate attention of Congress.

If it is not, and I say it is not authorizing that kind of activity.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman [Mr. DINGELL] has again expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. DINGELL was allowed to proceed for 3 additional minutes.)

Mr. DINGELL. Then I would observe that if it is not authorizing illegal diversions, and there is very little evidence that it is, in fact none of which I am aware, then we ought to allow heroin to move into carefully controlled channels for very carefully controlled use, dealing with intractable pain in hopelessly dying cancer patients.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DINGELL. Of course, I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. RANGEL. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, then it is the gentleman's understanding that the bill with this amendment, for the first time would allow the Secretary of Health and Human Services to designate pharmaceutical companies for the purpose of the manufacture of heroin.

Mr. DINGELL. That is correct, if there is not enough confiscated. And I do not see anything wrong.

Now I heard one of my colleagues just a little while ago talking about the means, that is the end justifying the means. I think a brief comment on the end of this bill, The purpose of this bill: The purpose of this bill is to deal with intractable pain in patients who are dying of cancer.

It is a hell of a miserable, ugly way to go and I pray that it never afflicts me because I have seen what it did to my mother.

Now I just want to observe one other thing: The means chosen is a carefully controlled system within the same system that we use for dealing with dilaudid, which has been discussed here today, or dealing with morphine, both of which are supposedly medications of choice in these kinds of circumstances.

Mr. Chairman, I am simply saying to my colleagues, for the sweet love of God, let us make available to those who are in this horrifying plight one more substance which will help some of those who are not able to be helped because of medical circumstances by the other two drugs of choice which can be used.

Mr. Chairman, the controls are there, the penalties for violation of the law of misuse and diversion are real. The amount of heroin on the streets, it has been said, is better than 4½ tons. I do not see how a little bit going for proper medical purposes is going to contribute anything to the hurt of the society or to persons who might be tempted to use heroin.

There are plenty of pushers on the streets now who are making it available.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. KINDNESS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words and I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Well, Mr. Chairman, here we are again. There are a lot of important, large issues to be dealt with by this Congress and here we are dealing with a very narrow issue. But what are we doing in the process? Usually when a bill comes to this floor anyone who speaks against it might reasonably be in the position of being accused of nitpicking. But I really would have to characterize the bill, itself, more or less in those terms.

Why are we not dealing with some of the issues that really ought to be dealt with in the field of crime that remain to be dealt with?

We have had a lot of discussion of that in the House in recent weeks.

Instead we are peeking at the edge of something that could cause us some more problems in our society and none of us here are expert enough to know whether it will or not.

I do not maintain that I could be called an expert in any of the subject matter relating to the use of heroin in the treatment of intractable pain.

I do not really know that much about how it is made, how it is distributed.

I do know the harm that it has caused in our society as well as others around the world, and I do know that is it growing and has been growing tremendously in our country in its use; and it is very serious problem.

I do not want to add to that problem. But I have not heard anything today that convinces me that we are taking a step that is absolutely necessary, for one thing, since there are other ways to treat and manage intractable pain, as the gentleman from Illinois pointed out, that were not available in 1980 when this move first started.

Should we not be satisfied to make progress in the normal reasonable rational way in which people of scientific expertise and knowledge tend to lead the way? Or are we to appoint ourselves as the experts who know how to progress in this scientific area above and beyond the controversy that rages in the medical and scientific community? I do not think we ought to put ourselves in that position.

This bill, therefore, strikes me as being something that could well have been put aside until a later time when we had more exact and concrete scientific bases to work with.

□ 1450

But I am greatly concerned that we may go away from here today having amended this bill in a manner that is proposed by the gentleman from New Jersey which would, to all intents and purposes it seems, put heroin for this limited area of use in basically the same category as many other dangerous drugs that are regulated and controlled under the laws of the United States. I am not ready to take that step. I have not heard the convincing evidence. There have been no hearings on the amendment that is proposed by the gentleman from New Jersey as such because it has been developed as a response to problems in the underlying bill.

But hearings really are needed, I think, in order to answer the questions such as those propounded by the gentleman from New York [Mr. RANGEL] when he says, well, practicaly speaking, where do you go to get the heroin? Where does your doctor go? Where do you go for the approval and how do you get the approval and what is the process by which this program is developed. And, as usual, we have a bill here which would turn over to the bureaucrats most of the law making. All the regulations would be propounded, promulgated by the bureaucrats and then we would be left with the question of whether we have a right to a legislative veto to override administrative regulations and the Supreme Court has already given us some kind of an answer on that. So we would have to enact other legislation, perhaps, to overcome those regulations.

What are we doing? Do we need to do this today? I think the answer is: Not today. We do have other answers that respond to the management of intractable pain, maybe not perfectly, but no one says heroin is a perfect tool for the management of intractable pain either.

I would not say we are wasting our time, I am just saying this is not the time. And, indeed, maybe we are using time needlessly on something that we could leave to a time when we have better knowledge.

Mr. SHARP. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, let me just briefly say that all of us in our speeches, I suspect, speak about individuality and individual liberty when we are at home with our constituents because it is such an important value in American society.

Let me suggest to my colleagues that one of the problems of cancer is it is highly individualistic. It strikes individuals in highly individualistic ways. Also, the medicines that are used to try to deal with pain or the disease itself, effects individuals quite differently and that is the difficulty.

So these broad sweeping statements about there are other pain killers available are simply inaccurate. For many, many citizens pain killers are effective.

The difficulty is that in the hearings it has been estimated that thousands of individuals in this country die each year in writhing pain. Some children, some mothers, grandmothers, grandparents. We do know from experience in England, we do know from medical testimony, that in many of those cases the use of heroin could relieve the pain and relieve the hearts of the families that are involved.

Now, Mr. Chairman, there is lots of experience, there is lots of testimony from doctors, from nurses, from individuals who are experienced in this field, who believe we ought to do this. Not everybody takes the AMA as the final authority on all medical questions. Most of the doctors in my area are too busy doing their compassionate work to mess with AMA resolutions or AMA treasury dues or any of the rest of that bureaucracy that goes on there, as elsewhere in the country.

Mr. Chairman, we have before us an amendment that I believe helps to answer some of the legitimate and real concerns. None of us wants any of this heroin to be diverted for illicit use in the country. There is too much of it now. But we are, under this amendment, going to treat heroin as a medicine much tougher than we treat lots of other dangerous medicines today.

I think under the Hughes amendment we will be doing as much as we can to prevent adding to the drug problem that is extensive in this country. But under the bill we will be doing some good for thousands of individuals who are waiting not for a sympathy note, they are waiting not for action from the Congress.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendments offered by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES].

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that he was in doubt.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Chairman, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The CHAIRMAN. Evidently a quorum is not present. Pursuant to the provisions of clause 2 of rule XXIII, the Chair announces that he will reduce to a minimum of 5 minutes the period of time within which a vote by electronic device, if ordered, will be taken on the pending question following the quorum call. Members will record their presence by electronic device.

The call was taken by electronic device.

The following Members responded to their names:

Mr. WYDEN changed his vote from "aye" to "no."

So the amendments were rejected.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there further amendments to the bill? If not, under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly, the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore [Mr. HARRISON] having assumed the chair, Mr. WEISS, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 5290) to establish a temporary program under which parenteral diacetylmorphine will be made available through qualified pharmacies for the relief of intractable pain due to cancer pursuant to House Resolution 508, he reported the bill back to the House with sundry amendments adopted by the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment? If not, the Chair will put them en gros.

The amendments were agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the bill.

Mr. BROYHILL. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 55, nays 355, not voting 22, as follows:

So the bill was not passed.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the bill, H.R. 5290, just considered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 5959, the Safe Drinking Water Act Amendments of 1984, which was adopted by the House yesterday.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Speaker, I missed rollcall No. 401. Had I been present, I would have voted "no."

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. FUQUA. Mr. Speaker, on rollcall No. 401 I was unavoidably absent. Had I been present, I would have voted "no."

PERMISSION TO LIST CERTAIN MEMBERS AS COSPONSORS OF H.R. 4103, CABLE FRANCHISE POLICY AND COMMUNICATIONS ACT OF 1984

Mr. WIRTH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from California [Mr. PACKARD], the gentleman from Washington [Mr. BONKER], and the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ROBERTS] be listed in the RECORD as consponsors of H.R. 4103, the Cable Franchise Policy and Communications Act of 1984.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado?

There was no objection.

APPOINTMENT OF CONFEREES ON H.R. 5899, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA APPROPRIATION BILL, 1985

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 5899), making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of said District for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985, and for other purposes, with Senate amendments thereto, disagree to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California? The Chair hears none, and, without objection, appoints the following conferees: Messrs. DIXON, NATCHER, STOKES, WILSON, LEHMAN of Florida, SABO, WHITTEN, COUGHLIN, GREEN, ROGERS, and CONTE.

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO FILE CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 5899, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA APPROPRIATION BILL, 1985

"(1) individuals 60 years of age or older constitute the fastest growing segment of the Nation's population;

"(2) the process of aging, as well as the changes in lifestyle which accompany it, such as retirement, the end of parenting roles, and relocation, seem to increase and exacerbate health problems faced by older individuals (such health problems include physical, mental, and emotional health problems);

"(3) many of the health problems faced by individuals 60 years of age or older, such as arteriosclerosis, arthritis, adult-onset diabetes, hypothermia, heat stress, Alzheimer's disease, circulatory problems, hypertension, diminished hearing and eyesight, reduced strength, social isolation, and bone fragility are particularly common to the older American population;

"(4) although older individuals make up only 11 percent of our population, they consume 29 percent of the total health care expenditures and 53.5 percent of Federal health care (non-military) expenditures, and as our population ages the percentage of Federal health care dollars absorbed by older individuals will inevitably increase;

"(5) older individuals consume more prescription and over-the-counter drugs than any other age group and are therefore more likely to be exposed to two or more active drugs which negatively interact;

"(6) many of the health problems faced by older individuals and the fear of those health problems can be ameliorated and in some cases prevented if proper health education and training is available;

"(7) health education and training focused specifically on the needs of older individuals can play an important role in health promotion and illness prevention and simultaneously help reduce medical costs for both individuals and the Government;

"(8) the educational institutions of public health, the medical sciences, psychology, pharmacology, nursing, social work, health education, nutrition, and gerontology have much to offer in the design and implementation of health education and training services for older individuals; and

"(9) the existing 3,300 multipurpose senior centers established under this Act which already serve over 9,000,000 older individuals each year, are appropriate points of contact from which health education and training can be provided, but there is currently no uniform, standardized program consistently in place across the Nation.

"PURPOSES

"SEC. 703. The purposes of this title are to provide the necessary resources, leadership, and coordination (1) to design a uniform, standardized program of health education and training for older individuals; (2) to directly involve graduate educational institutions of public health in the design of such program; (3) to directly involve the graduate educational institutions of public health, the medical sciences, psychology, pharmacology, nursing, social work, health education, nutrition, and gerontology in the implementation of such program; (4) to implement such program in multipurpose senior centers established under this Act; and (5) to evaluate such program.

"OLDER AMERICANS PERSONAL HEALTH EDUCATION AND TRAINING PROGRAM

"SEC. 704. (a) In order to foster and promote the design and implementation of a health education and training program for individuals who are 60 years of age or older, the Secretary of Health and Human Services (hereinafter in this title referred to as the 'Secretary') shall establish an older individuals personal health education and training program within the Administration on Aging.

"(b)(1) In order to carry out the provisions of this title, the Secretary, though the Administration on Aging, shall make grants and enter into contracts with public or private institutions of higher education having graduate programs with capability in public health, the medical sciences, psychology, pharmacology, nursing, social work, health education, nutrition, or gerontology in order to achieve the purposes of this title. No payment shall be made by the Secretary toward the cost of any such project established or administered by any such institution unless the Secretary determines that such project—

"(A) will provide for the design and implementation of a local or statewide demonstration health education and training program which is amenable to replication in multipurpose senior centers, as well as other sites convenient to older individuals;

"(B) will provide for consultation with and utilization of multipurpose senior centers established under section 321(b)(1) with regard to the provision of services to meet the specific needs of older individuals;

"(C) will be generally applicable to the health needs of all individuals 60 years of age or older;

"(D) will provide for the development of components appropriate for uniform, standardized use relating to specific problems encountered by older individuals, such as diet, mental health, physical fitness, hypertension, retirement, health insurance, hypothermia, and legal advice concerning rights to live and to receive medical treatment;

"(E) will provide health education in the safe and effective use of prescription and nonprescription medicines;

"(F) will address the motivation of older individuals including consideration of the elements of self-responsibility, physical fitness, stress managment, nutrition, and environmental awareness; and the benefits older individuals can derive from behavioral and lifestyle modifications within their individual control;

"(G) will provide for peer contact and interaction among participating older individuals;

"(H) will provide for the training and utilization of graduate students (including the consideration of the granting of course credit to such students) and faculty in the fields of public health, the medical sciences, psychology, pharmacology, nursing, social work, health education, nutrition, and gerontology;

"(I) will provide for the training and utilization of older individuals participating in such projects a volunteers;

"(J) will ensure that participating older individuals are made aware of the health services available to them in their communities;

"(K) will be designed in consultation with persons specifically competent in the field of public health;

"(L) with regard to the provision of services, will be designed in consultation with each area agency on aging located in the geographic area to be served by such project with specific attention to State and area agency replication under section 307(f);

"(M) will demonstrate the ability of those who carry out such project to generate multidisciplinary working relationships with other groups in relevant fields, including the medical sciences, mental health, pharmacology, nursing, social work, health education, nutrition, and gerontology;

"(N) will provide for coordination with the State agency designated under section 305(a)(1) and State health officials in the State in which such project is carried out; and

"(O) will implement health education and training activity in at least 10 separate sites.

"(2) The Secretary shall establish, issue, and amend such regulations as may be necessary to effectively carry out this title.

"(c)(1) The Secretary shall pay not to exceed 90 percent of the cost of any project which is the subject of a contract entered into under subsection (b).

"(2) The remaining cost of such project shall be provided from non-Federal sources, in cash or in-kind. In determining the amount of the non-Federal share, the Secretary is authorized to attribute fair-market value to services and facilities contributed from non-Federal sources.

"(3) In considering grant or contract applications under this title, the Secretary shall—

"(A) give priority to grants and contracts smaller than $150,000; and

"(B) to the extent practicable, ensure an equitable geographic distribution in the awarding of such grants or contracts, including an appropriate consideration of both urban and rural needs.

"(d)(1) The Secretary shall prepare and submit to the Congress, not later than October 1, 1985, an interim report describing the projects approved under subsection (b) and a design for the evaluation of such projects.

"(2) Not later than October 1, 1986, the Secretary shall prepare and disseminate, through the Commissioner, to State agencies on aging information and materials relating to projects conducted under this title, including uniform, standardized components of a program of health and nutrition education.

"(3) The Secretary shall prepare and submit to the President and the Congress a final report on the projects approved under subsection (b) not later than February 1, 1987, along with such finding and recommendations as the Secretary deems appropriate.

"ADMINISTRATION

"Sec. 705. (a) In carrying out this title, the Secretary is authorized to use, with their consent, the services, equipment, personnel, and facilities of Federal and other agencies with or without reimbursement, and to cooperate on a similar basis with other public and private agencies and instrumentalities in the use of services, equipment, and facilities.

"(b) Payments under this title may be made in advance or by way of reimbursement, and in such installments as the Secretary may determine.

"(c) Except as provided in section 704(d), the Secretary shall not delegate any function of the Secretary under this title to any other department or agency of the United States.

"AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

"Sec. 706. (a) There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this title $8,550,000 for fiscal year 1985 and such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years 1986 and 1987.

"(b) Amounts appropriated under this section for any fiscal year shall remain available for obligation until expended.".

TITLE VIII—AMENDMENTS TO OTHER LAWS; EFFECTIVE DATES

RELATED AND CONFORMING AMENDMENTS

Sec. 801. (a) Section 14(c) of the National School Lunch Act (42 U.S.C. 1762a(c)) is amended by striking out "section 311(c)(1) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 3030(c)(1))" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 311(b)(1) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 3030(b)(1))".

(b) Section 501(b) of the Comprehensive Older Americans Act Amendments of 1978 (42 U.S.C. 3045 note) is amended by inserting after the first sentence the following: "Such process shall include evaluation of each bidder's experience in providing services to older individuals.".

AMENDMENTS TO THE AGE DISCRIMINATION IN EMPLOYMENT ACT OF 1967

Sec. 802. (a) Section 11(f) of the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "the term 'employee' includes any individual who is a citizen of the United States employed by an employer in a workplace in a foreign country.".

(b)(1) Section 4(f)(1) of the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967 is amended by inserting before the semicolon a comma and the following: "or where such practices involve an employee in a workplace in a foreign country, and compliance with such subsections would cause such employer, or a corporation controlled by such employer, to violate the laws of the country in which such workplace is located".

(2) Section 4 of the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(g)(1) If an employer controls a corporation whose place of incorporation is in a foreign country, any practice by such corporation prohibited under this section shall be presumed to be such practice by such employer.

"(2) The prohibitions of this section shall not apply where the employer is a foreign person not controlled by an American employer.

"(3) For the purpose of this subsection the determination of whether an employer controls a corporation shall be based upon the—

"(A) interrelation of operations,

"(B) common management,

"(C) centralized control of labor relations, and

"(D) common ownership or financial control, of the employer and the corporation.".

(c)(1) Section 12(c)(1) of the Age Discrimination Employment Act of 1967 is amended by striking out "$27,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$44,000".

(2) The amendment made by paragraph (1) of this subsection shall not apply with respect to any individual who retires, or is compelled to retire, before the date of the enactment of this Act.

EFFECTIVE DATES

Sec. 803. (a) Except as provided in subsection (b), this Act and the amendments made by this Act shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b)(1) The amendment made by section 206(a) shall take effect 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) The amendment made by section 206(d) shall take effect on the first day of the first fiscal year beginning after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(3) The amendment made by section 411(b) shall not apply with respect to any grant or payment made before the date of the enactment of this Act.

(4) The amendment made by section 701 shall take effect on October 1, 1984.

And the House agree to the same.

JOINT EXPLANATORY STATEMENT OF THE COMMITTEE OF CONFERENCE

TITLE I—DECLARATION OF OBJECTIVES

The House amendment amends Section 101(4) of the Act to include specifically the provision of community-based long-term care as an objective of the Act.

The Senate bill has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

The Senate bill amends the objective in Section 101(8) of the Act of assisting older individuals secure efficient community services to include emphasis on maintaining a continuum of care for the vulnerable elderly.

The House amendment has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: House recedes.

The House amendment expands the objectives of the Act to include participation of older individuals in the planning and operation of community-based services.

The Senate bill has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

TITLE II—ADMINISTRATION ON AGING

ESTABLISHMENT OF ADMINISTRATION ON AGING

The House amendment creates an Office on Aging to be headed by a Commissioner on Aging directly responsible to the Secretary, and makes a series of conforming amendments.

The Senate bill has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes with an amendment retaining the Administration on Aging, specifying the direct reporting requirement as provided in the House amendment and prohibiting the Secretary from delegating any of the functions of the Commissioner. Since 1978, the Older Americans Act has required a direct reporting relationship between the Secretary and the Commissioner on Aging. This amendment seeks to establish conclusively such a direct relationship. By the term "direct," the Conferees intend that there be no intervening reporting relationship between that of the Commissioner and the Secretary. Further, under the amendment, the Secretary is strictly prohibited from delegating any of the Commissioner's responsibilities to any officer not directly responsible to the Commissioner. The Conferees wish to emphasize that the amendment would not require the establishment of separate personnel, financial management, and budget staff. Rather, the amendment assures that responsibility for federal aging policy is placed in the Administration on Aging and not in the Office of Human Development Services. Departmental support for the Administration on Aging with regard to office space, telephones, computer services, and similar support services would not be affected by the amendment. The Commissioner, however, would not be answerable or have a reporting relationship to any official other than the Secretary.

The amendment is effective as of the date of enactment. This amendment supercedes any other federal statute which may be interpreted as addressing the issue of the reporting relationship.

FUNCTIONS OF COMMISSIONER

The Senate bill amends Section 202(a)(9) of the Act by adding as a duty and function of the Administration on Aging stimulating more effective use of existing legislative protections, with emphasis on application of the ADEA.

The House amendment has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: House recedes.

The House amendment amends Section 202(a) of the Act to require as an additional function of the AoA consultation with organizations representing minority individuals in providing training and technical assistance to state and area agencies in connection with the greatest economic or social needs.

The Senate bill has no comparable provisions.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

The Senate bill amends Section 202(b)(1) of the Act to require the Commissioner to develop planning linkages with peer review organizations established under Title XI of the Social Security Act.

The House amendment has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: House recedes.

FEDERAL AGENCY CONSULTATION

The Senate bill and the House amendment correct a reference in existing law to the predecessor program of the Job Training Partnership Act. The Senate bill also expands the existing requirement for federal consultation to include Title XVI of the Social Security Act (SSI).

The House amendment has no provision with respect to SSI.

Conference agreement: House recedes.

The House amendment deletes the reference in existing law to federal coordination with the community schools program and deletes a reference to Section V of the Urban Mass Transportation Act.

The Senate bill has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

The Senate bill expands existing law's requirement for federal aging consultation by including six additional federal programs with purposes related to this Act.

The House amendment has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: House recedes with an amendment deleting the reference to veterans' programs.

With regard to the conferees agreement to delete coordination with veterans programs, it is done with the understanding that what the Senate provision sought to accomplish is already being undertaken. In the Senate subcommittee hearing on reauthorization of the Older Americans Act, it heard statements from the VA and other interested federal agencies, a variety of interested veterans organizations as well as the scientific community concerned with the problems of the aging. At that time it was the consensus of the subcommittee that all interested parties were agreed that ongoing coordination among and between all federal agencies responsible for implementing programs for the aging would be beneficial. Consequently Section 203(b)(14) was added to the measure to assure the generally desired goal of coordination.

Recognizing that the coordination intended is designed to prevent duplication of efforts by various agencies at considerable expense to the taxpayer and the fact that this coordination is already being undertaken by the VA, the Conferees believe that the need for Section 203(b)(14) has been obviated. In its testimony before the subcommittee on October 20, 1983, the VA outlined its ongoing participation with other agencies at the federal and local level to the extent that information sharing and coordination with these agencies is critically important to the nation's responsibility and desire to effectively address the burgeoning health problems of older Americans. A few of the initiatives currently undertaken by the VA which have generated information being shared with othr agencies concerned with older Americans include, but are not limited to, hospital care, outpatient care, geriatric research, extended care, nursing home care, domiciliary care, non-institutional extended care, education, and a variety of experimental treatment modes to effect health care consistent with the highest possible "quality of life" standards.

FEDERAL COUNCIL ON AGING

The Senate bill amends Section 204 of the Act by altering the requirements for the manner in which members of the Federal Council are to be appointed. The bill replaces the current requirement that all members be appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate and instead requires that a portion of the members be appointed by the President, a portion by the President pro tempore of the Senate upon the recommendation of the Majority Leader and the Minority Leader, and a portion by the Speaker of the House of Representatives. It specifies that members appointed by each appointing authority be representative of rural and urban older Americans, national organizations with an interest in aging, business, labor, minorities, and the general public, and that at least two of the members appointed by each appointing authority by older individuals. It prohibits a full-time officer or employee of the Federal Government from being appointed as a member of the Council.

The Senate bill also deletes the requirements for the length of appointment for certain members, and instead inserts the schedule for appointment of members by the President, the President pro tempore of the Senate, and the Speaker of the House. It specifies that members appointed in 1985 shall be referred to as class one members, two of whom shall be appointed by the President, two by the President pro tempore of the Senate, and one by the Speaker of the House. It further specifies that members appointed in 1986 shall be referred to as class two members, two of whom shall be appointed by the President, one by the President pro tempore of the Senate, and two by the Speaker of the House. It further specifies that members appointed in 1987 shall be referred to as class three members, one of whom shall be appointed by the President, two by the President pro tempore of the Senate, and two by the Speaker of the House.

The Senate bill also specifies that members appointed to the Federal Council prior to the date of enactment of the Older Americans Act Amendments of 1984 who are serving on the date, shall continue to serve on the Council established by this amendment until members are appointed in accordance with these amendments.

The House amendment has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: House recedes with an amendment to provide that members of the Council appointed by the President pro tempore of the Senate and the Speaker of the House be made upon the recommendation of the Majority Leader and the Minority Leader.

Throughout the Act, the House amendment deletes the gender references to the Commissioner.

The Senate bill has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

ADMINISTRATION OF THE ACT

The House amendment adds a new subsection to Section 205 of the Act requiring that the Secretary shall issue regulations administering this Act in a timely fashion.

The Senate bill has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

EVALUATION

The Senate bill makes technical corrections to Section 206(b) of the Act.

The House amendment rewrites Section 206(b) to require that the Secretary develop and publish general standards for evaluation of projects funded under Title IV of the Act prior to making any awards under Title IV.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

The House amendment adds a new requirement with respect to evaluations of programs under the Act that the Secretary consult with organizations concerned with older individuals, including organizations representing minority individuals.

The Senate bill has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

The Senate bill requires that the annual evaluation summaries be disseminated to federal, state, and local agencies and private organizations with an interest in aging, in addition to the Congress.

The House amendment has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: House recedes.

The Senate bill amends Section 206(g) by reducing the amount of funds the Secretary is authorized to use for program and project evaluations from one percent of the funds appropriated under the Act or $1 million, whichever is greater, to one-tenth of one percent or $300,000, whichever is the lesser amount.

The House amendment reduces the amount of funds the Secretary may use for evaluation purposes to one-fourth of one percent of the funds appropriated under the Act.

Conference agreement: House recedes.

REPORTS

The House amendment amends Section 207 of the Act to require that the annual report of the Commissioner be sent to the Congress and the President simultaneously.

The Senate bill has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

REDUCTION OF PAPERWORK

The House amendment amends Section 211 of the Act to require the Commissioner to make use of available uniform service definitions in gathering information necessary to administer the Act.

The Senate bill has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

TITLE III—GRANTS FOR STATE AND COMMUNITY PROGRAMS ON AGING

PURPOSE; ADMINISTRATION

The Senate bill amends Section 301(a) by deleting existing law's references to local agencies and substituting the term "area agencies".

The House amendment has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: House recedes.

The Senate bill amends Section 301(a) to add a reference to the implementation of comprehensive and coordinated service systems.

The House amendment has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: House recedes.

The Senate bill adds a reference to voluntary organizations as providers of services.

The House amendment has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: House recedes.

DEFINITIONS

The Senate bill amends Section 302(2)(B) to modify the requirement in the term "information and referral source" that the state or any public or private agency employ a specifically trained staff where such employment is feasible.

The House amendment has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: House recedes.

The Senate bill further modifies Section 302(2)(B) to require that the staff of any state or public or private agency be trained to assess the needs and capacities of older individuals.

The House amendment has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: House recedes.

Throughout the Act, the Senate bill changes existing law's reference to "legal services" to "legal assistance."

The House amendment has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: House recedes. In making this change, the Conferees emphasize that there is no substantive modification to the Act, and that the amendment is intended only to eliminate any confusion that may have existed between use of the term "legal services" and Legal Services Corporation projects. Legal Service Corporation grantees would continue to remain eligible to receive funding under the Act.

Throughout the Act, the House amendment makes a technical change in the reference to the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands.

The Senate bill has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

The House amendment adds a new definition for the term "older individual" as an individual who is 60 years of age or older.

The Senate bill has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

The Senate bill and the House amendment add a definition for the term "multipurpose senior center", with minor technical differences.

Conference agreement: House recedes.

The Senate bill defines the term "focal point".

The House amendment has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: House recedes.

AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

The Senate bill authorizes $265,000,000 for Fiscal Year 1985, $281,695,000 for Fiscal Year 1986, and $298,033,310 for Fiscal year 1987 for Part B supportive services.

The House amendment authorizes $386,300,000 for Fiscal Year 1985, $405,600,000 for Fiscal Year 1986, and $424,900,000 for Fiscal Year 1987 for Part B.

Conference agreement: authorizes $325,700,000 for Fiscal Year 1985, $343,700,000 for Fiscal Year 1986, and $361,500,000 for Fiscal Year 1987.

The Senate bill authorizes $338,000,000 for Fiscal Year 1985, $350,168,000 for Fiscal Year 1986, and $366,976,060 for Fiscal Year 1987 for subpart 1 of Part C, congregate nutrition.

The House amendment authorizes $383,600,000 for Fiscal Year 1985, $402,800,000 for Fiscal Year 1986, and $423,000,000 for Fiscal Year 1987 for congregate nutrition programs.

Conference agreement: authorizes $360,800,000 for Fiscal Year 1985, $376,500,000 for Fiscal Year 1986, $395,000,000 for Fiscal Year 1987.

The Senate bill authorizes $65,900,000 for Fiscal Year 1985, $68,272,400 for Fiscal Year 1986, and $71,549,475 for Fiscal Year 1987 for subpart 2 of Part C, home-delivered nutrition.

The House amendment authorizes $72,300,000 for Fiscal Year 1985, $75,800,000 for Fiscal Year 1986, and $79,600,000 for Fiscal Year 1987 for subpart 2 of Part C.

Conference agreement: authorizes $69,100,000 for Fiscal Year 1985, $72,000,000 for Fiscal Year 1986, and $75,600,000 for Fiscal Year 1987.

ALLOTMENT; FEDERAL SHARE

The Senate bill amends Section 304(d)(1) by specifying that from each state's allotment under Title III, such amount as the state determines adequate, but not more than one percent, is to be available for conducting demonstration projects in health and nutrition education under Section 307(f) as added by Section 11(g).

The House amendment contains a new Title VII to the Act, Older Americans Personal Health Education and Training Program.

Conference agreement: House recedes with an amendment making the effective date of the one percent set-aside September 1, 1986 and requiring that state projects in health and nutrition education be based on information gained under the new Title VII demonstration programs.

ORGANIZATION

The Senate bill adds specific reference to minority individuals in the requirement contained in the Act that state agencies provide assurances that preference will be given to providing services to older individuals with the greatest economic or social needs.

The House amendment contains similar language.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

The House amendment provides definitions for the terms "greatest economic need" and "greatest social need."

The Senate bill contains no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

The Senate bill specifies components to be published for review and comment with respect to each state's formula for intrastate distribution of Title III funds as required by Section 305(a)(2)(C).

The House amendment contains no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: House recedes.

The Senate bill amends Section 305(b)(5) to require that whenever a state agency designates an area agency after the date of enactment of the 1984 amendments, the state agency shall give the right of first refusal for area agency designation to a unit of general purpose local government when the boundaries of the unit of government and the boundaries of the planning and service area are reasonably contiguous.

The House amendment has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: House recedes with an amendment specifying that the right of first refusal is applicable only to new area agency designations and clarifying that such right of first refusal is given only if the unit of general purpose local government can meet the requirements of existing law with respect to area agency designation.

The Conferees intend in this section to provide a mechanism by which units of general purpose local government can be in a more equitable position to determine the designation of any new area agency on aging which may be created within their boundaries.

The Conferees wish to assert that this provision is not intended in any way to extend this right of first refusal to any mass redesignation of area agencies on aging ordered by a state agency. The term "new" area agency on aging would not include the product of a redesignation of an area agency on aging but rather the establishing of a totally new area agency only.

AREA PLANS

The Senate bill amends Section 306(a)(1) to include reference to the efforts of voluntary organizations under the area agency planning responsibilities.

The House amendment contains no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: House recedes.

The House amendment requires that area plans document their compliance with the mandate that some funds be spent on each of the categories of priority services.

The Senate bill contains no comparable amendment.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

The Senate bill includes within the priority category of in-home services reference to supportive services for families of elderly victims of Alzheimer's disease and other neurological diseases and organic brain disorders of the Alzheimer's type.

The House amendment contains no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: House recedes.

The Senate bill creates a new category of priority services for the prevention of elder abuse.

The House amendment contains no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: House recedes with an amendment to delete services for the prevention of abuse of older individuals as a priority service, but retain it as a permissive service under Title III. The House amendment also places a new requirement on the area agencies on aging to assess the need for such services and the extent to which such need is being met within the planning and service area as a part of its plan. The House amendment requires the Commissioner to report to Congress on the extent to which the need for services are unmet within two years after enactment.

The House amendment adds a requirement that minority individuals be included in the advisory council established by the area agency on aging.

The Senate bill has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

The House amendment adds a new requirement that area agencies on aging make efforts to facilitate the coordination of community-based long-term care services. The House amendment makes a further requirement on area agencies to involve long-term care providers in the coordination of such long-term care services.

The Senate bill contains no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes with a technical amendment.

The House amendment defines for the purposes of Section 306(5)(A) the terms "greatest economic need" and "greatest social need". As used in this section, social and cultural isolation means isolation within a community resulting directly or indirectly from an individual's ethnic heritage, nationality or race.

The Senate bill has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

The Senate bill and the House amendment add a requirement that before an area agency request a waiver of the requirement that it spend an adequate proportion of its Part B funds on priority services, it must conduct a public hearing.

Conference agreement: House recedes with an amendment to assure that the public hearing is conducted in a timely manner.

STATE PLANS

The Senate bill clarifies that the exception to the prohibition on direct service provision by state and area agencies does apply where services are directly related to state or area agency administrative functions or where services of comparable quality can be provided more economically by the agency.

The House amendment clarifies that nutrition services are separate from supportive services.

Conference agreement: Adopts both the Senate and House provisions.

The House amendment clarifies that long-term care ombudsmen programs will not be operated by the same agencies responsible for licensing or certifying long-term care services, that training for staff as well as volunteers will be provided, and that the ombudsmen program will be administered by individuals working full time in that capacity.

The Senate bill has no comparable provision.

Conference agreements: Senate recedes with a technical amendment.

The House amendment adds a new subparagraph providing that the views of area agencies on aging, older individuals, and provider agencies be considered in planning and operating ombudsmen programs.

The Senate bill has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

The Senate bill substitutes for the term "charges" in existing law reference to "soliciting voluntary contributions" for meals.

The House amendment has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: House recedes.

The Conferees in substituting the term "soliciting voluntary contributions" for the word "charges" do so to reaffirm the long standing policy that there shall be no direct or indirect coercion of contributions from program participants. The Conferees note with great concern reports from certain areas of the nation that efforts have been made to apply new procedures aimed at increasing contributions. Any such method which has as its motive transformation of the contribution from voluntary to involuntary is totally violative of the intent of Congress, as reflected in this legislation. The Conferees intend for the appropriate Committees in the House and Senate to conduct regular oversight in this area over the duration of the Older Americans Act Amendments of 1984.

The Senate bill amends the Act to delete current law's separate category for Legal Services Corporation grantees as eligible recipients of Title III funds, to clarify that funds for legal assistance will not be furnished unless the grantee administers a program to provide legal assistance to all older individuals with social or economic need, if the grantee is not a Corporation grantee.

The House amendment has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: House recedes with an amendment to delete the requirement that the program provide legal assistance to all individuals with social or economic need.

The Senate bill includes a new state plan requirement relating to in-service training opportunities for personnel of agencies and programs under the Act.

The House amendment has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: House recedes.

The Senate bill includes a new state plan requirement relating to state leadership in developing legal assistance programs.

The House amendment has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: House recedes.

PLANNING, COORDINATION, EVALUATION, AND ADMINISTRATION OF STATE PLANS

The Senate bill deletes requirements contained in Section 308(b)(1) with respect to allotments to states for state planning, coordination, evaluation, and administration of state plans, providing that each state shall be allotted funds on the basis of its population aged 60 or older as compared to all states. It also deletes provisions specifying minimum amounts for each state of no less than one-half of one percent of appropriations or $300,000, whichever is greater, and for territories of no less than one-fourth of one percent of appropriations or $75,000, whichever is greater. Instead, Section 12(a) would provide that from sums appropriated under Section 303 and allotted to each state, an amount not to exceed five percent of the amount appropriated for each such year or $500,000, whichever is greater, shall be available for administration of the State plan. In the case of Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, and the Northern Mariana Islands, five percent of the amount appropriated for each such year or $200,000, whichever is greater, shall be available for administration.

The Senate bill also repeals paragraphs (2), (3), and (4) of Section 308(b) which, respectively, contain provisions on requests for additional funds by states for state administration, allotment of funds to states in an amount not less than the amount to which the state was entitled in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1975, and determination of data on the number of individuals 60 or older.

It specifies that the budget submitted under Section 1105 of Title 31, United States Code, for each fiscal year and the Appropriation Act containing appropriations made pursuant to Section 303 for each fiscal year shall separately set forth the amount available to carry out the provisions of paragraph (b)(1). Subsection (a)(3) specifies that the amendment made in section 12(a), paragraphs (1) and (2), relating to the increase in the amount available for state plan administration, shall be effective only for a fiscal year in which the amount available for state plan administration is equal to or exceeds $40 million.

The House amendment makes two technical corrections.

Conference agreement: House recedes with clarifying and technical amendments, and an amendment to reduce the minimum for the territories. The Conferees are concerned that States not be placed in the position of having to use Title III services funds for State Administration as a result of the alterations made in the mechanism for providing funding for State Administration. It is the intention of the Conferees that the Commissioner continue to make available Title IV funds for education, training and legal assistance activities to States whose allocation of Title III funds is not sufficient to hold the State harmless at the level which was available for State Administration from all funding sources in fiscal year 1984. The Conferees believe that States should not be required to use their Title III waiver authority in order to maintain support for State Administration.

The House amendment provides that data used in determining the formula be the most recent data of the Bureau of the Census.

The Senate bill has no comparable provisions.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

The Senate bill raises the eligible percentage of funds states may transfer between Part B and Part C from 20 percent to 35 percent.

The House amendment raises such eligible percentage of transferable funds from 20 to 25 percent.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes with an amendment establishing allowable transfer authority at 27 percent in Fiscal Year 1985, 29 percent in Fiscal Year 1986, and 30 percent in Fiscal Year 1987.

AVAILABILITY OF SURPLUS COMMODITIES

The Senate bill, for the surplus commodity program, authorizes $119,500,000 for Fiscal Year 1985, $123,802,000 for Fiscal Year 1986, and $129,744,500 for Fiscal Year 1987, and such additional sums as may be necessary for each of these fiscal years to maintain the level of reimbursement for the number of meals served at Fiscal Year 1983 levels.

The House amendment authorizes $121,800,000 for Fiscal Year 1985, $127,900,000 for Fiscal Year 1986, and $134,300,000 for Fiscal Year 1987.

Conference agreement: authorize $120,800,000 for Fiscal Year 1985, $125,900,000 for Fiscal Year 1986, and $132,000,000 for Fiscal Year 1987.

The Senate bill prohibits a state from receiving reimbursement for the surplus commodity program unless the state submits final claims for reimbursement within ninety days after the last day of the quarter for which the reimbursement is claimed.

The House amendment makes a technical correction in existing law.

Conference agreement: Adopts both the Senate and House provisions.

AUDIT

The Senate bill prohibits state and area agencies from requesting data from providers which is not pertinent to a payment made pursuant to the Act.

The House amendment has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: The House recedes with a clarifying amendment that information or data from providers can be requested when it has a bearing on services provided under the Act.

PART B—SUPPORTIVE SERVICES AND SENIOR CENTERS

The Senate bill amends the existing language with respect to services designed to avoid institutionalization to make specific reference to client assessment through case management.

The House amendment has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: House recedes.

The House amendment includes counseling regarding health and life insurance coverage among appropriate areas of counseling available under the Act.

The Senate bill has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

The House amendment includes among the eligible services under Title III services to mentally impaired older individuals.

The Senate bill has no comparable provisions.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

TITLE IV—TRAINING, RESEARCH, AND DISCRETIONARY PROJECTS AND PROGRAMS

The Senate bill amends Title IV of the Act to include a statement of purpose for the title.

The House amendment amends Title IV to provide a statement of purpose for Part A of the title.

Conference agreement: House recedes to the Senate on overall statement of purpose for the Title, and the Senate recedes to the House on the statement of purpose for Part A of the Title.

The Senate bill specifies that the Commissioner shall administer Title IV through the Administration on Aging, and that the Commissioner may request technical assistance and cooperation from other federal agencies and departments.

The House amendment has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: House recedes.

TRAINING AND RECRUITING PERSONNEL FOR THE FIELD OF AGING

The Senate bill amends Section 411 of the Act to give priority to training activities related to supportive services for families of elderly victims of Alzheimer's disease and related disorders.

The House amendment provides for procedures for grants and contracts under the Title, with special consideration to those working with individuals suffering from Alzheimer's disease and providing family respite services for families caring for victims of Alzheimer's disease.

Conference agreement: The Senate recedes with clarifying amendments.

MULTIDISCIPLINARY CENTERS OF GERONTOLOGY

The House amendment identifies areas of emphasis for multi-disciplinary centers of gerontology, clarifies the functions of grantees and requires that relevant data be provided to the Commissioner on activities conducted with funds under the Act.

The Senate bill has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

PART B—RESEARCH, DEMONSTRATIONS, AND OTHER ACTIVITIES

The House amendment sets forth a statement of purpose for Part B of Title IV.

The Senate amendment contains no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT PROJECTS

The Senate bill adds a new requirement relating to dissemination of information on research and development projects funded under the title.

The House amendment has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: House recedes.

The House amendment requires that research and development project proposals include, when appropriate, a concise policy or practice implication statement.

The Senate bill has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes with a clarifying amendment.

The House amendment requires that, in making funding decisions for research projects, the Commissioner approve projects which will contribute to a data base that will provide information for public policy formulation on future needs for the elderly.

The Senate bill has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

The House amendment requires that, with respect to demonstration projects, the Commissioner funds projects which test research results and implement innovative service delivery to older individuals.

The Senate bill has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS

The Senate bill requires the Commissioner to give special consideration to demonstration projects to meet the support service needs of elderly victims of Alzheimer's disease and their families including home health, adult day care, homemaker aides, transportation, and in-home respite care for families.

The House amendment has a similar requirement that consideration be given to projects that identify older individuals suffering from Alzheimer's disease and provide family respite services.

Conference agreement: House recedes with a clarifying amendment.

The Senate bill requires that the demonstration projects be developed in consultation with the appropriate long-term care gerontology center.

The House amendment has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: House recedes with a technical amendment. The conferees intend this new provision to require consultation with the long-term care gerontology centers authorized under Section 412 of the Act.

The Senate bill requires the dissemination of information on research and development projects.

The House amendment has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: House recedes.

SPECIAL PROJECTS IN COMPREHENSIVE LONG-TERM CARE

The Senate bill adds a requirement that long-term care projects under Section 423 include appropriate dissemination provisions.

The House amendment has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: House recedes.

SPECIAL DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS ON LEGAL ASSISTANCE FOR OLDER AMERICANS

The House amendment clarifies that the Commissioner is to provide legal assistance support activities to state and area agencies and to local legal assistance providers, and to provide demonstration projects on the delivery of legal assistance to older individuals with social or economic need.

The Senate bill has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes with a clarifying amendment that the Commissioner enter into grants or contracts to provide a legal assistance support system by one or more grantees or contractors.

NATIONAL IMPACT ACTIVITIES

The Senate bill adds a requirement that the Commissioner shall, upon request, provide technical assistance and training for state and area agency personnel regarding the prevention, identification, and treatment of elder abuse.

The House amendment has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

The Senate bill authorizes $28,500,000 for Fiscal Year 1985, $32,955,000 for Fiscal Year 1986, and $32,052,639 for Fiscal Year 1987 for Title IV.

The House amendment authorizes $27,900,000 for Fiscal Year 1985, $29,300,000 for Fiscal Year 1986, and $30,800,000 for Fiscal Year 1987

Conference agreement: authorize $28,200,000 for Fiscal Year 1985, $29,800,000 for Fiscal Year 1986, and $31,400,000 for Fiscal Year 1987.

The House amendment provides that funds appropriated under Title IV may not be combined with funds appropriated under any other Act to make a single discretionary grant or payment.

The Senate bill has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes with an amendment which allows combining of such funds if the funds can be separately identified and are used for the purpose of Title IV of the Act.

PAYMENTS OF GRANTS

The House amendment adds a new section to Title IV clarifying the Commissioner's responsibility for grants and contracts under the Title and requiring that the Commissioner's annual report include a detailed account of grants, contracts, and activities funded under Title IV.

The Senate has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

By "detailed" the Conferees intend that the report required shall include the items specified in the new statutory language, as well as a brief abstract of each project or activity funded.

TITLE V—COMMUNITY SERVICE EMPLOYMENT FOR OLDER AMERICANS

The House amendment deletes the gender reference in Title V to the Secretary and program participants.

The Senate bill has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

OLDER AMERICAN COMMUNITY SERVICE EMPLOYMENT PROGRAM

The House amendment adds a new subparagraph (o) to Section 502 of the Act requiring a written notification to persons in Title V projects clarifying allowable political activities.

The Senate bill has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

ADMINISTRATION

The Senate bill adds a new statutory cap on the percentage of administrative funds which may be used by each project at 12 percent.

The House amendment has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: House recedes with an amendment placing an administrative cap of 13.5 percent effective July 1, 1986, and 12 percent effective July 1, 1987, with a waiver for administrative allowances of up to 15 percent if approved by the Secretary of Labor.

The Senate bill updates the provision in existing law with respect to the Secretary's authority to coordinate the Title V program with other federal programs by changing the reference to CETA to the Job Training Partnership Act.

Conference agreement: House recedes.

EQUITABLE DISTRIBUTION OF ASSISTANCE

The Senate bill adds a provision that the Secretary of Labor shall require state agencies receiving Title V funds to report on compliance with provisions regarding equitable distribution of Title V funds within each state.

The House amendment has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: House recedes. It is the intent of the Conferees that in carrying out the provisions addressing equitable distribution of assistance under Title V, that national contractors cooperate with the States in which their projects operate, providing the necessary information to the state units on aging to facilitate preparation of the annual report to the Secretary of Labor. The Conferees intend that, to the extent practicable, locations of Title V projects, funded both by states and national organizations, shall assure equitable access to job opportunities within states. Such access should be facilitated through a coordinated effort by all entities within a state operating Title V-funded programs.

AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

The Senate bill authorizes $335 million for Fiscal Year 1985, $351 million for Fiscal Year 1986, and $368,282,920 for Fiscal Year 1987.

The House amendment authorizes $331,900,000 for Fiscal Year 1985, $345,500,000 for Fiscal Year 1986, and $359,300,000 for Fiscal Year 1987. The House amendment also provides for such sums as may be necessary to provide for at least 62,500 part-time employment positions.

Conference agreement: House recedes to the Senate on the dollar authorization levels, rounding the figures to the nearest $100 million, and the Senate recedes to the House with respect to the authority to assure at least 62,500 slots.

The House amendment requires that individuals participating in Title V programs who are placed in the programs funded under Title III, IV, or VI of the Act shall be considered as placed in unsubsidized employment.

The Senate bill has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: House recedes. The managers note with considerable concern the Department of Labor's regulation requiring project sponsors to meet a strict percentage of placement into private sector employment under Title V, and emphasize that the Department has no statutory authority to require any fixed percentage. The managers expect the Secretary of Labor to modify the present regulation to reflect this concern, and further expect that if the Department believes there should be a specific percentage requirement for unsubsidized placement, it will submit legislation for statutory change. The Department, in implementing statutory provisions encouraging transition of Title V workers into unsubsidized employment shall make every effort to exempt (or do so as a last resort) the transfer of those workers employed in programs funded by Title III of the Older Americans Act. At the same time, the managers emphasize that this concern is not intended to lessen current efforts to place Title V workers into unsubsidized employment.

It has come to the attention of the conferees that there have been shifts in subgrantees which has resulted in the disruption of local programs of community service employment for senior citizens. The conferees urge all national contractors to promote smooth transitions when shifts in subgrantees are necessary. Moreover, every effort should be made to minimize such shifts, by providing those subgrantees to be terminated with a reasonable opportunity to make changes to accommodate new demands or remedy perceived deficiencies.

STUDY OF OLDER AMERICANS COMMUNITY SERVICE PROGRAMS

The House amendment provides for a study of alternative mechanisms to increase community service opportunities.

The Senate bill contains no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes with an amendment to clarify that the study is designed to identify additional mechanisms to increase community service employment opportunities.

TITLE VI—GRANTS FOR INDIAN TRIBES ELIGIBILITY

The House amendment amends Title VI of the Act, Grants for Indian Tribes, to provide that a tribal organization may be eligible to apply for assistance if it represents at least sixty older individuals.

The Senate bill has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

The Senate bill authorizes $7,500,000 for Fiscal Year 1985, $7,972,000 for Fiscal Year 1986, and $8,434,905 for Fiscal Year 1987 for grants to Indian tribes.

The House amendment authorizes $7,900,000 for Fiscal Year 1985, $8,300,000 for Fiscal Year 1986, and $8,600,000 for Fiscal Year 1987.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes. The mangers remain concerned that the Administration on Aging has failed to respond to the legitimate concerns of the Indian elderly in establishing a focal point position within the Administration on Aging to be coordinator of Indian programs, and thus direct the Commissioner to consult with Indian tribal representatives and seek their recommendations in filling such a position with an individual who is knowledgable about and sensitive to the unique aspects of the Indian elderly and who can effectively advocate their concerns.

TITLE VII—OLDER AMERICANS PERSONAL HEALTH EDUCATION AND TRAINING PROGRAMS

The House amendment created a new Title VII of the Older Americans Act, Older Americans Personal Health Education and Training Act, establishing a demonstration program of grants to institutions of higher education with graduate programs in public health, medical sciences, psychology, nursing, social work, education, nutrition, or gerontology to design and implement demonstration health education and training programs. $8,550,000 is authorized for Fiscal Year 1985 and such sums as may be necessary for Fiscal Years 1986 and 1987.

The Senate bill contains no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes to the House on Title VII with amendments strengthening the role of the aging network in the design of the demonstration projects and requiring consultation with area agencies on aging and state units on aging with particular attention to implementation of health and nutrition education programs under Title III beginning Fiscal Year 1987. Where Title VII language refers to uniform and standardized components, the Conferees intend such reference apply to the form of demonstration projects developed by the Commission for dissemination to the states. Such uniform components would allow for ethnic, regional, climatic, dietary and cultural differences in their application. Conferees do not intend that uniform diets or rigid health maintenance practices will result from these components.

TITLE VIII—AMENDMENTS TO OTHER LAWS; EFFECTIVE DATES

The House amendment amends Section 14(c) of the National School Lunch Act with a conforming amendment.

The amendment strikes a reference in the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 to the Administration on Aging, replacing it with a reference to the Office on Aging. Further, the House amendment provides that a bidder's experience in providing services to older individuals is to be included in the award of grants for nutrition services.

The Senate bill has no comparable provisions.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes with respect to the conforming amendment to the School Lunch Act and the evaluation of bidder experience. House recedes on reference to the Office on Aging.

The House amendment contains a generic provision relating to the upgrading of the Administration on Aging to an Office on Aging.

The Senate bill has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: House recedes.

The House amendment provides that, except as provided in subsections (b) and (c), the amendments made by this Act will be effective upon enactment.

The Senate bill has no comparable effective date provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

The House bill provides that the amendment requiring the publishing of evaluation standards for grants and contracts under Title IV shall become effective sixty days after enactment.

The Senate bill contains no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

The House amendment provides that the amendment reducing the amount available for evaluation purposes shall become effective on the first day of the first fiscal year beginning after the date of enactment.

The Senate bill contains no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

The House amendment provides that the new Older Americans Personal Health Education and Training Act, Title VII, shall take effect on October 1, 1984.

The Senate bill contains no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

The House amendment provides that the amendment prohibiting the combining of funds under Title IV shall not apply to any grant or payment made before the date of enactment.

The Senate bill has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: Senate recedes.

AMENDMENTS TO THE AGE DISCRIMINATION IN EMPLOYMENT ACT OF 1967

The Senate bill amends Section 11(f) of the ADEA by specifying that the term "employee" under the Act includes any individual who is a citizen of the United States employed by a United States employer in a workplace in a foreign country.

The Senate bill also specifies that it is not unlawful for an employer, employment agency, or labor organization to take any action prohibited by the Act when such practices involve an employee in a foreign workplace and where compliance with the ADEA would cause the employer, or a corporation controlled by the employer to violate the laws of the country in which the workplace is located.

The Senate bill further amends Section 4 by adding a new provision to specify that if an employer controls a corporation whose place of incorporation is in a foreign country, any prohibited practice by such corporation is presumed to be the practice of the employer. It would further specify that the age discrimination prohibitions do not apply in cases where the employer is a foreign person not controlled by an American employer. The determination of whether an employer controls a corporation shall be based on the interrelation of operations, common management, centralized control of labor relations, and common ownership of financial control of the employer and the corporation.

The House amendment has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: House recedes.

The Senate bill amends Section 12(c)(1) of the ADEA by raising from $27,000 to $44,000 the annual private retirement benefit level for determination of exemption from provisions of the Act.

The Senate bill further provides that this provision does not apply to any individual who retires voluntarily or is compelled to retire before the date of enactment of this Act.

The House amendment has no comparable provision.

Conference agreement: House recedes.

The Conferees have taken the unusual step of considering these minor amendments within this reauthorization because of the lateness of the session. The Conferees do not intend this action to be viewed as a precedent for future amendments to the Age Discrimination in Employment Act as a part of the Older Americans Act reauthorization.

TITLE OF THE BILL

CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 1904, CHILD ABUSE AMENDMENTS OF 1984

Mr. HAWKINS submitted the following conference report and statement on the bill (H.R. 1904) to extend and improve the provisions of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act and the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment and Adoption Reform act of 1978:

CONFERENCE REPORT (H. REPT. No. 98-1038)

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 1904) to extend and improve the provisions of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act and the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment and Adoption Reform Act of 1978, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

That this Act may be cited as the "Child Abuse Amendments of 1984".

TITLE I—AMENDMENTS TO CHILD ABUSE PREVENTION AND TREATMENT ACT

PART A—PROGRAM IMPROVEMENTS

THE NATIONAL CENTER ON CHILD ABUSE AND NEGLECT

SEC. 101. (a) Section 2(a) of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (42 U.S.C. 5101(a)) (hereinafter in this title referred to as "the Act") is amended by striking out "Health, Education, and Welfare" and inserting in lieu thereof "Health and Human Services".

(b) Clauses (6) and (7) of section 2 (b) of the Act are amended to read as follows:

"(6) study and investigate the national incidence of child abuse and neglect and make findings about any relationship between nonpayment of child support and between various other factors and child abuse and neglect, and the extent to which incidents of child abuse and neglect are increasing in number and severity, and, within two years after the date of the enactment of the Child Abuse Amendments of 1984, submit such findings to the appropriate Committees of the Congress together with such recommendations for administrative and legislative changes as are appropriate; and

"(7) in consultation with the Advisory Board on Child Abuse and Neglect, annually prepare reports on efforts during the preceding two-year period to bring about coordination of the goals, objectives, and activities of agencies and organizations which have responsibilities for programs and activities related to child abuse and neglect, and, not later than March 1, 1985, and March 1 of each second year thereafter, submit such a report to the appropriate Committees of the Congress.".

(c) Section 2(c) of the Act is amended by striking out "The Secretary may carry out his functions under subsection (b) of this section" and inserting in lieu thereof "The functions of the Secretary under subsection (b) of this section may be carried out".

(d) Section 2 of the Act is further amended by inserting after subsection (d) the following new subsection:

"(e) No funds appropriated under this Act for any grant or contract may be used for any purpose other than that for which such funds were specifically authorized.".

DEFINITIONS

SEC. 102. Section 3 of the Act is amended—

(1) by inserting "including any employee of a residential facility or any staff person providing out-of-home care)" after "by a person";

(2) by striking out the period at the end thereof and inserting in lieu thereof a semicolon; and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following new clause:

"(2)(A) the term 'sexual abuse' includes—

"(i) the employment, use, persuasion, inducement, enticement, or coercion of any child to engage in, or having a child assist any other person to engage in, any sexually explicit conduct (or any simulation of such conduct) for the purpose of producing any visual depiction of such conduct, or

"(ii) the rape, molestation, prostitution, or other such form of sexual exploitation of children, or incest with children, under circumstances which indicate that the child's health or welfare is harmed or threatened thereby, as determined in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary; and

"(B) for the purpose of this clause, the term 'child' or 'children' means any individual who has not or individuals who have not attained the age of eighteen.".

DEMONSTRATION OR SERVICE PROGRAMS AND PROJECTS

SEC. 103. (a) Section 4(b)(2)(E) of the Act is amended by striking out "his" and inserting in lieu thereof "and the child's".

(b) Section 4(b)(3) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(3)(A) Subject to subparagraph (B) of this paragraph, any State which on the date of enactment of the Child Abuse Amendments of 1984 does not qualify for assistance under this subsection may be granted a waiver of any requirement under paragraph (2) of this subsection—

"(i) for a period of not more than one year, if the Secretary makes a finding that such State is making a good-faith effort to comply with any such requirement, and for a second one-year period if the Secretary makes a finding that such State is making substantial progress to achieve such compliance; or

"(ii) for a nonrenewable period of not more than two years in the case of a State the legislature of which meets only biennially, if the Secretary makes a finding that such State is making a good-faith effort to comply with any such requirement.

"(B) No waiver under subparagraph (A) may apply to any requirement under paragraph (2)(K) of this subsection.".

(c) Section 4 of the Act is further amended—

(1) by redesignating subsection (e) as subsection (f); and

(2) by inserting after subsection (d) the following new subsection:

"(e) The Secretary, in consultation with the Advisory Board on Child Abuse and Neglect, shall ensure that a proportionate share of assistance under this Act is available for activities related to the prevention of child abuse and neglect.".

AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

SEC. 104. (a) Section 5(a) of the Act is amended—

(1) by striking out "(a)" after "Sec. 5.";

(2) by inserting after the first sentence the following new sentence: "There are hereby further authorized to be appropriated for the purposes of this Act $33,500,000 for fiscal year 1984, $40,000,000 for fiscal year 1985, $41,500,000 for fiscal year 1986, and $43,100,000 for fiscal year 1987."; and

(3) in the second sentence by striking out "this section" and all that follows through the end of such subsection, and inserting in lieu thereof "this section except as provided in the succeeding sentence, (A) not less than $9,000,000 shall be available in each fiscal year to carry out section 4(b) of this Act (relating to State grants), (B) not less than $11,000,000 shall be available in each fiscal year to carry out sections 4(a) (relating to demonstration or service projects), 2(b)(1) and 2(b)(3) (relating to information dissemination), 2(b)(5) (relating to research), and 4(c)(2) (relating to training, technical assistance, and information dissemination) of this Act, giving special consideration to continued funding of child abuse and neglect programs or projects (previously funded by the Department of Health and Human Services) of national or regional scope and demonstrated effectiveness, (C) $5,000,000 shall be available in each such year for grants and contracts under section 4(a) for identification, treatment, and prevention of sexual abuse, and (D) $5,000,000 shall be available in each such year for the purpose of making additional grants to the States to carry out the provisions of section 4(c)(1) of this Act. With respect to any fiscal year in which the total amount appropriated under this section is less than $30,000,000, funds shall first be available as provided in clauses (A) and (B) in the preceding sentence and of the remainder one-half shall be available as provided for in clause (C) and one-half as provided for in clause (D) in the preceding sentence.".

(b) Section 5(b) of the Act is repealed.

ADVISORY BOARD ON CHILD ABUSE AND NEGLECT

SEC. 105. (a) The first sentence of section 6(a) of the Act is amended by striking out "including" and all that follows thereafter through "Administration,".

(b) Section 6(a) of the Act is further amended by inserting at the end thereof the following sentence: "The Advisory Board may be available, at the Secretary's request, to assist the Secretary in coordinating adoption-related activities of the Federal Government.".

(c)(1) Section 6(b) of the Act is repealed.

(2) Subsection (c) of section 6 of the Act is redesignated as subsection (b).

COORDINATION

SEC. 106. Section 7 of the Act is amended by striking out "between" and inserting in lieu thereof "among".

PART B—SERVICES AND TREATMENT FOR DISABLED INFANTS

NEW DEFINITION

SEC. 121. Section 3 of the Act is further amended—

(1) by striking out "this Act the term 'child abuse and neglect' " and inserting in lieu therof the following: "This Act—

"(1) the term 'child abuse and neglect' ";

(2) by striking out the period at the end thereof and inserting in lieu thereof a semicolon and the word "and"; and

(3) by adding after clause (2) (as added by section 102 (3) of this Act) the following new clause:

"(3) the term 'withholding of medically indicated treatment' means the failure to respond to the infant's life-threatening conditions by providing treatment (including appropriate nutrition, hydration, and medication) which, in the treating physician's or physicians' reasonable medical judgment, will be most likely to be effective in ameliorating or correcting all such conditions, exept that the term does not include the failure to provide treatment (other than appropriate nutrition, hydration, or medication) to an infant when, in the treating physician's or physicians' reasonable medical judgment, (A) the infant is chronically and irreversibly comatose; (B) the provision of such treatment would (i) merely prolong dying, (ii) not be effective in ameliorating or correcting all of the infant's life-threatening conditions, or (iii) otherwise be futile in terms of the survival of the infant; or (C) the provision of such treatment would be virtually futile in terms of the survival of the infant and the treatment itself under such circumstances would be inhumane.".

NEW BASIC STATE GRANT REQUIREMENT

SEC. 122. Section 4(b)(2) of the Act (42 U.S.C. 5103(b)(2)) is amended—

(1) by striking out "and" at the end of clause (I);

(2) by striking out the period at the end of clause (J) and inserting in lieu thereof a semicolon and the word "and"; and

(3) by inserting after clause (J) the following new clause:

"(K) within one year after the date of the enactment of the Child Abuse Amendments of 1984, have in place for the purpose of responding to the reporting of medical neglect (including instances of withholding of medically indicated treatment from disabled infants with life-threatening conditions), procedures or programs, or both (within the State child protective services system), to provide for (i) coordination and consultation with individuals designated by and within appropriate health-care facilities, (ii) prompt notification by individuals designated by and within apropriate health-care facilities of cases of suspected medical neglect (including instances of withholding of medically indicated treatment from disabled infants with life-threatening conditions), and (iii) authority, under State law, for the State child protective service system to pursue any legal remedies, including the authority to initiate legal proceedings in a court of competent jurisdiction, as may be necessary to prevent the withholding of medically indicated treatment from disabled infants with life-threatening conditions.".

ADDITIONAL STATE GRANTS AND ASSISTANCE FOR TRAINING, TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE, AND CLEARINGHOUSE ACTIVITIES

SEC. 123. (a) Section 4 of the Act is further amended by—

(1) redesignating subsection (c) as subsection (d), subsection (d) as subsection (e), and subsection (e) as subsection (f); and

(2) inserting after subsection (b) the following new subsection:

"(c)(1) The Secretary is authorized to make additional grants to the States for the purpose of developing, establishing, and operating or implementing—

"(A) the procedures or programs required under clause (K) of subsection (b)(2) of this section;

"(B) information and education programs or training programs for the purpose of improving the provision of services to disabled infants with life-threatening conditions for (i) professional and paraprofessional personnel concerned with the welfare of disabled infants with life-threatening conditions, including personnel employed in child protective services programs and health-care facilities, and (ii) the parents of such infants; and

"(C) programs to help in obtaining or coordinating necessary services, including existing social and health services and financial assistance for families with disabled infants with life-threatening conditions, and those services necessary to facilitate adoptive placement of such infants who have been relinquished for adoption.

"(2)(A) The Secretary shall provide, directly or through grants or contracts with public or private nonprofit organizations, for (i) training and technical assistance programs to assist States in developing, establishing, and operating or implementing programs and procedures meeting the requirements of clause (K) of subsection (b)(2) of this section; and (ii) the establishment and operation of national and regional information and resource clearinghouses for the purpose of providing the most current and complete information regarding medical treatment procedures and resources and community resources for the provision of services and treatment for disabled infants with life-threatening conditions (including compiling, maintaining, updating, and disseminating regional directories of community services and resources (including the names and phone numbers of State and local medical organizations) to assist parents, families, and physicians and seeking to coordinate the availability of appropriate regional education resources for health-care personnel).

"(B) not more than $1,000,000 of the funds appropriated for any fiscal year under section 5 of this Act may be used to carry out this paragraph.

"(C) Not later than 210 days after the date of the enactment of the Child Abuse Amendments of 1984, the Secretary shall have the capability of providing and begin to provide the training and technical assistance described in subparagraph (A) of this paragraph.".

(b) Section 4 of the Act is further amended by adding after paragraph (3) the following new paragraph:

"(4) Programs or projects related to child abuse and neglect assisted under part B of title IV of the Social Security Act shall comply with the requirements set forth in clauses (B), (C), (E), (F), and (K) of paragraph (2).".

REGULATIONS AND GUIDELINES

SEC. 124. (a)(1) Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services (hereinafter in this part referred to as the "Secretary") shall publish proposed regulations to implement the requirements of section 4(b)(2)(K) of the Act (as added by section 122(3) of this Act).

(2) Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act and after completion of a process of not less than 60 days for notice and opportunity for public comment, the Secretary shall publish final regulations under this subsection.

(b)(1) Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall publish interim model guidelines to encourage the establishment within health-care facilities of committees which would serve the purposes of educating hospital personnel and families of disabled infants with life-threatening conditions, recommending institutional policies and guidelines concerning the withholding of medically indicated treatment (as that term is defined in clause (3) of section 3 of the Act (as added by section 121 (3) of this Act)) from such infants, and offering counsel and review in cases involving disabled infants with life-threatening conditions.

(2) Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act and after completion of a period of not less than 60 days for notice and opportunity for public comment, the Secretary shall publish the model guidelines.

REPORT ON FINANCIAL RESOURCES

SEC. 125. The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the most effective means of providing Federal financial support, other than the use of funds provided through the Social Security Act, for the provision of medical treatment, general care, and appropriate social services for disabled infants with life-threatening conditions. Not later than 270 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall report the results of the study to the appropriate Committees of the Congress and shall include in the report such recommendations for legislation to provide such financial support as the Secretary considers appropriate.

IMPLEMENTATION REPORT

SEC. 126. Not later than October 1, 1987, the Secretary shall submit to the appropriate Committees of the Congress a detailed report on the implementation and the effects of the provisions of this part and the amendments made by it.

STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION

SEC. 127. (a) No provision of this Act or any amendment made by this Act is intended to affect any right or protection under section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973.

(b) No provision of this Act or any amendment made by this Act may be so construed as to authorize the Secretary or any other governmental entity to establish standards prescribing specific medical treatments for specific conditions, except to the extent that such standards are authorized by other laws.

(c) If the provisions of any part of this Act or any amendment made by this Act or the application thereof to any person or circumstances be held invalid, the provisions of the other parts and their application to other persons or circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

EFFECTIVE DATES

SEC. 128. (a) Except as provided in subsection (b), the provisions of this part or any amendment made by this part shall be effective on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendments made by sections 122 and 123(b) of this Act shall become effective one year after the date of such enactment.

(2) In the event that, prior to such effective date, funds have not been appropriated pursuant to section 5 of the Act (as amended by section 104 of this Act) for the purpose of grants under section 4(c)(1) of the Act (as added by section 123(a) of this Act), any State which has not met any requirement of section 4(b)(2)(K) of the Act (as added by section 122(3) of this Act) may be granted a waiver of such requirements for a period of not more than one year, if the Secretary finds that such State is making a good-faith effort to comply with such requirements.

TITLE II—AMENDMENTS TO THE CHILD ABUSE PREVENTION AND TREATMENT AND ADOPTION REFORM ACT OF 1978

FINDINGS AND DECLARATION OF PURPOSE

SEC. 201. (a) The first sentence of section 201 of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment and Adoption Reform Act of 1978 (42 U.S.C. 5111) (hereinafter in this title referred to as "the Act") is amended—

(1) by inserting "the welfare of thousands of children in institutions and foster homes and disabled infants with life-threatening conditions may be in serious jeopardy and that some such children are in need of placement in permanent, adoptive homes; that" after "finds that"; and

(2) by inserting "have medically indicated treatment withheld from them, nor" after "should not".

(b) The second sentence of section 201 of the Act is amended—

(1) by inserting a comma and "including disabled infants with life-threatening conditions," after "special needs"; and

(2) by amending clause (2) to read as follows:

"(2) providing a mechanism for the Department of Health and Human Services to—

"(A) promote quality standards for adoption services, preplacement, post-placement, and post-legal adoption counseling, and standards to protect the rights of children in need of adoption;

"(B) coordinate with other Federal departments and agencies, including the Bureau of the Census, to provide for a national adoption and foster care information data-gathering and analysis system; and

"(C) maintain a national adoption exchange to bring together children who would benefit by adoption and qualified prospective adoptive parents who are seeking such children.".

MODEL ADOPTION LEGISLATION AND PROCEDURES

SEC. 202. (a) Section 202(a) of the Act is amended by striking out "Health, Education, and Welfare" and inserting in lieu thereof "Health and Human Services".

(b) Section 202(c) of the Act is amended by inserting at the end thereof the following new sentence: "The Secretary shall coordinate efforts to improve State legislation with national, State, and local child and family services organizations, including organizations representative of minorities and adoptive families.".

(c) Section 202 of the Act is further amended by inserting at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(d) The Secretary shall review all model adoption legislation and procedures published under this section and propose such changes as are considered appropriate to facilitate adoption opportunities for disabled infants with life-threatening conditions.".

INFORMATION AND SERVICES

SEC. 203. (a) Section 203(a) of the Act is amended by striking out "Health, Education, and Welfare" and inserting in lieu thereof "Health and Human Services".

(b)(1) Section 203(a) of the Act is further amended by inserting before the period at the end thereof a comma and "including services to facilitate the adoption of children with special needs and particularly of disabled infants with life-threatening conditions and services to couples considering adoption of children with special needs".

(c)(1) Section 203(b) of the Act is amended by striking out in the matter preceding clause (1) "subsection (a) of this section" and inserting in lieu thereof "this title".

(2) Section 203(b)(1) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(1) provide (after consultation with other appropriate Federal departments and agencies, including the Bureau of the Census and appropriate State and local agencies) for the establishment and operation of a Federal adoption and foster care data-gathering and analysis system;".

(3) Section 203(b) of the Act is further amended—

(A) by striking out "parent groups" in clause (4) and inserting in lieu thereof "adoptive family groups and minority groups";

(B) by striking out "and" at the end of clause (4);

(C) by redesignating clause (5) as clause (7) and by inserting immediately after clause (4) the following new clauses:

"(5) encourage involvement of corporations and small businesses in supporting adoption as a positive family-strengthening option, including the establishment of adoption benefit programs for employees who adopt children;

"(6) continue to study the nature, scope, and effects of the placement of children in adoptive homes (not including the homes of stepparents or relatives of the child in question) by persons or agencies which are not licensed by or subject to regulation by any governmental entity; and"; and

(D) by striking out "Health, Education, and Welfare" and inserting in lieu thereof "Health and Human Services" in clause (7) (as redesignated by clause (C) of this paragraph).

AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

SEC. 204. Section 205 of the Act is amended by striking out "and" after "1978," and by inserting a comma and "and $5,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1984, 1985, 1986, and 1987," after "fiscal years".

TITLE III—FAMILY VIOLENCE PREVENTION AND SERVICES

SHORT TITLE

SEC. 301. This title may be cited as the "Family Violence Prevention and Services Act".

DECLARATION OF PURPOSE

SEC. 302. It is the purpose of this title to—

(1) demonstrate the effectiveness of assisting States in efforts to prevent family violence and to provide immediate shelter and related assistance for victims of family violence and their dependents; and

(2) provide for technical assistance and training relating to family violence programs to States, local public agencies (including law enforcement agencies), nonprofit private organizations, and other persons seeking such assistance.

STATE DEMONSTRATION GRANTS AUTHORIZED

SEC. 303. (a)(1) In order to assist in supporting the establishment, maintenance, and expansion of programs and projects to prevent incidents of family violence and to provide immediate shelter and related assistance for victims of family violence and their dependents, the Secretary is authorized, in accordance with the provisions of this title, to make demonstration grants to States.

(2) No demonstration grant may be made under this subsection unless the chief executive officer of the State seeking such grant submits an application to the Secretary at such time and in such manner as the Secretary may reasonably require. Each such application shall—

(A) provide that funds provided under this subsection will be distributed in demonstration grants to local public agencies and nonprofit private organizations (including religious and charitable organizations, and voluntary associations) for programs and projects within such State to prevent incidents of family violence and to provide immediate shelter and related assistance for victims of family violence and their dependents in order to prevent future violent incidents;

(B) provide, with respect to funds provided to a State under this subsection for any fiscal year, that—

(i) not more than 5 percent of such funds will be used for State administrative costs; and

(ii) in the distribution of funds by the State under this subsection, the State will give special emphasis to the support of community-based projects of demonstrated effectiveness carried out by nonprofit private organizations, particularly those projects the primary purpose of which is to operate shelters for victims of family violence and their dependents, and those which provide counseling, alcohol and drug abuse treatment, and self-help services to abusers and victims;

(C) set forth procedures designed to involve knowledgeable individuals and interested organizations and assure an equitable distribution of grants and grant funds within the State and between urban and rural areas within such State;

(D) specify the State agency to be designated as responsible for the administration of programs and activities relating to family violence which are carried out by the State under this title and for coordination of related programs within the State;

(E) provide assurances that procedures will be developed to assure the confidentiality of records pertaining to any individual provided family violence prevention or treatment services by any program assisted under this title and provide assurances that the address or location of any shelter-facility assisted under this title will, except with written authorization of the person or persons responsible for the operation of such shelter, not be made public;

(F) provide assurances that, within one year after receipt of funds under this subsection, the State will, provide assurances to the Secretary that the State has or has under consideration a procedure for the eviction of an abusing spouse from a shared residence; and

(G) meet such requirements as the Secretary reasonably determines are necessary to carry out the purposes and provisions of this title.

(3) The Secretary shall approve any application that meets the requirements of this subsection, and the Secretary shall not disapprove any such application except after reasonable notice of the Secretary's intention to disapprove and after opportunity for correction of any deficiencies.

(b)(1) The Secretary is authorized to make demonstration grants to Indian tribes and tribal organizations for projects designed to prevent family violence and to provide immediate shelter and related assistance for victims of family violence and their dependents.

(2) No demonstration grant may be made under this subsection unless an application is made to the Secretary at such time, in such manner, and containing or accompanied by such information as the Secretary deems essential to carry out the purposes and provisions of this title. Such application shall comply, as applicable, with the provisions of clauses (c), (with respect only to involving knowledgeable individuals and organizations), (D), and (E) of subsection (a)(2).

(c) No demonstration grant may be made under this section in any fiscal year to any single entity (other than to a State) for an amount in excess of $50,000, and the total amount of such grants to any such single entity may not exceed $150,000. A single entity may not be awarded demonstration grants under this section for a total period in excess of three fiscal years.

(d) No funds provided through demonstration grants made under this section may be used as direct payment to any victim of family violence or to any dependent of such victim.

(e) No income eligibility standard may be imposed upon individuals with respect to eligibility for assistance or services supported with funds appropriated to carry out this title.

(f) No demonstration grant may be made under this section to any entity other than a State unless the entity provides for the following local share as a proportion of the total amount of funds provided under this title to the project involved: 35 percent in the first year such project receives a grant under this title, 55 percent in the second such year, and 65 percent in the third such year. Except in the case of a public entity, not less than 50 percent of the local share of such agency or organization shall be raised from private sources. The local share required under this subsection may be in cash or in-kind. The local share may not include any Federal funds provided under any authority other than this title.

(g) The Secretary shall assure that not less than 60 percent of the funds distributed under subsection (a) or (b) shall be distributed to entities for the purpose of providing immediate shelter and related assistance to victims of family violence and their dependents.

ALLOTMENT OF FUNDS

SEC. 304. (a) From the sums appropriated under section 310 for grants to States for any fiscal year, each State shall be allotted for payment in a grant authorized under section 303(a) an amount which bears the same ratio to such sums as the population of such State bears to the population of all States, except that—

(1) each State shall be allotted not less than whichever is the greater of the following amounts: one-half of 1 percent of the amounts available for grants under section 303(a) for the fiscal year for which the allotment is made, or $50,000; and

(2) Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands shall each be allotted not less than one-eighth of 1 percent of the amounts available for grants under section 303(a) for the fiscal year for which the allotment is made.

For the purpose of the exception contained in clause (1) of the preceding sentence only, the term "State" does not include Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.

(b) For the purpose of this section, the population of each State, and the total population of all the States, shall be determined by the Secretary on the basis of the most recent census data available to the Secretary, and the Secretary shall use for such purpose, if available, the annual interim current census data produced by the Secretary of Commerce pursuant to section 181 of title 13, United States Code.

(c) If the sums appropriated under section 310 for any fiscal year for grants to States authorized under section 303(a) are not sufficient to pay in full the total amounts which all States are entitled to receive under such section for such fiscal year, then the maximum amounts which all States are entitled to receive under such section for such fiscal year shall be ratably reduced. In the event that additional funds become available for making such grants for any fiscal year during which the preceding sentence is applicable, such reduced amounts shall be increased on the same basis as they were reduced.

(d)(1) If, at the end of the sixth month of any fiscal year for which sums are appropriated under section 310, the amount allotted to a State has not been made available to such State in grants under section 303(a) because of the failure of such State to meet the requirements for a grant, then the Secretary shall reallot such amount to States which meet such requirements.

(2) Funds made available by the Secretary through reallotment under paragraph (1) shall remain available for expenditure until the end of the fiscal year following the fiscal year in which such funds become available for reallotment.

SECRETARIAL RESPONSIBILITIES

SEC. 305. (a) The Secretary shall appoint an employee of the Department of Health and Human Services to carry out the provisions of this title. The individual appointed under this subsection shall, prior to such appointment, have had expertise in the field of family violence prevention and services.

(b) The Secretary shall—

(1) coordinate all programs within the Department of Health and Human Services, and seek to coordinate all other Federal programs, which involve the prevention of incidents of family violence and the provision of assistance for victims and potential victims of family violence and their dependents, and ensure that such activities as they relate to elderly persons are coordinated with the Administration on Aging and the National Institute on Aging within the Department of Health and Human Services;

(2)(A) provide for research into the causes of family violence, and into the prevention, identification, and treatment thereof (such as research into (i) the effectiveness of reducing repeated incidents of family violence through a variety of sentencing alternatives, such as incarceration, fines, and counseling programs, individually or in combination, and through the use of civil protection orders removing the abuser from the family household, and (ii) the necessity and impact of a mandatory reporting requirement relating to incidents of family violence, particularly abuse of elderly persons), and (B) make a complete study and investigation (in consultation with the National Institute on Aging) of the national incidence of abuse, neglect, and exploitation of elderly persons, including a determination of the extent to which incidents of such abuse, neglect, and exploitation are increasing in number or severity; and

(3) provide for the training of personnel and provide technical assistance in the conduct of programs for the prevention and treatment of family violence.

EVALUATION

SEC. 306. Not later than two years after the date on which funds are obligated under section 303(a) for the first time after the date of the enactment of this title, the Secretary shall review, evaluate, and report to the appropriate Committees of the Congress, as to the effectiveness of the programs administered and operated pursuant to this title, particularly in relation to repeated incidents of family violence. Such report shall also include a summary of the assurances provided to the Secretary under section 303(a)(2)(F).

DISCRIMINATION PROHIBITED

SEC. 307. (a)(1) For the purpose of applying the prohibitions against discrimination on the basis of age under the Age Discrimination Act of 1975, on the basis of handicap under section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, on the basis of sex under title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, or on the basis of race, color, or national origin under title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, programs and activities funded in whole or in part with funds made available under this part are considered to be programs and activities receiving Federal financial assistance.

(2) No person shall on the ground of sex or religion be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subject to discrimination under, any program or activity funded in whole or in part with funds made available under this title. Nothing in this title shall require any such program or activity to include any individual in any program or activity without taking into consideration that individual's sex in those certain instances where sex is a bona fide occupational qualification or programmatic factor reasonably necessary to the normal operation of that particular program or activity. The Secretary shall enforce the provisions of the preceding sentence in accordance with section 602 of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. Section 603 of such Act shall apply with respect to any action taken by the Secretary to enforce such sentence. This paragraph shall not be construed as affecting any other legal remedy.

(b) Whenever the Secretary finds that a State or other entity that has received financial assistance under this title has failed to comply with a provision of law referred to in subsection (a)(1), with subsection (a)(2), or with an applicable regulation (including one prescribed to carry out subsection (a)(2)), the Secretary shall notify the chief executive officer of the State and shall request such officer to secure compliance. If, within a reasonable period of time, not to exceed sixty days, the chief executive officer fails or refuses to secure compliance, the Secretary may—

(1) refer the matter to the Attorney General of the United States with a recommendation that an appropriate civil action be instituted,

(2) exercise the powers and functions provided by title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the Age Discrimination Act of 1975, sections 504 and 505 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, or title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, as may be applicable, or

(3) take such other action as may be provided by law.

(c) When a matter is referred to the Attorney General pursuant to subsection (b)(1), or whenever the Attorney General has reason to believe that a State or an entity is engaged in a pattern or practice in violation of a provision of law referred to in subsection (a)(1) or in violation of subsection (a)(2), the Attorney General may bring a civil action in any appropriate district court of the United States for such relief as may be appropriate, including injunctive relief.

NATIONAL CLEARINGHOUSE ON FAMILY VIOLENCE PREVENTION

SEC. 308. (a) The Secretary shall operate a national information and research clearinghouse on the prevention of family violence (including the abuse of elderly persons) in order to—

(1) collect, prepare, analyze, and disseminate information and statistics and analyses thereof relating to the incidence and prevention of family violence (particularly the prevention of repeated incidents of violence) and the provision of immediate shelter and related assistance to victims of family violence and their dependents; and

(2) provide information about alternative sources of assistance available with respect to the prevention of incidents of family violence and the provision of immediate shelter and related assistance to victims of family violence and their dependents.

(b) The Secretary shall ensure that the activities of the national information and research clearinghouse operated under subsection (a) are coordinated with the information clearinghouse maintained by the National Center on Child Abuse and Neglect under section 2 of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act.

DEFINITIONS

SEC. 309. As used in this title:

(1) The term "family violence" means any act or threatened act of violence, including any forceful detention of an individual, which—

(a) results or threatens to result in physical injury; and

(b) is committed by a person against another individual (including an elderly person) to whom such person is or was related by blood or marriage or otherwise legally related or with whom such person is or was lawfully residing.

(2) The terms "Indian tribe" and "tribal organization" have the same meanings given such terms in subsections (b) and (c), respectively, of section 4 of the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act.

(3) The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Health and Human Services.

(4) The term "shelter" means the provision of temporary refuge and related assistance in compliance with applicable State law and regulation governing the provision, on a regular basis, of shelter, safe homes, meals, and related assistance to victims of family violence and their dependents.

(5) The term "related assistance"—

(A) includes counseling and self-help services to abusers, victims, and dependents in family violence situations (which shall include counseling of all family members to the extent feasible) and referrals for appropriate health-care services (including alcohol and drug abuse treatment), and

(B) may include food, clothing, child care, transportation, and emergency services (but not reimbursement for any health-care services) for victims of family violence and their dependents.

(6) The term "State" means each of the several States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and, except as otherwise provided, Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.

AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

SEC. 310. (a) There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out the provisions of this title $11,000,000 for fiscal year 1985 and $26,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1986 and 1987.

(b) Of the sums appropriated under subsection (a) for any fiscal year, not less than 85 percent shall be used by the Secretary for making grants under section 303.

LAW ENFORCEMENT TRAINING AND TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE GRANTS AND CONTRACTS

SEC. 311. (a) From the amount appropriated pursuant to section 310 for any fiscal year, the Secretary shall make grants and enter into contracts for the purpose of providing regionally-based training and technical assistance to provide the personnel of local and State law enforcement agencies with means for responding to incidents of family violence.

(b) Grants and contracts under this section shall be awarded competitively on the basis of an application containing such information and assurances as the Secretary may require by regulation. In selecting grant and contract recipients, the Secretary shall select recipients who have demonstrated their effectiveness in preparing the personnel of local and State law enforcement agencies for the handling of incidents of family violence and shall give priority to those applications which propose projects or programs which will develop, demonstrate, or disseminate information with respect to improved techniques for responding to incidents of family violence by law enforcement officers.

(c) The Secretary shall delegate to the Attorney General of the United States the Secretary's responsiblities for carrying out this section and shall transfer to the Attorney General from funds appropriated under section 310 not in excess of $2,000,000 for each fiscal year to be used for the purpose of making grants under this section.

ADMINISTRATION AND STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION

SEC. 312. (a) In order to carry out the provisions of this title, the Secretary is authorized to—

(1) appoint and fix the compensation of such personnel as are necessary;

(2) procure, to the extent authorized by section 3109 of title 5, United States Code, such termporary and intermittent services of experts and consultants as are necessary;

(3) make grants to public and nonprofit private entities or enter into contracts with public or private entities; and

(4) prescribe such regulations as are reasonably necessary in order to carry out the purposes and provisions of this title.

(b) Nothing in this title shall be construed to supersede the application of State or local requirements for the reporting of incidents of suspected child abuse to the appropriate State authorities.

And the Senate agree to the same.

JOINT EXPLANATORY STATEMENT OF THE COMMITTEE OF CONFERENCE

The managers on the part of the House and the Senate at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 1904) to revise and extend and improve the provisions of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act and the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment and Adoption Reform Act of 1978 submit the following joint statement to the House and the Senate in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the managers and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

The Senate amendment struck out all of the text of the House bill and inserted a substitute text.

The House recedes from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate with an amendment which is a substitute for the House bill and the Senate amendment. The provisions of the House bill, the Senate amendment, and the conference agreement are noted below, except for clerical corrections, conforming changes made necessary by agreements reached by the conferees, and minor drafting and clarifying changes.

House Bill.—The House bill specifies the following duties to be carried out by the Secretary through the National Center on Child Abuse and Neglect: to study the national incidence of child abuse and neglect including determining its relationship, if any, to unemployment, abortion, child pornography, and non-payment of child support; to report (using the Advisory Board on Child Abuse and Neglect) annually on the coordination of activities relating to child abuse programs and activities; to require the Center, within one year of enactment, to compile, publish, and disseminate information on the development of resources for preventing child abuse and neglect and provide technical assistance to States on developing resources; and to annually recommend (using the Advisory Board) to Congress ways to reduce the incidence of child prostitution.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The Senate recedes with amendments deleting all specific items to be studied except for the national incidence of child abuse and neglect and any relationship between child abuse and neglect and non-payment of child support and various other factors. (Section 101(b) of the conference report.)

The conferees note that studying the relationship, if any, between child abuse and neglect and unemployment, abortion, child pornography, and child prostitution would be appropriate. The conferees also believe that it would be appropriate for the Secretary to study the relationship between the agency designated by each State to carry out the provisions of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act and appropriate law enforcement agencies, with particular emphasis on the provisions of the Act and appropriate State laws which affect such agencies with regard to the sharing of information concerning repeated or life-threatening cases of child abuse, and to develop recommendations to improve such information sharing where indicated. It is the conferees' hope that this will encourage greater coordination between protective service agencies and law enforcement agencies at the State and local levels. The conferees also note that the activities described in the clause (8) which the House bill proposed to add to the Center's duties (relating to information on child abuse and neglect prevention) are generally authorized under section 2(b) of the Act.

House Bill.—The House bill specifies that funds appropriated for grants or contracts be used for no purpose other than that for which specifically authorized.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The Senate recedes. (Section 101(d).)

House Bill.—The House bill amends the definition section to specify that a person responsible for the child's health includes "any employee of a residential facility or a staff person providing out-of-home care."

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The Senate recedes. (Section 102(l).)

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment defines "withholding of medically indicated treatment" to mean the failure to respond to the infant's life-threatening conditions by providing treatment (including appropriate nutrition, hydration, and medication) which in the treating physician's or physicians' reasonable medical judgment will be most likely to be effective in ameliorating or correcting all such conditions, except that the term does not include the failure to provide treatment (other than appropriate nutrition, hydration, or medication) to an infant when, in the treating physician's or physicians' reasonable medical judgment (a) the infant is chronically and irreversibly comatose; (b) the provision of such treatment would (1) merely prolong dying, (2) not be effective in ameliorating or correcting all of the infant's life-threatening conditions, or (3) otherwise be futile in terms of the survival of the infant; or (c) the provision of such treatment would be virtually futile in terms of the survival of the infant and the treatment itself under such circumstances would be inhumane.

House Bill.—The House bill contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes. (Section 121.)

The conferees endorse and adopt as their own the joint explanatory statement of the sponsors of the Senate amendment (No. 3421) regarding care and services for disabled infants with life-threatening conditions (Congressional Record, July 26, 1984, S9309-10, see Appendix), except to the extent that the underlying statutory language has been modified substantively in this conference report.

House Bill.—The House bill requires that, to qualify for Child Abuse Act assistance, States must have in place within one year of enactment procedures to be followed by allied health and health professionals, health facilities, social service providers, courts of competent jurisdiction, and other appropriate agencies or individuals to insure nutrition (including fluid maintenance), medically indicated treatment, general care, and appropriate social services are provided to infants at risk with life-threatening congenital impairments

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment requires that (effective one year after enactment), to qualify for assistance, States must have in place for the purpose of responding to the reporting of cases of medical neglect, including instances of withholding of medically indicated treatment from disabled infants with life-threatening conditions, procedures and/or programs within the State child protective services system to provide for coordination and consultation with individuals designated by and within health-care facilities, prompt notification of suspected medical neglect (including withholding of medically indicated treatment from disabled infants with life-threatening conditions) by individuals designated by and within health-care facilities, and authority under State law for the State child protective services system to pursue legal remedies to prevent withholding of medically indicated treatment from disabled infants with life-threatening conditions.

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes with an amendment requiring States to have these procedures and/or programs in effect "within one year" after enactment. (Section 122.)

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment provides that the Secretary publish within 90 days of enactment proposed regulations, and within 180 days (after notice and opportunity for public comment) final regulations, to implement the requirements of this Act regarding such infants.

House Bill.—The House bill contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes with amendments shortening the maximum period for publication of proposed regulations to 60 days and specifying that the public comment period be not less than 60 days. (Section 124(a).)

House Bill.—The House bill requires that, to qualify for assistance, States provide for reporting of known and suspected instances of child abuse and neglect, including instances involving denial of nutrition (including fluid maintenance), medically indicated treatment, general care, or appropriate social services to infants at risk with life-threatening congenital impairments.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment includes requirements relating to reporting of cases of medical neglect, including instances of withholding of medically indicated treatment from disabled infants with life-threatening conditions.

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes. (Section 122.)

House Bill.—The House bill provides for a 2-year waiver of any requirement, except for those pertaining to infants at risk with life-threatening congenital impairments, for States that do not qualify for assistance if the Secretary finds such State is making a good-faith effort to comply.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment provides that, if additional funds have not been appropriated for the purpose of allowing the Secretary to make additional grants to States to carry out the requirements under the new clause (K), the Secretary is authorized to grant a one-year waiver of all requirements of new clause (K) if the Secretary finds that such State is making a good-faith effort to comply. The Senate amendment also provides a one-year delay in the enactment of the Senate provision addressing the withholding of medically indicated treatment from disabled infants with life-threatening conditions.

Conference Agreement.—The conference agreement includes the Senate provisions relating to waivers for new clause (K). The conference agreement also includes a modification of the House provision to provide that a non-renewable two-year waiver would be limited to a non-complying State the legislature of which meets only biennially that the Secretary found was making good faith efforts to comply and that a one-year waiver could be granted to a non-complying State that the Secretary found was making good faith efforts to comply and that that waiver could be renewed for a second year if the Secretary found that the State was making substantial progress towards compliance. (Sections 128(b)(2) and 103(b).)

House Bill.—The House bill adds clause (K) as a requirement that must be complied with, to the extent feasible, by the child abuse and neglect programs or projects assisted under title XX of the Social Security Act.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes.

The House Bill and The Senate Amendment.—Both the House bill and the Senate amendment add "clause (K)" to the list in existing law of requirements under section 4(b)(2) of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act with which programs or projects relating to child abuse and neglect assisted under parts A or B of title IV of the Social Security Act must comply. The House bill also deletes the reference to part A of title IV.

Conference Agreement.—The Senate recedes. (Section 123(b).)

House Bill.—The House bill provides that the Secretary, in consultation with the Advisory Board, shall insure that a proportionate share of assistance under this Act is available for activities related to the prevention of child abuse and neglect.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The Senate recedes. (Section 103(c).)

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment establishes a grant program for States to develop, establish, operate, or implement the programs or procedures relating to preventing medical neglect under new clause (K); information and education or training programs to improve services to disabled infants with life-threatening conditions for professionals, para-professionals, and parents of such infants; and programs to help obtatin or coordinate necessary services, including existing social and health services and financial assistance, for families with such disabled infants, and services necessary to facilitate adoptive placement of such infants who have been relinquished for adoption.

House Bill.—The House bill contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes. (Section 123(a).)

House Bill.—The House bill authorizes appropriations for programs under the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act at:

	Millions
Fiscal year 1984	$25
Fiscal year 1985	26.25
Fiscal year 1986	27.563
Fiscal year 1987	28.941

The Senate amendment authorizes appropriations for those programs at:

	Millions
Fiscal year 1984	$32.5
Fiscal year 1985	39
Fiscal year 1986	40.5
Fiscal year 1987	42.8

House Bill.—The bill provides that of the funds appropriated each fiscal year, not less than 50 percent be used for grants or contracts relating to research, demonstration, or service projects, and information dissemination, and that not less than 30 percent be used for State grants and contracts.

Senate amendment.—The Senate amendment provides that of the sums appropriated $9.5 million be available each fiscal year for State grants.

House Bill.—The House bill authorizes appropriations for sexual abuse programs at:

	Millions
Fiscal year 1984	$3
Fiscal year 1985	3.15
Fiscal year 1986	3.308
Fiscal year 1987	3.473

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment provides that $4 million of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act appropriations each year be available for identification, treatment, and prevention of sexual abuse.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment provides that $5 million of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act appropriations each year be available for additional grants to States for programs relating to the withholding of medically indicated treatment from disabled infants with life-threatening conditions.

House Bill.—The House bill contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The conference agreement provides the following authorizations of appropriations for all programs under the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act:

	Millions
Fiscal year 1984	$33.5
Fiscal year 1985	40.0
Fiscal year 1986	41.5
Fiscal year 1987	43.1

The conference agreement further provides that, of the sums appropriated, not less than $11 million be allocated to research, demonstration, service, training, technical assistance, and information dissemination grants or contracts, not less than $9 million to State grants, $5 million to the new clause (K) implementation grants, and $5 million to sexual abuse grants and contracts. If the funds appropriated for the program are below $30 million, then $11 million shall be available for the research and demonstration and other discretionary Secretarial grants, $9 million shall be available for State grants, and the remainder shall be divided equally between grants and contracts for the prevention and treatment of sexual abuse and the new clause (K) implementation grants for treatment for disabled infants with life-threatening conditions. Of the funds appropriated, not more than $1 million shall be available for training, technical assistance and information clearinghouse activities related to disabled infants with life-threatening conditions under section 4(c)(2) as added to this Act. (Section 104.)

The conferees stress that, among other programs, on-going programs that involve treatment of family units, treatment and related services to persons who have committed acts of sexual abuse against children, and training of personnel are fully eligible to compete for sexual abuse grants or contracts to expand services for these purposes. In addition, the conferees recognize the importance of research in this area.

House Bill.—The House bill contains a new definition of "sexual abuse" to include the use or intent to use a child in specific presentations before an audience, if knowing the character and content thereof, "any individual or entity employs, authorizes, or induces a child to engage in actual or simulated sexual intercourse, deviate sexual intercourse, sexual bestiality, masturbation, sadomasochistic abuse, or lewd exhibition of the genitals."

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment deletes all of existing section 5(b) relating to sexual abuse grants and contracts and providing a definition of sexual abuse and adds a new definition for purposes of the Child Abuse Act that "sexual abuse" includes the obscene or pornographic photographing, filming, or depiction of children, or the rape, molestation, incest, prostitution, or other such forms of sexual exploitation of children under circumstances that indicate that the child's health or welfare is harmed or threatened thereby, as determined by regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes on section 5(b). The conference agreement contains a modification of the House bill and the Senate amendment language on the definition of sexual abuse. (Sections 104(b) and 102(3).)

The conferees note that the conference report earmarks $5 million for sexual abuse grants and contracts in the authorization of appropriations for programs under the Child Abuse Act. (See description of conference agreement in preceding item.)

House Bill.—The House bill provides that the Advisory Board on Child Abuse and Neglect submit to Congress within one year of enactment a report on the relationship between providers of child care services under this Act and State and local law enforcement agencies, with particular emphasis on their ability to share information about repeated or life-threatening cases of child abuse (other than instances of infants at risk with life-threatening congenital impairments).

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes.

The conferees note that the reference to such a study is included in the conference report provision regarding the duty of the Secretary to study and report on various child abuse matters.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment provides that the Advisory Board be available to assist the Secretary on adoption-related activities, and repeals the requirement that a comprehensive plan be submitted to Congress and the President within 18 months of the effective date of the Act.

House Bill.—The House bill contains no similar provisions.

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes with an amendment which allows, at the Secretary's request, the Advisory Board to assist in the coordination of activities relating to adoption. (Section 105(b).)

The House Bill and the Senate Amendment.—Both the House bill and the Senate amendment provide, with technical differences, that the Secretary of HHS study, and report to Congress within 270 days of enactment on, the most effective means of providing Federal financial support (other than funds available through the Social Security Act) to provide medical treatment, general care, and appropriate social services for infants at risk, and to recommend legislation for such financial support.

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes. (Section 125.)

House Bill.—The House bill provides that the Secretary, in coordination with the Surgeon General and Assistant Secretary of Health, and the Assistant Secretary of Human Development Services, and in consultation with health care providers to infants at risk, publish within 90 days of enactment procedural guidelines to encourage and assist local health care providers desiring to establish local health care review mechanisms. The review would include instances in which such infants may be denied nutrition (including fluid maintenance), medically indicated treatment, and general care.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment provides that the Secretary publish within 60 days of enactment interim model guidelines to establish, within health-care facilities, committees to educate hospital personnel and families of such infants, recommend institutional policies and guidelines concerning the withholding of medically indicated treatment from such infants, and offer counsel and review in cases involving disabled infants with life-threatening conditions. The Senate amendment further requires that not later than 150 days after the date of enactment the Secretary shall publish the model guidelines.

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes with amendments requiring that the final guidelines be published within 180 days of enactment preceded by a public comment period of at least 60 days. (Section 124(b).)

House Bill.—The House bill provides that up-to-date and complete information regarding medical treatment procedures and community resources be made available by HHS to physicians, parents, and child protective service agencies by requiring the Secretary to instruct each regional HHS office to:

(1) Compile, maintain, and update a directory of physicians (including pediatricians, neonatologists, and pediatric surgeons) within each region who have expertise in the care and treatment of infants at risk with life-threatening congenital impairments and who have agreed to be included in such directory;

(2) Provide and publicize to all hospitals and child protective service agencies within each region a toll-free number which physicians, hospitals, and child protective service agencies may use to seek relevant information from such directory;

(3) Develop and coordinate within each region other appropriate educational programs or resources for ensuring that all physicians in the region have access to the most up-to-date and complete information concerning the care and treatment of infants at risk with life-threatening congenital impairments; and

(4) Compile and maintain a directory of community services and resources within such region to assist parents and families in the care of infants at risk with life-threatening congenital impairments.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment provides for the establishment and operation of national and regional information and resource clearinghouses for the purpose of providing the most current and complete information regarding medical treatment procedures and resources and community resources for the provision of services and treatment for disabled infants with life-threatening conditions.

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes with an amendment specifying that the clearinghouse function include compiling, maintaining, updating, and disseminating regional directories of community services and resources (including the names and phone numbers of State and local medical organizations) to assist parents, families, and physicians and seeking to coordinate the availability of appropriate regional education resources for health-care personnel. (Section 123(a).)

House Bill.—The House bill requires that, within 30 days of the promulgation of procedural guidelines, the Secretary (in consultation with the Advisory Board) provide technical assistance and training to help States develop, implement, or improve procedures to enable agencies and individuals to appropriately respond to cases concerning such infants.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment requires that the Secretary provide training and technical assistance programs to assist States in developing, establishing, and operating or implementing programs and procedures meeting the requirements of new clause (k).

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes with an amendment requiring that the Secretary have the capacity and initiate action to provide such training and technical assistance within 210 days after enactment. (Section 123(a).)

House Bill.—The House bill provides that no provision of this legislation be construed to lessen or limit any right or protection under section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973.

Senate Amendment.—the Senate amendment provides that no provision of this amendment be construed to affect any right or protection under section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973.

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes. (Section 127(a).)

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment prohibits the Secretary or any other governmental entity from establishing standards prescribing specific medical treatments for specific conditions, except to the extent that such standards are authorized by other laws.

House Bill.—The House bill contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes. (Section 127(b).)

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment contains a severability clause.

House Bill.—The House bill contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes. (Section 127(c).)

House Bill.—The House bill contains a statement of congressional findings for title II of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment and Adoption Reform Act of 1978 that includes expressions of concern that "the welfare of infants at risk with life-threatening congenital impairments may be in serious jeopardy."

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment includes a statement of congressional findings about "the welfare of thousands of children in institutions or foster homes, disabled infants with life-threatening conditions, and infants born to teenaged unmarried individuals, and that some such infants and children are in need of placement in permanent, adoptive homes." The Senate amendment further finds that such children should not "become victims of a denial of medically indicated treatment or nutrition."

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes with an amendment deleting references to infants born to teenage unmarried individuals and conforming the description of infants to the description used throughout the agreement. (Section 301(a).)

The House Bill and the Senate Amendment.—Both the House bill and the Senate amendment include, with technical differences, disabled infants at risk with life-threatening congenitial impairments in the service population of special needs children.

Conference Agreement.—The conference agreement conforms the description of infants. (Section 201(b)(1).)

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment includes a mechanism for HHS to offer pregnancy counseling which presents adoption as an alternative; mandates coordination with Federal departments and agencies, including the Census Bureau, to provide for a national information data-gathering and analysis system on foster care and adoption; and mandates the maintenance of a national adoption exchange.

House Bill.—The House bill contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes with an amendment deleting mechanisms for HHS to offer pregnancy counseling which presents adoption as an alternative. (Section 201(b)(2).)

House Bill.—The House bill strikes "Education and Welfare" and inserts "and Human Services" in section 202(a) of title II of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment and Adoption Reform Act of 1978.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The Senate recedes. (Section 202(a).)

The House Bill and The Senate Amendment.—Both the House bill and the Senate amendment instruct, with technical differences, the Secretary to review and recommend procedures to facilitate adoption opportunities for disabled infants with life threatening congenital impairments.

Conference Agreement.—The Senate recedes with a technical amendment conforming the description of infants. (Section 202(c).)

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment requires the Secretary to encourage and facilitate enactment in each State of comprehensive legislation for adoption of infants in need, and to coordinate efforts to improve State legislation with national, State, and local child and family services organizations.

House Bill.—The House bill contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The Senate recedes with an amendment incorporating the coordination requirement into existing section 202(c) of the 1978 Act. (Section 202(b).)

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment requires the appropriate administrative arrangement under the Secretary to provide services for special needs children, particularly disabled infants with life-threatening conditions, services to couples considering adoption of children with special needs, couples with infertility problems, and other individuals considering adoption, including pregnant teenagers; and pregnancy counseling, particularly of unmarried minors, to consider adoption as an alternative.

House Bill.—The House contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes with an amendment striking all after "couple considering adoption of children with special needs." (Section 203(b).)

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment eliminates required data collection by States for use in a Federal adoption and foster care data-gathering and analysis system, and requires that the system be established and operated after consultation with other appropriate Federal agencies, including the Bureau of the Census.

House Bill.—The House bill contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes with an amendment requiring consultation as well with appropriate State agencies in the collection of adoption and foster care data. (Section 203(c)(2).)

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment strikes "parent groups" and substitutes "adoptive family groups and minority groups" as the required groups receiving technical assistance in adoption programs.

House Bill.—The House bill contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes. (Section 203(c)(3)(A).)

The conferees stress that the terms used include parent groups, including those involving single parents.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment provides that the Secretary encourage the involvement of corporations and small businesses in supporting adoption, including the establishment of adoption benefit programs for employees, and that the Secretary continue to study the placement of children in adoptive homes by persons or agencies that are not licensed by or subject to governmental regulation, including the legal status of surrogate parenting.

House Bill.—The House bill contains no similar provisions.

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes with an amendment deleting the specific reference to surrogate parenting. (Section 203(c)(3)(C).)

The conferees believe that the legal status of surrogate parenting would be an appropriate subject for study by the Secretary.

House Bill.—The House bill authorizes appropriations for programs authorized under Title II of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment and Adoption Reform Act of 1978 at $2.5 million for each fiscal year (84 to 87).

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment authorizes appropriations for those programs at $5 million for each fiscal year (84 to 87).

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes. (Section 204.)

The House Bill and the Senate Amendment.—Both the House bill and the Senate amendment, with technical differences, name title III relating to family violence.

Conference Agreement.—The Senate recedes. (Section 301.)

House Bill.—The House bill provides a declaration of purpose for the family violence title.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The Senate recedes with conforming amendments. (Section 302.)

House Bill.—The House bill authorizes the Secretary to make grants to States to assist in supporting the establishment, maintenance, and expansion of programs and projects to prevent incidents of family violence and to provide immediate shelter and related assistance for victims and dependents of victims of family violence.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment authorizes the Secretary to make demonstration grants to organizations that are administering or that have the capacity to administer family violence prevention programs to do one or more of the following: (1) prevent incidents of family violence, including providing immediate shelter and related assistance to victims and their dependents; (2) conduct research into the causes, prevention, identification, and treatment of family violence, including research on the effectiveness of involving law enforcement personnel in responding to incidents of family violence, State procedures for removing the abusing spouse from the household, arrest of the abusing spouse, and referral to drug and alcohol treatment programs or other therapy programs for the abusing spouse; (3) train family violence prevention and treatment program personnel; and (4) prepare local and State law enforcement personnel to handle family violence incidents.

Conference Agreement.—The Senate recedes with an amendment to authorize demonstration grants to States. (Section 303(a)(1).)

House Bill.—The House bill requires that State grant applications:

(1) Provide that funds be distributed to local public agencies and nonprofit private organizations for programs and projects within the State to prevent incidents of family violence and to provide immediate shelter and related assistance for victims and dependents of victims of family violence to prevent future incidents;

(2) Provide that not more than 5 percent of the funds are to be used for State administrative costs, that not less than 70 percent of the funds are to be distributed in grants to nonprofit private organizations within the State, and that in distributing the funds, States will give special emphasis to supporting community-based projects of demonstrated effectiveness, particularly those which have a primary purpose of operating shelters for victims and dependents of victims of family violence and those which provide counseling, alcohol and drug abuse treatment, and self-help services to abusers and victims;

(3) Set forth procedures to assure an equitable distribution of grants and grant funds in the State;

(4) Specify the State agency to be responsible for administering programs and activities relating to family violence and for coordination of related programs within the State;

(5) Provide for keeping records and making reasonable reports deemed essential by the Secretary;

(6) Develop procedures to assure confidentiality of records about anyone provided family violence prevention or treatment services by an entity conducted, regulated, or assisted by HHS and provide assurances that the address or location of any shelter receiving a grant under this subsection will not be made public except with written authorization of the person responsible for operating the shelter;

(7) Set forth procedures to assure active participation by knowledgeable individuals and organizations in the development and review of programs and projects within the State funded under this title;

(8) Provide assurances that any projects receiving a grant will seek to coordinate activities with other related programs in the area and be administered and operated by personnel with appropriate skills (including language skills), training, or experience;

(9) Assure that any project receiving a grant will not require a minimum length of stay for shelter residents or interfere or censor mail or telephone calls of shelter residents or in any way interfere with reconciliation efforts unless requested by the resident; and

(10) Certify to the Secretary within one year of receipt of funds that the State has a procedure for evicting an abusing spouse from a shared residence.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment requires the Secretary to:

(1) assure an equitable distribution of assistance among States and between rural and urban areas;

(2) give priority to applications from communities without family violence programs or which can demonstrate that existing services are inadequate; and

(3) assure confidentiality of records of those provided services and, except with written authority of the person/persons responsible for the shelter, the address or location of shelter-facilities provided funding.

Conference Agreement.—The Senate recedes with amendments:

(1) eliminating the 70 percent earmarked for non-profit private organizations and, instead, specifying in the description of community-based organizations which are to receive special emphasis in funding that such organizations will be non-profit organizations;

(2) adding to the provision relating to the establishment of procedures to ensure equitable distribution of grants and funds within a State the inclusion of "between rural and urban areas" and the requirement that such procedures include provision for the involvement of knowledgeable individuals and interested organizations;

(3) eliminating the requirements regarding record-keeping and reports and inserting instead a requirement that the States meet such other requirements as the Secretary determines are reasonably necessary to carry out the purposes and provisions of this title;

(4) substituting, with technical changes, the Senate amendment provisions relating to confidentiality of records for the House bill provisions;

(5) eliminating provisions in the House amendment requiring individual projects receiving grants to seek to coordinate activities with other related public and private programs in the area and requiring such programs to be administered and operated by personnel with appropriate skills (including language skills), training, and experience.

(6) amending the provisions of the House bill relating to certification to the Secretary that the State has a procedure for the eviction of an abusing spouse from a shared residence to provide that the State must provide assurances that within one year after receiving funds it will provide assurances that it has such procedures in place or has them under consideration. (Section 303(a)(2).)

It is the intention of the conferees that emphasis also be given to applicants in communities currently without a family violence prevention program or which can demonstrate that current services or programs are inadequate to meet the needs of the community. With regard to item (5) above, it is the understanding of the conferees that the State agency administering the program could, if it wished to, require grantees to meet the requirements described in item (8) in the description of the House bill. The conferees encourage projects receiving grants to seek to coordinate activities with other related public and private programs in the area and encourage such programs to be administered and operated by personnel with appropriate skills (including language skills), training, and experience. Furthermore, the conferees believe strongly that recipients of funds under this title should take all reasonable steps to facilitate the reconciliation, where possible, of spouses and the family. Therefore, the conferees believe it would be inappropriate for demonstration grant recipients that provide temporary shelter for abused spouses to require a minimum length of stay for shelter residents, to censor mail or telephone calls of shelter residents, or to interfere with reconciliation efforts unless requested to do so by the resident.

House Bill.—The House bill provides that the Secretary approve any State application meeting these requirements and not disapprove any such application except after reasonable notice of the Secretary's intent to disapprove and opportunity for correction of deficiencies.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The Senate recedes. (Section 303(a)(3).)

House Bill.—The House bill authorizes the Secretary to make grants to Indian tribes and intertribal organizations for projects designed to prevent family violence and to provide immediate shelter and related assistance for victims and dependents of victims of family violence.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The Senate recedes with amendments substituting "tribal" for "intertribal" organizations and specifying that the grants be "demonstration grants". (Section 303(b)(1).)

House Bill.—The House bill provides that no grant be made under this subsection (relating to grants to Indian tribes and intertribal organizations) unless an application is made to the Secretary in such a manner and containing or accompanied by information deemed essential by the Secretary, and that such applications shall comply, as applicable, with provisions requiring designation of the responsible State agency; procedures to assure confidentiality; and procedures to assure active participation in development and review of programs and projects by knowledgeable individuals and organizations.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The Senate recedes with technical and conforming amendments. (Section 303(b)(2).)

House Bill.—The House bill provides that no grant for any fiscal year for any single entity (other than a State) is to exceed $50,000 and that total grants to a single entity may not exceed $150,000 or be awarded in excess of three fiscal years.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment provides a limitation on grants to any single entity for any fiscal year of $50,000 unless the Secretary deems that exceptional circumstances justify a grant in a greater amount.

Conference Agreement.—The Senate recedes with technical amendments. (Section 303(c).)

House Bill.—The House bill prohibits the direct payment of family violence grant funds to victims or dependents of victims.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The Senate recedes with technical amendments. (Section 303(d).)

House Bill.—The House bill prohibits the application of an income eligibility standard to an individual seeking assistance or services from any local public agency or nonprofit private organization which received a grant under this title.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The Senate recedes with an amendment clarifying that this provision applies to grants to Indian tribes or tribal organizations and that the prohibition applies only to assistance or services provided by local grant recipients with funds appropriated under this title. (Section 303(e).)

House Bill.—The House bill requires that local public agencies or nonprofit private organizations provide for the following local share as a proportion of the total Federal/local funds provided them:

	Percent
	Federal	Local
1st year of project grant	80	20
2d year of project grant	70	30
3d year of project grant	66⅔	33⅓

Except for public entities, at least 50 percent of the local share is to be raised from private sources. The local share may be cash or in-kind and may not include federal funds provided under any authority other than this title.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment requires the following Federal/local share of the demonstration grants by fiscal year as follows:

	Percent
	Federal	Local
Fiscal year 1985	65	35
Fiscal year 1986	45	55
Fiscal year 1987	35	65

The non-Federal share is to be cash, or in-kind, fairly evaluated, including but not limited to planning expenses, plant, equipment, and services. The Senate amendment also provides that the demonstration grants may be paid in installments, and in advance or as reimbursement, with necessary adjustments, as the Secretary determines.

Conference Agreement.—The Senate recedes with an amendment applying its percentages of Federal/local share to the project years in the House bill. (Section 303(f).)

House Bill.—The House bill provides that the Secretary assure that at least 75 percent of the funds distributed in the grant programs under this section be distributed to entities to provide immediate shelter and related assistance to victims and dependents of victims of family violence.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment earmarks not less than 50 percent of the funds for demonstration grants for the purpose of preventing incidents of family violence including the provision of immediate shelter and related assistance.

Conference Agreement.—The Senate recedes with an amendment changing the percentage to 60 percent. (Section 303(g).)

House Bill.—The House bill requires that funds under this section be used to provide shelter and related assistance to victims of violence by individuals with whom they reside, provided victims of family violence are first served.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes.

House Bill.—The House bill provides that States (not including Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands but including the District of Columbia and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico) be allotted grant amounts that bear the same ratio to the sums appropriated as the population of the State bears to the U.S. population, except that each State be allotted not less than whichever is the greater of either ½ of 1 percent of the amounts available for grants under sec. 303(a) for the fiscal years for which the allotment is made or $50,000. Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands would each be allotted at least ⅛ of 1 percent of the amounts available for grants under sec. 303(a) for the fiscal year for which the allotment is made.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The Senate recedes. (Section 304(a).)

House Bill.—The House bill requires that, for the purposes of the allotment of funds the Secretary determine each State's population and the total U.S. population on the basis of the most recent satisfactory census data available.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The Senate recedes with an amendment specifying that the Secretary use, if available, annual interim current census data provided annually pursuant to section 181 of title 13, United Stats Code. (Section 304(b).)

House Bill.—The House bill provides that if sums appropriated for State grants are insufficient to pay the total amounts for which States are entitled, the amounts are to be ratably reduced and that, if additional funds become available for such grants during such fiscal year, the reduced amounts are to be increased on the same basis as they were reduced.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The Senate recedes. (Section 304(c).)

House Bill.—The House bill requires the Secretary to reallot funds not made available to a State (because of the State's failure to meet grant requirements) at the end of the sixth month of any fiscal year for which sums are appropriated to other eligible States.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The Senate recedes. (Section 304(d)(1).)

House Bill.—The House bill provides that such realloted funds shall remain available for expenditure until the end of the fiscal year after the fiscal year in which the funds were available for reallotment.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The Senate recedes. (Section 304(d)(2).)

The House Bill and The Senate Amendment.—Both the House bill and the Senate amendment, with technical differences, require the Secretary to appoint an individual with expertise relating to family violence prevention and services to administer programs and activities under this title, but the House bill requires that experience to be with programs administered by the Department.

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes. (Section 305(a).)

House Bill.—The House bill requires the Secretary to be responsible for overseeing and maintaining records on program and activities under this title and to seek to coordinate all Federal programs and activities relating to family violence; and to encourage and support research activities associated with providing shelter and related assistance to victims and dependents of victims of family violence.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment requires the Secretary to coordinate HHS programs and to seek to coordinate other Federal programs relating to preventing family violence and providing assistance for victims, potential victims, and their dependents.

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes with amendments (derived from other provisions of the House bill and the Senate amendment) providing for the Secretary also to provide for research into the causes of family violence and into the prevention, identification, and treatment thereof (with examples of appropriate research including: studying the necessity and impact of mandatory reporting of incidents of family violence), to conduct a study on the incidence of elder abuse, and to provide for the training of personnel and the provision of technical assistance in the conduct of family violence programs, and requiring the Secretary to coordinate aspects of elder abuse as provided for under this title with the Administration on Aging and the National Institute on Aging. (Section 305(b).)

House Bill.—The House bill provides for the establishment of a national information and resource clearinghouse on family violence to operate in coordination with the clearinghouse maintained by the National Center on Child Abuse and Neglect in order to collect, analyze, prepare, and disseminate information and statistics on, and to provide information on alternative sources of assistance available relating to, the incidence and prevention of family violence and provision of immediate shelter and related assistance.

Senate Amendment: The Senate amendment requires the Secretary to operate a national clearinghouse on family violence prevention (including abuse of the elderly) to collect, prepare, analyze, and disseminate information, statistics, and analyses relating to the incidence, repeated incidence, and prevention of family violence and the provision of shelter and assistance to family violence victims and their dependents; and to provide information about alternative sources of assistance available relating to the incidence and prevention of family violence and provision of immediate shelter and related assistance. The amendment further requires the Secretary to assure that the clearinghouse activities are coordinated with the National Center on Child Abuse and Neglect.

Conference Agreement: The House recedes. (Section 308.)

Senate Amendment: The Senate amendment requires the Secretary to appoint and fix the compensation of necessary personnel and prescribe necessary regulations.

House Bill: The House bill contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement: The House recedes. (Section 312(a)(1).)

House Bill: The House bill authorizes the Secretary to make grants to public or nonprofit private entities or enter into contracts with public or private entities to provide technical assistance, training, and outreach services, to the extent such assistance is not otherwise available, to States, local public agencies, and nonprofit private organizations participating or interested in participating in the programs and projects under this title.

Senate Amendment: The Senate amendment authorizes the Secretary to enter into contracts, grants, or other necessary arrangements or modifications, to procure the services of temporary and intermittent experts and consultants as necessary and as authorized under sec. 3109, title 5, United States Code, to carry out this title's provisions, and to prescribe necessary regulations.

Conference Agreement: The conference agreement incorporates provisions from both versions into a separate section on administration. (Section 312(a)(2), (3), and (4).)

House Bill: The House bill requires the Secretary to report to Congress within two years after funds are first obligated on the effectiveness of the program conducted, particularly in relation to reducing repeated incidents of family violence.

Senate Amendment: The Senate amendment contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement: The Senate recedes. (Section 306.)

Senate Amendment: The Senate amendment requires the Secretary to submit a report to Congress by October 1, 1987, on the implementation and effectiveness of the entire bill and the amendments made by it.

House Bill: The House bill contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement: The House recedes with an amendment limiting the mandated report to implementation and effectiveness of the provisions in title I.B. of the conference report, relating to disabled infants with life-threatening conditions. (Section 126.)

It is the intent of the conferees that the report include a description of the results of an administrative review of the effect, if any, that the new regulations relating to disabled infants with life-threatenting conditions have had on the religious practice of a parent or guardian who has either withheld or desired to withhold medical treatment from his or her child in accordance with the parent's or guardian's religious beliefs as well as the effect that current regulations (45 CFR section 1340) concerning child neglect have had on religious practices, and including any recommendations that the Secretary may wish to make for administrative or legislative action as a result of that review.

House Bill.—The House bill prohibits funding for any program unless the grant, contract, or agreement specifically provides that no individual with responsibilities in the program discriminate unlawfully based on race, creed, belief, color, national origin, sex, age, handicap, or political affiliation.

The House bill further prohibits discrimination in participation, employment, or other forms of assistance on the basis of sex in connection with programs or activities under this title, and provides that an individual's sex may be taken into consideration in instances where sex is a bona fide occupational or programmatic factor, and provides for enforcement regarding that factor under sections 602-3 of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The Senate recedes with an amendment incorporating (with technical changes) standard nondiscrimination provisions included in numerous Federal block grant programs. (Section 4307.)

House Bill.—The House bill defines "family violence" as an act of threatened act of violence, including forceful detention that results or threatens to result in physical injury and is committed by a person against another to whom the person is or was related by blood or marriage or otherwise legally related, including elderly family members.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The Senate recedes with an amendment adding "or otherwise lawfully residing" and including reference to "elderly persons". (Section 309(1).)

House Bill.—The House bill defines "Indian tribe" as any tribe, band, nation, or other organized group or community of Indians recognized as eligible for the services provided to Indians pursuant to the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act or the Indian Health Care Improvement Act.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The Senate recedes with an amendment providing that the terms "Indian tribe" and "tribal organization" have the same meaning given such terms in section 4(b) and section 4(c) of the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act. (Section 309(2).)

The House Bill and the Senate Amendment.—Both the House bill and the Senate amendment define, with technical differences, the term "shelter."

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes. (Section 309(4).)

House Bill.—The House bill defines "relates assistance" as food, clothing, child care, transportation, and emergency medical care for victims of family violence and their dependents and counseling, alcohol and drug abuse treatment, and self-help services to abusers, and victims and their dependents.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment defines "related assistance" as including counseling and self-help services to abusers, victims, and dependents in family violence situations (which also includes counseling of all family members to the extent feasible) and referrals for appropriate health-care services, including alcohol and drug abuse treatment. The definition further specifies that "related assistance" may include food, clothing, child care, transportation, and emergency services (but not reimbursement for health care services) for victims of family violence and their dependents.

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes. (Section 309(5).)

The House Bill and The Senate Amendment.—Both the House bill and the Senate amendment define, with technical differences, the term "State."

Conference Agreement.—The Senate recedes. (Section 309(6).)

House Bill.—The House bill authorizes appropriations for title III relating to family violence at:

	Millions
Fiscal year 1984	$15
Fiscal year 1985	20
Fiscal year 1986	30

The House bill also authorizes appropriations separately for law enforcement training and technical assistance grants of $2 million for each of fiscal years 1984–1987.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment authorizes appropriations for these programs at:

	Millions
Fiscal year 1985	$5
Fiscal year 1986	15
Fiscal year 1987	15

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes with an amendment authorizing appropriations for title III at:

	Millions
Fiscal year 1985	$11
Fiscal year 1986	26
Fiscal year 1987	26

(Section 310(a).)

House Bill.—The House bill provides that 90 percent of the sums appropriated each fiscal year be used by the Secretary for grants to States, Indian tribes, and intertribal organizations, of which not less than one-half of 1 percent nor more than 1 percent be available for grants to Indian tribes and intertribal organizations.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment provides that not less than 50 percent of the sums appropriated each fiscal year be available for demonstration grants under 303(a)(1) (to prevent incidents of family violence, including the provision of immediate shelter and related assistance to victims of family violence and their dependents).

Conference Agreement.—The Senate recedes with an amendment changing the earmark to not less than 85 percent for grants to States and eliminating the earmark for grants to Indian tribes and intertribal organizations. (Section 310(b).)

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment mandates that nothing in the demonstration grant section be construed to supersede the application of State or local requirements for reporting suspected child abuse to appropriate State authorities.

House Bill.—The House bill contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes. (Section 312(b).)

House Bill.—The House bill requires the Secretary, in consultation with the Administration on Aging and the National Institute on Aging, to establish the National Center on Elder Abuse.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment has no comparable provision, but under section 304 of the Senate amendment provides for collection, preparation, analysis, and dissemination of information, statistics, and analyses relating to family violence, including elder abuse, under the national clearinghouse on family violence prevention.

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes. (Section 308(a).)

House Bill.—The House bill requires the Secretary, through the National Center on Elder Abuse to compile, publish, and disseminate an annual summary of recent research on elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation; develop and maintain an information clearinghouse on all programs showing promise of success in preventing, identifying, and treating elder abuse, neglect and exploitation; provide technical assistance (directly or through grant or contract) to public and nonprofit private agencies and organizations to assist them in planning, improving, developing, and carrying out programs and activities relating to the special problems of elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation; conduct research into the causes of elder abuse, neglect, exploitation and into the prevention, identification and treatment thereof; and study and investigate, in consultation with the National Institute on Aging, the national incidence of elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation, including determining the extent to which such incidents are increasing in number and severity.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment contains no similar provision but includes elderly persons within the definition of possible victims of domestic violence.

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes. (Section 309(1)(B).)

House Bill.—The House bill requires the Secretary to report to the President and to Congress within 18 months of enactment on the results of the Center's research, with recommendations, if any, including recommended legislation.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes.

The conferees note that the incidence of elder abuse study is expressly required by another section of the conference report. (Section 305(b)(2)(B).)

House Bill.—The House bill authorizes an appropriation of such sums as necessary to carry out the provisions relating to a National Center on Elder Abuse.

Senate Amemdment.—The Senate amendment contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes.

House Bill.—The House bill provides that the Attorney General make grants for regionally-based training and technical assistance for personnel of local and State law enforcement agencies to respond to incidents of family violence.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment provides for demonstration grants to prepare local and State law enforcement personnel for handling incidents of family violence.

Conference Agreements.—The Senate recedes with amendments substituting the Secretary for the Attorney General, but requiring that delegation of authority for such activities be made to the Attorney General and permitting contracts to be made with public or private entities as well as grants to public agencies and non-profit private entities. (Section 311(a).)

House Bill.—The House bill requires that these grants be awarded competitively on the basis of an application containing information and assurances as required by the Attorney General; that the Attorney General select grant recipients with demonstrated effectiveness in preparing personnel of local and State law enforcement agencies for handling incidents of family violence; and that priority be given to those applications which propose projects or programs that will develop, demonstrate, or disseminate information regarding improved techniques for responding to incidents of family violence by law enforcement officers.

Senate Amemdment.—The Senate amendment contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The Senate recedes with technical and conforming amendments. (Section 311(b).)

House Bill.—The House bill authorizes appropriations of $2 million for law enforcement training and technical assistance grants each fiscal year this title is in effect.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes with an amendment requiring that the Secretary transfer to the Attorney General for such grants each year not more than $2 million of the funds appropriated under this title. (Section 311(c).)

House Bill.—The House bill requires a study of the necessity and impact of a mandatory reporting requirement relating to incidents of family violence, particularly elder abuse, to include considering the effect of immunity of the mandatory reporting process.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes.

Such a study is provided for in the conference report under the provisions relating to research activities. (Section 305(b)(2)(A)(ii).)

House Bill.—The House bill requires the Secretary to report to Congress, within 18 months of enactment, on the results of the study with recommendations.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes.

House Bill.—The House bill authorizes the appropriation of such sums as necessary to conduct this study and make the report.

Senate Amendment.—The Senate amendment contains no similar provision.

Conference Agreement.—The House recedes.

Technical note.—The engrossed Senate amendment erroneously contained a provision (in section 107) entitled "Savings Provision" relating to certain States' rights regarding the health care a parent may provide to a child in the exercise of the parent's freedom of religion. Because this provision was struck during Senate floor consideration by virtue of the adoption of Senate Amendment No. 3422 (Congressional Record, page 21156, July 26, 1984), it was not considered by the conferees and is not included in the conference report.

APPENDIX

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD (JULY 26, 1984)

21141-21144

JOINT EXPLANATORY STATEMENT BY PRINCIPAL SPONSORS OF COMPROMISE AMENDMENT REGARDING SERVICES AND TREATMENT FOR DISABLED INFANTS

AMENDMENTS TO THE CHILD ABUSE PREVENTION AND TREATMENT ACT

The amendment would add a new clause (K) to section 4(b)(2) of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (hereinafter referred to as "the Act"). Section 4(b)(2) authorizes grants to carry out child abuse prevention and treatment programs to be made to States which meet the requirements of the Act.

New clause (K) would require States which participate in the State grant program to have in place procedures and/or programs (within the State child protective service system) for the purpose of responding to the reporting of medical neglect, including instances of withholding of medically indicated treatment from disabled infants with life-threatening conditions. The new clause specifies that these procedures and/or programs will provide for (i) coordination and consultation with individuals within appropriate health care facilities who have been designated by such health-care facilities, (ii) prompt notification by such individuals to the child protective services system of cases of suspected medical neglect, including instances of withholding of medically indicated treatment from disabled infants with life-threatening conditions, and (iii) the authority, under State law, for the State child protective services system to pursue any legal remedies, including the authority to initiate legal proceedings in a court of competent jurisdiction, as may be necessary to prevent the withholding of medically indicated treatment from disabled infants with life-threatening conditions.

The term "withholding of medically-indicated treatment" is defined (in a new definition to be added to section 3 of the Act) as the failure to respond to the infant's life-threatening conditions by providing treatment (including appropriate nutrition, hydration, and medication) which, in the treating physician's or physicians' reasonable medical judgment, will be most likely to be effective in ameliorating or correcting all such conditions except that the term does not include the failure to provide treatment (other than appropriate nutrition, hydration or medication) to an infant when, in the treating physician's or physicians' reasonable medical judgment, (A) the infant is chronically and irreversibly comatose; (B) the provision of such treatment would (i) merely prolong dying, (ii) not be effective in ameliorating or correcting all of the infant's life-threatening conditions, or (iii) otherwise be futile in terms of the survival of the infant; or (C) the provision of such treatment would be virtually futile in terms of the survival of the infant and the treatment itself under such circumstances would be inhumane. The use of the term "inhumane" in exception (C), above, is not intended to suggest that consideration of the humaneness of a particular treatment is not legitimate in any other context; rather, it is recognized that it is appropriate for a physician, in the exercise of reasonable medical judgment, to consider that factor in selecting among effective treatments.

Under the definition, if a disabled infant suffers from more than one life-threatening condition and, in the treating physician's or physicians' reasonable medical judgment, there is no effective treatment for one of those conditions, then that infant is not covered by the terms of the amendment (except with respect to appropriate nutrition, hydration, and medication) concerning the withholding of medically indicated treatment.

The term "infant" as used in this definition is intended to mean infants less than one year of age although it may include older infants who have been continuously hospitalized since birth, who were born extremely prematurely or who have long-term disabilities. The reference to less than one year of age is not intended to imply that treatment should be changed or discontinued when an infant reaches one year of age. Nor is it intended to affect or limit any existing protections available under State laws regarding medical neglect of children over one year of age.

The reference to "reasonable medical judgment" of the treating physician or physicians means a medical judgment that would be made by a reasonably prudent physician, knowledgeable about the case and the treatment possibilities with respect to the medical conditions involved.

With respect to the procedures and/or programs to be utilized to comply with the requirements in new clause (K), the Act now requires States which receive funds under section 4(b)(2) to provide certain mechanisms for the reporting of abuse or neglect cases. The same reporting mechanisms and standards set forth in the Act and existing regulations would be applicable to the reporting of cases of medical neglect covered under new clause (K).

Similarly, the Act now requires the appointment of a guardian ad litem for children involved in judicial proceedings relating to abuse or neglect. This provision would be applicable in judicial proceedings with respect to cases under new clause (K).

The Act and regulations also now already require States receiving funds under section 4(b)(1) to take appropriate steps to protect the health and welfare of abused or neglected children, including instituting legal proceedings. The new clause (K) includes specific statutory reference to the authority to institute legal proceedings only because questions have occasionally been raised about the authority of particular child protective services agencies to take such actions in cases involving withholding of medically-indicated treatment from disabled infants with life-threatening conditions. Under new clause (K), States have the flexibility to determine the specific agency or agencies within their child protective services systems, to exercise that authority. State authority to utilize other agencies, in addition to the child protective services system, for these purposes would be unaffected by the legislation.

ADDITIONAL GRANTS TO STATES

The amendment (in section 201(c)(2)) would add a new subsection 4(c) to the Act to authorize the Secretary to make additional grants to the States for the purposes of developing, establishing, and operating or implementing (1) the procedures or programs required under the new clause (K), (2) information and education programs or training programs (for the purposes of improving the provision of services to disabled infants with life-threatening conditions) for professional and paraprofessional personnel concerned with the welfare of such infants, including personnel employed in child protective services programs and health-care facilities, and for parents of such infants, and (3) programs to help obtain or coordinate necessary services, including existing social and health services and financial assistance for families with disabled infants with life-threatening conditions as well as those services necessary to facilitate adoptive placement of such infants who have been relinquished for adoption.

REGULATIONS AND GUIDELINES

The amendment (in section 202) would direct the Secretary, within 90 days of the date of enactment, to publish for public comment proposed regulations to implement the requirements of the new clause (K), and to publish final such regulations within 180 days after enactment.

It also would direct the Secretary to publish, within 60 days after enactment, interim model guidelines to encourage the establishment within health-care facilities of committees which would serve the purposes of educating hospital personnel and families of disabled infants with life-threatening conditions, recommending institutional policies and guidelines concerning the withholding of medically indicated treatment from such infants, and offering counsel and review in cases involving disabled infants with life-threatening conditions. Not later than 150 days after the date of enactment and after notice and opportunity for public comment, the Secretary would be required to publish the model guidelines.

REPORT ON FINANCIAL RESOURCES

The amendment (in section 203) would require the Secretary to conduct a study to determine the most effective means of providing Federal financial support other than the use of funds provided through the Social Security Act, for the provision of medical treatment, general care, and appropriate social services for disabled infants with life-threatening conditions and report the results of such study to the appropriate committees of the Congress not later than 270 days after the date of enactment. The report to the appropriate Committees would also be required to contain such recommendations for legislation to provide such financial support as the Secretary considers appropriate.

TRAINING, TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE AND CLEARINGHOUSE ACTIVITIES

The amendment (in section 204) would direct the Secretary to provide, directly or through grants or contracts with public or private nonprofit organizations, for training and technical assistance programs to assist states in meeting the requirements of new clause (K) and for establishing and operating national and regional information and resource clearinghouses to provide the most current and complete information regarding medical treatment procedures and resources and community resources for services and treatment for disabled infants with life-threatening conditions. The funds to carry out these activities would be provided from the funds, other than those funds made available for basic States grants under section 4(b)(1), otherwise available to the Secretary to carry out activities under the Act (meaning the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act).

STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION

The amendment (in section 205) would provide that no provision of or any amendment made by the Act is intended to affect any right or protection under section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973.

It would also provide that no provision of or any amendment made by the Act may be construed to authorize the Secretary or any other governmental entity to establish standards prescribing specific medical treatments for specific conditions, except to the extent that such standards are authorized by other laws.

It would also contain a standard severability provision in the event that a particular provision of or any amendment made by the Act is declared unconstitutional by a court.

AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

The amendment (in section 206) would increase the authorization of appropriations—from the levels in the bill as reported ($27 million for FY 1984, $34 million for FY 1985, $35.5 million for FY 1986, and $37.08 million for FY 1987)—under the Act by $5,000,000 for each fiscal year for the purpose of making the additional grants to the states to implement the provisions of new clause (K) and to establish the information and education and training programs and the programs to help obtain or coordinate necessary services for disabled infants with life-threatening conditions authorized under the new section 4(c)

The amendment would retain the earmark contained in S. 1003 as reported of $9,500,000 in each fiscal year for the carrying out of the provisions of section 4(b)(1), relating to basic state grants, and $4,000,000 in each fiscal year for identification, treatment, and prevention of sexual abuse.

It is the firm intention of the sponsors that appropriations for the new section 4(c) program should be in addition to appropriations at the authorization levels contained in the amendment for the section 4(b)(1) basic state grant program and for the sexual abuse, identification, treatment, and prevention program and that neither of these existing programs should be reduced in funding in order to provide funds for the new section 4(c) program

The provisions of the Act and amendments made by the Act would be effective upon the date of enactment, except that the amendment establishing new clause (K) as a requirement for participation in the state grant program does not become effective until one year after the date of enactment.

The amendment further provides that in the event that, prior to the clause (K) effective date, funds have not been appropriated pursuant to section 5 of the Act (as amended by section 104 of this Act) for the purpose of grants under new section 4(c), the Secretary may grant to any State which has not met the requirements of new clause (K) a waiver of such requirements for a period of not more than one year, if the Secretary finds that such State is making a good faith effort to comply with such provisions.

APPOINTMENT OF ADDITIONAL CONFEREE ON H.R. 4164, VOCATIONAL-TECHNICAL EDUCATION ACT OF 1984

Mr. HAWKINS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Speaker be authorized to appoint an additional conferee on the part of the House on H.R. 4164, the Vocational-Technical Education Act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California? The Chair hears none and, without objection, appoints the following additional conferee: Mr. TAUKE.

There was no objection.

CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY INFORMATION ACT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the provisions of clause 5 of rule I and the order of the House of September 18, 1984, the unfinished business is the question de novo of suspending the rules and passing the bill, H.R. 5164, as amended, on which further proceedings were postponed on Monday, September 17, 1984.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. BOLAND] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 5164, as amended.

The question was taken.

RECORDED VOTE

Mr. WEISS. Mr. Speaker, I demand a recorded vote.

A recorded vote was ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—ayes 369, noes 36, not voting 27, as follows:

Mr. TOWNS changed his vote from "aye" to "no."

Mr. GEJDENSON and Mr. MATSUI changed their votes from "no" to "aye."

So (two-thirds have voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended, the bill, as amended, was passed.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

FURTHER MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A further message from the Senate, by Mr. Sparrow, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate agrees to the Report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 3755) "An act to amend titles II and XVI of the Social Security Act to provide for reform in the disability determination process."

PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 3082, EMERGENCY WETLANDS RESOURCES ACT OF 1983

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 579 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 579

Resolved, That at any time after the adoption of this resolution the Speaker may, pursuant to clause 1(b) of rule XXIII, declare the House resolved into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 3082) to promote the conservation of migratory waterfowl and to offset or prevent the serious loss of wetlands by the acquisition of wetlands and other essential habitat, and for other purposes, and the first reading of the bill shall be dispensed with. All points of order against the consideration of the bill for failure to comply with the provisions of section 402(a) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 (Public Law 93-344) are hereby waived. After general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and to the amendment made in order by this resolution and which shall continue not to exceed two hours, with one hour to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries and thirty minutes to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs and thirty minutes to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Public Works and Transportation, the bill shall be considered for amendment under the five-minute rule. In lieu of the amendments recommended by the Committees on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, Interior and Insular Affairs, and Public Works and Transportation now printed in the bill, it shall be in order to consider the amendment in the nature of a substitute printed in the Congressional Record of September 11, 1984 by Representative Jones of North Carolina as an original bill for the purpose of amendment under the five-minute rule. Said substitute shall be considered for amendment by titles instead of by sections and each title shall be considered as having been read, and all points of order against said substitute for failure to comply with the provisions of section 303(a) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1947 (Public Law 93-344), clause 7 of rule XVI, and clause 5(a) of rule XXI are hereby waived. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and any Member may demand a separate vote in the House on any amendment adopted in the Committee of the Whole to the bill or to the amendment made in order as original text by this resolution. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit with or without instructions.

□ 1610

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MOAKLEY] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield the customary 30 minutes, for purposes of debate only, to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. QUILLEN], pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 579 is an open rule that provides for the consideration of H.R. 3082, the Emergency Wetlands Resources Act. The resolution provides for 2 hours of general debate, with 1 hour to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, 30 minutes to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Public Works and Transportation, and 30 minutes to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 579 waives all points of order against the consideration of the bill for failure to comply with the provisions of section 402(a) of the Congressional Budget Act—which requires authorizations to be reported by May 15 before the beginning of the fiscal year for which they are effective. H.R. 3082, as introduced, authorized appropriations for fiscal year 1984 and since the bill was not reported by May 15, 1983 it violates section 402(a) of the budget act. However, an amendment in the nature of a substitute made in order by this rule makes the authorization of new budget authority first effective in fiscal year 1985, thereby curing the budget act violation, of course. A technical waiver is still necessary since the point of order goes against the bill as introduced.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 579 makes in order an amendment in the nature of a substitute printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of September 11, 1984, by Representative JONES of North Carolina to be considered as original text in lieu of the committee amendments now printed in the bill. The substitute is to be considered by titles instead of sections with each title considered as read.

House Resolution 579 provides for three waivers against the substitute. The first waives section 303(a) of the Budget Act, which prohibits consideration of bills providing new budget authority for a fiscal year prior to the adoption of the conference report on the budget resolution for such year. H.R. 3082 forgives the repayment to the Treasury of an appropriation advanced to the migratory bird conservation fund. This results in new budget authority for fiscal year 1985 and, since no conference report on the first budget resolution for fiscal year 1985 has been adopted, the bill violates section 303(a) of the Budget Act.

The second instance waives points of order under clause 5(a) of rule 21, which prohibits appropriations in a legislative bill. H.R. 3082 allows the Secretary of the Interior to take 10 percent of admission fees to wildlife refuges to be applied to administrative costs of the admission permit program and other purposes. Section 304 of the substitute also expands the purposes for which the trust fund can be used. These provisions constitute a new use of already appropriated funds allow expenditure of funds without further action on an appropriations bill, or might otherwise be construed as an appropriation in a legislative bill and thus the waiver is necessary.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 579 waives points of order against the substitute for failure to comply with the provisions of clause 7, rule 16—the germaneness rule. This waiver is necessary because title IV of the substitute was not in the bill as introduced. Because of this, the substitute might be subject to a point of order on germaneness grounds, thus the waiver of the rule is necessary. House Resolution 579 also provides for one motion to recommit with or without instructions.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 3082, the emergency Wetland Resources Act is a bill that is designed to increase Federal and State wetlands preservation through user fees an to authorize appropriations of $75 million in each of fiscal years 1985 through 1994. Wetlands, which include swamps, marshes, and bogs, are the natural breeding grounds for many types of waterfowl and wildlife. Because wetlands lie in areas that are prone to development about 50 percent of the 215 million acres that once existed in the United States are gone. In the last 20 years alone, over 9 million acres were lost, these significant losses reveal the need for improved management and a proper program of acquisition of these wetlands. Wetlands are credited with providing considerable environmental and economic benefits to the Nation. While it is difficult to determine the exact amount of dollars that wetlands contribute to the economy, estimates range annually from $20 to $40 billion dollars.

To offset the loss of habitat and to preserve wildlife areas in the wetlands, the Federal Government buys and helps States buy wetlands through two major sources of funding. The primary source of funding for wetland acquisition is the sale of migratory bird hunting and conservation stamps, more commonly known as "duck stamps," which are required for hunting ducks. The sale of these stamps to hunters raises approximately $16 million a year. The second source of funds for wetlands acquisition is the land and water conservation fund financed by taxes on motor boat fuels and Outer Continental Shelf leasing revenues.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 3082 consists of four titles, briefly summarized, title I increases the revenues available for wetlands acquisition by authorizing the Interior Department to charge admission fees to wildlife refuges, and by gradually increasing the price of duck stamps from $7.50 per stamp currently, to $15 per stamp in 1989. Title II provides for the transfer of $75 million from the land and water conservation to a new wetlands conservation fund in each of fiscal years 1985 through 1994. Title III provides an appropriation of $101 million to be made available over the period between fiscal year 1985 and fiscal year 1996 for the continuation of the national wetland inventory project, and also authorizes $1 million for the Secretary of the Interior to carry out a study on the major causes of wetlands degradation and destruction. Title IV makes available land within the Cape Hateras National Seashore and Pea Island National Wildlife Refuge to the Army Corps of Engneers for the construction of stone and concrete jetties at the Oregon Inlet, which is located on the Outer Banks of North Carolina.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is not without controversy, but under this rule the issues of controversy can be thoroughly and fairly addressed. I urge adoption of House Resolution 579 so that the House may proceed on this legislation.

Mr. QUILLEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, this is an open rule making in order the consideration of an important environment protection bill, and I urge its adoption.

The Emergency Wetlands Resources Act was introduced by our late colleague, Mr. Forsythe, and represents the bipartisan work of three committees. As our knowledge of our environment has progressed we have come to understand the importance of wetlands and this bill attempts to increase our Federal effort to protect and preserve these wetlands along our lakes, rivers, and coasts.

The bill makes a number of changes and improvements in our wetlands programs. It increases revenues going into the migratory bird conservation fund which is financed by the sale of migratory bird hunting and conservation stamps known as duck stamps.

□ 1620

A new program for State and Federal wetlands acquisition is contained in this bill and funded by a transfer of $75 million from the land and water conservation fund to a new wetlands conservation fund. The land and water conservation fund authorization is also increased $75 million through fiscal year 1994.

The bills also permits use of Federal land to carry out the Manteo Bay project at Oregon Inlet in North Carolina's Outer Banks. There has been considerable controversy about this project but Members should be aware that it enjoys broad support and that the bill provides that no funds may be expended without a favorable cost/benefit ratio report.

Mr. Speaker, I have no requests for time, but I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I have one request for time. I yield 7 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SEIBERLING].

Mr. SEIBERLING. I thank the gentleman from Massachusetts for yielding.

At my request, the Rules Committee agreed to allow an extra half hour to the Interior Committee. But since that is going to be divided 15 minutes to the minority and 15 minutes to the majority, and as I understand it, the minority manager supports the bill, that really only gives the opponents of title IV 15 minutes. So I am going to take a little time here to outline that particular issue.

First of all, let me say that I am on the Interior Committee and chairman of the subcommittee that dealt with this legislation when it was referred to our committee, and I support titles I to III of this bill. I think it does the right kind of thing for protecting our wetlands.

However, as you have already heard from the gentleman from Massachusetts, title IV, is nongermane and, therefore, would not even be in order but for this rule. Moreover, it involves a highly controversial project for the construction of two approximately mile-long jetties seaward from Oregon Inlet on Cape Hatteras National Seashore.

Now, why oppose this? Well, first of all, let me say I did not make an effort to mount a strong opposition to this and eliminate it in subcommittee or in committee—although we could have done that—because I felt that the rest of the bill was important to get moved. But the moment of truth for everyone is about to arrive on this issue.

There are three basic problems with this proposal.

The first objection to creating these jetties is an esthetic one or an environmental one; namely, that these are going to be two huge structures plunked right down on both sides of one of the major inlets to the Cape Hatteras National Seashore, each extending a mile seaward. If that were all, that might not be so bad, but in addition to that, the project envisions a permanent operation for dredging sand from one side of the northernmost jetty and pumping it several miles around to deposit it on the opposite side of the southernmost jetty.

The reason for that sand-pumping proposal gets us into the second objection to this proposal, which is the building of such jetties diverts but does not stop powerful ocean currents. There is no more powerful, dynamic ocean system on the eastern seaboard than the Cape Hatteras seashore itself.

As a result of the power of the tides and currents, Oregon Inlet itself was created by a so-called blowout in 1846. Since that time, the ocean, which moves the barrier islands around as though they were really not permanent features of land at all, has moved Oregon Inlet itself over 10,000 feet, 10,000 feet, Mr. Speaker, from the original location, and moved it shoreward about 750 feet. That is, the entire barrier island has moved 750 feet shoreward. And it is continuing to move.

Now, why has it not been destroyed by these forces? Because left alone, the ocean currents move the sand laterally along the beach and replenish the dunes so that when the ocean forces hit them and erode them, new currents in the summertime will replenish them.

But if we start to interfere with those forces by creating huge structures such as these jetties, we will cause sand to build up on the "upstream" side of the jetties, thereby starving the barrier island on the downstream side. Eventually there will be catastrophic erosion and a complete blowout at one or more points on the barrier island.

Furthermore, marine geologists—incidentally, they were from North Carolina—testifying before our subcommittee testified that the present formation of Oregon Inlet, with soft sand at its shoulders, is such that, in times of hurricanes or major storms, the water level inside the Bay inside the barrier islands builds up. When the tide goes out, that water rushes through Oregon Inlet and simple pushes the sand aside and widens the Inlet. One of the marine geologists told us that he has seen Oregon Inlet expand as much as half a mile in an hour's time as the outgoing tide shoved the soft shoulders of the inlet aside. This allows the level inside the barrier islands to be lowered rapidly and prevents blowouts elsewhere along the barrier island.

The third objection to this project is financial. Here we are, confronted with enormous deficits, and this bill would authorize and make possible the construction of a project that will cost $600 million over a period of 50 years, which is its projected life with an initial expenditure of $100 million. And for what? For very dubious benefits to a very small group that want to develop a fishing industrial park at Manteo inside the Bay.

And I submit to you that when you go back to your consitutents and face the fact, if you vote for this bill, that you voted for $600 million for a project this dubious and this destructive, you are going to have a hard time explaining it.

Let me just say one other thing about that. The Corps of Engineers has filed a cost-benefit analysis, which, among other things, assumes a 7½-percent interest rate. Of course, the Federal Government is currently paying almost twice that much in interest on money it is borrowing to finance the deficit.

So this is not just something to be laughed off. The National Taxpayers Union is opposing this title of the bill and supporting my amendment, as well as all of the leading environmental organizations in the country. I suggest that Members owe it to themselves to take a good hard look at this legislation and to consider supporting my amendment when we get to title IV to strike that title. If they do, they will have a little less explaining to do when they get back to their districts.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, the minority has indicated they have no further requests for time. I have no further requests for time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the resolution.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. RUSSO. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 398, nays 0, answered not voting 34, as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT OF H.R. 3755, SOCIAL SECURITY DISABILITY BENEFITS REFORM ACT OF 1984

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI submitted the following conference report and statement on the bill (H.R. 3755) to amend titles II and XVI of the Social Security Act to provide for reform in the disability determination process:

CONFERENCE REPORT (H. REPT. No. 98-1039)

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 3755) to amend titles II and XVI of the Social Security Act to provide for reform in the disability determination process, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate to the text of the bill and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

STANDARD OF REVIEW FOR TERMINATION OF DISABILITY BENEFITS AND PERIODS OF DISABILITY

SEC. 2. (a) Section 223(f) of the Social Security Act is amended to read as follows:

"STANDARD OF REVIEW FOR TERMINATION OF DISABILITY BENEFITS

"(f) A recipient of benefits under this title or title XVIII based on the disability of any individual may be determined not to be entitled to such benefits on the basis of a finding that the physical or mental impairment on the basis of which such benefits are provided has ceased, does not exist, or is not disabling only if such finding is supported by—

"(1) substantial evidence which demonstrates that—

"(A) there has been any medical improvement in the individual's impairment or combination of impairments (other than medical improvement which is not related to the individual's ability to work), and

"(B)(i) the individual is now able to engage in substantial gainful activity, or

"(ii) if the individual is a widow or surviving divorced wife under section 202(e) or a widower or surviving divorced husband under section 202(f), the severity of his or her impairment or impairments is no longer deemed, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, sufficient to preclude the individual from engaging in gainful activity; or

"(2) substantial evidence which—

"(A) consists of new medical evidence and (in a case to which clause (ii)(II) does not apply) a new assessment of the individual's residual functional capacity, and demonstrates that—

"(i) although the individual has not improved medically, he or she is nonetheless a beneficiary of advances in medical or vocational therapy or technology (related to the individual's ability to work), and

"(ii)(I) the individual is now able to engage in substantial gainful activity, or

"(II) if the individual is a widow or surviving divorced wife under section 202(e) or a widower or surviving divorced husband under section 202(f), the severity of his or her impairment or impairments is no longer deemed under regulations prescribed by the Secretary sufficient to preclude the individual from engaging in gainful activity, or

"(B) demonstrates that—

"(i) although the individual has not improved medically, he or she has undergone vocational therapy (related to the individual's ability to work), and

"(ii) the requirements of subclause (I) or (II) of subparagraph (A)(ii) are met; or

"(3) substantial evidence which demonstrates that, as determined on the basis of new or improved diagnostic techniques or evaluations, the individual's impairment or combination of impairments is not as disabling as it was considered to be at the time of the most recent prior decision that he or she was under a disability or continued to be under a disability, and that therefore—

"(A) the individual is able to engage in substantial gainful activity, or

"(B) if the individual is a widow or surviving divorced wife under section 202(e) or a widower or surviving divorced husband under section 202(f), the severity of his or her impairment or impairments is not deemed under regulations prescribed by the Secretary sufficient to preclude the individual from engaging in gainful activity; or

"(4) substantial evidence (which may be evidence on the record at the time any prior determination of the entitlement to benefits based on disability was made, or newly obtained evidence which relates to that determination) which demonstrates that a prior determination was in error.

Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to require a determination that a recipient of benefits under this title or title XVIII based on an individual's disability is entitled to such benefits if the prior determination was fraudulently obtained or if the individual is engaged in substantial gainful activity (or gainful activity in the case of a widow, surviving divorced wife, widower, or surviving divorced husband), cannot be located, or fails, without good cause, to cooperate in a review of the entitlement to such benefits or to follow prescribed treatment which would be expected to restore his or her ability to engage in substantial gainful activity (or gainful activity in the case of a widow, surviving divorced wife, widower, or surviving divorced husband). Any determination under this section shall be made on the basis of all the evidence available in the individual's case file, including new evidence concerning the individual's prior or current condition which is presented by the individual or secured by the Secretary. Any determination made under this section shall be made on the basis of the weight of the evidence and on a neutral basis with regard to the individual's condition, without any initial inference as to the presence or absence of disability being drawn from the fact that the individual has previously been determined to be disabled. For purposes of this subsection, a benefit under this title is based on an individual's disability if it is a disability insurance benefit, a child's, widow's, or widower's insurance benefit based on disability, or a mother's or father's insurance benefit based on the disability of the mother's or father's child who has attained age 16.".

(b) Section 216(i)(2)(D) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following: "The provisions set forth in section 223(f) with respect to determinations of whether entitlement to benefits under this title or title XVIII based on the disability of any individual is terminated (on the basis of a finding that the physical or mental impairment on the basis of which such benefits are provided has ceased, does not exist, or is not disabling) shall apply in the same manner and to the same extent with respect to determinations of whether a period of disability has ended (on the basis of a finding that the physical or mental impairment on the basis of which the finding of disability was made has ceased, does not exist, or is not disabling)."

(c) Section 1614(a) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(5) A recipient of benefits based on disability under this title may be determined not to be entitled to such benefits on the basis of a finding that the physical or mental impairment on the basis of which such benefits are provided has ceased, does not exist, or is not disabling only if such finding is supported by—

"(A) substantial evidence which demonstrates that—

"(i) there has been any medical improvement in the individual's impairment or combination of impairments (other than medical improvement which is not related to the individual's ability to work), and

"(ii) the individual is now able to engage in substantial gainful activity; or

"(B) substantial evidence (except in the case of an individual eligible to receive benefits under section 1619) which—

"(i) consists of new medical evidence and a new assessment of the individual's residual functional capacity, and demonstrates that—

"(I) although the individual has not improved medically, he or she is nonetheless a beneficiary of advances in medical or vocational therapy or technology (related to the individual's ability to work), and

"(II) the individual is now able to engage in substantial gainful activity, or

"(ii) demonstrates that—

"(I) although the individual has not improved medically, he or she has undergone vocational therapy (related to the individual's ability to work), and

"(II) the individual is now able to engage in substantial gainful activity; or

"(C) substantial evidence which demonstrates that, as determined on the basis of new or improved diagnostic techniques or evaluations, the individual's impairment or combination of impairments is not as disabling as it was considered to be at the time of the most recent prior decision that he or she was under a disability or continued to be under a disability, and that therefore the individual is able to engage in substantial gainful activity; or

"(D) substantial evidence (which may be evidence on the record at the time any prior determination of the entitlement to benefits based on disability was made, or newly obtained evidence which relates to that determination) which demonstrates that a prior determination was in error.

Nothing in this paragraph shall be construed to require a determination that an individual receiving benefits based on disability under this title is entitled to such benefits if the prior determination was fraudulently obtained or if the individual is engaged in substantial gainful activity, cannot be located, or fails, without good cause, to cooperate in a review of his or her entitlement or to follow prescribed treatment which would be expected to restore his or her ability to engage in substantial gainful activity. Any determination under this paragraph shall be made on the basis of all the evidence available in the individual's case file, including new evidence concerning the individual's prior or current condition which is presented by the individual or secured by the Secretary. Any determination made under this paragraph shall be made on the basis of the weight of the evidence and on a neutral basis with regard to the individual's condition, without any initial inference as to the presence or absence of disability being drawn from the fact that the individual has previously been determined to be disabled.".

(d)(1) The amendments made by this section shall apply only as provided in this subsection.

(2) The amendments made by this section shall apply to—

(A) determinations made by the Secretary on or after the date of the enactment of this Act;

(B) determinations with respect to which a final decision of the Secretary has not yet been made as of the date of the enactment of this Act and with respect to which a request for administrative review is made in conformity with the time limits, exhaustion requirements, and other provisions of section 205 of the Social Security Act and regulations of the Secretary;

(C) determinations with respect to which a request for judicial review was pending on September 19, 1984, and which involve an individual litigant or a member of a class in a class action who is identified by name in such pending action on such date; and

(D) determinations with respect to which a timely request for judicial review is or has been made by an individual litigant of a final decision of the Secretary made within 60 days prior to the date of the enactment of this Act.

In the case of determinations described in subparagraphs (C) and (D) in actions relating to medical improvement, the court shall remand such cases to the Secretary for review in accordance with the provisions of the Social Security Act as amended by this section.

(3) In the case of a recipient of benefits under title II, XVI, or XVIII of the Social Security Act—

(A) who has been determined not to be entitled to such benefits on the basis of a finding that the physical or mental impairment on the basis of which such benefits were provided has ceased, does not exist, or is not disabling, and

(B) who was a member of a class certified on or before September 19, 1984, in a class action relating to medical improvement pending on September 19, 1984, but was not identified by name as a member of the class on such date, the court shall remand such case to the Secretary. The Secretary shall notify such individual by certified mail that he may request a review of the determination described in subparagraph (A) based on the provisions of this section and the provisions of the Social Security Act as amended by this section. Such notification shall specify that the individual must request such review within 120 days after the date on which such notification is received. If such request is made in a timely manner, the Secretary shall make a review of the determination described in subparagraph (A) in accordance with the provisions of this section and the provisions of the Social Security Act as amended by this section. The amendments made by this section shall apply with respect to such review, and the determination described in subparagraph (A) (and any redetermination resulting from such review) shall be subject to further administrative and judicial review, only if such request is made in a timely manner.

(4) The decision by the Secretary on a case remanded by a court pursuant to this subsection shall be regarded as a new decision on the individual's claim for benefits, which supersedes the final decision of the Secretary. The new decision shall be subject to further administrative review and to judicial review only in conformity with the time limits, exhaustion requirements, and other provisions of section 205 of the Social Security Act and regulations issued by the Secretary in conformity with such section.

(5) No class in a class action relating to medical improvement may be certified after September 19, 1984, if the class action seeks judicial review of a decision terminating entitlement (or a period of disability) made by the Secretary of Health and Human Services prior to September 19, 1984.

(6) For purposes of this subsection, the term "action relating to medical improvement" means an action raising the issue of whether an individual who has had his entitlement to benefits under title II, XVI, or XVIII of the Social Security Act based on disability terminated (or period of disability ended) should not have had such entitlement terminated (or period of disability ended) without consideration of whether there has been medical improvement in the condition of such individual (or another individual on whose disability such entitlement is based) since the time of a prior determination that the individual was under a disability.

(e) Any individual whose case is remanded to the Secretary pursuant to subsection (d) or whose request for a review is made in a timely manner pursuant to subsection (d), may elect, in accordance with section 223(g) or 1631(a)(7) of the Social Security Act, to have payments made beginning with the month in which he makes such election, and ending as under such section 223(g) or 1631(a)(7). Notwithstanding such section 223(g) or 1631(a)(7), such payments (if elected)—

(1) shall be made at least until an initial redetermination is made by the Secretary; and

(2) shall begin with the payment for the month in which such individual makes such election.

(f) In the case of any individual who is found to be under a disability after a review required under this section, such individual shall be entitled to retroactive benefits beginning with benefits payable for the first month to which the most recent termination of benefits applied.

(g) The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall prescribe regulations necessary to implement the amendments made by this section not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

EVALUATION OF PAIN

SEC. 3. (a)(1) Section 223(d)(5) of the Social Security Act is amended by inserting after the first sentence the following new sentences: "An individual's statement as to pain or other symptoms shall not alone be conclusive evidence of disability as defined in this section; there must be medical signs and findings, established by medically acceptable clinical or laboratory diagnostic techniques, which show the existence of a medical impairment that results from anatomical, physiological, or psychological abnormalities which could reasonably be expected to produce the pain or other symptoms alleged and which, when considered with all evidence required to be furnished under this paragraph (including statements of the individual or his physician as to the intensity and persistence of such pain or other symptoms which may reasonably be accepted as consistent with the medical signs and findings), would lead to a conclusion that the individual is under a disability. Objective medical evidence of pain or other symptoms established by medically acceptable clinical or laboratory techniques (for example, deteriorating nerve or muscle tissue) must be considered in reaching a conclusion as to whether the individual is under a disability.".

(2) Section 1614(a)(3)(H) of such Act (as added by section 8 of this Act) is amended by striking out "section 221(h)" and inserting in lieu thereof "sections 221(h) and 223(d)(5)".

(3) The amendments made by paragraphs (1) and (2) shall apply to determinations made prior to January 1, 1987.

(b)(1) The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall appoint a Commission on the Evaluation of Pain (hereafter in this section referred to as the "Commission") to conduct a study concerning the evaluation of pain in determining under titles II and XVI of the Social Security Act whether an individual is under a disability. Such study shall be conducted in consultation with the National Academy of Sciences.

(2) The Commission shall consist of at least twelve experts, including a significant representation from the field of medicine who are involved in the study of pain, and representation from the fields of law, administration of disability insurance programs, and other appropriate fields of expertise.

(3) The Commission shall be appointed by the Secretary of Health and Human Services (without regard to the requirements of the Federal Advisory Committee Act) within 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act. The Secretary shall from time to time appoint one of the members to serve as Chairman. The Commission shall meet as often as the Secretary deems necessary.

(4) Members of the Commission shall be appointed without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointments in the competitive service. Members who are not employees of the United States, while attending meetings of the Commission or otherwise serving on the business of the Commission, shall be paid at a rate equal to the per diem equivalent of the rate provided for level IV of the Executive Schedule under section 5315 of title 5, United States Code, for each day, including traveltime, during which they are engaged in the actual performance of duties vested in the Commission. While engaged in the performance of such duties away from their homes or regular places of business they may be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, as authorized by section 5703 of title 5, United States Code, for persons in the Government service employed intermittently.

(5) The Commission may engage such technical assistance from individuals skilled in medical and other aspects of pain as may be necessary to carry out its functions. The Secretary shall make available to the Commission such secretarial, clerical, and other assistance and any pertinent data prepared by the Department of Health and Human Services as the Commission may require to carry out its functions.

(6) The Secretary shall submit the results of the study under paragraph (1), together with any recommendations, to the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Finance of the Senate not later than December 31, 1985. The Commission shall terminate at the time such results are submitted.

MULTIPLE IMPAIRMENTS

SEC. 4. (a)(1) Section 223(d)(2) of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(C) In determining whether an individual's physical or mental impairment or impairments are of a sufficient medical severity that such impairment or impairments could be the basis of eligibility under this section, the Secretary shall consider the combined effect of all of the individual's impairments without regard to whether any such impairment, if considered separately, would be of such severity. If the Secretary does find a medically severe combination of impairments, the combined impact of the impairments shall be considered throughout the disability determination process.".

(2) The third sentence of section 216(i)(1) of such Act is amended by inserting "(2)(C)," after "(2)(A),".

(b) Section 1614(a)(3) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(G) In determining whether an individual's physical or mental impairment or impairments are of a sufficient medical severity that such impairment or impairments could be the basis of eligibility under this section, the Secretary shall consider the combined effect of all of the individual's impairments without regard to whether any such impairment, if considered separately, would be of such severity. If the Secretary does find a medically severe combination of impairments, the combined impact of the impairments shall be considered throughout the disability determination process.".

(c) The amendments made by this section shall apply with respect to determinations made on or after the first day of the first month beginning after 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

MORATORIUM ON MENTAL IMPAIRMENT REVIEWS

SEC. 5. (a) The Secretary of Health and Human Services (hereafter in this section referred to as the "Secretary") shall revise the criteria embodied under the category "Mental Disorders" in the "Listing of Impairments" in effect on the date of the enactment of this Act under appendix 1 to subpart P of part 404 of title 20 of the Code of Federal Regulations. The revised criteria and listings, alone and in combination with assessments of the residual functional capacity of the individuals involved, shall be designed to realistically evaluate the ability of a mentally impaired individual to engage in substantial gainful activity in a competitive workplace environment. Regulations establishing such revised criteria and listings shall be published no later than 120 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b)(1) Until such time as revised criteria have been established by regulation in accordance with subsection (a), no continuing eligibility review shall be carried out under section 221(i) of the Social Security Act, or under the corresponding requirements established for disability determinations and reviews under title XVI of such Act, with respect to any individual previously determined to be under a disability by reason of a mental impairment, if—

(A) no initial decision on such review has been rendered with respect to such individual prior to the date of the enactment of this Act, or

(B) an initial decision on such review was rendered with respect to such individual prior to the date of the enactment of this Act but a timely appeal from such decision was filed or was pending on or after June 7, 1983.

For purposes of this paragraph and subsection (c)(1) the term "continuing eligibility review", when used to refer to a review of a previous determination of disability, includes any reconsideration of or hearing on the initial decision rendered in such review as well as such initial decision itself, and any review by the Appeals Council of the hearing decision.

(2) Paragraph (1) shall not apply in any case where the Secretary determines that fraud was involved in the prior determination, or where an individual (other than an individual eligible to receive benefits under section 1619 of the Social Security Act) is determined by the Secretary to be engaged in substantial gainful activity (or gainful activity, in the case of a widow, surviving divorced wife, widower, or surviving divorced husband for purposes of section 202(e) and (f) of such Act).

(c)(1) Any initial determination that an individual is not under a disability by reason of a mental impairment and any determination that an individual is not under a disability by reason of a mental impairment in a reconsideration of or hearing on an initial disability determination, made or held under title II or XVI of the Social Security Act after the date of the enactment of this Act and prior to the date on which revised criteria are established by regulation in accordance with subsection (a), and any determination that an individual is not under a disability by reason of a mental impairment made under or in accordance with title II or XVI of such Act in a reconsideration of, hearing on, review by the Appeals Council of, or judicial review of a decision rendered in any continuing eligibility review to which subsection (b)(1) applies, shall be redetermined by the Secretary as soon as feasible after the date on which such criteria are so established, applying such revised criteria.

(2) In the case of a redetermination under paragraph (1) of a prior action which found that an individual was not under a disability, if such individual is found on redetermination to be under a disability, such redetermination shall be applied as though it had been made at the time of such prior action.

(3) Any individual with a mental impairment who was found to be not disabled pursuant to an initial disability determination or a continuing eligibility review between March 1, 1981, and the date of the enactment of this Act, and who reapplies for benefits under title II or XVI of the Social Security Act, may be determined to be under a disability during the period considered in the most recent prior determination. Any reapplication under this paragraph must be filed within one year after the date of the enactment of this Act, and benefits payable as a result of the preceding sentence shall be paid only on the basis of the reapplication.

NOTICE OF RECONSIDERATION; PREREVIEW NOTICE; DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS

SEC. 6. (a) Section 221(i) of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(4) In any case in which the Secretary initiates a review under this subsection of the case of an individual who has been determined to be under a disability, the Secretary shall notify such individual of the nature of the review to be carried out, the possibility that such review could result in the termination of benefits, and the right of the individual to provide medical evidence with respect to such review.".

(b) Section 1633 of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(c) In any case in which the Secretary initiates a review under this title, similar to the continuing disability reviews authorized for purposes of title II under section 221(i), the Secretary shall notify the individual whose case is to be reviewed in the same manner as required under section 221(i)(4).".

(c) The Secretary shall institute a system of notification required by the amendments made by subsections (a) and (b) as soon as is practicable after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(d) The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall, as soon as practicable after the date of the enactment of this Act, implement demonstration projects in which the opportunity for a personal appearance prior to a determination of ineligibility for persons reviewed under section 221(i) of the Social Security Act is substituted for the face to face evidentiary hearing required by section 205(b)(2) of such Act. Such demonstration projects shall be conducted in not fewer than five States, and shall also include disability determinations with respect to individuals reviewed under title XVI of such Act. The Secretary shall report to the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Finance of the Senate concerning such demonstration projects, together with any recommendations, not later than December 31, 1986.

(e) The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall, as soon as practicable after the date of the enactment of this Act, implement demonstration projects in which the opportunity for a personal appearance is provided the applicant prior to initial disability determinations under subsections (a), (c), and (g) of section 221 of the Social Security Act, and prior to initial disability determinations on applications for benefits under title XVI of such Act. Such demonstration projects shall be conducted in not fewer than five States. The Secretary shall report to the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Finance of the Senate concerning such demonstration projects, together with any recommendations, not later than December 31, 1986.

CONTINUATION OF BENEFITS DURING APPEAL

SEC. 7. (a)(1) Section 223(g)(1) of the Social Security Act is amended—

(A) in the matter following subparagraph (C), by striking out "and the payment of any other benefits under this Act based on such individual's wages and self-employment income (including benefits under title XVIII)," and inserting in lieu thereof ", the payment of any other benefits under this title based on such individual's wages and self-employment income, the payment of mother's or father's insurance benefits to such individual's mother or father based on the disability of such individual as a child who has attained age 16, and the payment of benefits under title XVIII based on such individual's disability,"; and

(B) in clause (iii) by striking out "June 1984" and inserting in lieu thereof "June 1988".

(2) Section 223(g)(3)(B) of such Act is amended by striking out "December 7, 1983" and inserting in lieu thereof "January 1, 1988".

(b) Section 1631(a) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(7)(A) In any case where—

"(i) an individual is a recipient of benefits based on disability or blindness under this title,

"(ii) the physical or mental impairment on the basis of which such benefits are payable is found to have ceased, not to have existed, or to no longer be disabling, and as a consequence such individual is determined not to be entitled to such benefits, and

"(iii) a timely request for review or for a hearing is pending with respect to the determination that he is not so entitled, such individual may elect (in such manner and form and within such time as the Secretary shall by regulations prescribe) to have the payment of such benefits continued for an additional period beginning with the first month beginning after the date of the enactment of this paragraph for which (under such determination) such benefits are no longer otherwise payable, and ending with the earlier of (I) the month preceding the month in which a decision is made after such a hearing, or (II) the month preceding the month in which no such request for review or a hearing is pending.

"(B)(i) If an individual elects to have the payment of his benefits continued for an additional period under subparagraph (A), and the final decision of the Secretary affirms the determination that he is not entitled to such benefits, any benefits paid under this title pursuant to such election (for months in such additional period) shall be considered overpayments for all purposes of this title, except as otherwise provided in clause (ii).

"(ii) If the Secretary determines that the individual's appeal of his termination of benefits was made in good faith, all of the benefits paid pursuant to such individual's election under subparagraph (A) shall be subject to waiver consideration under the provisions of subsection (b)(1).

"(C) The provisions of subparagraphs (A) and (B) shall apply with respect to determinations (that individuals are not entitled to benefits) which are made on or after the date of the enactment of this paragraph, or prior to such date but only on the basis of a timely request for review or for a hearing.".

(c)(1) The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall, as soon as practicable after the date of the enactment of this Act, conduct a study concerning the effect which the enactment and continued operation of section 223(g) of the Social Security Act is having on expenditures from the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund, and the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund, and the rate of appeals to administrative law judges of unfavorable determinations relating to disability or periods of disability.

(2) The Secretary shall submit the results of the study under paragraph (1), together with any recommendations, to the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Finance of the Senate not later than July 1, 1986.

QUALIFICATIONS OF MEDICAL PROFESSIONALS EVALUATING MENTAL IMPAIRMENTS

SEC. 8. (a) Section 221 of the Social Security Act is amended by inserting after subsection (g) the following new subsection:

"(h) An initial determination under subsection (a), (c), (g), or (i) that an individual is not under a disability, in any case where there is evidence which indicates the existence of a mental impairment, shall be made only if the Secretary has made every reasonable effort to ensure that a qualified psychiatrist or psychologist has completed the medical portion of the case review and any applicable residual functional capacity assessment.".

(b) Section 1614(a)(3) of such Act (as amended by section 4 of this Act) is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(H) In making determinations with respect to disability under this title, the provisions of section 221(h) shall apply in the same manner as they apply to determinations of disability under title II.".

(c) The amendments made by this section shall apply to determinations made after 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

CONSULTATIVE EXAMINATIONS; MEDICAL EVIDENCE

SEC. 9. (a)(1) Section 221 of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(j) The Secretary shall prescribe regulations which set forth, in detail—

"(1) the standards to be utilized by State disability determination services and Federal personnel in determining when a consultative examination should be obtained in connection with disability determinations;

"(2) standards for the type of referral to be made; and

"(3) procedures by which the Secretary will monitor both the referral processes used and the product of professionals to whom cases are referred.

Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to preclude the issuance, in accordance with section 553(b)(A) of title 5, United States Code, of interpretive rules, general statements of policy, and rules of agency organization relating to consultative examinations if such rules and statements are consistent with such regulations.".

(2) The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall prescribe regulations required under section 221(j) of the Social Security Act not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b)(1) Section 223(d)(5) of the Social Security Act is amended by inserting "(A)" after "(5)" and by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(B) In making any determination with respect to whether an individual is under a disability or continues to be under a disability, the Secretary shall consider all evidence available in such individual's case record, and shall develop a complete medical history of at least the preceding twelve months for any case in which a determination is made that the individual is not under a disability. In making any determination the Secretary shall make every reasonable effort to obtain from the individual's treating physician (or other treating health care provider) all medical evidence, including diagnostic tests, necessary in order to properly make such determination, prior to evaluating medical evidence obtained from any other source on a consultative basis.".

(2) The amendments made by this subsection shall apply to determinations made on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

UNIFORM STANDARDS

SEC. 10. (a) Section 221 of the Social Security Act (as amended by section 9 of this Act) is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(k)(1) The Secretary shall establish by regulation uniform standards which shall be applied at all levels of determination, review, and adjudication in determining whether individuals are under disabilities as defined in section 216(i) or 223(d).

"(2) Regulations promulgated under paragraph (1) shall be subject to the rulemaking procedures established under section 553 of title 5, United States Code.".

(b) Section 1614(a)(3)(H) of such Act (as added by section 8 of this Act and amended by section 3 of this Act) is further amended by striking out "sections 221(h) and 223(d)(5)" and inserting in lieu thereof "sections 221(h), 221(k), and 223(d)(5)".

PAYMENT OF COSTS OF REHABILITATION SERVICES

SEC. 11. (a)(1) The first sentence of section 222(d)(1) of the Social Security Act is amended—

(A) by striking out "into substantial gainful activity"; and

(B) by striking out "which result in their performance of substantial gainful activity which lasts for a continuous period of nine months" and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "(i) in cases where the furnishing of such services results in the performance by such individuals of substantial gainful activity for a continuous period of nine months, (ii) in cases where such individuals receive benefits as a result of section 225(b) (except that no reimbursement under this paragraph shall be made for services furnished to any individual receiving such benefits for any period after the close of such individual's ninth consecutive month of substantial gainful activity or the close of the month in which his or her entitlement to such benefits ceases, whichever first occurs), and (iii) in cases where such individuals, without good cause, refuse to continue to accept vocational rehabilitation services or fail to cooperate in such a manner as to preclude their successful rehabilitation".

(2) The second sentence of section 222(d)(1) of such Act is amended by striking out "of such individuals to substantial gainful activity" and inserting in lieu thereof "of an individual to substantial gainful activity, the determination that an individual, without good cause, refused to continue to accept vocational rehabilitation services or failed to cooperate in such a manner as to preclude successful rehabilitation,".

(b)(1) The first sentence of section 1615(d) of such Act is amended by striking out "if such services result in their performance of substantial gainful activity which lasts for a continuous period of nine months" and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "(1) in cases where the furnishing of such services results in the performance by such individuals of substantial gainful activity for a continuous period of nine months, (2) in cases where such individuals receive benefits as a result of section 1631(a)(6) (except that no reimbursement under this subsection shall be made for services furnished to any individual receiving such benefits for any period after the close of such individual's ninth consecutive month of substantial gainful activity or the close of the month with which his or her entitlement to such benefits ceases, whichever first occurs), and (3) in cases where such individuals, without good cause, refuse to continue to accept vocational rehabilitation services or fail to cooperate in such a manner as to preclude their successful rehabilitation".

(2) The second sentence of section 1615(d) of such Act is amended by inserting after "The determination" the following: "that the vocational rehabilitation services contributed to the successful return of an individual to substantial gainful activity, the determination that an individual, without good cause, refused to continue to accept vocational rehabilitation services or failed to cooperate in such a manner as to preclude successful rehabilitation, and the determination".

(c) The amendments made by this section shall apply with respect to individuals who receive benefits as a result of section 225(b) or section 1631(a)(6) of the Social Security Act, or who refuse to continue to accept rehabilitation services or fail to cooperate in an approved vocational rehabilitation program, in or after the first month following the month in which this Act is enacted.

ADVISORY COUNCIL STUDY

SEC. 12. (a) The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall appoint the members of the next Advisory Council on Social Security pursuant to section 706 of the Social Security Act prior to June 1, 1985.

(b)(1) The Advisory Council shall include in its review and report, studies and recommendations with respect to the medical and vocational aspects of disability, including studies and recommendations relating to—

(A) the effectiveness of vocational rehabilitation programs for recipients of disability insurance benefits or supplemental security income benefits;

(B) the question of using specialists for completing medical and vocational evaluations at the State agency level in the disability determination process, including the question of requiring, in cases involving impairments other than mental impairments, that the medical portion of each case review (as well as any applicable assessment of residual functional capacity) be completed by an appropriate medical specialist employed by the State agency before any determination can be made with respect to the impairment involved;

(C) alternative approaches to work evaluation in the case of applicants for benefits based on disability under title XVI and recipients of such benefits undergoing reviews of their cases, including immediate referral of any such applicant or recipient to a vocational rehabilitation agency for services at the same time he or she is referred to the appropriate State agency for a disability determination;

(D) the feasibility and appropriateness of providing work evaluation stipends for applicants for and recipients of benefits based on disability under title XVI in cases where extended work evaluation is needed prior to the final determination of their eligibility for such benefits or for further rehabilitation and related services;

(E) the standards, policies, and procedures which are applied or used by the Secretary of Health and Human Services with respect to work evaluations in order to determine whether such standards, policies, and procedures will provide appropriate screening criteria for work evaluation referrals in the case of applicants for and recipients of benefits based on disability under title XVI; and

(F) possible criteria for assessing the probability that an applicant for or recipient of benefits based on disability under title XVI will benefit from rehabilitation services, taking into consideration not only whether the individual involved will be able after rehabilitation to engage in substantial gainful activity but also whether rehabilitation services can reasonably be expected to improve the individual's functioning so that he or she will be able to live independently or work in a sheltered environment.

(2) For purposes of this subsection, "work evaluation" includes (with respect to any individual) a determination of—

(A) such individual's skills,

(B) the work activities or types of work activity for which such individual's skills are insufficient or inadequate,

(C) the work activities or types of work activity for which such individual might potentially be trained or rehabilitated,

(D) the length of time for which such individual is capable of sustaining work (including, in the case of the mentally impaired, the ability to cope with the stress of competitive work), and

(E) any modifications which may be necessary, in work activities for which such individual might be trained or rehabilitated, in order to enable him or her to perform such activities.

(c) The Advisory Council may convene task forces of experts to consider and comment upon specialized issues.

QUALIFYING EXPERIENCE FOR APPOINTMENT OF CERTAIN STAFF ATTORNEYS TO ADMINISTRATIVE LAW JUDGE POSITIONS

SEC. 13. The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall, within 120 days after the date of enactment of this Act, submit a report to the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Finance of the Senate on actions taken by the Secretary to establish positions which enable staff attorneys to gain the qualifying experience and quality of experience necessary to compete for the position of administrative law judge under section 3105 of title 5, United States Code.

SUPPLEMENTAL SECURITY INCOME BENEFITS FOR INDIVIDUALS WHO PERFORM SUBSTANTIAL GAINFUL ACTIVITY DESPITE SEVERE MEDICAL IMPAIRMENT

SEC. 14. (a) Section 201(d) of the Social Security Disability Amendments of 1980 is amended by striking out "shall remain in effect only for a period of three years after such effective date" and inserting in lieu thereof "shall remain in effect only through June 30, 1987".

(b) Section 1619 of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(c) The Secretary of Health and Human Services and the Secretary of Education shall jointly develop and disseminate information, and establish training programs for staff personnel, with respect to the potential availability of benefits and services for disabled individuals under the provisions of this section. The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall provide such information to individuals who are applicants for and recipients of benefits based on disability under this title and shall conduct such programs for the staffs of the district offices of the Social Security Administration. The Secretary of Education shall conduct such programs for the staffs of the State Vocational Rehabilitation agencies, and in cooperation with such agencies shall also provide such information to other appropriate individuals and to public and private organizations and agencies which are concerned with rehabilitation and social services or which represent the disabled.".

FREQUENCY OF CONTINUING ELIGIBILITY REVIEWS

SEC. 15. The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall promulgate final regulations, within 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, which establish the standards to be used by the Secretary in determining the frequency of reviews under section 221(i) of the Social Security Act. Until such regulations have been issued as final regulations, no individual may be reviewed more than once under section 221(i) of the Social Security Act.

DETERMINATION AND MONITORING OF NEED FOR REPRESENTATIVE PAYEE

SEC. 16. (a) Section 205(j) of the Social Security Act is amended by inserting "(1)" after "(j)" and by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraphs:

"(2) Any certification made under paragraph (1) for payment to a person other than the individual entitled to such payment must be made on the basis of an investigation, carried out either prior to such certification or within forty-five days after such certification, and on the basis of adequate evidence that such certification is in the interest of the individual entitled to such payment (as determined by the Secretary in regulations). The Secretary shall ensure that such certifications are adequately reviewed.

"(3)(A) In any case where payment under this title is made to a person other than the individual entitled to such payment, the Secretary shall establish a system of accountability monitoring whereby such person shall report not less often than annually with respect to the use of such payments. The Secretary shall establish and implement statistically valid procedures for reviewing such reports in order to identify instances in which such persons are not properly using such payments.

"(B) Subparagraph (A) shall not apply in any case where the other person to whom such payment is made is a parent or spouse of the individual entitled to such payment who lives in the same household as such individual. The Secretary shall require such parent or spouse to verify on a periodic basis that such parent or spouse continues to live in the same household as such individual.

"(C) Subparagraph (A) shall not apply in any case where the other person to whom such payment is made is a State institution. In such cases, the Secretary shall establish a system of accountability monitoring for institutions in each State.

"(D) Subparagraph (A) shall not apply in any case where the individual entitled to such payment is a resident of a Federal institution and the other person to whom such payment is made is the institution.

"(E) Notwithstanding subparagraphs (A), (B), (C), and (D), the Secretary may require a report at any time from any person receiving payments on behalf of another, if the Secretary has reason to believe that the person receiving such payments is misusing such payments.

"(4)(A) The Secretary shall make an initial report to each House of the Congress on the implementation of paragraphs (2) and (3) within 270 days after the date of the enactment of this paragraph.

"(B) The Secretary shall include as a part of the annual report required under section 704, information with respect to the implementation of paragraphs (2) and (3), including the number of cases in which the payee was changed, the number of cases discovered where there has been a misuse of funds, how any such cases were dealt with by the Secretary, the final disposition of such cases, including any criminal penalties imposed, and such other information as the Secretary determines to be appropriate.".

(b) Section 1631(a)(2) of such Act is amended by inserting "(A)" after "(2)" and by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraphs:

"(B) Any determination made under subparagraph (A) that payment should be made to a person other than the individual or spouse entitled to such payment must be made on the basis of an investigation, carried out either prior to such determination or within forty-five days after such determination, and on the basis of adequate evidence that such determination is in the interest of the individual or spouse entitled to such payment (as determined by the Secretary in regulations). The Secretary shall ensure that such determinations are adequately reviewed.

"(C)(i) In any case where payment is made under this title to a person other than the individual or spouse entitled to such payment, the Secretary shall establish a system of accountability monitoring whereby such person shall report not less often than annually with respect to the use of such payments. The Secretary shall establish and implement statistically valid procedures for reviewing such reports in order to identify instances in which such persons are not properly using such payments.

"(ii) Clause (i) shall not apply in any case where the other person to whom such payment is made is a parent or spouse of the individual entitled to such payment who lives in the same household as such individual. The Secretary shall require such parent or spouse to verify on a periodic basis that such parent or spouse continues to live in the same household as such individual.

"(iii) Clause (i) shall not apply in any case where the other person to whom such payment is made is a State institution. In such cases, the Secretary shall establish a system of accountability monitoring for institutions in each State.

"(iv) Clause (i) shall not apply in any case where the individual entitled to such payment is a resident of a Federal institution and the other person to whom such payment is made is the institution.

"(v) Notwithstanding clauses (i), (ii), (iii), and (iv), the Secretary may require a report at any time from any person receiving payments on behalf of another, if the Secretary has reason to believe that the person receiving such payments is misusing such payments.

"(D) The Secretary shall make an initial report to each House of the Congress on the implementation of subparagraphs (B) and (C) within 270 days after the date of the enactment of this subparagraph. The Secretary shall include in the annual report required under section 704, information with respect to the implementation of subparagraphs (B) and (C), including the same factors as are required to be included in the Secretary's report under section 205(j)(4)(B).".

(c)(1) Section 1632 of the Social Security Act is amended by inserting "(a)" after "Sec. 1632." and by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(b)(1) Any person or other entity who is convicted of a violation of any of the provisions of paragraphs (1) through (4) of subsection (a), if such violation is committed by such person or entity in his role as, or in applying to become, a payee under section 1631(a)(2) on behalf of another individual (other than such person's eligible spouse), in lieu of the penalty set forth in subsection (a)—

"(A) upon his first such conviction, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both; and

"(B) upon his second or any subsequent such conviction, shall be guilty of a felony and shall be fined not more than $25,000 or imprisoned for not more than five years, or both.

"(2) In any case in which the court determines that a violation described in paragraph (1) includes a willful misuse of funds by such person or entity, the court may also require that full or partial restitution of such funds be made to the individual for whom such person or entity was the certified payee.

"(3) Any person or entity convicted of a felony under this section or under section 208 may not be certified as a payee under section 1631(a)(2).".

(2) Section 208 of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following unnumbered paragraphs:

"Any person or other entity who is convicted of a violation of any of the provisions of this section, if such violation is committed by such person or entity in his role as, or in applying to become, a certified payee under section 205(j) on behalf of another individual (other than such person's spouse), upon his second or any subsequent such conviction shall, in lieu of the penalty set forth in the preceding provisions of this section, be guilty of a felony and shall be fined not more than $25,000 or imprisoned for not more than five years, or both. In the case of any violation described in the preceding sentence, including a first such violation, if the court determines that such violation includes a willful misuse of funds by such person or entity, the court may also require that full or partial restitution of such funds be made to the individual for whom such person or entity was the certified payee.

"Any individual or entity convicted of a felony under this section or under section 1632(b) may not be certified as a payee under section 205(j).".

(d) The amendments made by this section shall become effective on the date of the enactment of this Act, and, in the case of the amendments made by subsection (c), shall apply with respect to violations occurring on or after such date.

MEASURES TO IMPROVE COMPLIANCE WITH FEDERAL LAW

SEC. 17. (a)(1) Section 221(b)(1) of the Social Security Act is amended to read as follows:

"(b)(1)(A) Upon receiving information indicating that a State agency may be substantially failing to make disability determinations in a manner consistent with regulations and other written guidelines issued by the Secretary, the Secretary shall immediately conduct an investigation and, within 21 days after the date on which such information is received, shall make a preliminary finding with respect to whether such agency is in substantial compliance with such regulations and guidelines. If the Secretary finds that an agency is not in substantial compliance with such regulations and guidelines, the Secretary shall, on the date such finding is made, notify such agency of such finding and request assurances that such agency will promptly comply with such regulations and guidelines.

"(B)(i) Any agency notified of a preliminary finding made pursuant to subparagraph (A) shall have 21 days from the date on which such finding was made to provide the assurances described in subparagraph (A).

"(ii) The Secretary shall monitor the compliance with such regulations and guidelines of any agency providing such assurances in accordance with clause (i) for the 30-day period beginning on the day after the date on which such assurances have been provided.

"(C) If the Secretary determines that an agency monitored in accordance with clause (ii) of subparagraph (B) has not substantially complied with such regulations and guidelines during the period for which such agency was monitored, or if an agency notified pursuant to subparagraph (A) fails to provide assurances in accordance with clause (i) of subparagraph (B), the Secretary shall, within 60 days after the date on which a preliminary finding was made with respect to such agency under subparagraph (A), (or within 90 days after such date, if, at the discretion of the Secretary, such agency is granted a hearing by the Secretary on the issue of the noncompliance of such agency) make a final determination as to whether such agency is substantially complying with such regulations and guidelines. Such determination shall not be subject to judicial review.

"(D)(i) If the Secretary makes a final determination pursuant to subparagraph (C) with respect to any agency that the agency is not substantially complying with such regulations and guidelines, the Secretary shall, as soon as possible but not later than 180 days after the date of such final determination, make the disability determinations referred to in subsection (a)(1), complying with the requirements of paragraph (3) to the extent that such compliance is possible within such 180-day period. In order to carry out this subparagraph, the Secretary shall, as the Secretary finds necessary, exceed any applicable personnel ceilings and waive any applicable hiring restrictions. In addition, to the extent feasible within the 180-day period after the final determination, the Secretary, in conjunction with the Secretary of Labor, shall assure the statutory protections of State agency employees not hired by the Secretary.

"(ii) During the 180-day period specified in clause (i), the Secretary shall take such actions as may be necessary to assure that any case with respect to which a determination referred to in subsection (a)(1) was made by an agency, during the period for which such agency was not in substantial compliance with the applicable regulations and guidelines, was decided in accordance with such regulations and guidelines.".

(2) Section 221(a)(1) of such Act is amended by striking out "subsection (b)(1)" and inserting in lieu thereof "subsection (b)(1)(C)".

(3)(A) Section 221(b)(3)(A) of such Act is amended by striking out "The Secretary" and inserting in lieu thereof "Except as provided in subparagraph (D)(i) of paragraph (1), the Secretary".

(B) Section 221(b)(3)(B) of such act is amended by striking out "The Secretary" and inserting in lieu thereof "Except as provided in subparagraph (D)(i) of paragraph (1), the Secretary".

(4) Section 221(d) of such Act is amended by striking out "Any individual" and inserting in lieu thereof "Except as provided in subsection (b)(1)(D), any individual".

(b) The amendments made by subsection (a) of this section shall become effective on the date of the enactment of this Act and shall expire on December 31, 1987. The provisions of the Social Security Act amended by subsection (a) of this section (as such provisions were in effect immediately before the date of the enactment of this Act) shall be effective after December 31, 1987.

SEPARABILITY

SEC. 18. If any provision of this Act, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is held invalid, the remainder of this Act and the application of such provision to other persons or circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the Senate recede from its amendment to the title of the bill.

JOINT EXPLANATORY STATEMENT OF THE COMMITTEE OF CONFERENCE

The managers on the part of the House and the Senate at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 3755) to amend titles II and XVI of the Social Security Act to provide for reform in the disability determination process, submit the following joint statement to the House and the Senate in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the managers and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

The Senate amendment to the text of the bill struck out all of the House bill after the enacting clause and inserted a substitute text.

The House recedes from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate with an amendment which is a substitute for the House bill and the Senate amendment. The differences between the House bill, the Senate amendment, and the substitute agreed to in conference are noted below, except for clerical corrections, conforming changes made necessary by agreements reached by the conferees, and minor drafting and clarifying changes.

1. STANDARD OF REVIEW FOR TERMINATION OF DISABILITY BENEFITS

Present law

To be eligible for disability benefits, a person must be unable, by reason of a medically determinable impairment expected to last at least 12 months or to end in death, to perform any substantial gainful activity (SGA) that exists in the national economy, considering his or her age, education and work experience. The impairment must be "demonstrable by medically acceptable clinical and laboratory diagnostic techniques." This definition applies both to new applicants and to beneficiaries whose eligibility is being reviewed. No other statutory standards exist for the review of beneficiaries.

House bill

Establishes a standard for reviewing eligibility of disability beneficiaries that allows benefits to be terminated only if there is substantial evidence that the beneficiary can perform SGA as a result of (a) medical improvement in his disabling condition, or (b) medical or vocational therapy technological or advances, as shown by new medical evidence and new assessment of residual functional capacity, or (c) vocational therapy or (d) a less disabling impairment than originally thought, as shown by new or improved diagnostic techniques or evaluations.

Benefits could also be terminated if evidence on the record at the time of the earlier determination or new evidence shows that the prior determination was either clearly erroneous or fraudulently obtained, or that the beneficiary is performing SGA.

In cases where there is no evidence to support the prior decision (i.e. a lost file) the Secretary would not be precluded from securing additional medical reports in order to reconstruct that decision.

Title XVI is amended to provide that the same standard of review shall apply to SSI recipients (except that the exclusions which allow termination as the result of medical or vocational therapy (described in (b) and (c) above) do not apply to individuals receiving section 1619 special benefits).

No provisions for date of implementing regulations or expiration.

Effective date. Applies to all cases involving disability determinations pending in the Department or in Court on the date of enactment or initiated on or after that date.

Senate amendment

Benefits may be terminated if beneficiary can perform SGA unless the Secretary finds there has been no medical improvement. If the evidence establishes that there has been no medical improvement (other than improvement which is not related to his ability to work), benefits may be terminated only if Secretary can show (a) beneficiary has benefited from medical or vocational therapy or technology, (b) new or improved diagnostic or evaluative techniques indicate impairment(s) is not as disabling as believed at time of last decision, (c) a prior determination was fraudulently obtained, or (d) there is demonstrated substantial reason to believe a prior determination of eligibility was erroneous.

Benefits may be terminated for performance of SGA or if the individual fails, without good cause, to cooperate in the review or follow prescribed treatment, or cannot be located.

In making determination, Secretary shall consider the evidence in the file as well as any additional information concerning claimant's current or prior condition secured by Secretary or provided by claimant.

In the case of a finding relating to medical improvement, provides that burden of proof is on claimant. In other words, for benefits to be continued on this basis, individual must state and evidence in file must show that medical condition is same as or worse than at time of last decision (or, if there is medical improvement, it is not related to work ability).

Title XVI is amended to provide that the same procedures shall apply to SSI recipients (except that the provision requiring termination on the grounds that an individual is engaging in SGA does not apply to recipients of section 1619 special benefits).

Implementing regulations must be issued within 6 months of enactment. Provision expires December 31, 1987.

Effective date.—Applies to disability reviews initiated on or after date of enactment, to all individuals with claims properly pending in the administrative appeals process as of enactment, and to certain court cases. All individual litigants and named members of a class action who have cases properly pending in court as of May 16, 1984, and all individuals who properly request court review of a decision of the Secretary made during the period from March 15, 1984 until 60 days after enactment, would be remanded to the Secretary for redetermination under the new standard. Also the case of any individual who exhausted the administrative appeals process, was an unnamed member of a properly pending class action certified prior to May 16, 1984, and had been notified of the Secretary's final decision on or after a date 60 days prior to the filing of the court action, would be remanded to the Secretary. The Secretary would notify the individual that he had 60 days to request review of his claim under the new standard. If the individual did not request review, the provision would not apply and the Secretary's determination would not be subject to further administrative or judicial review.

The provision would not apply to any case for which the Secretary made a final determination prior to May 16, 1984, and which was not included in the above categories. Such determination would not be subject to further administrative or judicial review.

Applies the provision authorizing payments pending appeal (See item 6) to any individual whose case is remanded by a court under this section and if applicable, who timely requested redetermination. These interim payments would begin with the payment for the month in which the individual elects continued payments. If the individual is ultimately found eligible, full retroactive benefits would be provided. If he is found ineligible, the interim payments would be subject to recovery as overpayments.

Conference agreement

(A) Standard of review

The conference agreement follows the House bill with amendments:

(a) remove causal links between change in medical condition and ability to perform SGA, as follows: the Secretary may terminate disability benefits on the basis that the person is no longer disabled only if there is substantial evidence which demonstrates that (i) there has been any medical improvement in the individual's impairment or combination of impairments (other than medical improvement which is not related to the individual's ability to work) and (ii) the individual is now able to engage in SGA. Make similar changes in wording of exception for advances in medical or vocational therapy or technology (add "related to ability to work") and exception for vocational therapy (add "related to ability to work");

(b) substitute for the House language concerning termination of benefits if evidence in the file or newly obtained shows that the prior determination was clearly erroneous, the requirement that the Secretary may terminate benefits in the absence of medical improvement if substantial evidence (which may be evidence on the record at the time any prior determination of such entitlement to disability benefits was made, or newly obtained evidence which relates to that determination) shows that a prior determination was in error;

(c) allow termination of benefits also where the individual is engaging in SGA (except where he is eligible under section 1619), cannot be located, or fails, without good cause to cooperate in the review or to follow prescribed treatment which could be expected to restore his ability to engage in SGA;

(d) substitute for House language on Secretary obtaining additional medical reports, the requirement that any determination under this section shall be made on the basis of all the evidence available in the individual's prior or current condition which is presented by the individual or secured by the Secretary;

(e) add the requirement that any determination made under this section shall be made on the basis of the weight of the evidence and on a neutral basis with regard to the individual's condition, without any initial inference as to the presence or absence of disability being drawn from the fact that the claimant has previously been determined to be disabled;

(f) add requirement that regulations must be promulgated within 6 months of enactment.

The conference agreement attempts to strike a balance between the concern that a medical improvement standard could be interpreted to grant claimants a presumption of eligibility, which might make it extremely difficult to remove ineligible individuals from the benefit rolls, and the concern that the absence of an explicit standard of review or some alternative standard could be interpreted to imply a presumption of ineligibility or to allow arbitrary termination decisions, which might lead to many individuals being improperly removed from the rolls.

The conferees intend that determinations of continuing eligibility should be made on a basis which is as nearly neutral as possible. The Secretary should reach conclusions on the basis of the weight of the evidence, as applied to the statutory standards specified in this amendment, and without any preconception or presumption as to whether the individual is or is not disabled.

Under the conference agreement, the Secretary would apply the rules specified in the amendment, reaching conclusions under them on the basis of the weight of the evidence. The conference agreement eliminates language in the Senate bill referring to the burden of proof being on the claimant in the case of medical improvement determinations. It also eliminates Senate language with respect to the burden of proof on the Secretary in making other determinations under this provision. This agreement eliminates any confusion that might result from shifting burdens of proof, and is intended to subject determinations under this provision to the same requirements currently established in Section 223(d) of the Social Security Act. That is, the claimant's obligations to establish the existence of his disability with regard to the CDI proceeding are the same as his obligations with regard to an initial determination. Similarly, elimination of this language should not be interpreted as placing a burden of proof on the Secretary. Rather, the language in question was dropped solely to clarify the intent that decisions are to be made on the basis of the weight of the evidence and to avoid any misinterpretation with respect to the role of the claimant and the Secretary in pursuing evidence or with respect to the non-adversarial nature of the proceeding.

(B) Effective date

The conference agreement follows the House bill with respect to the 3-year sunset.

The conference agreement follows the Senate on formulation of effective date with amendments:

(1) The medical improvement standard in these amendments will only apply to:

(i) determinations made by the Secretary on or after the date of enactment; (ii) determinations by the Secretary not yet final on enactment and with respect to which a request for administrative review is made in conformity with the time limits, exhaustion requirements and other provisions of section 205 of the Act and regulations of the Secretary; (iii) determinations with respect to which a request for judicial review was pending on September 9, 1984 involving an individual litigant or a member of a class action identified by name in such pending action on such date (This section refers to individuals identified by name as members of a class action. By this, the legislation means those individuals identified in the pleadings as class representatives); (iv) determinations in which a request for judicial review is made by an individual litigant of a final decision by the Secretary made during the period beginning 60 days prior to the date of enactment and ending on the date of enactment; (cases in iii and iv will be remanded to Secretary for determination); (v) unnamed plaintiffs in class suits certified as of September 19, 1984, as follows: the cases shall be remanded to the Secretary; the Secretary shall notify all plaintiffs via certified mail that they have 120 days from the date of receiving the notice to file a request with the Secretary for review under these amendments.

(2) Add requirement that no class action shall be certified after September 19, 1984, which raises the issue of whether an individual who has had his entitlement to benefits terminated prior to September 19, should not have had such entitlement terminated without consideration of whether there has been medical improvement in such individual's condition since that time of a prior determination that the individual was under a disability.

The conference agreement provides for an opportunity for redetermination under the new standard of all claimants who are members of class actions which have been certified as of September 29, 1984. However, this is in no way intended to express a view, one way or another, as to whether those classes would otherwise have been found to be properly certified in accordance with the exhaustion and finality requirements of section 205 of the Social Security Act. The conference agreement provides that the existing certified classes will be covered by the new standard in order to resolve the existing controversy over the medical improvement issue in the courts.

This provision prohibits the certification of any class action after September 9, 1984 which raises the issue of whether a medical improvement standard should have been applied in a determination of eligibility made prior to the enactment of these amendments.

The section provides that certain specified court cases involving medical improvement be remanded to the Secretary for review under the medical improvement standard established in this Act. Cases pending in court which do not involve medical improvement would not, of course, be remanded to the Secretary for such a review.

The conferees recognize that there will be considerable administrative difficulty in identifying and notifying individuals who are eligible to have their cases redetermined as a result of their being unnamed members of class actions certified prior to September 19, 1984. Notwithstanding the administrative difficulty of this task, the conferees expect the Secretary of Health and Human Services to act expeditiously in notifying these individuals of the provisions of this act which are applicable to them.

(C) Benefit payments during remand

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

(D) Retroactive benefits

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

2. EVALUATION OF PAIN

Present law

There is no statutory provision concerning the evaluation of pain (or the use of subjective allegations of pain) in determining eligibility for disability benefits. The definition of disability requires that the person be unable to work by reason of a "medically determinable impairment"—one which results from "anatomical, physiological, or psychological abnormalities which are demonstrable by medically acceptable clinical and laboratory diagnostic techniques."

By regulation, subjective allegations of symptoms of impairments, such as pain, cannot alone be evidence of disability. There must be medical signs or other findings which show there is a medical condition that could be reasonably expected to produce those symptoms and that is severe enough to be disabling.

House bill

Requires the Secretary to conduct a study in conjunction with the National Academy of Sciences on the use of subjective evidence of pain in making disability determinations, and on the state of the art of preventing, reducing or coping with pain. A report on the study is due to the Committees on Ways and Means and Finance no later than April 1, 1985.

Effective date.—On enactment.

Senate amendment

Requires Secretary to appoint 12-member commission consisting of a significant number of medical professionals involved in the study of pain, and representatives from the fields of law, administration of disability insurance programs, and other appropriate fields of expertise to study the use of pain in evaluation of disability. Report due to Committees on Ways and Means and Finance no later than December 31, 1986.

Includes in statute the present regulatory policy on the use of evidence of pain in evaluation of disability. Includes title XVI conforming amendment.

Effective date.—Statutory provision applies to determinations made prior to January 1, 1988.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with amendments:

(a) The study is to be done in consultation with the National Academy of Sciences, and the report is to be filed by December 31, 1985; and

(b) The statutory language providing for an interim standard for evaluation of pain is amended to more accurately reflect current policies.

Effective date.—The interim standard will be in effect only for determinations made prior to January 1, 1987.

3. MULTIPLE IMPAIRMENTS

Present law

There is no statutory provision concerning the consideration of the combined effects of a number of different impairments. The definition of diability requires a finding of a medically determinable impairment of sufficient severity to prevent the person from doing not only his previous work but also any other kind of work that exists in the national economy, considering his age, education and work experience. By regulation, the combined effects of unrelated impairments are considered only if all are severe (and expected to last 12 months). As elaborated in rulings, "inasmuch as a nonsevere impairment is one which does not significantly limit basic work-related functions, neither will a combination of two or more such impairments significantly restrict the basic work-related functions needed to do most jobs".

House bill

Requires the Secretary, in making a determination of whether a person's impairments are of such severity that he or she is unable to engage in substantial gainful activity, to consider the combined effects of all of a person's impairments, regardless of whether any impairment by itself is of such severity. Includes title XVI conforming amendment.

Effective date.—Applies to all determinations pending in the Department or in Court on the date of enactment, or initiated after that date.

Senate amendment

Same, except clarifies that the requirement applies to the determination of whether the individual has a combination of impairments which are medically severe without regard to age, education, or work experience. Includes title XVI conforming amendment.

Effective date.—Applies to all determinations made on or after January 1, 1985.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement substitutes alternative language for the provisions in both bills.

Under current policies, if a determination is made that a claimant's impairment is not severe, the consideration of the claim ends at that point. In cases where an individual has several impairments, none of which satisfy the standard for "severe," the individual is judged not disabled without any further evaluation of cumulative impact of his impairments. The conferees believe this policy may preclude realistic assessment of those cases involving individuals who have several impairments which in combination may be disabling. The conference agreement provides, therefore, that in determining whether an individual's impairment or impairments are so severe as to prevent him from engaging in substantial gainful activity, consideration must be given to the combined effect of all the individual's impairments without regard to whether any single impairment considered separately would limit the individual's ability.

The conferees also believe that in the interests of reasonable administrative flexibility and efficiency, a determination that an individual is not disabled may be based on a judgment that an individual has no impairment, or that the medical severity of his impairment or combination of impairments is slight enough to warrant a presumption, even without a full evaluation of vocational factors, that the individual's ability to perform SGA is not seriously affected. The current "sequential evaluation process" allows such a determination and the conferees do not intend to either eliminate or impair the use of that process. The conferees note that the Secretary has stated that it is her plan to reevaluate the current criteria for nonsevere impairments and expect that the Secretary will report to the Committees on the results of this evaluation.

Effective dates.—Effective for all determinations made on or after the first day of the month beginning 30 days after the date of enactment.

4. MORATORIUM ON MENTAL IMPAIRMENT REVIEWS

Present law

Under the Disability Amendments of 1980, all DI beneficiaries with nonpermanent impairments must be reviewed at least once every 3 years to assess their continuing eligibility for benefits. Individuals with permanent impairments may be reviewed less frequently. Presently, there is no distinction in the law between the rate of review for individuals with physical and mental impairments.

Under a Secretarial initiative (of June 7, 1983), periodic eligibility reviews have been suspended for certain mental impairment cases involving functional psychotic disorders, pending a revision, with the help of outside mental health experts, of the criteria used for determining disability. Under a subseqent Secretarial action (announced April 13, 1984), all periodic eligibility reviews have been suspended temporarily.

House bill

Requires publication within 9 months of enactment of revised mental impairment criteria in the Listing of Impairments that are designed to realistically evaluate the person's ability to engage in SGA in a competitive workplace environment, taking account of the recommendations of the disability advisory council (section 304). Delays periodic review of mentally impaired individuals until these revisions are made. The delay would apply to cases on which an initial decision had not been made by the date of enactment and to those cases where an initial decision was made prior to the date of enactment and a timely appeal was pending on or after June 7, 1983.

Periodic reviews where (1) fraud was involved or (2) the individual was engaging in SGA, would continue to be done. SSA could continue to review medical diary cases and make initial determinations but would subsequently redetermine the case under the revised criteria. If a new decision were favorable, it would take effect as of the time of the first determination. Mentally impaired persons who received an unfavorable initial or continuing eligibility determination between March 1, 1981 and enactment of the bill and who reapplied would be deemed to have reapplied for benefits within 12 months of enactment would be deemed to have reapplied at the time of the unfavorable determination for the purpose of establishing a period of disability during the period covered by the prior determination, but not for benefit purposes; benefits would be payable only for the twelve months prior to the date of the new application. The provisions also apply to title XVI.

Effective date.—On enactment.

Senate amendment

Similar, except requires publication of revisions within 90 days after enactment, and reapplication provision applies to people who received an unfavorable determination since June 7, 1983 rather than March 1, 1981.

Effective date.—On enactment.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House provision with amendments to require the Secretary to publish the revised Listing of Impairments within 120 days of enactment.

5. PRE-TERMINATION NOTICE AND RIGHT TO PERSONAL APPEARANCE

Present Law

A person whose initial claim for disability benefits is denied or who is determined after review not to be disabled may request a reconsideration of that decision within 60 days. In the past, reconsideration has been a paper review of the evidentiary record including any new evidence submitted by the claimant, conducted by the State agency. Under a provision of P.L. 97-455, enacted January 12, 1983, disability beneficiaries determined not to be medically eligible for benefits must be given opportunity for a face-to-face evidentiary hearing at reconsideration. Such hearings may be provided by the State agency or by the Secretary.

Individuals found ineligible for benefits at reconsideration may request a face-to-face evidentiary hearing before an administrative law judge. The next level of appeal is to SSA's Appeals Council, and finally, to a Federal court.

House bill

Revises determination process for beneficiaries undergoing periodic review in medical cessation cases, to provide for a face-to-face evidentiary review with State agency (upon request of the beneficiary within 30 days) after a preliminary unfavorable decision by the State. If, after the evidentiary interview (or paper review if the beneficiary requests review without the personal interview), the State agency denies benefits, the beneficiary could appeal to the ALJ and succeeding appeals levels. The reconsideration level would be abolished for these review cases.

Requires the Secretary to establish demonstration projects in at least 5 States using this same procedure for initial disability claims, with a report to the Committees on Ways and Means and Finance on the results due no later than April 1, 1985.

The provisions also apply to title XVI.

Effective date.—Revised determination process applies to periodic reviews on or after January 1, 1985; demonstration projects to be initiated as soon as practicable after enactment.

Senate amendment

Requires demonstration projects on providing pretermination face-to-face interviews in disability cessation cases in lieu of face-to-face evidentiary hearings at reconsideration. Report due to Committees on Ways and Means and Finance April 1, 1986.

Requires the Secretary to notify individuals upon initiating a periodic eligibility review that such review could result in termination of benefits and that medical evidence may be submitted.

The provisions also apply to title XVI.

Effective date.—On enactment. Demonstration projects to be established as soon as practicable after date of enactment.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with respect to the current reconsideration hearing process, the demonstration projects concerning face-to-face pre-termination interviews for continuing disability review issues at the initial rather than the reconsideration level, and the requirement for notification of the possibility of benefit termination as a result of review with an amendment to require the report to Congress on December 31, 1986. The conference agreement follows the House bill with respect to demonstrational projects concerning face-to-face pre-denial interviews for initial disability claims, with an amendment to require the report to Congress on December 31, 1986.

Effective date.—On enactment. Demonstration projects to be established as soon as practicable after date of enactment.

6. CONTINUATION OF BENEFITS DURING APPEAL

Present law

Disability benefits are payable for the month as of which the beneficiary is determined to be ineligible and for the 2 months succeeding. Benefits do not generally continue during appeal.

Under a temporary provision in P.L. 97-455 (as modified by P.L. 98-118), individuals notified of a medical termination decision could elect to have DI benefits and medicare coverage continued during appeal—through the month preceding the month of the ALJ hearing decision. These additional DI benefits are subject to recovery as overpayments if the initial termination decision is upheld (unless they qualify for waiver under the standard provisions for waiver of overpayments). This provison does not apply to terminations made after December 6, 1983. Benefits are last payable under this provision for June 1984 (i.e., the July 1984 benefit check).

House bill

Permanently extends provision (which technical changes) for continuation of DI and SSI benefits during appeal. Requires the Secretary to report to the Committees on Ways and Means and Finance by July 1, 1986, on the impact of the provision on the OASDI trust funds and on appeals to ALJs.

Effective dates.—On enactment.

Senate amendment

Extends the provision for continued payment of DI and SSI benefits during appeal to termination decisions made prior to June 1, 1986. (Last month of payments would be for January 1987, i.e., the February 1987 check.)

Effective date.—On enactment.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill with amendment to:

(i) Make permanent the payments through the ALJ hearing for SSI recipients;

(ii) Make the payments through ALJ hearing for DI beneficiaries for termination decisions through December 1987, and benefit payments through June, 1988.

7. QUALIFICATIONS OF MEDICAL PROFESSIONALS EVALUATING MENTAL IMPAIRMENTS

Present law

There is no statutory requirement concerning qualifications of persons making disability determinations. Under current policy, the State disability agency team making eligibility decisions must consist of a State agency medical consultant (physician) and a State agency disability examiner, both of whom must sign the disability determination.

House bill

Requires that a qualified psychiatrist or psychologist complete the medical portion of any applicable sequential evaluation and residual functional capacity assessment in cases involving mental impairments before a determination may be made that an individual is not disabled.

Effective dates.—On enactment.

Senate amendment

Same except modified to require only that every reasonable effort be made to use qualified psychiatrist or psychologist. Also, specifically amends title XVI to make the provision applicable to SSI determinations.

Effective date.—On enactment.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate bill with an amendment to change the effective date to 60 days after enactment. The conferees note that if the Secretary is unable to assure adequate compensation in order to obtain the services of qualified psychiatrists or psychologists because of impediments at the State level, it would be within the Secretary's authority to contract directly for such services.

8. STANDARDS FOR CONSULTATIVE EXAMINATIONS/MEDICAL EVIDENCE

Present law

Consultative exams (CE's) are medical exams purchased by the State agency from physicians and other qualified health professionals outside the agency. By regulation, CE's may be sought to secure additional information necessary to make a disability determination or to check conflicting information. Evidence obtained through a CE is considered in conjunction with all other medical and non-medical evidence submitted in connection with a disability claim.

There are currently no statutory or regulatory standards requiring CE's in particular cases, or requiring any standard procedures to be followed in the purchase of CE's.

The SSI statute includes a cross-reference to this provision. Any changes in title II will therefore also be made for SSI.

House bill

Requires the Secretary to prescribe regulations which set forth standards for when a CE should be obtained, the type of referral to be made and the procedures for monitoring CE's and the referral process. Permits non-regulatory rules and statements of policy relating to CE's to be issued if they are consistent with the regulations.

Effective date.—On enactment.

Senate amendment

Requires the Secretary to make every reasonable effort to obtain necessary medical evidence from an individual's treating-physician prior to seeking a consultative examination.

Also, requires consideration of all evidence in the case record and development of complete medical history over at least the preceding 12-month period for individuals applying for benefits or undergoing review.

Effective date.—On enactment.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill with respect to the provisions requiring the Secretary to set forth standards for consultative examinations. The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with an amendment requiring the Secretary to make every reasonable effort to obtain necessary medical evidence from treating physicians prior to evaluating medical evidence obtained from any other source on a consultative basis.

9. ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEDURE AND UNIFORM STANDARDS

Present law

The guidelines for making social security disability determinations and all other social security eligibility determinations are contained in the Social Security Act, regulations, social security rulings and the POMS (the Program Operating Manual System):

Regulations, or substantive rules, have the force and effect of law and are therefore binding on all levels of adjudication—state agencies, administrative law judges, SSA's Appeals Council, and the Federal Courts.

The Administrative Procedure Act (APA) requirements do not apply to social security programs because of a general exception for benefit programs. On a voluntary basis, however, SSA issues its regulations in accordance with the public notice and comment rulemaking requirements of the APA.

Rulings consist of interpretative policy statements issued by the Commissioner and other interpretations of law and regulations, selected decisions of the Federal courts, ALJs, the Appeals Council and selected opinions of the General Counsel. Rulings often provide detailed elaboration of the regulations helpful for public understanding. By regulation, the rulings are binding on all levels of administrative adjudication.

The POMS is a compilation of detailed policy instructions and step-by-step procedures for the use of State agency and SSA personnel in developing and adjudicating claims. The POMS is not binding on the Administrative Law Judges, Appeals Council or Courts.

House bill

Requires publication under APA public notice and comment rulemaking procedures of all OASDI and SSI regulations on matters relating to benefits. Requires that only those rules issued under Sections b–e of Section 553 of the APA shall be binding at any level of review.

Effective date.—On enactment.

Senate amendment

Requires publication of regulations setting forth uniform standards for DI and SSI disability determinations under APA procedures. These rules would be binding at all levels of adjudication.

Effective date.—On enactment.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment. While it is not required in the legislation, the conferees urge the Secretary to publish under APA public notice and comment rulemaking procedures all OASDI and SSI regulations which relate to benefits.

10. ACQUIESCENCE OR NON-ACQUIESCENCE IN COURT OF APPEALS DECISIONS

Present law

Claimants for benefits under the Social Security Act may appeal State agency denials through several levels of administrative appeal. A claimant who wishes to continue to pursue appeal may next turn to the Federal district court with jurisdiction over his or her claim. The district court reviews the record as complied by the agency to determine whether substantial evidence existed for the agency's decision. The district court's decision may be appealed, by the claimant or the Secretary, to the Circuit Court with jurisdiction, and ultimately to the Supreme Court (which may or may not agree to hear the appeal).

Under the Federal judicial system, decisions by a Circuit Court of Appeals constitute binding case law to be followed by all district courts in that circuit. (District courts are not bound by the case law of other circuits and often develop contrary case law on the same issue.)

In general, if two circuits rule differently on a particular issue, the Supreme Court will review the issue to settle the dispute, although frequently the Court will decline to review for an extended period of time if the issue is not ripe for disposition, or if it is not of sufficient importance to warrant immediate attention. If a particular policy is found by the Supreme Court to be unconstitutional, or contrary to the statute, that decision is binding on the agency.

Most social security cases decided in the Federal courts have little value as precedent for SSA decisions, since most reversals of agency determinations rest on the lack of substantial evidence for the agency's position. However, in some instances, the court's opinion is based on matter of a statutory interpretation.

The Social Security Administration abides by the final judgments of Federal courts with respect to the individuals in particular cases. It does not, however, consider itself bound with respect to nonlitigants as far as adopting as agency policy, either in the circuit or nationwide, the interpretation underlying a Circuit Court's decision. If the decision of a Circuit Court is contrary to the Secretary's interpretation of the Social Security Act and regulations, SSA, like some other Federal agencies, issues a ruling stating that it will not adopt the court's decision as agency policy. There are currently 7 such rulings of nonacquiescence by the Social Security Administration.

House bill

Requires that a decision of a Circuit Court of Appeals interpreting title II of the Social Security Act or its regulations in a manner different from prevailing policy be appealed to the Supreme Court or the Secretary must apply the interpretation underlying that decision as agency policy in the circuit. If the Supreme Court denies review, circuit-wide acquiescence with that interpretation would be required until the Supreme Court ruled on the issue. Includes title XVI conforming amendment.

Effective date.—On enactment, with respect to all circuit court decisions made on or after the date of enactment, and with respect to circuit court decisions for which the Secretary still has an opportunity to request review by the Supreme Court.

Senate amendment

Requires SSA to notify Congress and print in the Federal Register (within 90 days after decision date, or on the last date available for appeal, whichever is later) an explanation of the agency's decision to acquiesce or not acquiesce in decisions of the Circuit Courts relating to interpretation of the Social Security Act or of regulations issued under the Act. In cases where the Secretary is acquiescing, the reporting requirement would apply only to significant decisions.

States that nothing in the section shall be interpreted as sanctioning any decision of the Secretary not to acquiesce in the decision of a circuit court.

Effective date.—Applies to Court decisions rendered after the date of enactment.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement deletes both the House and Senate language. The conferees do not intend that the agreement to drop both provisions be interpreted as approval of "non-acquiescence" by a federal agency to an interpretation of a U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals as a general practice. On the contrary, the conferees note that questions have been raised about the constitutional basis of non-acquiescence and many of the conferees have strong concerns about some of the ways in which this policy has been applied, even if constitutional. Thus, the conferees urge that a policy of non-acquiescence be followed only in situations where the Administration has initiated or has the reasonable expectation and intention of initiating the steps necessary to receive a review of the issue in the Supreme Court.

The conferees reaffirm the congressional intent that the Secretary resolve policy conflicts promptly in order to achieve consistent uniform administration of the program. This objective may be achieved in at least two ways other than non-acquiescence when the agency is faced with conflicting interpretations of the meaning and intent of the Social Security Act: either to appeal the issue to the Supreme Court, or to seek a legislative remedy from the Congress.

When there are court rulings which the Secretary believes are inconsistent with the meaning and intent of the law, the Secretary should diligently pursue appropriate appeals channels on an expeditious basis. By refusing to apply circuit court interpretations and by not promptly seeking review by the Supreme Court, the Secretary forces beneficiaries to re-litigate the same issue over and over again in the circuit, at substantial expense to both beneficiaries and the federal government. This is clearly an undesirable consequence. The conferees also feel that in addition to the practical administrative problems which may be raised by non-acquiescence, the legal and Constitutional issues raised by non-acquiescence can only be settled by the Supreme Court. The conferees therefore urge the Administration to seek a resolution of this issue.

The conferees recognize that the realities of litigation do not make it appropriate or feasible to appeal every adverse decision with which the Secretary continues to disagree. In such instances, however, the conferees strongly insist that Congress' judgment as to the appropriate policy should prevail. The conferees expect the Secretary to propose what she believes to be appropriate remedial legislation for congressional consideration.

It is clearly undesirable to have major differences in statutory interpretation between the Secretary and the courts remain unresolved for a protracted period of time. The conferees believe this legislation takes a major step toward removing the obstacles to resolution by clarifying the statutory language and congressional intent.

11. PAYMENT OF COSTS OF REHABILITATION SERVICES

Present law

Presently, States are reimbursed for vocational rehabilitation (VR) services provided to DI and SSI recipients which result in their performance of substantial gainful activity (SGA) for at least 9 months. For such individuals, services are reimbursable for as long as they are in VR and receiving cash benefits. If the individual is reviewed and found to have medically recovered while in VR, cash benefits may continue (under Sections 225(b) and/or 1631(a)(6) of the Social Security Act, work-incentive provisions enacted in 1980). The State agency is reimbursed for these VR services on the same basis as applies to other beneficiaries—only if the beneficiary is returned to SGA for 9 months.

House bill

Allows reimbursement to State agencies for costs of VR services provided to individuals receiving DI benefits under Section 225(b) who medically recover while in VR, and to those receiving SSI disability who are found ineligible for benefits by reason of medical recovery (whether or not receiving SSI under Section 163(a)(6)). Reimbursable services would be those provided prior to his or her working at SGA for 9 months, or prior to the month benefit entitlement ends, whichever is earlier, and would not be contingent upon the individual working at SGA for at least 9 months. Also provides for reimbursement in cases where DI or SSI disability recipient does not meet the requirement of successful return to SGA because he refuses without good cause to continue in or cooperate with the VR program.

Effective date.—For individual receiving benefits as a result of section 225(b) (or who are no longer entitled to SSI benefits because of medical recovery) for months after the month of enactment.

Senate amendment

Same, except does not pay for services to those who fail to cooperate or refuse to continue participation in VR, and does not apply to SSI program.

Effective date.—For services rendered to individuals who receive benefits under Section 225(b) for months after the month of enactment.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill with technical amendments to correct the SSI provision, and an amendment to the effective date to apply the provision in the first month following the month after enactment.

The conferees expect that the Secretary will reimburse the State agencies for vocational rehabilitation services provided to a beneficiary who refuses without good cause to continue or to cooperate in a vocational rehabilitation program in such a way as to preclude his successful rehabilitation only in those cases in which the Secretary also suspends that person's disability benefits because of such refusal.

12. ADVISORY COUNCIL ON MEDICAL ASPECTS OF DISABILITY

Present law

Section 706 of the Social Security Act provides for the appointment of a 13-member quadrennial advisory council on social security. It is responsible for studying all aspects of the OASI, DI, HI, and SMI programs. The councils are comprised of members of the public.

The next advisory council is scheduled to be appointed in 1985 and to make its final report on December 31, 1986.

There are no requirements in the law pertaining to the creation of advisory councils to deal specifically with disability matters.

House bill

Requires the Secretary to appoint, within 60 days after enactment, a 10-member advisory council on the medical aspects of disability. This would be in addition to the regular quadrennial council. The council, to be composed of independent medical and vocational experts and the Commissioner of SSA ex officio, would provide advice and recommendations to the Secretary on disability policies, standards, and procedures. Any recommendations would be published in the Secretary's annual reports.

In addition, Section 307 of the bill requires this advisory council to study alternative approaches to work evaluation for SSI applicants and recipients and the effectiveness of VR services for SSI recipients.

Effective date.—On enactment. Authority for the council expires December 31, 1985.

Senate amendment

Directs next quadrennial advisory council on social security to study the medical and vocational aspects of disability using ad hoc panels of experts where appropriate. The study shall include: (1) alternative approaches to work evaluation for recipients of SSI; (2) the effectiveness of vocational rehabilitation programs for DI and SSI recipients; and (3) the question of using specialists for completing medical and vocational evaluations at the State agency level in the disability determination process.

Effective date: Requires Secretary to appoint members by June 1, 1985.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with amendments providing in detail the issues to be studied by the Advisory Council.

13. STAFF ATTORNEYS

Present law

Qualifications for administrative law judge (ALJ) positions are set by the Office of Personnel Management (OPM). To qualify for SSA's GS-15 ALJ position, an applicant must have at least 1 year of qualifying experience at or comparable to the GS-14 grade level in Federal service. Staff attorneys in SSA's Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) have the appropriate type of qualifying experience. However, there are no GS-14 positions as OHA staff attorneys; GS-13 is the highest staff attorney position. Prior to a recent decision by OPM, staff attorneys did not have qualifying experience at the necessary grade level. On May 9, 1984, OPM revised this criteria to permit applicants to qualify with 2 years of qualifying experience at the GS-13 level. No GS-14 experience is necessary.

House bill

Requires the Secretary to establish enough GS-13 and GS-14 attorney advisor positions to enable otherwise qualified staff attorneys to compete for ALJ positions. A 90-day interim progress report and a 180-day final report by the Secretary would be required.

Effective date.—On enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill with an amendment substituting a requirement for a report to the House Committee on Ways and Means and the Senate Committee on Finance on the actions taken by the Secretary to establish positions to enable staff attorneys to gain qualifying experience of the quality necessary to compete for ALJ positions.

In view of the recent actions by OPM and SSA, the conferees do not believe it is necessary to statutorily require that GS13 and GS14 SSA staff attorney positions be established so as to permit those attorneys to qualify for GS15 ALJ positions. Congress recognizes that such changes are critical in order to ensure the continued availability of qualified attorneys and ALJ's and urges the Secretary to take all reasonable steps to see that the OPM actions result in SSA attorneys becoming qualified for GS15 ALJ positions.

The conferees are concerned, however, upon review of the new examination announcement, that there may not exist within OHA positions in which a staff attorney can now serve and obtain the experience needed to meet the "quality of experience" requirements (in particular, the requirement that cases be listed which demonstrate knowledge, skills and abilities in the rules of evidence and trial procedures, and in decision-making ability).

The conferees expect that, if necessary, the Secretary will establish positions which enable staff attorneys to gain the qualifying experience and quality of experience necessary to compete for ALJ positions.

14. SSI BENEFITS FOR PERSONS WORKING DESPITE SEVERE IMPAIRMENTS

Present law

Under the SSI program, an individual who is able to engage in substantial gainful activity (SGA) cannot become eligible for SSI disability payments. Prior to the enactment of a provision in 1980, a disabled SSI recipient generally ceased to be eligible for SSI when his or her earnings exceeded the level which demonstrates SGA—$300 monthly.

Under Section 1619(a) of the Social Security Act, enacted in the Disability Amendments of 1980, severely disabled SSI recipients who work and earn more than SGA may receive a special payment and thereby maintain medicaid coverage and social services. The amount of the special payment is equal to the SSI benefit they would have been entitled to receive under the regular SSI program were it not for the SGA eligibility cut-off. Special benefit status is thus terminated when the individual's earnings exceed the amount which would cause the Federal SSI payment to be reduced to zero (i.e., the "break-even" level which is currently $713 per month for an individual with earnings). Under Section 1619(b), medicaid and social services may continue beyond this level, until earnings reach a level where the Secretary finds: (1) that termination of eligibility for these benefits would not seriously inhibit the individual's ability to continue his employment, or (2) the individual's earnings are not sufficient to allow him to provide for himself a reasonable equivalent of the cash and other benefits that would be available in the absence of earnings.

Section 1619 expired on December 31, 1983. It is being continued administratively under demonstration project authority to those people who were eligible for SSI as of that date.

House Bill

Extends Sections 1619 (a) and (b) through June 30, 1986.

In addition, requires the Secretaries of HHS and Education to establish training programs for staff personnel in SSA district offices and State VR agencies, and disseminate information to SSI applicants, recipients, and potentially interested public and private organizations.

Effective date.—On enactment, retroactive to January 1, 1984.

Senate amendment

Same, except extended through June 30, 1987.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

15. FREQUENCY OF CONTINUING ELIGIBILITY REVIEWS

Present Law

Under a provision enacted in 1980, all DI beneficiaries, except those with permanent impairments, must generally be reviewed at least once every 3 years to assess their continuing eligibility.

Under a provision enacted in 1983 (P.L. 97-455), the Secretary is provided the authority to modify this 3-year review requirement on a state-by-state basis. The appropriate number of cases for review is to be based on the backlog of pending cases, the number of applications for benefits, and staffing levels.

On April 13, 1984, Secretary Heckler announced a temporary, nationwide moratorium on periodic eligibility reviews.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Requires Secretary to promulgate regulations establishing standards for determining the frequency of continuing eligibility reviews. Final regulations must be issued within 6 months of enactment. Until these regulations are issued, no individual may have more than one periodic review.

Effective date.—On enactment.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

16. MONITORING OF REPRESENTATIVE PAYEES FOR SOCIAL SECURITY AND SSI BENEFICIARIES

Present law

The Secretary may appoint a representative payee for an individual entitled to social security or SSI benefits when it appears to be in the individual's best interest. Payees must be appointed for individuals receiving SSI who are addicted to drugs or alcohol.

A payee convicted of misusing a social security beneficiary's funds is guilty of a felony, punishable by imprisonment for not more than 5 years and/or a fine of not more than $5,000. A payee convicted of misusing an SSI recipient's funds is guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by imprisonment for not more than 1 year and/or a fine of not more than $1,000.

There are no statutory requirements or restrictions on the selection and monitoring of payees.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Requires Secretary to: (1) evaluate qualifications of prospective payee either prior to or within 45 days following certification, (2) establish a system of annual accountability monitoring for cases in which payments are made to someone other than a parent or spouse living in the same household as the entitled individual, and (3) report to Congress within 6 months of enactment on implementation of the new system and report annually on number of cases of misused funds and disposition of such cases.

The fine for a first offense by a payee convicted of misusing SSI benefits would be increased to not more than $5,000 and, for both programs, a second offense by a payee would be made a felony punishable by imprisonment for not more than 5 years and/or a fine of not more than $25,000. Individuals convicted of a felony under this provision could not be selected as a payee.

Effective date.—On enactment.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with amendments to require a report to Congress within 270 days after the date of enactment.

While the conference agreement recognizes that it may be necessary to appoint a representative payee prior to completion of the investigation required by the provision, the managers' believe that the Secretary should do so cautiously. In particular, the managers direct the Secretary to establish procedures under which large lump-sum payments of retroactive benefits will not ordinarily be paid to new representative payees until the investigation of their suitability has been successfully completed. These procedures should, however, allow for reasonable exceptions where the funds are urgently needed, for example, to avoid eviction or to meet major medical needs.

Where State institutions serve as representative payees for their residents, the annual reporting requirements of the conference agreement do not apply. This exemption, however, is not designed to shield institutional payees from accountability but rather to allow the Secretary the flexibility to establish more appropriate and effective systems of auditing the use of social security funds by such institutions. The managers wish to make clear their intention that the Secretary implement a thorough and comprehensive audit methodology to assure that Social Security Act benefits for residents of State institutions are not misused. These onsite reviews would be expected to involve, at a minimum, discussions with institution staff, an audit of a sample of residents accounts in each institution and onward interviews and observations to ensure that benefits are being properly used. At a minimum, each such institution should be audited once every three years. This 3-year cycle will allow the Secretary to audit one-third of such institutions each year—thus permitting a more thorough audit than would be possible on an annual basis. The managers further expect that the initial report on the implementation of this section of the bill will include a full exposition of the audit procedures which the Secretary will utilize in monitoring State institutions which act as representative bayees.

17. FAIL-SAFE

Present law

The main source of funding for the DI program is that portion of the social security tax allocated by law for disability. At present, the disability portion of the tax is 1 percent (employee and employer combined). It is scheduled to rise to 1.2 percent in the 1990's and to 1.42 percent thereafter. If revenues from the tax exceed amounts needed for benefit payments, the excess is placed in the trust fund reserve. If revenues fall short of the amount needed, the reserve is drawn on to make up the difference. (To make timely benefit payments it is necessary to have at least one month's benefit payments in reserve at the beginning of each month—8 to 9 percent of annual expenditures. Reserves must be sufficient to meet this percentage requirement at the beginning of each month notwithstanding any decline in revenues or increase in expenditures during the year.)

To help assure continued benefit payments over the next few years in the event of adverse conditions, the social security legislation enacted in 1983 authorized interfund borrowing for calendar years 1983-1987. In addition, the 1983 legislation required the OASDI Board of Trustees, whenever it determines that trust fund reserves may become less than 20 percent, to immediately submit to Congress a report setting forth its recommendations for statutory adjustments necessary to restore the reserve ratio. This report to the Congress by the Trustees must provide specific information as to the extent to which benefits would have to be reduced, payroll taxes increased, or some combination thereof, in order to restore the trust fund reserve ratio.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Requires the Secretary to adjust disability insurance benefit increases as necessary to prevent the DI trust fund balance from falling below a defined threshold. The Secretary would be required to notify the Congress by July 1 in any year in which the amount of the DI trust fund at the start of the next year is projected to be less than 20 percent of the year's expenditures. If Congress took no action, the Secretary must scale back the next cost-of-living increase for disability insurance beneficiaries as necessary to keep the fund balance from falling below 20 percent. If further necessary to keep the fund from falling below 120 percent, the Secretary would also be required to scale back the increase in the benefit formula used to determine new benefit awards the following year.

Effective date.—On enactment.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

18. MEASURES TO IMPROVE COMPLIANCE WITH FEDERAL LAW

Present law

The States are responsible, on a voluntary basis, for determining whether individuals are disabled under the meaning of the Social Security Act. Under the law, States administering the program are required to make disability determinations in accord with Federal law and the standards and guidelines established by the Department of Health and Human Services. All benefit payments and administrative costs of the States making these determinations are financed or reimbursed by the Disability Insurance Trust Fund.

The law provides for the Secretary to commence actions to take over the disability determination process if a State fails to follow Federal rules. A series of procedural steps must be complied with before such Federal assumption can be accomplished. The Secretary may not commence making disability determinations earlier than 6 months after: (1) finding, after notice and opportunity for hearing, that a State agency is substantially out of compliance with Federal law; (2) developing all procedures to implement a plan for partial or complete assumption of the disability determinations which grants hiring preference to the State employees; and (3) the Secretary of Labor determines that the State has made fair and equitable arrangements to protect the interests of displaced employees.

Prior to the Secretary's announcement in April 1984 of a temporary nationwide moratorium on periodic reviews, several States on their own initiative were failing to conduct eligibility reviews in accordance with Federal law and standards. Eighteen States were operating under court-ordered eligibility criteria or pending court order.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Requires the Secretary to federalize disability determinations in a State within 6 months of finding that the State is not in substantial compliance with Federal law and standards. (Such finding must be made within 16 weeks of the time a State's failure to comply first comes to the attention of the Secretary. During this 16-week period, at the discretion of the Secretary, a hearing could be afforded to the State.) The Secretary would be required, to the extent feasible, to meet the requirements of present law regarding the transfer of functions. Provision expires December 31,1987.

Effective date.—On enactment.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate bill with an amendment to require the Secretary to waive any applicable personnel ceilings and other restrictions in carrying out the provisions. Under the conference agreement, protections are being given to State agency employees. If the Secretary assumes the functions of the Disability Determinations Agency, then preference must be given in hiring to agency employees who are capable of performing the requisite duties. The conferees further intend that the Secretary should make every effort throughout the 180 day period to comply with the requirements in the law concerning the hiring of State employees and the protection of their interests in the event of the Secretary assuming the functions of the State agency.

19. SEPARABILITY CLAUSE

The Conference agreement includes a separability clause stating that the constitutional invalidity of any provision of the bill shall not affect the other provisions of the bill.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the committee on conference, I call up the conference report on the bill (H.R. 3755) to amend titles II and XVI of the Social Security Act to provide for reform in the disability determination process, and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration in the House.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the statement of the managers be read in lieu of the report.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to dispense with further reading of the statement.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI] will be recognized for 30 minutes and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. ARCHER] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI].

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the conference report on H.R. 3755, the conference report under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

□ 1650

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I submit today a conference agreement on the Social Security Disability Benefits Reform Act of 1984, H.R. 3755. My remarks will be brief, because I think the situation that this bill corrects is only too well known to every Member in this Chamber: Hundreds of thousands of beneficiaries have lost their benefits, thousands of appeals are clogging our Federal court dockets, 29 States have refused to follow the administration's instructions for termination of benefits, and 200 Federal courts all over the country have threatened the Secretary of Health and Human Services with contempt of court citations for refusing to pay benefits when ordered. This chaos must end, and it will end today with the passage of H.R. 3755. Indeed, the Senate has already approved the conference report, by a vote of 99 to 0, and our action is the only step remaining before sending the bill to the President.

This conference agreement was hard fought, and took longer to reach than many here had expected, because the differences between the House and the Senate were important and sharply drawn. In the end, however, we have an agreement that preserves the basic House provision for the standard of medical improvement: The Secretary must now show that a disabled person's condition has improved before ending his eligibility for disability benefits. And we affirmed in the Statement of Managers that the Administration's policy of ignoring Federal circuit court rules of law is not condoned by the Congress, and that the Secretary should either follow such rulings or appeal the issue to the Supreme Court.

In short, in all vital respects, the conference agreement preserves the House versions of the bill that my committee labored so long to develop. The credit for achieving this victory must go to my colleague, the chairman of the Social Security Subcommittee, J.J. PICKLE. For over a year and a half, he has worked to put this bill together and get it enacted, so successfully that this body approved the bill 410 to 1 last spring. Without his tireless interest and efforts, no bill would ever have reached the House floor, no action would ever have been taken by the Senate, and no compromise would have been reached with the Senate conferees. I commend him for his leadership and determination: The disabled people of America owe JAKE PICKLE an enormous debt of gratitude.

I also commend the other House conferees, and especially JIM SHANNON, who was the other major force for action in support of the bill on my committee. He devoted many hours to ensuring that this bill protected the interests of disabled beneficiaries, and it is a tribute to his commitment and energy that we are today about to approve this agreement.

This bill has true bipartisan support, and enthusiasm, in both the Senate and the House. It is desperately needed, and I urge adoption of the conference report.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 3755 with fewer misgivings than I expressed in March. I think the conference process has resulted in a better bill than the House passed earlier.

I say this even though the conference report is estimated by the Social Security Administration to cost more in the short-range than the House bill. Originally, OASDI costs for 1984–88 were projected as $2.4 billion; now SSA estimates that to be $3.5 billion. The difference is explained by the fact that the original bill was intended to be prospective, but the final measure is retroactively applied to 40,000 cases now pending in the Federal courts. While I am concerned about these added costs, I should note that I also was concerned about the reliability of the earlier estimates. I believe the revised estimates are more reliable because the scope of retroactivity has been clearly delineated by the Congress, and not left to the whim of courts.

Philosophically, I remain opposed to a medical improvement standard, which creates a dual standard when compared to the level of severity which must be met by new applicants. However, given these reservations, I believe the standard we have developed in the conference report is a more reasonable one, because it places on the beneficiary the same obligation that an initial applicant faces in submitting medical evidence and cooperating with requests for consultative exams. Further, the final decision is to be made on the weight of that evidence. While I'm concerned that this is a fine line to adjudicate, it expresses the conferees' intent that the final decision be made on a neutral basis.

The final bill also contains more explicit language concerning pain, which we hope will resolve pending litigation until the Social Security Subcommittee reviews a mandated study and report.

Further, the bill should be somewhat easier to administer. For example, we left the fact-to-face interview for continuing disability reviews at the reconsideration level rather than requiring them at the initial review stage.

And finally, both House and Senate conferees threw in the towel and receded on nonacquiescence; that is, opinion was divided so sharply on the issue of requiring SSA to acquiesce to differing circuit court standards that we agreed to encourage SSA to litigate this issue before the Supreme Court.

On balance, I'm satisfied this is an improved bill, but still one which will be difficult to administer. With that in mind, I plan to introduce, in the next session, legislation to streamline the administration of the disability adjudication process. I'm concerned that the current appeals process not only has too many administrative layers of review, but invites conflicting court decisions. While variety may be the spice of life, I'm convinced that the OASDI program needs stability far more than spice.

For today, I support H.R. 3755, and thank my subcommittee chairman, Mr. PICKLE, and the chairman of the full committee, Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI, for listening so patiently to the views of the minority, and considering those views in negotiating the final package.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the ranking member of the Committee on Ways and Means, the gentleman from New York [Mr. CONABLE].

Mr. CONABLE. I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 3755, the Social Security Disability Benefits Reform Act of 1984. In March, when I spoke on behalf of the original bill, I expressed hope that the administration would support it, and work with the other body to perfect certain features, which in SSA's judgment, would be difficult to administer.

That was 6 months ago. Fortunately, because Secretary Heckler previously had imposed a moratorium on continuing disability reviews, the 6-month delay has not harmed current beneficiaries. Also, I am pleased to be able to report, the administration did cooperate with our colleagues on the Finance Committee to produce a companion bill. Our conference was fruitful, and I believe this final package of disability reforms merits our bipartisan support.

Most importantly, this bill reestablishes national standards for a national program. Among its administrative provisions, for example, is one introduced by the Senate which should deter States from running amuck in the future. Specifically, the Secretary would be required to federalize disability determinations in a State, within 6 months of finding that the State is not in substantial compliance with Federal law and standards. While the Department of Health and Human Services' experience with "substantial compliance" in the AFDC program, which is State administered, suggests that the Secretary may have difficulty enforcing this provision, I would hope the States view it as "handwriting on the wall".

Substantively, the bill's major provision, a clearly defined medical improvement standard, has been strengthened, and more explicit treatment of pending court cases has been provided. The latter was urged by the Justice Department as a way of resolving the 40,000-plus cases pending in our Federal courts.

On the other hand, the Senate's original 3 year sunset date for medical improvement was deleted, saving beneficiaries, the administration, and many of you, my friends, from revisiting the issue in the near future. That isn't to say I think we have drafted the definitive standard for medical improvement. But I do think that we should permit the new standard to be implemented and tested fully before we evaluate it in terms of: First, equity for beneficiaries; second, feasibility of administration; and third, program costs. After that, we should take a long-range approach to any modifications. Current beneficiaries and the Social Security Administration need breathing space and relief from the program turmoil which began when we enacted the Disability Insurance Amendments of 1980.

This is not to say that other disability issues won't require attention in the near future. The bill itself requires the Secretary to submit a report by December 31, 1985, concerning pain, and a second report by July 1, 1986, on the impact of the continuation of benefits during the appeal process. Both issues promise to be sensitive, complex, and expensive in terms of long-range remedies. Further, I suggest that Congress may need to address administrative issues, which simplify or expedite an adjudicative process which has in these past 4 years—with the assistance of the Federal courts—become chaotic and unmanageable.

In the meantime, H.R. 3755 incorporates features which are necessary to reestablish the credibility of the continuing disability review, and I urge bipartisan support.

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CONABLE. I yield to the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CONTE].

Mr. CONTE. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the conference agreement for H.R. 3755, the Social Security Disability Amendments of 1984. And, although I don't want to take a lot of time, I feel compelled to express my admiration and respect for the chairman of the Social Security Subcommittee, JAKE PICKLE, who I know worked diligently to form a compromise on this legislation with the other body.

We need to send a strong signal to the disabled in America and pass this conference report overwhelmingly.

The bill establishes a comprehensive medical improvement standard for disability recipients that is more humane than the standard used in present law. The errors in the continuing reviews in 1981 are largely derived from, I believe, a lack of consistent, uniform medical improvement standards.

Another problem with present law is the fact that many disability recipients allege pain that cannot be found using regular medical techniques. That does not mean, however, that these people are not suffering pain, and to that end, the bill requires an evlauation of the causes of pain.

The bill also imposes a moratorium on all reviews of the mentally impaired, allows establishment of demonstration projects to provide face-to-face interviews for pretermination disability cases, provides continued disability benefits through the administrative appeals level, and requires published standards on the frequency of continuing disability reviews.

Mr. Speaker, the conference agreement is similar to legislation I have cosponsored and have sponsored in the past several months. I was proud to be a cosponsor of H.R. 3755 myself, and am pleased with the result from conference.

This legislation will help end the crisis in the disability program. It is a good bill, a bipartisan bill, fashioned as a realistic response to a serious problem. It deserves our unquestioning support.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CONABLE. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. REGULA. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference agreement on H.R. 3755, the Social Security disability amendments, and I would like to encourage my colleagues to do the same.

Over the last 2½ years there have been many problems which have plagued the Social Security Disability Insurance [SSDI] Program and its recipients.

It has been a hard fought battle to have this legislation brought to the House floor for a first vote and to achieve a successful conference. However, we have finally put the political games aside and concentrated on the individuals who have been harmed by the 1980 legislation.

This conference report will not alleviate all of the concerns we have with the disability program. But it will give these individuals a more fair review process as well as fairer standards of disability such as the consideration of multiple impairments.

I am pleased of the part I had along with my colleagues on the Select Committee on Aging in gaining bipartisan cosponsorship of H.R. 3755. The legislation is desperately needed and again I urge my colleagues in the House to help our disabled citizens and vote in favor of H.R. 3755.

Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CONABLE. I yield to the distinguished gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. JOHN PAUL HAMMERSCHMIDT].

Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, during the last 3 years we have debated various short-term and long-term solutions to the problems that arose from the 1980 amendments to the Social Security Act. I sincerely commend the chairman of the Social Security Subcommittee, Mr. PICKLE, and the banking minority member, Mr. ARCHER, for their tenacity and for their final achievement, H.R. 3755.

Medical improvement, one of the pivotal issues in the debate, is clearly improved by the language in this bill. I hope that when this provision becomes operational, the burden of proof will fall on the Social Security Administration and not on the claimant.

I also compliment the conferees on their provision for multiple impairments. There are many individuals, particularly the elderly, who suffer from a variety of medical conditions. Though each separate impairment might not be severe enough to prohibit someone from working, the combination of conditions can be totally disabling. H.R. 3755 takes an important step in recognizing the effects of multiple impairments in the determination of disability.

Since H.R. 6181 in 1982, through the emergency disability amendments which became incorporated in the Virgin Island tax bill, I have been one of the principal sponsors of the provision to continue benefits through the administrative law judge decision for those claimants who believe that they have been wrongly terminated. With some pride and gratitude, I commend the conferees for including this provision in the final bill.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the subcommittee chairman, the gentleman from Texas, Mr. JAKE PICKLE.

Mr. PICKLE. I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to call on all Members to support the passage of H.R. 3755, the Social Security Disability Benefits Reform Act of 1984. Passage of these amendments is of vital importance to the Social Security disability insurance system

The legislation before you today addresses the most critical issues facing the disability program.

First and foremost, we have provided for a medical improvement standard which spells out clearly the proper standard for continuing disability reviews. Under this conference agreement, benefits may be terminated for beneficiaries on the basis that they are no longer disabled only if there is substantial evidence that there has been any medical improvement in the individual's condition and that the individual is now able to engage in substantial gainful activity. If there has been no medical improvement, benefits may still be terminated if there is substantial evidence that the individual can perform substantial gainful activity and that he has benefited from technological advances in medical or vocational therapy. Benefits may also be terminated if there is substantial evidence that the impairment is not as disabling as originally thought, or that the original decision was reached erroneously or fraudulently.

I cover this provision in great detail because I want everyone to understand that this agreement is not intended to give a free ride to anyone. Neither does it put all the burden on anyone. It spells out the proper duties and responsibilities for both the Secretary and the disabled beneficiaries. The determination will be by weight of evidence, on a neutral basis.

This provision is close to the provision we passed in the House. We have not accepted the Senate proposal to put unfair burden of proof on the beneficiary.

Furthermore, we have responded to the concern of some that endless litigation will destroy this program. However, we have not, as the Senate proposed, denied relief in the courts for those beneficiaries who have suffered because of the faulty review process. We have, instead, stated in detail, the groups to which this standard will apply, and how they may obtain protection under it. The standard will apply to all future reviews, all cases in the administrative pipeline, and to everyone who has, in fact, turned to the Federal courts for judicial relief. Even in the case of unnamed plaintiffs in certified class actions, we are providing relief by requiring the Secretary to send notice via certified mail informing them that they have 120 days to file a request for a redetermination by the Secretary.

Second, we send a clear signal to the administration that the present policy of not acquiescing in decisions by the various U.S. circuit courts of appeals is not acceptable. Nowhere else does the Federal Government refuse in this manner to enforce the law as interpreted by the Federal circuit courts. The legal and constitutional issues raised by nonacquiescence can only be settled by the Supreme Court. However, regardless of the legal situation, the Secretary's current policies are clearly undesirable. The Secretary's refusal to broadly apply circuit court decisions forces beneficiaries to relitigate the same issue over and over, at great expense to both the beneficiaries and the Government. Such a circumstance should be avoided by the Secretary either through an appeal to the Supreme Court or through legislation from the Congress.

Third, in addition to these administrative reforms, this legislation resolves critical issues concerning disability benefits based on pain and multiple impairments.

With reference to pain, the conference agreement puts present regulatory policy into statute until January 1, 1987, and mandates that in the meantime, a study be conducted so that we might better deal with this very difficult issue. I know that many Members in both bodies are concerned about the fairness of our present policies and I would expect that as we continue to benefit from the progress of medical science, we will improve our laws in this regard.

In the area of multiple impairments, we have made real progress. Under the conference agreement, the effect of a combination of impairments, notone of which alone may be disabling, may now be considered when determining whether the person's impairment is medically severe enough to qualify him for benefits.

These are some of the most important provisions of the bill. I included the full summary of the conference agreement in yesterday's RECORD but I wanted to take just a minute to emphasize what has been accomplished.

Let me also remind the Members that today the program is in a state of chaos and if we do not act immediately to restore order, it will utterly collapse.

Perhaps my cry of alarm sounds exaggerated. It is not.

Already in over half the States, the disability program is being run by Federal court order or by orders of the Governor in opposition to the Federal guidelines set forth by the Secretary of Health and Human Services. As a result, we have no uniform national disability program today.

Our Federal courts are being beseached and besieged. On the dockets, there are over 40,000 disability review cases affecting nearly 200,000 former beneficiaries. These appeals represent the largest part of the Federal court caseload and are costing us millions of dollars in legal fees and court costs.

All of this has come about because in the past 3 years, the cases of 1.2 million beneficiaries have been given reviews resulting in an initial termination rate of over 40 percent. Since March 1981, nearly half a million disability beneficiaries have been told they would lose all their benefits because they were no longer disabled. But when these cases are appealed, the beneficiaries have had their benefits restored over 60 percent of the time. These reviews have been hasty, harsh and, in too many cases, wrong. This wholesale removal of people from the disability rolls is unprecedented. It has caused a furor all across the country. All of my colleagues in the Congress, on both sides of the aisle, are only too sadly aware of the resulting tragedy. In every district, horror story after horror story has emerged.

Earlier this year, you joined our committee in an overwhelming vote of 410–1, passing our House bill and sending a message that this situation was intolerable.

Finally, even the administration recognized that congressional action was essential. Following our vote in the House, they imposed a moratorium on further continuing disability reviews until reform legislation could be enacted and implemented.

That legislation is before you today. Getting it here has not been easy.

It has required months of long hard work. And I want to take a moment to compliment the leadership of my chairman, DAN ROSTENKOWSKI, and of all the House conferees. They have stayed with this legislation through thick and thin. I also want to acknowledge the contributions of Senator DOLE and his colleagues in the other body. Their willingness to keep working to reach a compromise has made it possible for us all to be here today and to enact this crucial legislation.

I would be remiss if I did not give special recognition to Congressman JIM SHANNON of Massachusetts. His was the original bill which has served as the catalyst for the agreement you have before you today and he, along with Congressman BERYL ANTHONY, has been instrumental in shaping these amendments.

Finally, I cannot emphasize enough to the Members that this has been a bipartisan effort from the beginning. All my colleagues on the other side of the aisle, and especially, Mr. CONABLE, Mr. ARCHER, and Mr. GRADISON deserve tremendous credit for their contributions over the past 2 years.

So, in conclusion, because this bill is desperately needed, because it has received strong bipartisan support, and because it is the right thing to do, I strongly urge you to support its passage today.

□ 1700

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. RATCHFORD].

Mr. RATCHFORD. Mr. Speaker, this is legislation that is critically needed. I know that there is a rush of the hour to get on with it, but for hundreds of thousands of people throughout these United States, they have faced the cruelty and inhumanity of being disqualified, not by an examination, not by face-to-face contact, but by the computer printout saying, "You are qualified to go back to work."

We need to put humanity back into the process. We need to be concerned for the human side of disability. We need to have sensitivity to people. All of this is contained in this legislation. It is the essence of compromise. It deserves our support.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to a respected member of our committee, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GRADISON].

Mr. GRADISON. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference agreement on H.R. 3755, the Social Security Disability Benefits Reform Act of 1984, and I compliment my subcommittee chairman, the gentleman from Texas, on the skill and perseverance that led to this agreement.

We know only too well that the social security disability program is in disarray. Many States are imposing their own standards. Courts of appeal are producing differing opinions, creating wide disparity as to what it takes to continue to receive disability benefits. The program's central headquarters is unable to do much more than react to current decisions. The program must be turned around and pointed in a positive direction.

H.R. 3755 makes necessary reforms in the administration of the social security disability program. Many of these reforms were initiated administratively by the Secretary of Health and Human Services in June 1983, and molded into statutory form by the Social Security Subcommittee. I am hopeful that these initiatives will make significant strides toward reestablishing the integrity of the disability program and ending beneficiary trauma.

Perhaps most important, the bill attempts to recreate this as a national program by establishing uniform guidelines for determining when a person's disability status should be continued. In particular, a person could only be terminated from the rolls if medical improvement is found.

However, it is still not entirely clear how the medical improvement standard will be implemented. Despite extensive consideration by the subcommittee and by the conferees, the statutory language is vague. The ambiguity in the language could allow either continued disability or termination status for persons who can do their old jobs.

My main concern with the conference report is the possibility of creating dual standards, one set for new applicants, and a different, more lenient, set for those already on the benefit rolls. If persons capable of working are allowed to collect benefits, then Congress will have taken disability policy for a full pendulum swing: From the lax standards of the 1970's to the harsh administration that was begun with the 1980 disability amendments, and back again to standards that are too lax. The only fair place for the pendulum to rest is in the middle, where only those who deserve to receive benefits, and all those deserving, do receive benefits.

This may be our last chance to achieve uniform standards of disability determination throughout the State-Federal system of disability adjudication. If this fails to create fair and consistent guidelines, then our next step may very well have to be to federalize the administration of the program.

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, I share the views of those who have spoken in that we do need to reform the disability review program. This bill moves in that direction. I do support the conference report.

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 3755. I thank Mr. PICKLE and the other House conferees for their diligent effort on behalf of the many Americans who must depend on the Social Security Disability Insurance Program for their subsistence. Particularly, the House conferees are to be commended for insisting on acceptance of the requirement that the Social Security Administration produce evidence of medical improvement before it terminates SSDI payments. I believe this requirement is the most important safeguard H.R. 3755 provides to recipients.

The final passage of H.R. 3755 will solve the problems of many Missourians who, in recent years, have brought to my attention the unfair and inequitable procedures previously applied by the administrators of the Social Security Disability Insurance Program. I testified early before the Social Security Subcommittee of the Ways and Means Committee on this program, and I am proud to be a cosponsor of this effort to establish fair procedures for those who are disabled and within the purview of the SSDI program.

But while I am pleased that we are about to pass H.R. 3755, I am disappointed that we have been forced to legislate fair procedures for terminating SSDI payments. After all, common decency alone dictates that SSDI payments should not be arbitrarily discontinued. The overwhelming support H.R. 3755 has received should be a clear message to the administrators of the SSDI program that Congress finds their attitude toward SSDI recipients totally unacceptable.

To paraphrase the late Hubert Humphrey, a man whose strong sense of compassion we all recognize and admire, one of the benchmarks by which a society is judged is the treatment it affords its less fortunate members. By that standard, the Nation can be proud that H.R. 3755 reaffirms our commitment to provide an adequate standard of living to those who cannot work because of physical or mental disabilities.

● Mr. ROYBAL. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference committee agreement on H.R. 3755, the Social Security Disability Reform Amendments of 1984, even though I am concerned that this bill will not permanently end the problems in the disability program. I commend the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PICKLE] for his strong leadership in shaping the House bill, and for his steadfast support of the House bill during conference committee negotiations.

Last spring the Aging Committee began a series of hearings to assess the reaction of State officials and Federal courts to the harsh interpretations of Federal law which SSA expected the States to carry out. The committee has documented the chaos in the program which has produced the constitutional conflict between the excecutive branch and the States and Federal courts.

Although I support the reforms encompassed in the compromise bill, I wish we were doing more for those already terminated from the program. The conference agreement provides for cases to be remanded to the reconsideration level, if they involve medical improvement, for all beneficiaries in the administrative pipeline; beneficiaries who have filed individual suits in the courts; and those beneficiaries in a certified class action suit. However, the bill does not redress the grievances of those who have accepted the government's decision due to lack of knowledge, ability, and/or funds to pursue their appeal. During the floor debate in March on the House disability bill, the late Congressman Perkins stated: "It excludes from remedial treatment that large group of persons who have suffered the most during the last three years." I am confident that if Congressman Perkins were here today, he would concur with my opinion that the compromise bill excludes a large group of disabled individuals.

The only way in which the hundreds of thousands of persons who have already suffered from the review process will be able to profit by these reforms is for the States, under their authority in current regulations and guidelines, to reopen and revise their determinations. I hope that Secretary Heckler will respond to the States valid requests to send case folders for a reevaluation.

In addition, I wish the compromise legislation included more of the House bill. SSA has a stated policy of not abiding by court decisions affecting its policies or procedures except in the specific case to which the ruling applies. The House bill would have resolved the constitutional conflict created by SSA's failure to fully implement or appeal court orders by requiring that SSA follow court rulings or appeal to the Supreme Court. Although the conference report language will criticize SSA for its policy of nonacquiesence, the bill will allow SSA to continue this unconstitutional policy. In regard to the issue of continuation of benefits through the administrative law judge [ALJ] level, all of the disability advocacy groups supported this provision on a permanent basis. The compromise bill continues benefits until December 1987 even though the financial and emotional hardships caused by the long processing time are permanent.

We have also missed an opportunity to give the Secretary of HHS more administrative flexibility to carry out the reviews than currently exists under the automatic 3-year review requirement. We should also delete the separate, more severe definition of disability established for disability widow(er)s. To encourage return to paid employment, we should provide better vocational rehabilitation and eliminate the work disincentives which keep some disabled persons on the disability rolls. In addition, there are stronger ways to assure the independence of administrative law judges than are contained in this legislation.

Despite my reservations, I do support the reform legislation. It has taken 3 years to bring us to this point and I urge all my colleagues to vote in favor of this legislation.●

● Mr. VANDERGRIFF. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of the conference agreement on H.R 3755, the Social Security Disability Reform Act of 1984, and call for its swift adoption. Each of us knows all too well the horror stories of those who have been forced off the disability rolls due to the current overzealous review process. Many of us have participated in hearings throughout the country in order to hear firsthand from former beneficiaries and State officials.

When Congress ordered a thorough review fo the disability rolls in 1980, it was anticipated that only those individuals who had adequately recuperated or who had fraudulently received benefits would be removed from the rolls. Congress most certainly did not anticipate that almost 500,000 people would be cut from the rolls in a period of 3 years. The fact that almost two-thirds of those who appealed were returned to the rolls after administrative review leads me to surmise that the cutoffs were made far too hastily or with disregard to congressional intent.

I was extremely pleased to see that we, in the House, voted so overwhelmingly to adopt disability reform legislation. I was pleased that the Senate followed our lead, although I do think our bill was superior. I was gratified that the administration finally took notice of the gravity of this situation and issued a moratorium on the review process this past April.

Mr. Speaker, it is high time we enact a legislative remedy. We have before us a good compromise which does not seek to expand the disability program. It will not jeopardize the solvency of the Social Security program. It simply seeks to ensure that those who are truly disabled do not unfairly lose their benefits. The disability program is almost 30 years old—and it is still a valid expression of this country's compassion for those who are unable to care for themselves.

Those of us who firmly believe in, and are committed to the continuance of Social Security, wish to commend all members of the conference committee. I personally wish to thank my colleague from Texas, The chairman of the Social Security Subcommittee, JAKE PICKLE, and the chairman of the Select Committee on Aging, ED ROYBAL, for their efforts in focusing in on the problem and finding a solution. I appreciate the fact that they were responsive to our concerns.

Again, I urge unanimous support for this legislation and am hopeful that it will be swiftly signed into law. Thank you.●

● Mr. SHANNON. Mr. Speaker, this legislation—the Social Security Disability Benefits Reform Act of 1984—is urgently needed, and I hope that it can be sent to the White House and signed into law as soon as is possible.

Had the Social Security Disability Insurance Program been administered in a fair and effective manner over the past 3 years, much of this legislation would not be necessary.

It is necessary because there are those in Government who made the egregious mistake of putting spending cuts before fairness and compassion.

That so many disabled Americans have been so unfairly and harshly treated by their government over the past 3 years is a national tragedy. With this legislation, we have a chance to undo some of the harm and put some fairness and humanity back into the process.

The provisions in this agreement—particularly those dealing with medical improvement, multiple impairments, revised standards for the mentally impaired, extension of benefits pending appeal, frequency of reviews, uniform standards, and other areas—will go a long way toward assuring that disabled workers receive the protection they need and are entitled to.

Other provisions—those requiring demonstration projects of face-to-face hearings at the initial stage of the appeals process, and a study of pain as a disabling condition—will set the stage for further improvements in the years ahead.

Given the major differences which existed between the House- and Senate-passed bills, I believe this conference agreement represents a good compromise package. I want to commend my colleagues on the Ways and Means Committee and those who served in conference for their hard work and dedication over the past 18 months. In particular, I want to express my deep appreciation for the effective leadership on this legislation provided by J.J. PICKLE, Chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee's Subcommittee on Social Security.

This conference agreement represents a solid achievement for those in Congress, on both sides of the aisle, in both the House and the Senate, who have worked long and hard in the effort to improve the Social Security Disability Insurance Program.

But the real victory and achievement belong to the hundreds of thousands of disabled workers in Massachusetts and across the country who want only to be treated fairly under the law.

In particular, it belongs to Damien Ivanof and Judy Fittery, both from Massachusetts. Mr. Ivanof and Ms. Fittery, were two of the first disabled workers to be improperly thrown off the rolls under the accelerated review of the disabled. They found out first hand how flawed the standards and procedures used by the Social Security Administration in assessing ability to work were, and they committed themselves to fixing a good program gone awry.

It is a tribute to their determination and persistence that we have a chance to send this major reform bill to the President.

And it is their determination and persistence which will prevent this administration—or any administration—from abusing the disabled and denying them what is their right in the future.

I urge all my colleagues to strongly support this measure.●

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the conference report.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the conference report.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. PICKLE. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

So the conference report was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EMERGENCY WETLANDS RESOURCES ACT OF 1983

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 579 and rule XXIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 3082).

□ 1724

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 3082) to promote the conservation of migratory waterfowl and to offset or prevent the serious loss of wetlands by the acquisition of wetlands and other essential habitat, and for other purposes, with Mr. MCCURDY in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the first reading of the bill is dispensed with.

Under the rule, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. JONES] will be recognized for 30 minutes, the gentleman from Alaska [Mr. YOUNG] will be recognized for 30 minutes, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SEIBERLING] will be recognized for 15 minutes, the gentleman from Alaska [Mr. YOUNG] will be recognized for 15 minutes, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ROE] will be recognized for 15 minutes, and the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. STANGELAND] will be recognized for 15 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. JONES].

Mr. JONES of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, H.R. 3082, the Emergency Wetlands Resources Act is designed to encourage active conservation of migratory waterfowl and to deter and stop further loss of wetlands by increasing the price of the duck stamp, and allowing the Fish and Wildlife Service to charge entrance fees in certain refuges.

Title II of the legislation establishes a "Wetlands Conservation Fund," transfers $75 million from the Land and Water Conservation Fund to this new fund annually for a 10-year period, and authorizes $75 million for appropriation from this fund each year through 1994.

Title III of the legislation accelerates the national wetlands inventory and authorizes an additional $14.5 million for each fiscal year through 1987 and $6.75 million annually from fiscal years 1988 through 1999 in order to complete the inventory.

The Wetlands Acquisition Act is amended to forgive the debt, and the land and water conservation fund is amended to allow moneys to be expended for wetlands acquisition.

Title IV of the legislation allows the Army Corps of Engineers to use the necessary land from the Cape Hatteras National Seashore and the Pea Island National Wildlife Refuge to carry out the Manteo (Shallowbag) Bay project, commonly called the Oregon Inlet project. Title IV also states that no moneys can be expended for construction of the project until a favorable cost/benefit ratio is published.

I would like to emphasize that title IV is not an authorization for the project. The project was authorized in 1970. Title IV does not appropriate any money. Even if this legislation is enacted into law, I would still have to go to the Appropriations Committee and make a case for the money. Title IV permits the corps to use the land necessary to anchor the jetties and that is all.

Mr. Chairman, this legislation—and Title IV in particular—has been extensively reviewed and favorably reported by three committees, including the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, which—I might add—reported the bill by unanimous voice vote, the Committee on Public Works and Transportation, and the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs. The Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee held hearings on title IV in early August 1983 and reported H.R. 3082 on October 25, 1983. The other two committees were given a sequential referral for a period ending no later than March 6, 1984. This whole process took approximately 8 months. My point is that each committee thoroughly considered the pros and cons of this legislation, and each committee favorably reported the bill. I would like to add that this legislation is the outgrowth of a strong bipartisan coalition including the entire North Carolina House delegation, Senator JESSE HELMS, Senator JOHN EAST, Governor Jim Hunt, and all the local government officials. The State and the citizens of North Carolina are very strongly behind the passage of title IV of H.R. 3082.

The U.S. Coast Guard advised the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee that it handled some 100 cases related to groundings and search and rescue operations in the immediate area of Oregon Inlet during fiscal year 1983. In connection with these cases, ten lives were saved, 394 other persons were assisted, about $4 million in property loss was prevented, property valued at about $22 million was assisted, and the Coast Guard managed to hold property damages to a minimum of $118,000.

Since 1971, nine people have been killed in that inlet. The fishermen of this area are being asked to risk their lives to make a living. They are forced to land their catches at other ports many miles distant and pay the costs in time and money when the inlet is too rough to cross. A modern commercial seafood complex to accommodate large scale seafood handling and processing operations for both domestic and foreign markets has been developed at Wanchese, NC, at a cost of nearly $8 million in Federal and State moneys, yet this facility stands virtually idle because businessmen cannot afford to locate where they cannot depend on a regular supply of fish. Stabilization of the inlet would provide the assurances necessary to make this a going concern and to open up more than 600 jobs in a chronically underemployed area. A reliable navigation channel at Oregon Inlet will produce economic benefits for a broad area in northeastern North Carolina.

The fishermen of this area are a very independent breed of people. Their families have lived on these outer banks for generations. They welcomed passage of the Fishery Conservation Management Act of 1976, which established a 200-mile zone and offered the American fisherman an opportunity to compete with the heavily subsidized foreign fishing fleets. Such competition required that they go farther out to sea, stay longer at sea, and catch more fish. It was also necessary that these fishermen upgrade their equipment and build larger boats to accommodate the increased demands. The fishermen of North Carolina met these challenges but now find that, despite their best efforts, the instability of Oregon Inlet makes it increasingly difficult for them to make a livelihood.

Mr. Chairman, the bill before us today will not resolve these problems but it is an important step toward stabilizing Oregon Inlet and the economy of northeastern North Carolina and I ask the assistance of my colleagues in making this possible.

Mr. Chairman, that concludes my statement, and I reserve the balance of my time.

□ 1730

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Alaska [Mr. YOUNG].

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 3082, the Emergency Wetlands Resources Act of 1983, and urge my colleagues to also support this worthwhile bill.

H.R. 3082 was introduced on May 23, 1983, by our late colleague, Edwin B. Forsythe of New Jersey. The bill was subject to hearings in three committees of the House—the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, the Committee on Public Works and Transportation, and the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs—and all three reported the bill favorably with amendments. The amendment which Chairman WALTER B. JONES of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries had inserted in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD for September 11, 1984, and which the rule makes in order as original text, incorporates all of the suggested amendments passed by those committees together with some minor technical corrections.

The need to conserve our Nation's wetlands for their value as critical wintering, breeding, and resting habitat for migratory waterfowl has long been recognized. In addition to providing recreational hunting opportunities to more than 8 million waterfowl hunters, who each spend between $100 and $500 per year in pursuit of their sport, our Nation's magnificent migratory waterfowl provide aesthetic satisfaction to all.

Numerous other species also find homes in wetlands, including mink, beaver, muskrat, raccoon, and nutria, which support a multimillion-dollar per year fur trapping industry. An estimated 66 percent of the Nation's recreational and commercial fish and shellfish species, which contribute several billion dollars to the Nation's economy, depend on coastal marshes for at least part of their life cycle.

Wetlands have other, perhaps even more valuable, functions in decreasing flood flows, trapping and filtering pollutants, and recharging ground water supplies.

Approximately half of the 250 million acres of wetlands—which are estimated to have existed in the United States prior to our colonial period—have disappeared, and the continuing destruction of these areas poses a serious threat to the Nation's economy as well as its environmental well-being.

I believe that the demonstrated value and need for preservation of certain important wetlands, coupled with the alarming decreases still in evidence, requires us to take emergency actions at this time.

The legislation is broadly supported and the time is ripe for its passage.

Title I of H.R. 3082 includes measures which would increase revenues going into the Migratory Bird Conservation Fund. The fund was originally established in 1934 and funded with the receipts from the sale of migratory bird hunting and conservation stamps, known popularly as duck stamps. The Wetlands Loan Act, originally passed in 1961, authorized $200 million as a loan to the Migratory Bird Conservation Fund against future duck stamp receipts.

Title I would authorize the Secretary of the Interior to establish admission fees at certain national wildlife refuges to be used to augment the Migratory Bird Conservation Fund. Individuals who hold valid duck stamps for golden eagle passports would be admitted without paying further fees.

This title also would increase the price of the duck stamp from its current level of $7.50 to $15 over a 5-year period. Surprisingly, this increase is broadly supported by waterfowl hunters who recognize the need to protect the diminishing wetlands habitat.

Title II of H.R. 3082 establishes a new program for State and Federal wetlands acquisition. Funding for the program is provided by a transfer of $75 million from the Land and Water Conservation Fund to a new Wetlands Conservation Fund. Up to $50 million is made available to the States to provide up to 75 percent of the cost of eligible projects. Funds would be allocated based on the States' past commitment to wetland conservation projects and a priority system for wetlands protection to be developed by the Secretary. Funds not allocated to the States would be available to the Secretary of the Interior for Federal acquisitions, which would then become part of the National Wildlife Refuge System.

Title II also increases the authorization for the Land and Water Conservation Fund from $900 million to $975 million and extends that authorization through 1994.

Title III of H.R. 3082 provides for an accelerated continuation of the national Wetlands Inventory Program which has been the source of valuable information on the status and trends of wetlands losses in the United States. This title also would require the Secretary of the Interior to prepare a report and recommendations regarding those losses and management alternatives for wetlands conservation.

Title III also deletes the requirement that, following expiration of the Wetlands Loan Act, repayment must be made in the amount of three-quarters of the annual duck stamp receipts each year until the debt is paid off. This provision was included based on the unanimous recommendation of all witnesses who testified concerning this legislation.

The Land and Water Conservation Funds Act is amended by title III to allow for flexibility in the use of moneys from that fund to acquire migratory waterfowl areas.

Title IV of H.R. 3082 allows the Secretary of the Army to use such land from the Cape Hatteras National Seashore and the Pea Island National Wildlife Refuge as he deems necessary in order to start and to carry out the Manteo (shallow bag) Bay project which was authorized in the Rivers and Harbors Act of 1970.

The Secretary of the Army is directed to confer with the Secretary of the Interior before and during construction in order to avoid, if possible, or minimize adverse impacts and to maintain the essential integrity to the Department of the Interior units to the extent possible, recognizing the need to carry out the project.

Finally, title IV provides that no funds may be expended to carry out the Manteo Bay project unless a cost/benefit analysis of the project discloses a favorable cost/benefit ratio.

This title has been the source of considerable controversy. However, all three committees which were given jurisdiction over this legislation had hearings which discussed the Manteo Bay project in detail, and all three committees reported it favorably. Mr. Chairman, the evidence given before these three committees regarding the need for action at Oregon Inlet is overwhelming. The risk of loss of life and property is frightening—and will continue so, until the project has been carried out. This project has been studied for the past 14 years; the cost/benefit studies are favorable; and it is long past time to get on with it.

Mr. Chairman, in conclusion, I believe that this entire bill is extremely worthwhile and would urge my colleagues to support all four titles.

Mr. JONES of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. DYSON].

Mr. DYSON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of H.R. 3082, the Emergency Wetlands Resources Act.

This legislation makes an important step forward in the continuing effort to protect the Nation's wetlands. As my colleagues know, protecting this type of land is vital to coastal areas of the country because of their importance for supporting many types of fish and wildlife.

In my own district, much of the property bordering the Chesapeake Bay is a prime example of the productivity that these areas can have.

In addition, I intend to support title IV of the bill which would authorize the construction of jetties at the Oregon Inlet on North Carolina's Outer Banks. The Army Corps of Engineers has recently determined that this project has a favorable cost-benefit ratio and would provide the only means of keeping the Oregon Inlet open for navigation for the entire year.

I want to commend the chairman of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, Representative WALTER JONES, for his able leadership on this bill. As one of his colleagues on the committee, I believe he has crafted a responsible and balanced approach to wetlands protection and taken the steps necessary to guarantee that the Oregon Inlet project is worthwhile expenditure by the Corps of Engineers.

I urge my colleagues to support the bill as amended by the Jones substitute and oppose the amendment to delete title IV dealing with the Oregon Inlet to be offered by the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. Chairman, I think it is important to emphasize again this project has been authorized for 14 years. It is not a new thing. I think to take it out now would not be cost productive.

Mr. JONES of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. BENNETT].

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. Chairman, I have long been interested in the preservation of the beautiful marsh lands of the St. Johns and Nassau Rivers in northeast Florida. The Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee Report on this bill (Rept. 98-440, part 1, page 19) recognizes the value of this area to our Nation's wetlands system by providing priority consideration to the St. Johns River habitat in the Secretary of Interior's establishment of a priority conservation plan.

I would like to make clear that the reference to "the wetlands along the St. Johns River in Florida" in the report refers as well to the marshes that extend along the northern border of the St. Johns River to the Nassau River.

Mr. JONES of North Carolina. I say to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. BENNETT] that the committee agrees that yours is an agreeable request and that certainly the marshes of the Nassau River as part of the St. Johns River system come within the intended meaning of the committee in its report to accompany the bill.

Mr. BENNETT. I thank the gentleman.

□ 1740

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. MARTIN], to speak in favor of this legislation.

Mr. MARTIN of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, Oregon Inlet is the access to the fertile coastal fishing grounds of North Carolina between Cape Hatteras and as far north as Norfolk. A rich prize of some $10 million to $15 million a year in fishing income awaits within 20 miles of this inlet. The State of North Carolina has invested $8 million in a seafood industrial park at Wanchese on historic Roanoke Island.

Yet the trawler fleet that once swelled to 100 boats, with a potential for over 200, has dwindled to only 40 to 45, operating mainly when weather is settled. The North Carolina industrial park has few plants in operation, providing little winter seasonal employment to complement summer tourism jobs. Trawlers that go fishing on one day often find the inlet impassable when they return, forcing them to gamble equipment and lives on a tough choice whether to use limited fuel to head 80 miles north to Norfolk or attempt to round treacherous Cape Hatteras or ride out the storm and try to find the new channel of Oregon Inlet that surely will have been moved by the storm's currents.

Over the years, attempts have been made to dredge an inlet fairway, without success. The channel migrates and silts in during a storm, and a bar quickly builds.

Many of our colleagues represent fishing fleets all around our coasts and can attest to the courage and the determination of those who go out to sea to put seafood on our tables. Yet most of them have a dependable inlet channel. In northeastern North Carolina, we do not.

I have myself several times been through Oregon Inlet in good weather. It has a tremendous potential for sport and commercial fishing. I would not want to be in it during or just after a storm. I have gotten to know some of the men who work those waters and was taken on an inspection tour recently by Capt. Willie Etheridge, Jr., aboard his trawler, Sonya Glen, and I saw the remains of the wreck Lois Joyce which foundered in January 1983. I have discussed the inlet's conditions with officers of the local Coast Guard station who rely on Oregon Inlet for access to endangered vessels offshore, and they tell me that this project, unless it is completed, to stabilize the channel with jetties, we will surely lose what is left of our fleet, we will lose the shore on the south, we will lose the Coast Guard station, and lose the southern end of the bridge. You see erosion is a problem now.

This aerial photograph, with the upper end of it representing the East—it would be handled this way—this aerial photograph was taken in 1962. It shows the inlet from here to here. It also shows, in various lines, the way in which the inlet has shifted by half its width over the intervening couple of decades, to where the northern end has now moved down in this direction, right up to the passable span of the bridge, while the southern end has been steadily eroded, believed to be within 5 years of taking out the southern end of the bridge, as well as the Coast Guard station there.

It is important to have a concern for the environment, but we are not getting much cooperation from the environment itself. After 34 years of proof that dredging alone cannot provide a dependable channel, it is now clear that the dual jetties are the lowest cost structures capable of withstanding the North Atlantic's rough winter storm waves and preserving this inlet for our fishing fleets.

The stabilized inlet will improve the natural exchange of waters in the marshes of the Pamlico and Albemarle Sounds and their broad tributaries.

A stable inlet will improve the outflow after storm tides build up in the sounds, reducing the tendency to overrun the banks.

It will bring back the fleet and ensure year round employment for the hardy families of historic Dare County.

Mr. Chairman, I came back here today because of the importance of this project to northeastern North Carolina. I came back to ask for a vote against the amendment to be offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SEIBERLING] and for the stabilization of Oregon Inlet.

Mr. JONES of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. CLARKE].

Mr. CLARKE. Mr. Chairman, I thank my distinguished colleague from North Carolina, the chairman of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, for providing me this time to speak in support of H.R. 3082, the Emergency Wetlands Resources Act.

I would like to direct my remarks to title IV of the bill which permits the use of Federal land for construction of that twin jetties project at Oregon Inlet, which was authorized by Congress in 1970.

The Corps of Engineers recently reanalyzed the cost and benefits of constructing these twin jetties, and I am pleased to say that they show a sizeable benefit for this project. During the consideration of this measure in the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee, on which I serve, I offered an amendment to prohibit construction of the jetties unless a favorable benefit-to-cost ratio was established. The corps' recently released study shows that the economic and safety benefits will outstrip the cost of building these twin jetties.

In his testimony before the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee in support of the bill earlier this year, Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr., of North Carolina provided some figures which I believe deserve mention as to the economic impact the construction of the jetties will have in this area.

Currently more than 200 commercial fishing vessels from coastal northeastern North Carolina use Oregon Inlet on a regular basis when channel conditions permit. Creating a stabilized channel will make possible regular year-round passage through the inlet, reduce vessel operating costs, and bolster a beleaguered seafood park situated about 6 miles from the inlet.

The State of North Carolina, in cooperation with the Federal Government, has committed substantial resources to developing a modern commercial seafood industrial park at Wanchese to accommodate large seafood handling and processing operators for both domestic and foreign markets. If regular passage for large fishing vessels through Oregon Inlet can be assured, the Wanchese Harbor can provide close to 500 primary jobs and an additional 125 jobs related to park operators. This will mean about $3 million annually in direct wage benefits. It is estimated that capital investment by commercial firms will exceed $15 million if private investment can be attracted to a safe and reliable inlet. This will have a significant ripple effect in the surrounding area, benefiting a region which has one of the highest unemployment rates in the Southeast.

Oregon Inlet is the only feasible access for a large part of North Carolina's fishing fleet. Despite the fact that the Corps of Engineers has done intensive dredging in recent years to maintain a safe channel for navigation in the past 2 years winter storms have wiped out the channel improvement in a very short time.

Mr. Chairman, unless there is sure, year-round passage through this channel North Carolina's fishermen cannot operate the deep draft, modern vessels needed to compete in Atlantic fishing. Without this access private investors won't fund fish processing facilities at Wanchese Seafood Industrial Park which was established with State and Federal funds received years ago.

Safety is another key consideration in the construction of the jetties at Oregon Inlet. Year-round access through the inlet is critical for the Coast Guard's Oregon Inlet Station which responds to hundreds of distress calls each year. When the inlet is closed to navigation Coast Guard patrol boats have to travel more than 125 miles to respond to distress calls that could be only 2 or 3 miles from the inlet. Three vessels have been lost in this area in the past several years, and eight lives have been lost. The safety of North Carolina's fisherman and that of other vessels is at stake.

The sand bypass system designed for the jetties should provide sufficient sand for the southern part of the inlet and prevent an increase in beach erosion. I believe that this will satisfy the environmental concerns which have been raised and insure the protection of the beaches.

I urge your support for H.R. 3082.

Mr. JONES of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. LAGOMARSINO].

□ 1750

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the amendment which will be offered to delete title IV of the Emergency Wetlands Resources Act, which would allow the construction of harmful jetties at Oregon Inlet, NC.

I believe there are two issues which must be seriously considered by this body with regard to the Oregon Inlet project: The environment and the cost. It appears from the numerous studies conducted for this project that construction of the jetties will result in severe erosion to Cape Hatteras National Seashore and Pea Island National Wildlife Refuge. Consequently, the project is strongly opposed by the National Park Service and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

It seems very questionable to me, Mr. Chairman, that we at one time set aside these areas to be protected and now we are considering action that could result in their destruction. If there were no other alternatives allowing the construction of this project, then its resulting damage might be OK. However, I am told dredging, which has been successfully tested at Oregon Inlet, is a far better alternative. It is relatively inexpensive and creates no adverse environmental effects.

Second, we must be concerned about the expense. The public is demanding that we reduce the budget deficits, as well as should, and unjustifiable projects such as Oregon Inlet are certainly a good place to begin.

As has been pointed out already in the debate on the rule, the National Taxpayers Union opposes this project for that reason. Construction of the jetties is estimated to cost $100 million plus $4 million a year to maintain. If we are going to get serious about reducing the deficits, let us begin here.

Mr. Chairman, it appears to me that the economic analysis of this project is riddled with errors, and the stated benefits have been perhaps grossly overestimated. To place our stamp of approval on this project would be to do a grave injustice to the taxpayers and the environment.

I urge all my colleagues to support the amendment. Mr. Chairman, I do support the rest of the bill. Preservation of wetlands is important and this bill will help a great deal.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, to make the record clear, the administration supports the enactment of H.R. 3082. The official position is there is no opposition from the Park Service or Fish and Wildlife Agencies, I want to make that clear for the RECORD.

Mr. Chairman, I strongly support the passage of the bill in its entirety as passed out of the committees. I believe this is the appropriate process we should follow, and when the appropriate time comes up we will discuss the amendment of the gentleman from Ohio, but, hopefully my colleagues will understand the committees have reviewed the cost analysis. It has been, again, as the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. CLARKE] mentioned, there has been a further review by the Corps of Engineers. He has changed his position after the study. It should become law.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. JONES of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. MOODY].

Mr. MOODY. I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Chairman, I just have a brief question of the gentleman from Alaska who just spoke. Did I hear the gentleman to say that the administration supports title IV?

I yield to the gentleman for his response.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. The gentleman did hear me say that, and I want to clarify that. I was misreading the statement. It says, "the administration would support the enactment of H.R. 3082 if title II is amended to reduce the amounts annually transferred from the land and water conservation fund to the wetlands conservation fund from $75 million to $27.5 million, and to delete the unnecessary $75 million annual increase in the authorized ceiling for the LWCF," land and water conservation fund. It does not mention the Oregon Inlet and the cost factor has been brought up on this discussion. That is what I was referring to. It was not related to, and the gentleman from California was specifically indentifying the Oregon Inlet amendment that will be offered because the Park Service is against it and the Fish and Wildlife Department was against it. In this statement, they are only against the total amount of moneys that would be transferred.

Mr. MOODY. The administration as such, either through the OMB or whatever, are they taking a position on title IV?

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. No, they are not. By not taking a position, there is absolutely no opposition to it.

Mr. MOODY. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. JONES of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Chairman, what is the intention of the Chair? Are we going to continue debate, are we going to rise at 6 o'clock, or are we going to finish the bill? Really, where is the leadership of this House at this time?

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the members from the Public Works Committee and the Interior Committee may be recognized. But the manager of the bill can make a motion that the committee rise pursuant to an agreement with the leadership.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. My question is, I have how much time left from the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has 16 minutes remaining.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Sixteen minutes. If I cannot reserve the balance of that time for that committee, is it transferred to the Interior Committee?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman can reserve the balance of his time as the ranking minority member of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SEIBERLING] is recognized for 15 minutes.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. SEIBERLING. Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. SEIBERLING. May I ask the Chairman what time it is the intention to complete the House's official business this evening, because I do not want to overrun that time.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair does not dictate the schedule but will entertain a motion by the manager of the bill at any time that the Committee rise.

Mr. SEIBERLING. Mr. Chairman, can the gentleman from North Carolina tell me what his intention is?

I yield to the gentleman for his response.

Mr. JONES of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I would say to the gentleman from Ohio that the chairman would like to conclude as much debate tonight as possible. Please proceed.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SEIBERLING] is recognized for 15 minutes.

Mr. SEIBERLING. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, although I support the first three titles of this bill, I strongly oppose title IV, and will offer an amendment to strike out title IV when we reach it under the 5-minute rule. Unless deleted, title IV would authorize the removal of about 150 key acres from a national seashore and a wildlife refuge for the purpose of creating a pair of mile-long jetties at Oregon Inlet, a channel that separates two of the long barrier islands that constitute Cape Hatteras National Seashore and Pea Island National Wildlife Refuge. Such authorization is necessary because the jetties will require use of part of Cape Hatteras National Seashore, and the Secretary of Interior has refused to approve such use. There are three fundamental objections to this project.

The first objection is essentially an aesthetic one; namely, the incompatibility with the scenic values of this magnificent national park—Cape Hatteras National Seashore—of two huge mile-long breakwaters extending out from each side of the inlet and requiring about 150 acres of the national seashore and the wildlife refuge for their base and for construction materials and equipment.

The second problem is even more serious, and that is the probable physical effect on the National Seashore and Pea Island National Wildlife Refuge. We had testimony in our subcommittee from noted marine geologists that such jetties will result in severe erosion to the north along the beaches of Cape Hatteras National Seashore and even affecting private beachfront property at South Nags Head.

□ 1800

Erosion is expected to be particularly severe for 12 miles or more to the south along the dunes that protect the Pea Island National Wildlife Refuge.

The third fundamental objection is financial. This project was originally authorized in 1970, and the estimated construction cost then was only $16.5 million. Today, the Corps of Engineers estimates the construction cost at approximately $100 million. Amortizing that cost and adding in the cost of maintaining the 20-foot channel and attempts to maintain the sand flow to the beaches through dredging comes to almost $12 million a year. So the total cost over the 50-year projected life of this project, would be about $600 million, in 1984 dollars. By contrast the corps estimated that, without the jetties, the corps could maintain a serviceable 14-foot channel at a cost of about $2.5 to $3.5 million a year, or $125 to $175 million over 50 years. After the jetties are built, sand bypassing alone is expected to cost $3½ million annually. Moreover, estimates do not include the cost of additional jetties for miles in either direction and other measures that will inevitably become necessary to prevent disastrous erosion of these narrow barrier islands resulting from the construction of the Oregon Inlet jetties.

Perhaps the aerial photograph to my right will help give you a proper perspective on those barrier islands and Oregon Inlet and I will now try to describe what you are seeing here in a little more detail.

Here we have on the right side of this photograph a portion of Cape Hatteras National Seashore. Cape Hatteras is down here at the bottom and Oregon Inlet is right at this point.

Observe how narrow this strip is and this is what protects this entire bay here from the full force of the ocean and I might say, Cape Hatteras is well-known as the graveyard of ships.

From Cape Henry in Virginia down to Cape Fear over 500 vessels have been sunk over the years at various points along this coast.

So we are talking about the most dynamic seashore and sea environment on the east coast.

Marine geologists told our subcommittee that Oregon Inlet is part of the most dynamic energy system on the Atlantic Seaboard. One and one-half million cubic yards of sand flow past the mouth of the inlet each year. Since Oregon Inlet was blown open by a hurricane in 1846, it has been moved by the force of the ocean southward at an average rate of 75 feet per year and toward the mainland at the rate of 5 to 6 feet per year. Think about it. Since 1846, the ocean has moved this inlet south by over 10,000 feet and shoreward by over 750 feet.

The barrier islands continue to exist despite these tremendous forces, because the currents themselves move the sand laterally along the beaches, replenishing the sand washed away by storms. However, once this flow of sand is blocked by structures such as the proposed jetties, sand accumulates in some places and not others. The beaches starved of sand get narrower and narrower and eventually the ocean breaks through, wiping out a chunk of barrier island. You can see from the picture how narrow and fragile these barrier islands are. I remind you that Oregon Inlet itself was the product of just such a breakthrough 140 years ago. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. MARTIN] erroneously implied that the jetties will stop the erosive power of the sea. On the contrary it will merely divert them to other parts of the barrier islands.

These dynamic forces, unaltered by such structures, have created the present beautiful area that is rich in wildlife, and fisheries of great diversity. That's why the Congress created Cape Hatteras National Seashore on both sides of Oregon Inlet, including Pea Island National Wildlife Refuge on the south.

Mr. MARTIN of North Carolina. Would the gentleman yield?

Mr. SEIBERLING. The gentleman can get his own time from the committee.

Mr. MARTIN of North Carolina. Would the gentleman who mentioned my name——

Mr. SEIBERLING. You have plenty of time; I only have 15 minutes.

Mr. MARTIN of North Carolina. I do not have any more time. The gentleman mentioned my name and characterized my remarks.

Mr. SEIBERLING. I merely said they were in error.

Mr. MARTIN of North Carolina. Would the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. SEIBERLING. No; I do not yield at this time, I am sorry.

I will ask the staff to remove the first picture.

Mr. Speaker, here is a blowup or closeup of Oregon Inlet and here we have drawn in on each side as best we could since the Corps of Engineers has yet to adopt a specific plan, the proposed jetties projecting out approximately a mile from their base.

Here you have the proposed sand bypassing operation which will pump sand that accumulates on the north of this jetty along across the bridge through a pipe and over to this side of this jetty.

In addition to these intrusions, the construction of these jetties will significantly reduce the recreation use along Oregon Inlet. This is now the most heavily used area in the seashore.

A major campground will be disrupted and considering the fact that the proposed sand bypass system will operate just offshore during the peak recreation season with all the noise of machinery and huge diesel engines, I doubt that anyone will be able to enjoy the kind of outdoor camping experience that visitors to our national parks are entitled to expect. And what about the fishing and bathing use of the beaches? That dredging machinery on the northside of the inlet will be pumping hugh mounds of sand and muddy water onto the southside's beach all summer long. So even if visitors could climb over the spoil mounds, the silt and debris in the water will make fishing or swimming an unattractive prospect.

Let me read to you from a letter that Assistant Secretary of Interior G. Ray Arnett earlier this year wrote about a 1982 study by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, which found that the jetties project "is not compatible with the purpose for which the (Pea Island National Wildlife) Refuge was established." The study showed the jetties project "would create conditions, including accelerated erosion, that would significantly alter the refuge environment, resulting in the deterioration or elimination of wildlife habitat and certain wildlife-related public uses." End of quote. That is from Assistant Secretary Arnett.

We should not permit this kind of degradation to one of our national seashores unless there are very compelling reasons. No such reasons have been demonstrated in this case.

We have no clear indication the jetties will even work—at least not without inordinate—and presently unplanned for—expenditure of Federal funds. The Corps of Engineers testimony pointed out that the project will require an efficient sand bypass system to move about 1 million cubic yards of sand around the jetties each year. Yet the design of this system has never been finalized and will rely upon an experimental floating breakwater to function. If for some reason the bypass system is not "efficient," Pea Island to the south of Oregon Inlet will erode away in a few years—unless, of course, we expend more Federal money for more jetties or dredging or both in a beach renourishment program. Even if the system does work, the scientists at our hearing said that erosion will still rapidly increase both north and south of the inlet for distances of 12 or more miles. They also testified that by putting up these rock walls and thereby limiting the ability of Oregon Inlet to expand and release water surges created by severe storms, there is increased potential for blowouts—water breaking through the barrier island at some other narrow, low elevation point, possibly even through populated Nags Head. Such a blowout, if it occurs in a heavily populated area, such as Nags Head, would almost certainly result in significant loss of life and property damage. We should have very compelling reasons before increasing the odds of this happening.

Much has been made of the need for these jetties to save the lives of fishermen who must risk the ocean waters during the winter fishing season. I am very sympathetic to that problem and certainly would not want anyone to be placed in a position of unreasonable risk going in and out of Oregon Inlet. The entire outer banks is a notorious graveyard of ships, with over 500 vessels sunk there over the years. But proponents of this project have consistently overstated the loss of life in Oregon Inlet because of unsafe conditions. Mr. Eric Olson of the Wilderness Society analyzed Coast Guard records and local newspaper accounts for the last 15 years. According to these records, of the eight people on commercial vessels who died in Oregon Inlet over the last 15 years, five were in accidents that were officially attributed to causes other than unsafe conditions in the inlet. The other three were lost in a single accident involving a vessel with a history of engine and communication equipment failure. No distress call was received and there were no definitive conclusions reached about this accident. I do not mean to imply that inlet conditions are not dangerous at times, but I think recent study clearly shows that conditions during the last 15 years have not been as hazardous as represented by proponents and they can be corrected at far lower cost.

When this boondoggle was authorized by the Congress in 1970 the estimated cost was $16.5 million and the project was given a favorable benefit/cost ratio. In 1975 the corps completed their post authorization economic analysis and reported a favorable economic basis for the project. But on September 30, 1982, Assistant Secretary of the Army William Gianelli said in a letter to Senator EAST and I quote: "* * * the 1975 economic analysis contained a fundamental error which resulted in a substantial overstatement of the project's benefits." We had testimony that the "overstatement of benefits" was by some 70 percent. The resulting adjustment produced a negative benefit/cost ratio of 0.34 to 1.0. The corps testified that a new economic study would be completed by June 30, 1984.

This study was actually released on August 6, 1984. The transmittal letter signed by the Acting Assistant Secretary of the Army, Robert K. Dawson, carefully avoids endorsing the Corps of Engineers study, referring to it as a "* * * review of the economics for the authorized project," and further says: "There are a number of previously discussed unresolved environmental concerns that continue to require analysis before further action is taken within the administration."

The report says the project has a favorable benefit/cost ratio at 7.125 percent interest of 1.4 to 1. The estimated initial cost is $99 million.

In view of the nonendorsement of the Secretary of the Army and the fact that the Department of the Interior had not been given an opportunity to review the report, I arranged for the report to be reviewed by several economists, Dr. David Campbell, Dr. Richard Rice, Dr. Ray Stanton, Dr. Michael Taussig, Mr. Ross Gorte, and Dr. Ivar Strand.

In the opinion of these experts there are a number of theoretical and practical errors in the estimation of benefits and costs that make it highly doubtful the project is feasible. Let me summarize a few of the errors they found:

The use of 7.125 percent interest is authorized, but the Federal Government is currently borrowing money at 12.5 percent. This project should be computed at that rate. If it were, it would not be feasible.

The corps overstates the estimated increase in fish landings of currently harvested species as a result of the project. For instance: Bluefish catch is projected to increase by 8,400,000 pounds annually to a 10-million-pound annual level. This one species accounts for 41 percent of all increases expected for the traditional species. Yet bluefish, the east coast's most popular recreational fish already is being taken at nearly the maximum sustainable yield level.

The corps fails to account for the resulting fall in fish prices due to the increased supply, that is if the project does stimulate an increase in landings as claimed.

There is a question of equity. The Federal taxpayer will pay nearly all of the cost and the benefits will accrue only to a very small area of northeastern North Carolina. If migratory fish are caught by fishermen from Wanchese as is estimated then there will be reduced harvests elsewhere.

The report says the harvest of striped bass—rockfish—will increase by 130,000 pounds because of the project. The Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee just completed consideration of a bill—H.R. 5492—to protect the striped bass along the whole Atlantic seaboard because of the population decline. Commercial catches have declined by 90 percent in 10 years and many coastal States are considering restricting all commercial and sport fishing. In fact, the State of Maryland has just imposed a moratorium on harvest of any striped bass for a minimum of 4 years.

Mr. Chairman, I could list a number of other problems with this report but there is no need. Upon analysis, the Corps of Engineers study does not defend the economic feasibility of the Oregon Inlet project. Indeed, it discredits that feasibility and the people who prepared it.

Even an economically infeasible project like this one might be supported in good conscience if it were the only solution to the problem of the fishermen at Wanchese. But it is not. The Congress required the corps to hire a hopper dredge to open the Oregon Inlet channel—even after the corps said that a hopper dredge would not be able to work in water that shallow. The dredge did in fact work last year from September to December, storms and all, and did in fact open a channel. Even by the corps' own figures it dredged a channel 16-plus feet deep at a cost of about $2.5 million. Over a 50-year life that's only $125 million, as compared to $600 million for the jetties project. Did this modern dredge do the job? Let me quote from a newspaper article in the Virginia Pilot dated December 14, 1983, by Mr. Gerre O'Bleness:

> The channel through the inlet is in its best shape in years, and improvements also have been made in the interior channel leading to Wanchese, Tillett said.
> Gus Saunders, a 72-year-old commercial fisherman from Wanchese, said fishing along the North Carolina coast is the best in years. "I don't remember it being any better," he added.
> Fishermen are bringing in big hauls of flounder, and squid catches have been outstanding.

The channel did not fill in as some predicted but was passable all winter. The corps, itself, has confirmed "No groundings requiring assistance" throughout the winter fishing season. The evidence so far is that a serviceable channel can be maintained at Oregon Inlet by using modern hopper dredges, at far less cost than building these jetties and I for one am convinced we should continue dredging and not commit ourselves to an irreversible jetty project.

Mr. Chairman, this is a bad project. It will be harmful to a great national seashore—our Nation's first national seashore—and national wildlife refuge that is heavily used recreationally. It is incredibly expensive. It probably won't work. It will create more damage to the barrier islands than any other action we can think of and will require spending additional hundreds of millions of dollars to try to offset that damage. And there is persuasive evidence that it is not needed.

I hope you, my colleagues, on both sides of the aisle, vote for the amendment to strike title IV.

□ 1810

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SEIBERLING] has consumed 14 minutes.

● Mr. ROTH. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of H.R. 3082, the Emergency Wetlands Resources Act of 1984.

Wetlands are one of our Nation's most valuable and productive lands. However, wetlands are disappearing at an alarming rate. When the settlers first came to Wisconsin, Wisconsin had over 7 million wetlands acres. Today, Wisconsin has only 1.5 acres of wetland area. Nationwide, 50 percent of the 215 million wetland area that once existed in the United States has disappeared.

Wetland areas serve many purposes. In Wisconsin such lands provide ground water purification, buffer shores from erosion, serve as flood water retention, and serve as habitats for many species of fish and animals, some of which are endangered. An estimated 63 percent of fish caught by American fishermen are dependent on wetlands areas. Better management of these areas will provide for better harvesting of natural crops, which in Wisconsin includes cranberries, wild rice, moss, and marsh hay.

Such significant losses demonstrate the need for improved management of this valuable resource. H.R. 3082 establishes the management and funds for this purpose. This bill will increase revenues needed for acquisition, management and preservation on wetland areas.

We now have the opportunity to reaffirm our commitment to our environment. I urge my colleagues to support this measure.●

● Mr. BONIOR of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 3082, the Emergency Wetlands Resources Act. I would also like to express support for the amendment offered by our colleague Mr. SEIBERLING, to delete authorization for jetty construction at Oregon Inlet, Manteo Bay, NC.

The Corps of Engineers project at Manteo Bay, proposed in title IV of this legislation, authorizes 2 mile-long jetties to be constructed at a taxpayer expense of $600 million over the 50-year "project life." While the original corps cost/benefit analysis was favorable, Secretary Gianelli disclosed a fundamental error in 1982.

The error, that 70 percent of the project benefits were derived from wildly exaggerated increased fish landings, plunges the cost/benefit ratio to a miserable 0.34 to 1.0. These economic realities alone warrant consideration of less expensive alternatives.

Yet people in this North Carolinian Atlantic Seaboard community earn their livelihood from two main sources: fishing and recreation tourism.

How will this project affect their lives? What could happen to this fragile spit of land if the jetties are built? Much smaller "break walls" in my own Great Lakes region have caused considerable erosion and economic loss, and have not stood the test of time against a much less formidable foe. The corps assures us the project now before us is different, it can withstand the tides and sea and storms.

The jetties might withstand the forces of nature, but how will their presence affect ocean currents and sandbars? How will the corps prevent blowouts elsewhere along the coast? How will shifting sands affect recreation, fisheries, and nearby communities?

Last September the corps started using a modern hopper dredge in Oregon Inlet and successfully kept the channel serviceable winterlong, throughout prime fishing season, for $2.4 million. Yet the jetties would cost $12 million annually.

Let me emphasize the forces of nature and the likelihood these jetties could change the drift of sand and the location of sandbar formations. Even if the corps is confident their jetty design will not cause significant changes in terrain—that Nags Head and surrounding national parklands are safe from erosion and possible blowouts—who can assure us the channel will not have to be dredged anyway, once the jetties are built?

And what about the surrounding national parklands? There seems a certain irony that the first three titles of this bill will establish a Federal commitment to wetland acquisition, yet title IV will authorize the corps to literally remove 90 to 150 acres from Cape Hatteras National Seashore and Pea Island National Refuge.

Is it not also ironic these lands will be destroyed after even Secretary James Watt argued they be saved for wildlife habitat for whistling swans, snow geese, the threatened loggerhead turtle, seatrout, summer flounder, and blue crabs.

This is not just another Corps of Engineers project. This is a project that could cause serious environmental and economic damage while a satisfactory and less costly alternative exists.

We all recognize that we face an era of fiscal restraint. The Nation's vital navigation and water resource projects will be no exception. The Manteo Bay project requires hundreds of millions of dollars in capital costs alone. We must be certain that the project not only makes sense in its own terms, but is competitive with other potential uses of scarce funds.

I find it hard to believe that a project dependent on nonexistent fisheries to sustain an inflated cost/benefit analysis, harmful to the natural integrity of national parklands and potentially dangerous to the local economy is, in any sense, the best use of tax dollars.●

Mr. JONES of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, with that, I move that the Committee do now rise.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. JONES].

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly, the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore [Mr. MOODY] having assumed the chair, Mr. MCCURDY, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 3082) to promote the conservation of migratory waterfowl and to offset or prevent the serious loss of wetlands by the acquisition of wetlands and other essential habitat, and for other purposes, had come to no resolution thereon.

REPORT ON RESOLUTION PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 6067, LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICERS PROTECTION ACT OF 1984

Mr. MOAKLEY, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. 98-1040) on the resolution (H. Res. 584) providing for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 6067) to amend chapter 44, title 18, United States Code, to regulate the manufacture and importation of armor-piercing ammunition, and for other purposes, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MOODY). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California [Mr. DREIER] is recognized for 5 minutes.

POSTAL SERVICE ANNOUNCES STAMP TO COMMEMORATE SERVICE OF KOREAN WAR VETERANS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. GLICKMAN] is recognized for 5 minutes.

● Mr. GLICKMAN. Mr. Speaker, this morning I received notification from the Postal Service that they have decided to issue a commemorative stamp next July 26 in recognition of the service of Korean war veterans. Several weeks ago, I urged others here in the House to write, as I did, to the Citizens Stamp Advisory Committee in support of this request. I know that a number of you did follow through on that, and this shows that your interest paid off.

There are over 5 million Korean war veterans in this country. They served their country and the cause of peace and freedom well, and this announcement is indeed an appropriate reminder to all Americans of their sacrifice and service.●

CHICAGO'S 19TH ANNUAL GENERAL VON STEUBEN PARADE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ANNUNZIO] is recognized for 5 minutes.

● Mr. ANNUNZIO. Mr. Speaker, the anniversary of the birth of Gen. Friedrich Wilhelm von Steuben is on September 17, and on Saturday, September 22, I am looking forward to joining with my many friends in the United German-American Societies of Greater Chicago on the reviewing stand for Chicago's 19th Annual General von Steuben Parade, to celebrate the contributions of this great patriot in America's War of Independence.

The parade will step off at 12 noon at Wacker Drive and Dearborn Street, and proceed past the reviewing stand located at the Richard J. Daley Center. Many scores of floats will join in this commemorative tribute to the gallant patriot of our precious freedom, along with many marching units and musical contingents.

In his early career, General von Steuben served in the Prussian Army with distinction, and in high tribute to his professional standing, King Frederick the Great appointed him to general staff duty at the royal headquarters. At age 47, he arrived in America in late 1777, recruited by Benjamin Franklin as a volunteer for service in General Washington's Continental Army. He reported for duty February 1778 at Valley Forge, where he was given the responsibility for the professional training of the Army.

Von Steuben's personal popularity and dedication enabled him to make rapid progress in molding the Continental Army into an effective American fighting force, and as a result, on April 30, 1778, General Washington appointed him Inspector General of the Army with the rank of major general.

Throughout the long war, the practicality and skill of von Steuben's reforms proved invaluable, as the men of the Continental Army showed themselves equal in discipline and organization to the best British troops. During the winter of 1778-79, von Steuben wrote his "Regulations for the Order and Discipline of the Troops of the United States," an important manual on the basics of drill and field service regulations, outlining the essentials of military procedure adapted for the American citizen-soldier. This "blue book," as it became known, served as the official Army manual until 1812.

In appreciation for his services, the State of New York awarded General von Steuben a 16,000-acre estate, and Congress granted him a pension of $2,500 for the rest of his life. Just before he retired from his leadership in the Army, General George Washington wrote to von Steuben congratulating him as follows:

ANNAPOLIS,
December 23, 1783.

MY DEAR BARON: Although I have taken frequent opportunities, both in public and private, of acknowledging your great zeal, attention, and abilities, in performing the duties of your office; yet I wish to make use of this last moment of my public life to signify, in the strongest terms, my entire approbation of your conduct, and to express my sense of the obligations the public is under to you, for your faithful and meritorious services.

I beg you will be convinced, my dear Sir, that I should rejoice, if it could ever be in my power to serve you more essentially than by expressions of regard and affection; but, in the mean time. I am persuaded you will not be displeased with this farewell token of my sincere friendship and esteem for you.

This is the last letter I shall write, while I continue in the service of my country. The hour of my resignation is fixed at twelve today; after which, I shall become a private citizen on the banks of the Potomac where, I shall be glad to embrace you, and testify the great esteem and consideration with which I am my dear Baron, & c.

Mr. Speaker, it will be a genuine pleasure for me to participate in the 19th Annual General von Steuben Parade to recognize German-American contributions to our Nation, and on the occasion of this commemoration of the inspiring courage and heroism of Gen. Friedrich von Steuben, I send my greetings and best wishes to all Americans of German heritage residing in the 11th Congressional District of Illinois which I am honored to represent, in the city of Chicago, and all over this country who are celebrating this grand event.

The officers and membership of all the United German-American Societies of Greater Chicago are working hard to make the 19th Annual General von Steuben Parade into another great success and all of Chicago is looking forward to this patriotic event. I extend my warmest congratulations to them on their achievement and on their many fine contributions to making Chicagoland a better place to live, and especially to Karl C. Laschet, the perennial energetic general chairman and grand marshal of the parade. The names of the parade's officials follows:

Officers: Karl C. Laschet, President; Norbert Holzinger, 1st Vice-President; Erich Himmel, 2nd Vice-President; Helmut Schmidt, Treasurer; Betty Center, Corresponding Secretary; Clara Winkler, Recording Secretary; Helen Meiszner, Steuben Parade Treasurer; Inge Himmel, Cornflower Chairlady.●

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Florida [Mr. MACKAY] is recognized for 5 minutes.

● Mr. MACKAY. Mr. Speaker, due to the need to attend a meeting in Florida with representatives of the U.S. Department of Agriculture concerning the outbreak of citrus canker, I was unable to be in Washington on Tuesday, September 18, 1984 to cast my vote on rollcall votes No. 393, No. 394, No. 395, and No. 396.

Had I been able to be present, I would have voted as follows:

On rollcall No. 393: To suspend the rules and pass H.R. 1511, I would have voted "no";

On rollcall No. 394: To suspend the rules and pass H.R. 3336, I would have voted "yes";

On rollcall No. 395: To suspend the rules and pass H.R. 5656, I would have voted "yes"; and

On rollcall No. 396: To suspend the rules and pass H.R. 5959, I would have voted "yes."

I appreciate having this opportunity to state my position on these votes for the RECORD.●

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. BOLAND] is recognized for 5 minutes.

● Mr. BOLAND. Mr. Speaker, due to the primary election in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, I was necessarily absent on Tuesday, September 18, 1984. As a result, I missed several rollcall votes. Had I been present I would have voted as follows:

Rollcall No. 394, to modify the insanity defense in the Federal courts. I would have voted "yea."

Rollcall No. 395, an amendment to the Controlled Substances Act to strengthen the authority to prevent diversion of controlled substances. I would have voted "yea."

Rollcall No. 396, to amend the Safe Drinking Water Act. I would have voted "yea." ●

AMERICA'S POW/MIAS: WE WILL NOT FORGET

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California [Mr. PATTERSON] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. Speaker, on Monday of this week, I had the privilege of participating in the Congressional Commemorative Medal Ceremony to honor California families of servicemen still unaccounted for in Southeast Asia. California has 210 unaccounted for servicemen, the largest number of any State.

The ceremony, which was held at McClellan Air Force Base in Sacramento, was an inspiring event and represented our renewed commitment to insuring that our Government does not abandon those who did not come home. We must continue to work for the accounting of every one of our military personnel who are still missing.

Last year, Congress authorized ceremonies to be held in individual States to honor families of the missing. At each ceremony, these families were presented a special bronze medal designed by a Vietnam veteran.

The medals are "in recognition of the distinguished service, heroism and sacrifice of these military personnel, and the commitment of the American people to their return."

I had the honor of presenting awards to many of the California families. Several were my constituents. I would like to give special mention to three, a wife, a father, and a son, who have shown great courage in enduring the hardship of having a family member still unaccounted for in Southeast Asia:

Barbara Sprague of Santa Ana, wife of Air Force Maj. Stanley Sprague, who was lost in Laos on September 12, 1966; Warren Orr of Garden Grove, father of Army Capt. Warren R. Orr, Jr., who was officially reported as missing in action on May 12, 1968, after his base camp in Vietnam came under hostile attack; and Leslie Allen Klinke of Cypress, son of T. Sgt. Donald Klinke. Sergeant Klinke was listed as missing on June 18, 1972, after an AC130 aircraft carrying Sergeant Klinke and 14 others was struck by intense hostile fire and exploded. Three people were rescued and 12 were listed as missing in action, including Sergeant Klinke. No other parachutes were seen and no beepers were heard.

Others who were invited to this ceremony from my 38th Congressional District were Vivian Fellenz of La Palma, wife of C.M. Sgt. Charles Fellenz; Pearl Collins of Cypress, stepdaughter of M. Sgt. Charles Fenter; Ralph Stringham of Garden Grove, father of ADR 3 William Stirling Stringham; and Lynn Standerwick of Garden Grove, daughter of Col. Robert Standerwick.

These are the families of only a few of the 2,483 American servicemen and civilians who are still unaccounted for in Indochina. The ceremonies and the medals are meaningful to inspire us to continue our efforts to account for all of the missing.

EFFORTS TO ENSURE A FULL ACCOUNTING

I am pleased that the administration has made the issue of accounting for those still missing a matter of the highest national priority. Increased attention and resources devoted to this effort have received overwhelming bipartisan support for many years. I strongly support efforts to put politics aside and achieve results on this critical issue.

I am proud to be a cosponsor of H. Con. Res. 322, which puts Congress on record as supporting the high level priority given to this issue by the President, calls on the administration to carry out the President's pledge to resolve this issue, acknowledges the cooperation that has been pledged by the Governments of Vietnam and Laos, and calls on these Governments to accelerate cooperation with the United States in achieving a full accounting of POW/MIAs. This resolution is endorsed by the League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia and I urge my colleagues to join me in cosponsoring this important measure.

At the request of Treasury Secretary Donald Regan, I was a member of the U.S. delegation to the Asian Development Bank annual meeting in April, where I had an opportunity to raise the issue in the strongest terms with Vietnamese Vice Minister Le Huan.

I was proud to be a cosponsor of H.J. Res. 344, Public Law 98-262, which declared July 20, 1984 as National POW/MIA Recognition Day. I am pleased that a majority of my colleagues joined in supporting this measure so that we were able to call attention to the need for continued action on this issue.

Another measure of importance to families of POW/MIAs is H.R. 2996, which authorizes the Secretary of Defense to provide transportation to annual national meetings sponsored by the National League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia. This bill is supported by the National League of Families and by the Defense Department. It would permit family members to fly on previously scheduled military flights. The league annual meetings are an important opportunity for family members to receive information from the administration on the status of efforts to achieve an accounting of the missing.

STATUS OF POW/MIA ISSUE

Efforts to obtain an accounting for the missing have met with increased success in the past several months.

In September 1982, the Vietnamese agreed to meet four times per year with technical level U.S. officials to discuss the POW/MIA issue.

In February 1984, Assistant Secretary of Defense Richard L. Armitage visited Hanoi for discussions with Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach and other officials. He was accompanied on this high-level mission by Ann Mills Griffith, executive director of the National League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia, White House National Security Council staff member Richard T. Childress and representatives of the State Department. The Vietnamese agreed to accelerate cooperation in resolving the issue and offered to continue quarterly technical meetings in Hanoi. The Vietnamese provided information on several missing Amercians.

The Vietnamese Government repatriated eight remains on July 17, 1984, and thus far, six have been identified as American servicemen and returned to their families for honorable burial.

Additional technical meetings between the United States and Vietnamese officials took place in August in Hanoi, and the two countries agreed to continue technical meetings in the future.

The Government of Laos has recently demonstrated willingness to cooperate with the United States, and high level officials of both countries have frequently met to discuss this issue. Current efforts are directed toward establishing joint United States-Lao crashsite searches.

CONCLUSION

Mr. Speaker, we should take hope from the recent progress that has been made toward resolving this difficult issue; but we must not rest until every last one of our servicemen has been accounted for. I remain committed to ensuring that our Government do everything necessary to achieve the fullest possible resolution to this situation.

SOME OBSERVATIONS ON FOUR TERMS IN CONGRESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PAUL] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Speaker, I shall be soon leaving the House and have asked for this special order to make a few comments regarding the problems our Nation faces and the actions needed to correct them. Having been honored by the 22d District of Texas to represent them for four terms, I have grown to appreciate the greatness of this institution. I only wish the actions performed by the Congress in recent years could match the historic importance of this body.

Thousands of men and women have come and gone here in our country's history, and except for the few, most go unnoticed and remain nameless in the pages of history, as I am sure I will be. The few who are remembered are those who were able to grab the reins of power and, for the most part, use that power to the detriment of the Nation. We must remember achieving power is never the goal sought by a truly free society. Dissipation of power is the objective of those who love liberty. Others, tragically, will be remembered in a negative way for personal scandals. Yet those individuals whose shortcomings prompted the taking of bribes or involvement in illicit sexual activities have caused no more harm to society than those who used "legitimate" power to infringe upon individual liberty and expand the size of Government. Morally the two are closely related. The acceptance of a bribe is a horrible act indeed for a public servant, but reducing liberty is an outrageous act that causes suffering for generations to come.

Since the time of our founding, few who have come to the Congress have been remembered for championing the cause of freedom. This is a sign of a declining Nation and indicates that respect for freedom is on the wane.

Serving here has been a wonderful experience and the many friendships will be cherished. I am, however, the first to admit the limited impact I've had on the legislative process. By conventional wisdom I am "ineffective," unable to trade votes, and champion anyone's special privilege—even my own district's—places me in a lonely category here in Washington. If the political career is not the goal sought, possibly the measuring of "effectiveness" should be done by using a different standard.

The most I can hope for is that someday a suggestion I've made is remembered: That the debate shift to a different plane. Instead of asking which form of intervention and planning Government should impose, perhaps someday Congress will debate intervention versus nonintervention, Government versus voluntary planning, U.S. sovereignty versus internationalism—the pros and cons of true liberty. Today the debate basically is only that of deciding upon who will be the victims and who the beneficiaries. I hope the hours of debate over the mechanisms of the political system orchestrated by the special interests will give way to this more important debate on freedom. The lack of this debate was my greatest disappointment. Only rarely did I see small fragments of this discussion and then merely as a tactic for short-term gain rather than because of a sincere belief in the principles of liberty and the Constitution.

Some have said my approach is not practical, but most concede, "at least he's consistent." Since I first came here in 1976 the number of lobbyists has doubled and the national debt has tripled—$550 billion to $1.59 trillion—to me a most impractical trend. Business cycles, unemployment, inflation, high interest rates, and trade wars are the real impracticalities brought about by unwise political and economic policies. I've been impressed over the years by those who concede to me the consistency of my views yet evidently reject them in favor of inconsistent views. Who, I might ask, is served by the politicians of inconsistency—the special interests or the general welfare?

The petty partisan squabbles that are today more numerous and more heated serve no useful function. The rhetoric now becoming personal is not designed to solve problems nor does it show a correct perception of our country's problems. All are motivated by good intentions but that cannot suffice. The narrow partisan squabbles are a natural consequence of an intellectual bankruptcy whereby correct solutions are not offered for our economic problems. The "good intentions" prompts those involved to "do something." It seems that narrow partisanism on the House floor contributes nothing to the solutions of today's problems.

Sadly, I have found that individual Members, even though we represent our one-half million constituents, tare much less important than most of us would like to believe. The elite few who control the strings of power are the only ones who really count in the legislative process. Votes, of course, occur routinely after heated debate by all those who want to ventilate. But as C. Northcote Parkinson pointed out, the length of debate on an issue is inversely proportional to the importance of the issue. Many times debate is done either for therapy or as a ritual to force Members to make public commitments to those who wield the power, a mere litmus test of loyalty, thus qualifying some quietly to receive largess for their particular district.

More often than not, the floor debates are a charade without real issues being dealt with—a mere chance for grandstanding. Budgetary votes are meaningless in that continuing resolutions and supplemental appropriations are all that count. If covert aid to a nation is voted down, the CIA and the administration in power can find the means to finance whatever is desired. Emergencies are declared, finances are hidden, discretionary funds are found, foreign governments are used, and policy as desired is carried out regardless of the will of the people expressed by Congress.

On occasion, a program requested by the administration is "stopped" or voted down. But this doesn't really change the course of events—the "price" is merely raised. The vote can be reversed on the House floor or in the conference and the "enlightened" Member who, casting the crucial vote, will receive an ample reward for his or her district. These arrangements or deals are routine and accepted practice. The better one is at making them, the higher is one's "effectiveness" rating and the easier the next election.

Recently, the National Taxpayers' Union gave me their annual Taxpayers' Best Friend Award for voting for the least amount of taxes and spending of any Member of Congress. I realize this does not qualify as a news event, but I have over the years tried to emphasize how dangerous is the problem of overspending and have voted accordingly. This past year, I am recorded as having voted against 99 percent of all spending—to me that means voting for the taxpayer 99 percent of the time and against the tyranny of the state at the same percentage. I must confess, though, to the possible disappointment of the anarchists, that I endorse more than 1 percent of our expenditures—possibly even 20 percent. Due to the seriousness of the problem we face, I believe it's crucial to make the point that all programs are bloated and overspending, deficits, and monetary inflation are a mortal threat to a free society. Those not willing to vote for the cuts either must believe they are not a threat or do not care if they are. I suspect the former to be the case.

Deficits are in themselves very harmful, but it's what they represent that we must be concerned about. Deficits are a consequence of spending, and this tells us something about the amount of power gravitating into the hands of a centralized authority. As the deficits grow, so does the power of the state. Correspondingly, individual freedom is diminished.

It's difficult for one who loves true liberty and utterly detests the power of the state to come to Washington for a period of time and not leave a cynic. Yet I am not; for I believe in the goodness of my fellow man and am realistic enough to understand the shortcomings of all human beings. However, I do believe that if the Democrats and the Republicans played more baseball and legislated a lot less, the country would be much better off. I am convinced the annual baseball game played by the Republicans and the Democrats must be considered as one of the most productive events in which the Members of Congress participate.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to take some time to point out some of the contradictions that I have observed in my four terms in the Congress. These I have found frustrating and exasperating and, if others agree, possibly this recognition will someday lead to policies designed to correct them. I find these contradictions in three areas: foreign policy, economic policy, and social issues.

I have trouble believing that the foreign policy of the past 70 years has served the best interests of the United States. The policy of international intervention has been followed during this time, regardless of the party in power. The traditional American policy of strategic independence and neutrality based on strength has been replaced by an international policy of sacrifice—a policy that has given us nearly a century of war. The last two wars were fought without formal declaration and without the goal of victory in mind. There are many specific examples to show how irrational this interventionist policy is.

We pump $40 billion a year into the Japanese economy by providing for essentially all of Japan's defense. At the same time, Japan outcompetes us in the market, in effect subsidizing their exports which then undermine our domestic steel and auto industries. The result: greater deficits for us, higher taxes, more inflation, higher interest rates, and a cry by our producers for protectionism.

We insist that Western Europe take our Pershing missiles. We get the bill, and the hostility of the people of Western Europe, and then act surprised that the Soviets pull out of arms negotiations and send more modern nuclear submarines to our coastline. It's sure guarantee that any conflict in Europe—even one between two socialist nations—will be our conflict.

Loyally standing by our ally Israel is in conflict with satisfying the Arab interests that are always represented by big business in each administration. We arm Jordan, and Egypt, rescue the PLO (on two occasions), and guarantee that the American taxpayer will be funding both sides of any armed conflict in the Middle East. This policy prompts placing Marines armed with guns without bullets between two warring factions. Our F-15's shooting down our F-5's in the Persian Gulf war is our idea of neutrality and getting others to test our equipment. America's interests are forgotten under these circumstances.

We condemn the use of poison gas by Iraq and at the same time we aid Iraq along with the Soviets in preventing an Iranian victory, forgetting that Iraq started the war. Inconsistently the administration pressures Congress to manufacture new nerve gas so we have something with which to go to the Soviets and draw up some unworkable treaty regarding war gases. We allocate low-interest loans through the Export-Import Bank to build a pipeline for Iraq giving huge profits to Shultz' Bechtel Corp., while hurting our domestic oil producers.

On the day we "stood firm" against Communist aggression in this hemisphere by invading Grenada, our President apologized to those liberal House Members who were "soft on communism" and pleaded for their vote to ensure the passage of the IMF bill so the "Communist dictators" can continue to receive taxpayers' dollars—dollars used to support Castro's adventurism in the Carribean and in Central America.

As we pursue our Central American policy as outlined by Henry Kissinger which is aimed at achieving stability by supporting moderate factions, we pressure Costa Rica to take our weapons and become involved in the guerrilla activity against the Nicaraguan Government—prompting 30,000-plus Costa Ricans to demonstrate against us. Costa Rica traditionally has avoided a military buildup and doesn't even have an army. They have remained neutral in the wars that plague Central America and yet remain the strongest anti-Communist nation of the entire region. Maybe ideas are more powerful than armies.

Our official policy currently is to be tough on communism but promote at the same time low-interest loans allowing Red China to buy nuclear technology, F-16's and other military technology—and this by the strongest anti-Communist administration that we've had in decades. we participate in the bailout of bankrupt Argentina as she continues to loan money to Castro's Cuba, which then prompts us to send men, money, and weapons to counteract the spread of communism fomented by Castro. It's doubtful if any of these loans will be repaid and the military equipment and technology will probably end up being used against us at a later date. We talk about a close alliance with Taiwan while subsidizing their hated enemy, Red China.

We subsidize Red China's nuclear technology; at the same time, we allow Jane Fonda to ruin ours.

We continuously sacrifice ourselves to the world by assuming the role of world policemen, which precipitates international crises on a regular basis, while neglecting our own defenses. New planes go overseas while our Air National Guard is forced to use planes 20 years old.

We neglect our defenses by signing treaties like Salt I and the ABM Treaty that prevent us from building a nonnuclear defense system and follow Salt II without even signing it. Result—a massive arms race based on a doctrine of mutual assured destruction.

Praising the greatness of the Vietnam veteran and honoring them can never remove the truth of our failed policy that took us there. Resurrecting heroes will never erase the pain and suffering of an interventionist foreign policy that prompted unnecessary military activities and a no-win strategy.

There are 42 wars now going on in the world and it's reported we're involved in many of them—on both sides. We have troops in a total of 121 countries. National security is used as justification for all this activity, but rarely is it directly involved.

Our Export-Import Bank financed the building of the Kama River truck plant in Russia—trucks then used in the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan over a road built by our own Corps of Engineers. Our response? Draft registration and an Olympic boycott.

In pleading for the MX funds, the administration explains we need it as a bargaining chip. I guess to bargain away to the Soviets whom we can't trust anyway. We even modify the MX to conform with the Salt II Treaty—a treaty we never even signed.

At the same time we are pressurred to spend more on MX missiles, we destroy Polaris submarines and their usable Poseidon missiles to abide by treaty agreements. It appears that the churning—the tearing down and the building up of new weapons—is a stronger motivation than defense.

If we look closely at the record we find the conservative hawk is frequently the one who appeases and subsidizes the Communists, and never starts the war; the liberal dove, the one more likely to involve us in a war to protect democracy and stop Communist expansion. Images play tricks on us and policy's achieved by deception. Is this a mere coincidence or is it contrived by those dedicated to internationalism?

The carnage of the 20th century as compared to the 19th must someday make us aware of the difference between the two policies pursued. Does the modern age mandate we reject a policy of self-interest and nonintervention, or is it just possible that worthwhile policies are of value regardless of the age in which we live? It's an important question because it will determine whether or not we will enjoy peace and prosperity in the generations to come.

Our economic policy is no less contradictory. It's fair to say that even with all the good intentions of the Members, the planned welfare state has been complete and miserable failure. For the most part, the programs achieve exactly opposite results from those sought. There is a limit to how long the economy can tolerate these insults before we all suffer from the severe consequences. What we say and do are in conflict with each other. We talk boldly of balanced budgets, full employment, prosperity, low interest rates, and no inflation. So we either do not believe as a body what we say or we are inept in our ability to pursue and achieve the goals which we seek. Either way the results remain the same.

The economic contradictions are numerous. Conservatives, for years, preached balanced budgets—until in charge. Then the deficits soared to $200 billion per year. Liberal big spenders who led the way to runaway spending quickly excoriate conservative deficits and nothing happens; the deficit financing continues and accelerates.

Campaigns are won on promising tax cuts; some are given, but are quickly canceled out by numerous tax increases associated with accelerated Federal spending.

Congress and the administration are quick to blame the Federal Reserve System for high interest rates and do nothing about the huge deficits. Congress totally ignores their responsibility in maintaining the integrity of the money and refuses to exert their rightful authority over the Federal Reserve. We routinely preach about helping the poor, then plunder the working class to subsidize foreign socialist dictators and the welfare rich through abusive taxation and inflation.

Our Government pursues a policy of currency debasement, causing steadily rising prices, and blindly treats only the symptoms while punishing, through regulations and taxation, those capable and willing to take care of themselves.

Vocal support for free trade is routinely heard, as protectionist measures march on. The steel, sugar, textile, shoe, copper, and automobile industries all come for help, and we do nothing to remove the burden of taxation, inflation, high interest rates and labor laws that put our companies at a competitive disadvantage. Our protectionist measures then hurt our trade partners, precipitating our need to send them more foreign aid to help out their weak economies and to relieve their debt burden.

Arch conservatives champion tobacco subsidies which are criticized by arch conservatives who champion milk subsidies. Government then spends millions of dollars to regulate the tobacco industry and to point out the hazards of smoking.

A liberal champion of the peace movement and disarmament pushes for the B-1 bomber as a resonable alternative and because it's good for the economy—the bomber, by coincidence, to be built in the Senator's home State.

The well-intentioned do-gooder legislates minimum wage laws to help the poor and minorities, causing higher unemployment in the precise groups who were intended to be the beneficiaries.

We learned nothing from the Depression years and continue to pay farmers to raise crops not needed, and then pay them to stop planting. Our policies drive prices of commodities down, so we prop up the prices and buy up the surpluses. The consumer suffers, the farmer suffers, the country suffers, but our policies never change; we just legislate more of the same programs that caused the problems in the first place.

Our steel plants are closing down, so we pursue protectionism and stupidly continue to subsidize the building of steel plants throughout the world through our foreign aid projects.

We pay for bridges and harbors throughout the world and neglect our own. If we feel compulsion to spend and waste money, it would make more sense at least to waste it at home. We build highways around the world, raise gasoline taxes here, and routinely dodge potholes on our own highways.

Why do we cut funding for day care centers and Head Start programs before cutting aid to the Communists, Socialists, and international bankers?

A substantial number of businessmen demand the rigors of the free market for their competitors, and socialism/fascism for themselves.

Economic interventionism, a philosophy in itself and not a compromise with anything, is the cause of all these contradictions in the economy. Rejection of Government planning controlled by the powerful special interests at the expense of the general welfare is necessary, and even inevitable, for that system will fall under its own weight. The question that remains is whether or not it will be replaced with a precise philosophy of the free market rejecting all special interests and fiat money or with a philosophy of socialism. The choice when the time comes should not be difficult, but freedom lovers have no reason for complacency or optimism.

Social issues are handled in a contradictory manner as well. A basic misunderstanding of the nature of rights and little respect for the Constitution has given us a hodge-podge of social problems that worsen each day.

At one time we bussed our children long distances from their homes to force segregation; now we bus them, against their will, to force integration.

We subsidize flood insurance in the low lying areas of the country, prompting people to build where market oriented insurance companies would have prevented it. When flooding problems worsen, land control and condemnation procedures become the only solution.

The Supreme Court now rules that large landowners must, against their wishes, sell to others to break up their holdings. This is being done in the name of eminent domain. This is land reform "a la U.S.A."

Certain individual groups, against the intent of the Constitution and the sentiments of a free society, agitate to make illegal privately owned guns used for self-defense. At the same time they increase the power of the state whose enforcement occurs with massive increase in Government guns—unconstitutionally obtained at the expense of freedom. Taking away the individual's right to own weapons of self-defense and giving unwarranted power to a police state can hardly be considered progress.

We have strict drug laws written by those who generously use the drug alcohol. Our laws drive up the price of drugs a thousandfold, to the delight of the dealers, the pushers, and terrorist nations around the world who all reap huge illegal profits. Crimes are committed to finance the outrageous prices, and drug usage never goes down. Enforcement costs soar and its success remains "mysteriously" elusive. The whole system creates an underground crime world worth billions of dollars, and addicts must then entice others to join, getting new customers to finance their habits—forever compounding a social problem epidemic in proportion. Any new suggestions for changing our drug laws; that is, liberalizing them, is seen as political suicide by the hypocritical politicians and a society legally hooked on alcohol, nicotine, caffeine, aspirin, and valium.

Talk is cheap about freedom and civil liberties, while privacy and individual liberty is continuously undermined and Government force used to protect the privileges and illegal demands placed on Government, by the special interest groups. Computers are routinely used to enforce draft registration, involving Selective Service, IRS, Social Security, and HHS and ice cream parlor lists.

The shortcomings of South Africa's apartheid system are denounced continuously by the same politicians who ignore the fact that in Communist countries dissidents aren't segregated; they are shot or sent to concentration camps. In comparison, segregation is seen as more vicious than the exiling and the killing of the political dissidents in Russia. South Africa for their defective system of civil liberties are banned from the Olympics, while we beg the murdering Communists to come.

Government responsibility to protect life and liberty becomes muddled when the Government and courts chosen to protect them under the guise of privacy and civil liberties, totally ignore the real issue. The abortionist who makes a fortune dropping fetuses and infants into buckets, instead of being restrained by Government, is encouraged by the courts and the law. Some show greater concern for the lives of seals than for the life of a human baby.

The Government writes thousands of pages of regulations designed to protect workers in private industry—without proof of any beneficial results—and at the same time 50,000-plus are killed on Government engineered and operated highways.

Good conservatives explain why guns and teachers shouldn't be registered and beg and plead and coerce the Government into registering their own kids for the draft.

We have seen cases where harmless elderly women, having committed no act of violence, are arrested for: One, defending against an intruder with the use of a "Saturday night special," two, raising marijuana in the yard and using it for relief of severe arthritic pain, and three, selling chances in a numbers game—the fact that governments run the biggest crap games seems to have no moral significance.

Federal officials—IRS agents and drug enforcement agents—have been known to destroy the property and lives of totally innocent people as homes are entered mistakenly without search warrants. Confiscation of property without due process of law is becoming more commonplace every day with the tactics of the IRS.

The products produced by businessmen are regulated to the extreme by so-called liberals who would never accept similar regulations on the products of the mind and the media. Yet the ill effect of bad economic ideas and bad education is much more damaging to one's economic health than are the products manufactured in a totally free and unregulated market. The conservative's answer to regulating ideas in a similar way to regulating goods and services is the risk of pointing out this inconsistency.

THE PROBLEMS WE FACE

Contradictions are all about us, but we must realize they are merely the manifestations of more basic problems. Some of these problems are general, others specific but all are a consequence of the precise ideology to which the Nation's intellectuals ascribe. Understanding this is imperative if we never expect to reverse the trend toward statism in which we find ourselves.

Our Government officials continue to endorse, in general economic interventionism, control of interventionist individuals, a careless disregard for our property rights, and an international foreign policy. The ideas of liberty for the individual, freedom for the markets, both domestically and internationally, sound money, and a foreign policy of strategic independence based on strength are no longer popularly endorsed by our national leaders. Yet support by many Americans for these policies exists. The current conflict is over which view will prevail.

The concept of rights is rarely defined, since there is minimal concern for them as an issue in itself. Rights have become nothing more than the demands of special interests groups to use Government coercion to extract goods and services from one group for the benefit of another. The moral concept of one's natural right to life and liberty without being molested by State intervention in one's pursuit of happiness is all but absent in Washington. Carelessly the Congress has accepted the concept of the "public interest" as being superior to "individual liberty" in directing their actions. But the "public" is indefinite and its definition varies depending on who and which special interest is defining it. It's used merely as an excuse to victimize one individual for the benefit of another. The dictatorship of the majority, now a reality, is our greatest threat to the concept of equal rights.

Careless disregard for liberty allows the Government to violate the basic premise of a free society; there shall be no initiation of force by anyone, particularly Government. Use of force for personal and national self-defense against initiators of violence is its only proper use in a moral and free society. Unfortunately this premise is rejected—and not even understood—in its entirety in Washington. The result is that we have neither a moral nor a free society.

Rejecting the notion that Government should not coerce and force people to act against their wishes prompts Congress to assume the role of central economic and social planner. Government is used for everything from subsidized farming to protecting cab monopolies; from the distribution of food stamps to health care; from fixing the price of labor to the fixing the price of gasoline. Always the results are the same, opposite to what was intended, chaos, confusion, inefficiency, additional costs, and lines.

The more that is spent on housing or unemployment problems, the worse the housing and unemployment problems become. Proof that centralized economic planning always fails, regardless of the good intentions behind it, is available to us. It is tragic that we continue to ignore it.

Our interventions and meddling to satisfy the powerful well-heeled special interests have created a hostile atmosphere, a vicious struggle for a shrinking economic pie distributed by our ever-growing inefficient Government bureaucracy. Regional, class, race, age, and sex disputes polarize the Nation. This probably will worsen until we reject the notion that central planning works.

As nations lose respect for liberty, so too do they lose respect for individual responsibility. Laws are passed proposing no-fault insurance for injuries for which someone in particular was responsible. Remote generations are required to pay a heavy price for violations of civil liberties that occurred to the blacks, to the Indians, and to Japanese-Americans. This is done only at the expense of someone else's civil liberties and in no way can be justified.

Collective rights, group rights, incontrast to individual rights prompts laws based on collective guilt for parties not responsible for causing any damage. The Superfund is a typical example of punishing innocent people for damages caused by Government/business. Under a system of individual rights where initiation of force is prohibited, this would not occur.

Short-run solutions enhance political careers, and motivate most legislation in Washington to the country's detriment. Apparent economic benefits deceive many Members into supporting legislation that in the long-run is devastating to the economy. Politics unfortunately is a short-run game—the next election. Economics is a long-run game and determines the prosperity and the freedoms of the next generation. Sacrificing future wealth for present indulgence is done at the expense of liberty for the individual.

Motivations of those who lead the march toward the totalitarian state can rarely be challenged. Politicians' good intentions, combined with the illusion of wisdom, falsely reassure the planners that good results will be forthcoming. Freedom endorses a humble approach toward the idea that one group of individuals by some quirk of nature knows what is best for another. Personal preferences are subjectively decided upon. Degrees of risk that free individuals choose to take vary from one individual to another. Liability and responsibility for one's own acts should never be diminished by Government edicts. Voluntary contracts should never be interfered with in a free society except for their enforcement. Trust in a free society—even with its imperfections—if we're to strive for one, must be superior to our blind faith in Government's ability to solve our problems for us.

Government in a free society is recognized to be nothing more than an embodiment of the people. The sovereignty is held by the people. A planned coercive society talks vaguely of how Government provides this and that, as if Government were equivalent to the Creator. Distribution is one thing—production is another. Centralized control of the distribution of wealth by an impersonal government that ignores the prescribed role of guaranteeing the equal protection of liberty assures that one day freedom will disappear and take with it the wealth that only free men can create.

Today the loss of the people's sovereignty is clearly evident. Lobbyists are important, if not the key figure in all legislation—their numbers are growing exponentially. It's not an accident that the lobbyists and chief bureaucrats salaries are higher than the Congressman's—they are literally more "important." The salary allocation under today's conditions are "correct." Special interests have replaced the concern that the Founders had for the general welfare. Conference committees' intrigues are key to critical legislation. The bigger the government, the higher the stakes, the more lucrative the favors granted. Vote trading is seen as good politics, not as an immoral act. The errand boy mentality is ordinary—the defender of liberty is seen as bizarre. The elite few who control our money, our foreign policy, and the international banking institutions, in a system designed to keep the welfare rich in diamonds and Mercedes, make the debates on the House and Senate floors nearly meaningless.

The monetary system is an especially important area where the people and Congress have refused to assume its responsibility. Maintaining honest money—a proper role for Government—has been replaced by putting the counterfeiters in charge of the Government printing press. This system of funny money provides a convenient method whereby Congress' excessive spending is paid for by the creation of new money. Unless this is addressed, which I suppose it will be in due time, monetary and banking crises will continue and get much worse during this decade.

Congress assumes that it can make certain groups economically better off by robbing others of their wealth. The business and banker welfare recipient justifies the existence of the system by claiming that it is good for jobs, profits and sound banking. The welfare poor plays on the sympathies of others, and transfer programs based on Government force and violence are justified as "necessary" to provide basic needs to all—all at the expense of the liberty needed to provide for the prosperity everyone desires.

Government cannot make people morally better by laws that interfere with nonviolent personal acts that produce no victims. Disapproving of another's behavior is not enough to justify a law prohibiting it. Any attempt to do so under the precepts of liberty is an unwarranted use of Government force.

Congress reflects prevailing attitudes as developed by an educational system and the conventional media, and in this sense Congress rarely leads, but is merely pushed and manipulated by public opinion. This is even done with scientific use of public opinion polls. "Show me the direction the crowd is going and I will lead them," is sadly the traditional cry of the politician. Statesmanship is not the road to reelection. Statesmanship is reserved for a rare few at particular times in history unknown to most of us. Leadership in great movements is infrequently found in official capacities. Lech Walesa, Alexander Solzhenitsyn, et al., are not legal officials, but are nevertheless great leaders.

Today the deficits, the skyrocketing real interest rates, total Government spending, and the expansionist foreign policy has delivered to us a crisis of confidence. The politician's worries and concerns on the short run reflect the lack of plans made for the future. The interest rates on 30 year bonds tell a lot about the trust in the economic system and especially the integrity of the money.

It's become traditional, especially during the last 70 years, for foreign policy to be pawned off as "bipartisan," meaning no dissent is permissible and all true debate is squelched. Congress, it is said, has no role in formulating foreign policy, for the Constitution gives this power to the President. Nowhere is this written. Many more powers and responsibilities are to be assumed by the Congress than by the President in the foreign policy area according to my reading of the Constitution. Monopoly power for a President to wage war without declaration as was done in Korea and Vietnam is a blatant attack on constitutionally guaranteed liberty. I hope the caution shown by the Congress in recent years will prevail—yet the Grenadan invasion was not reassuring.

Unfortuntely, economic egalitarianism has taken over as the goal of most congressional legislation. Any equality achieved will come about by a leveling—a lowering of everyone's standard of living—not by raising it. It is achieved by ignoring the sanctity of the voluntary contract and the prohibitions that should exist against Government initiating force against the citizen. This concept must be rejected if we're to reverse the trend toward the Orwellian state.

Many Members of Congress defend liberty, but only in minute bits and pieces as it appears convenient. I find in Washington the total absence of a consistent defense of liberty, as this principle applies to the marketplace, our personal lives, and international relations. Bits and pieces of liberty will never suffice for the defense of an entire concept. Consistency in defense of freedom is necessary to counteract the consistent aggressive militancy of interventionism, whether it's of a liberal or conservative flavor.

Government today perpetuates violences in epidemic proportions. Most of the time the mere "threat" of violence by the agencies, the bureaucrats, the officials in charge of writing the final drafts of legislation is enough to intimidate the staunchest resister. Courts, legal cost, Government arrests, Government guns and long-term imprisonments have created a society of individuals who meekly submit to the perpetual abuse of our liberties. All this in the name of the "social good," "stability," "compromise," the "status quo," and the "public interest." The IRS, the EPA and other agencies now carry guns. The colonists would have cringed at the sight of such abuse of our rights to live free. They complained about a standing army that carried guns; we now have a standing bureaucracy that carries guns.

Government today has accumulated massive power that can be used to suppress the people. How is it that we grant to our Government power to do things that we as individuals would never dream of doing ourselves, declaring such acts as stealing wealth from one another as immoral, and unconscionable? If a free nation's sovereignty is held in the hands of the people how is it that the state now can do more than the people can do themselves? Planning our people's lives, the economy, and meddling throughout the world changes the role of Government from the guarantor of liberty to the destroyer of liberty.

Our problems have become international in scope due to the nature of the political system and our policies. This need not be, but it is. The financial problems of the Nation, although clearly linked to our deficits and domestic monetary policy cannot be separated from the international schemes of banking as promoted by the IMF, the World Bank and the Development Banks. It is much clearer to me now, having been in Washington for 7 years, how our banking and monetary policies are closely linked to our foreign policy and controlled by men not motivated to protect the sovereignty of America nor the liberties of our citizens. It's not that they are necessarily inclined to deliberately destroy our freedom, but they place a higher priority on internationalism and worldwide inflation—a system of government and finance that serves the powerful elite.

All the military might in the world will not protect us from deteriorating economies and protectionism, and will not assure peace. Policies are much more important than apparent military strength. The firepower used in Vietnam and the lives sacrificed did nothing to overcome the interventionist policies of both the Republicans and the Democratic administrations. When foreign policies are right, money sound, trade free, and respect for liberty prevalent, strong economies and peace are much more likely to evolve. The armaments race and the funding of enemies and wealthy allies only contribute to the fervor with which our tax dollars are churned through the military-industrial complex.

The crisis we face is clearly related to a loss of trust—trust in ourselves, in freedom, in our own Government and in our money. We are a litigious welfare society gone mad. Everyone feels compelled to grab whatever he can get from Government or by suit. The "something for nothing" obsession rules our every movement, and is in conflict with the other side of man's nature; that side that values self-esteem and pride of one's personal achievement. Today the pride of self-reliance and personal achievement is buried by the ego-destroying policies of the planned interventions of big government and replaced by the "satisfaction" of manipulating the political system to one's own special advantage. Score is kept by counting the Federal dollars allocated to the special group or the congressional district to which one belongs. This process cannot continue indefinitely. Something has to give—we must choose either freedom and prosperity or tyranny and poverty.

U.S. AGRICULTURE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. McCURDY] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. McCURDY. Mr. Speaker, I represent a predominantly rural district in Oklahoma where agricultural production is at the heart of our entire economy. Our farmers produce cotton, wheat, sorghum, hay, and watermelons, among other commodities. Dairy and beef cattle graze the wide open spaces. Like most farmers, the producers in my district have known good times and bad times. But again, like most farmers they press on, believing that things can only get better. But I am afraid that the light at the end grows dimmer; the pot of gold is turning rusty. Farming in the 1980's is vastly different than at any time before and U.S. ag policy remains entrenched in themes of the 1950's.

Today, U.S. agriculture is much more sensitive to changes in the world market than at any time before. Modern farming methods have produced yields that far surpass demand at home. And, for the family farmer, it is increasingly hard to make a dollar. Interest rates, production costs and other factors have eroded away the profit margin.

Foreclosures of farmland in Oklahoma have increased dramatically during 1984 and more are threatened this fall. In 1982, the Farmers Home Administration foreclosed on 17 Oklahoma farms while the Federal land bank foreclosed on 381. In 1984 to date, they have combined to record 642 farm foreclosures in Oklahoma alone.

Recently, I spoke with a banker who has administered farm loans over two decades in a small community of my district. He spoke to me earnestly; fearful that many of his customers are doomed. His assessment resembles that of bankers in many farm States:

He said:

Our farmers are hardworking, industrious people and the present drought situation coupled with high interest rates spells a potential disaster. These are extremely difficult times and I'm not sure but that total failure of this year's cotton and wheat crop and its effect on our livestock industry would put the finishing touches on most of our farm customers. Our community is 6,000 strong and agriculture is our backbone.

□ 1910

The wife of a farmer in my district is also worried. She writes:

We farm around 10,000 acres. We have big tractors and a fairly large home and we are up to our necks in debt. We are hitting 60 years of age with no other income and the prospects of losing all we have accumulated are very real. And Social Security is not looking too good either. It's like Vietnam—no way out! My husband, like most tillers of the soil, loves the work. We don't want a fortune, just enough to pay our own way.

These examples do not reflect the plight of every farmer. The farm depression of the 1980's has not hit everybody evenly. If farmers have minimum debt, were not affected by drought or other natural disasters, or participated heavily in the PIK Program of 1983, chances are good they are financially sound today. But all farmers, whether solvent or not, realize that overall, the production sector of agriculture is not sharing in the Nation's economic recovery. As one farmer said to me: "If there is a gravy train running across the land, we are not on it." A large number of capable farmers and ranchers continue to face the prospect of bankruptcy this year unless farm prices and net farm income improve substantially.

The most recent USDA report showed that after adjustment for inflation, net farm income dropped to $5.4 billion in 1983—the lowest since the statistics were begun in the 1910–14 period. Even in the years of the Great Depression, 1930–34, real net farm income averaged $6.9 billion annually. It is extremely important to note that when net farm income drops substantially, as it did from 1979 to 1983, the business of related industries is drastically affected.

Sales of all types of farm machinery fell anywhere in a range of 40 percent to 77 percent from 1979 to mid-1983;

A total of 1,068 farm equipment dealerships closed their doors from 1981 through mid-1983, a closure rate 2½ times greater than the historical average;

More than 20,000 workers were laid off;

The real value of pesticide sales declined by one-third, and;

Fertilizer use dropped 18 percent.

While an economic disaster has swept over the agriculture sector of our economy, we as consumers have hardly noticed.

Farmers, ranchers and farm workers constitute only 3.1 percent of the civilian labor force but are so productive that the U.S. population is able to consume only 61 percent of all the commodities they harvest. Because of the productivity of our farms and ranches as a whole, the cost to Americans as consumers of the food from those raw commodities is extremely low. The average American household spends less of its disposable real after-tax income on food and works less time in order to earn the money to purchase vital food items than in any other nation in the world. Americans spend less than 13 percent of their disposable income on food consumed at home.

And, of that portion expended by consumers for food, less and less is actually reaching the pockets of producers. When we spend 99 cents for a head of lettuce, less than 30 cents goes to the farmer who produced it. When we pay 59 cents for a can of green beans, only 10 cents goes to the producer. A $1.09 loaf of bread returns 13 cents to the wheatgrower.

According to USDA, the estimated bill for marketing domestic farm foods, which does not include imported foods, was $214 billion in 1982. This covered all charges for transporting, processing, and distributing foods that originated on U.S. farms. It represented slightly more than two-thirds of the $298 billion consumers spent for these foods. The remaining $84 billion represented the gross return that farmers received.

The cost of marketing farm foods has increased over the years mostly because of rising costs of labor, transportation, food packaging materials and other factors. In the last decade, food marketing costs rose 160 percent.

Just how significant is agriculture to the health of our overall economy?

When all commodities and all aspects of supply, production, processing, and marketing are considered, agriculture employs more than 24 million persons, or one-fifth of the entire U.S. work force. For every $1 of output from the farmers there are $7 of related production in the domestic economy. In 1982, the food and agricultural system was responsible for slightly more than one-fifth of the U.S. gross national product in 1982.

The agricultural economy can no longer be viewed apart from the domestic or international economy. Monetary policy, trade balance, interest rates * * * all have a profound affect on farming. Today, the American farmer is much like the owner of a small manufacturing plant. He is an employer, manager, and producer. He must learn much more than when to sow, when to till, and when to harvest. The farm's sole distinction from its counterparts in other sectors of the economy is an ominous one. Agricultural production remains uniquely subject to weather, disease, and insects.

Today, domestic and international economic conditions are crippling American agriculture. At home, high interest rates make borrowing a sure ticket to disaster. Listen to a farmer/newspaper columnist who lives near my district:

I'm among the lucky farmers. I have two jobs providing a salary to pay the interest on notes that can't be paid from just farming. Every year I pay the interest and renew my notes and with a bit of urging from the bankers, pay a bit on the principal. It is impossible for borrowers to pay an interest rate on a production loan which is higher than the earning power of the borrowed money. This lesson applies whether we are talking about private lending to a farmer planting a crop or to a local business to carry an inventory. This is why many good farmers are in trouble—profit margins in farming are less than the interest rates on farm loans. Whole nations are about to default on their international debt because their trade balances will not pay the interest rate. Unless the price of what we raise gets higher or the interest rates are greatly lowered, more loans will be called in by the lenders. If something isn't done to reschedule these loans, insolvency could be the biggest domestic problem of the middle 1980s.

The USDA reports that outstanding farm debt had grown to $216.3 billion in 1963 compared to only $53 billion in 1970. An increasing number of farmers find themselves dangerously exposed to a fluctuating interest rate.

Yesterday, the President and the USDA announced a program to reschedule agricultural loans and provide basic financial guidance for the farmers. This body, a year ago, passed $600 million for this program, and urged at that time over the objection of this administration, the enactment of that program.

That program contains nothing new. It could have been enacted a day ago, a year ago, a month ago. But only 45 days from the election is the policy of the administration reversed and this program implemented. My farmers will take any help and whatever help they can receive.

Internationally, the overvalued dollar and world economic recession have reduced American agricultural exports. Agricultural exports have dropped from a high of $44 billion in 1981 to a low of $35 billion in 1983.

□ 1920

Just look at the USDA's latest report on farm exports.

In Western Europe, the value of U.S. exports is well below previous years due to larger stocks of domestic grain there and continued strength of the U.S. dollar. In Eastern Europe, U.S. exports have declined due to excellent 1983 wheat harvest and increased competition from Canada and Austria in the coarse grain market.

Excellent harvests in China continue to depress demand for U.S. products there. It took a disastrous harvest in the Soviet Union to virtually rescue the 1984 export volume.

On the evening news the other night there was a story about the Government of Saudi Arabia subsidizing the purchase of land and equipment to begin production of wheat in that country.

Not only is the land and equipment subsidized, the Government then purchases from the farmer at a value seven times the international price that wheat, and we wonder why the U.S. farmer has trouble exporting his goods.

High interest rates. Overvalued dollar. These are conditions that farmers did not create yet they continue to place an economic burden on the agricultural sector. A recent study by agricultural economists threw out all but one solution to the problem. "There can be only one realistic solution," their report stated. "That is, reduce the deficit of the U.S. Government."

This is an election year there can be no doubt. It is disappointing then that in a year when hope for the future is expressed so eloquently, that both parties choose to exploit problems in agriculture as examples of weaknesses in the other side rather than seriously examine U.S. ag policy.

The Republican Party platform states: "The Carter administration and 28 years of a Congress rigidly controlled and out of touch with the people brought farmers and ranchers to the hardest times since the Great Depression."

The platform of the Democratic Party states: "Interest rates are at ruinous levels and the Reagan administration is to blame. Agriculture—America's largest and most fundamental industry—has been plunged into its worst depression since Herbert Hoover presided over the farmer's collapse half a century ago."

The Democrats note that 200,000 farms and ranches have gone out of business since the Reagan administration came into office. The Republicans counter that 300,000 farms were lost under President Carter.

Both parties agree that agriculture is not very healthy. Both parties agree that it's the other party's fault. Both parties promise better times ahead economically but substantial policy proposals are absent. Only the Democratic Party has presented a specific plan to reduce the deficit.

Farmers expect and deserve much more.

We approach the most critical crossroads in the history of American agriculture. The 1985 farm bill represents a last hope for many farmers. The entire agricultural sector is working now to present a united front to Congress when the 1985 farm bill debate is underway. I applaud this effort. Our piece-meal approach to agricultural programs in the past is largely responsible for many of the problems facing the farm sector today. And, I would just like to take a moment here to single out my colleagues in the congressional agricultural forum, particularly the gentleman from Texas, CHARLIE STENHOLM, and the gentleman from Kansas, PAT ROBERTS. The Stenholm/Roberts group is participating within the much larger National Agricultural Forum to develop an overall agricultural strategy for 1985 and beyond. Some of the material presented in this special order today is a result of the intensive research and discussions that are going on. It is through this effort that we can remove the myth and political rhetoric that have plagued farm bill debates in the past.

I urge my other colleagues in the House to study the issues confronting agriculture with great care. We must determine whether the tools established in the 1981 farm bill are adequate to address the needs of agriculture in the 1980's. Obviously, the Payment-in-Kind Program saved many farmers but is it good ag policy to pay farmers not to farm? Nonrecourse loans can be effective but farmers can't borrow their way out of debt. We are hearing that price supports must be lowered if overall farm income is to increase. Do we need a national agricultural export policy written into the 1985 farm bill? These are questions and issues that must be addressed. I invite the American people to write your representatives in Congress. Offer your views now while the debate is in its formulative stage.

I appeal my colleagues in a House of Representatives dominated by urban and surburban districts to recognize the vital role agriculture plays in our daily lives. Domestic agriculture is the primary source of our food, clothing and shelter, three fundamental aspects of our very existence.

As late as 1950, there were enough farms dependent on farm income for family expenses located throughout the United States to assure that a majority of Members of the U.S. House of Representatives would be responsive to agricultural interests. Today, in only one-fifth of the Nation's 3,042 counties does farming still represent at least 20 percent of the economic activity.

Yes, we are Members of a Congress dominated by urban and suburban interests. But that is no excuse for ignorance on farm issues. If there is a supermarket in your district, and there is, you need be concerned. If there is a food distributor in your district, you need be concerned. If there is a chemical company in your district, or a transportation company, or a pharmaceutical manufacturer, or a restaurant, you need to concern yourself with the future of agricultural policy in this Nation. Agriculture touches all of us. We must address its survival with a full deck; with our eyes to the present and future, not riveted to the past.

Mr. WATKINS. Will the gentleman from Oklahoma yield?

Mr. McCURDY. I would gladly yield to my colleague, the chairman of the Rural Caucus [Mr. WATKINS].

Mr. WATKINS. I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

Mr. Speaker, I want to commend my colleague DAVE MCCURDY from the Fourth District in Oklahoma for calling the special order concerning agriculture. I am pleased to have the opportunity to speak on agriculture this afternoon. In the 1930's during the great Dust Bowl, our Nation's farmers had the attitude of "I'm just a farmer." Over the years, our Nation's agriculturalists have picked themselves up and dusted off this attitude of inadequacy. We became individuals proud of our productivity and accomplishment. We have to be scientists and businessmen. Our farmers stood proud and declared, "I'm a farmer from a nation where agriculture is No. 1."

But, more recently our attitude has begun to change and revert to that not-so-proud image of the 1930's. Why? Because in 1984 the farmer cannot make a profit and 3 years of back-to-back slumping land values leaves most farmers for the first time without equity to refinance their farming operations. Land values and farm income are currently decreasing at a rate of between $5 and $6 billion per year. Increased cost of production and rising interest rates coupled with a low price our farmers receive for their products add up to hundreds of forced sales, foreclosures and bankruptcy. In 1950, 45 percent of each dollar of farm income went to the farmer and 55 percent to production costs. The picture was much different in 1983. The farmer today has no profit and the equity of his land has been reduced drastically. Today 70 percent of the farmers in my district has an off-the-farm job.

Since 1981, commodity prices paid to farmers have dropped by 21 percent. Real interest rates paid by farmers have more than doubled. Net farm income has fallen by half, and now is at the lowest level of this century. Many have said the farmer is a natural-born complainer. We have complained in the past because we did not have a profit—but we survived because of equity in land and machinery, but today we don't have profit or equity to refinance. Farm foreclosure rates have tripled. And since 1981, nearly 200,000 farmers and ranchers have gone out of business. How long can the President and Congress let these devastating figures continue? There is only one answer, the 1985 farm bill must return profitability to agriculture.

We have the most productive agriculturalists in the world, but yet our farmers and ranchers continue to be punished for being so efficient and supplying the cheapest food in the world. Today, a consumer will spend only 16 percent of his or her hard earned dollar for food; less than most modern nations. Yet, an American farmer sees a return of only 27 cents for every dollar spent toward food by a consumer. Indeed, American agriculture stands at the crossroads. No longer can we stand in the middle of the crossroads or our farmers will continue to be bombarded with foreclosure. We must choose a road that will return profitability to agriculture. What are the answers to our problems? Most assuredly, we must recognize that U.S. agriculture is dependent on a healthy world economy. This was recognized most recently as a long-term solution to our problems by the National Agriculture Forum. Interest rates must be reduced to aid our farmers. Interest expense on farms rose 3,700 percent between 1950 and 1982, while cash income for the same period rose only 400 percent. Our farm policy must be committed to saving the family farm system.

Our answer to farm problems shouldn't be for Farmers Home Administration to become a landowner.

We must have selective moratoriums on farm foreclosures; look at each case on an individual basis. For the most part, it is not poor management that has caused the flood of bankruptcies. But, it is due to factors beyond the control of the farmer such as low prices, world markets, high interest rates and unpredictable weather. We must restructure the debt of productive family farmers so they can pay out. Commodity supplies should be brought back into balance with actual demand. Benefits of farm programs should be targeted specifically to the farm operators, rather than letting the giant firms and farm speculators raid the Treasury at the expense of the real producers. With agriculture depression virtually on every rural doorstep, this affects the entire rural structure. When our farmers and ranchers suffer, so do agribusiness and other industry dependent on his dollar. Agriculture depression results in a severe deterioration of rural communities infrastructure, educational systems and quality of life. Rural development and growth virtually comes to a halt. Mr. Merchant can no longer build the addition he wanted on his grocery store. Less income means deteriorating streets and roads from the smaller revenue level.

Mr. Speaker, it is time we faced our agriculture problems head-on and arrive at a solution through a bipartisan effort. Do we really want our farmers to return to the attitude they held more than 50 years ago? Or is it time for our farmers were once again proud of their accomplishments and able to make a profit?

□ 1930

Mr. McCURDY. I thank the gentleman for his comments and again state what a marvelous job he has done in the Congress as chairman of the rural caucus to highlight the needs and concerns of all rural America. He has performed a great service, and I certainly appreciate his support.

Mr. Speaker, I would only like to conclude by stating that I fear that many of my colleagues sometimes overlook the farm debate if they represent an urban or suburban district. It is imperative that all of us who represent rural or agricultural areas, or portions of rural and agricultural areas, to highlight the importance of agriculture to our overall economy.

The farmers in my district do not want handouts; they do not want subsidies. They want an affordable price and an affordable loan rate. They want a decent market price for their commodity. The price of wheat this week is ranging around $3.47 a bushel. It was higher than that during the depression years. There is no way that American farmers can make a profit with 12- to 14-percent interest rates and $3.47 wheat.

I implore my colleagues to join in this debate on the 1985 farm bill to develop a unified, consistent, viable and realistic farm policy.

● Mr. JONES of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding. I appreciate this opportunity to speak about the economic plight of agriculture and the effect of Federal budget policy on the farm sector. Farmers have not shared in the current economic recovery. They are being buffeted by the twin hardships of high interest rates and weak export markets. Both of these hardships are exacerbated by record Federal budget deficits.

Agriculture relies heavily on borrowed money to finance crop production. As a result, interest rates are a key component in the economic health of farming, and the farm sector is reeling from the effects of the high real interest rates experienced in recent years. Interest as a percent of farm expenses is up; profit margins are squeezed; and farm foreclosures are at record levels. Undoubtedly, an important contributing factor to the current high real interest rates are the record Federal budget deficits we have experienced during fiscal years 1981 through 1983 and will continue to face as far out as we make budget projections. The effect of these Federal budget deficits on interest rates translates into more financial hardship for farmers, who borrow money for seed, equiment, and fuel.

Federal budget deficits also contribute to the strength of the dollar on international currency markets. The overvaluation of the dollar, in turn, has reduced foreign demand for Americanh exports, including agricultural exports, and resulted in record trade deficits. The productivity of American agriculture has outstripped the domestic demand for food and fiber. Access to world markets is now an essential part of the economic health of our agriculture. Despite the increased purchases of grain by the Soviet Union in recent weeks, farm exports are well below the peak years of 1980 and 1981. Recapture of our agricultural export markets must be an important part of any recovery for American agriculture. Those export markets will open up when interest rates decline and the value of the American dollar returns to a more familiar position relative to other major world currencies.

No sector of the American economy stands to benefit more from Federal budget-deficit reductions than agriculture. I believe a balanced program of reduced defense spending, containment of nonmeans-tested entitlement programs, and revenue enhancements is the best way to achieve deficit reductions. Such a program would help to reduce interest rates and to restore export opportunities for American farms and businesses. Such a balanced program of deficit reduction would help relieve the interest burden of farmers and expand the opportunities for the sale of their food and fiber products abroad.

As Congress prepares to take up a major reauthorization of farm price support programs next year, we should keep in mind how much agriculture has been hurt by high interest rates and the contraction of its export markets and how much it has to gain from deficit reductions and a more balanced fiscal policy.●

● Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. Speaker, I want to commend and thank the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. McCURDY] for requesting this special order on agriculture. Statistics on the condition of our farm and ranch economy are well known. This evening I don't intend to recite again the statistics on depressed farm income and agricultural exports, the number of family farmers and ranchers being forced from the land and into bankruptcy, the continuing decline in farm implements sales, and the widespread economic crisis in rural areas. Instead I want to talk about basic solutions to the fundamental problems of agriculture.

During the South Dakota State Fair earlier this month I talked to hundreds of our family farmers and ranchers about the widespread financial problems in our rural communities. Consistently these producers identified high interest rates and low market prices as the causes of the economic depression in agriculture. In order to be able to make a profit and to restore the hope of profitability to agriculture, our producers need two things—affordable credit and market prices which offer a decent return on the investment they've made.

Yesterday, USDA announced a three-point program to help farmers and ranchers who are being crushed under the burden of massive debt. This program consists of financial counseling from FmHA, using non-FmHA employees to process loan applications during periods of peak credit demand, and deferring loan repayments and guaranteeing a portion of farm loans made by private-sector lenders. Unfortunately this program contains nothing new. The entire three-point program could have been put into effect the day before yesterday, last week, or months ago by USDA and FmHA. But it wasn't. Not only didn't USDA and FmHA implement this program before, they consistently resisted and fought every call and request to use these current authorities to help family farmers and ranchers being forced from the land by increasing debt burdens.

The November general election is now only a few weeks away. Undoubtedly, the proximity of the upcoming election and the about-face announcement by FmHA of a farm-debt plan will not escape notice. It's likely the administration will be charged with playing partisan politics with the farm-debt program it unveiled yesterday.

Farmers and ranchers frankly don't care if the next election and a hoped for partisan political advantage are responsible for finally forcing action to be taken on the problems of our agricultural community. They've heard enough empty rhetoric and they've heard enough speeches. So far empty rhetoric and speeches haven't solved the problems. If the possibility of a political gain for the administration means the problems of our agricultural economy will finally receive some attention from USDA, so be it. You've got to use the tools at hand.

The farm-debt program FmHA has announced won't help producers make a profit who are being whipsawed by low market prices and high interest rates. It may give our agricultural producers a little more time, but what they need is the opportunity to make a profit. If the upcoming election can be used to wrestle from USDA and the administration support for farm programs and agriculture policies which make lower interest rates, higher market prices, and a profit in agriculture possible, so be it. Profit, not more time, is the solution to our farm-debt problem: a profit in agriculture made possible by lower cost credit and higher market prices.●

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. McCURDY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the subject of my special order today.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

TRIBUTE TO HON. DAN MARRIOTT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Utah [Mr. NIELSON] is recognized for 30 minutes.

Mr. NIELSON of Utah. Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this special order is to honor a colleague of ours from the State of Utah, Congressman DAN MARRIOTT.

Congressman MARRIOTT is a fairly young man. He has been here 8 years. He was elected first in 1976. Congressman MARRIOTT is in what we call a swing district in the State of Utah. That seat has been held at various times by, to mention a few, Hon. David King, Sherman P. Lloyd, Wayne Owens, and Allan Howe, and then DAN MARRIOTT has held that seat for the last 8 years. But it has swung back and forth between the parties. Of those I mentioned, Congressman Lloyd was a Republican, as is Congressman MARRIOTT, and the other three were Democrats.

Congressman MARRIOTT has lived a very fine life. He has been a very successful businessman. He has a good deal of experience in the insurance field, in the pension area particularly, and he is well respected in the State of Utah.

Congressman MARRIOTT elected not to run for reelection to Congress after serving four terms honorably, and decided to run for Governor of the State of Utah, a State where we have had a Democratic Governor for 20 years, two different Governors for a total of 20 years.

Congressman MARRIOTT survived the convention. There were five candidates and he survived the convention and made what I thought was an excellent choice for a running mate for Lieutenant Governor, Senator Karl Snow, who probably knows more about State government than anyone in the State of Utah. I felt that they would make a strong team. However, in the primary election, they were defeated by another strong team, Speaker of the House Norman Bangerter and his running mate, State Auditor Val Oveson.

I would like to commend Mr. MARRIOTT for his ability to mend fences quickly. He pledged his quick support to Speaker Bangerter and took the defeat gracefully and graciously, and he is to be commended for that.

Congressman MARRIOTT, while he has been here, has been active in the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs and the Committee on Small Business. In the Interior Committee he is currently the ranking minority member of the Subcommittee on Mines and Mining, and he has also been active in the Power Subcommittee and, or course, has been active in Public Lands as well. In the Committee on Small Business, he was very active. He received an award in 1984 as the outstanding Congressman in the area of small business.

Congressman MARRIOTT the last time became the ranking minority member of the Select Committee on Children, Youth, and Families and he has served very well in that particular role.

Without being maudlin about it, I think we all owe a debt of gratitude to Congressman MARRIOTT, the senior Congressman from the State of Utah. Congressman HANSEN, to whom I am going to yield in a moment, and I have been very happy to work with him. We have had, for the most part, a united delegation. We have worked very diligently together on the wilderness bill and some other legislation affecting the State of Utah, and while we do not always vote together, in fact more often it is a 2-to-1 split on certain issues, nevertheless we have worked very well together. They, together with Senators GARN and HATCH, have had a unified front on many issues.

I might say also that Congressman MARRIOTT has been willing to work and anxious to work with Governor Matheson, who is a Democrat but who has been very cooperative in working with us in the wilderness bill and other areas in which we have a mutual interest. Congressman MARRIOTT has shown his ability to work with both sides of the aisle.

One of the gentleman's major accomplishments, of course, is to get rid of the tailings in Salt Lake City, the vitro tailings that have been there for 25 years. Congressman MARRIOTT was way ahead of the rest of Congress when he noted that they were an area that needed to be cleaned up. Even before Superfund was founded, Congressman MARRIOTT got on that issue and we are happy to announce that that will be taken care of this year. Congressman MARRIOTT played a key role in that regard, and we are happy that he was able to accomplish that.

I do not wish to take further time, but I would like to yield at this time to the gentleman from Utah, JIM HANSEN, who is the second ranking member of the State delegation and will soon become the senior member of the Utah delegation.

I have to tease Congressman HANSEN just a bit. I was Speaker of the Utah House when he was a freshman and he used to listen to me a little bit that time. Now that he outranks me in the House, he does not seem to listen to me quite as well as he once did. I am happy to learn what I have learned from him.

Mr. Speaker, I yield at this point to the gentleman from Utah, JIM HANSEN.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. HANSEN of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the subject of this special order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Utah?

There was no objection.

Mr. HANSEN of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have this opportunity to speak in honor of my friend and colleague from the great State of Utah, the Honorable DAN MARRIOTT, as he has chosen to end his career as a Member of this great body, the Congress of the United States. DAN was born on November 2, 1939, in a small town in Bingham Canyon, UT. He attended public school in Sandy, UT, and later graduated from the University of Utah with a bachelor's degree in speech and communications.

As a young man, DAN gave 2 years of his life in serving as a missionary in Hawaii for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Since then, he has continued to be actively involved in church service, accepting callings to work in various church positions and assignments.

On August 19, 1965, he married Marilynn Tingey who has been a dedicated wife and mother, supporting DAN through his education, his business adventures, his church service, and during his four terms as a Member of Congress. They have successfully raised four children: David, Michael, Katherine, and Lindsay. DAN has sacrificed much during his years of service as a Congressman, often unable to be at home with his wife and family when he would have liked to have been, but instead was needed to vote on key issues here.

Before coming to Congress in 1977, DAN was a successful businessman. He obtained a chartered life underwriter [CLU] degree, with advanced diplomas in estate, pension, and financial planning, and he is a noted lecturer and teacher in these areas. He was the president of Marriott Associates, a pension consulting company, and also worked as a general agent for the Guardian Life Insurance Co. of America. DAN is past president of the Utah Chapter of Charter Life Underwriters and past director of the Mountain States Pension Conference. He's a member of the Million Dollar Round Table, the Salt Lake City Chamber of Commerce, the Estate Planning Council, and the National Federation of Independent Business. His accomplishments both in and out of Congress have been many.

DAN was first elected to Congress on his 37th birthday on November 2, 1976. He has since won reelection to four consecutive terms—an accomplishment unprecedented in Utah's Second Congressional District in the last 40 years. DAN has worked hard for the State of Utah and has accomplished much through his work on the Interior Committee and as ranking Republican on the Mining, Forest Management, and Bonneville Power Administration Subcommittee, including enactment of the Combined Hydrocarbon Leasing Act of 1981. He has been an advocate of legislation to remove the barriers to oil shale leasing and development and to geothermal leasing and development. he has also been an advocate of coal slurry pipeline legislation with the protection of State water rights and an advocate of strategic minerals legislation designed to enhance U.S. security. He has also worked for going forward with the Federal Coal Leasing Program to meet the Nation's energy needs.

One of his most recent accomplishments includes his work on the Utah wilderness bill. He made many strides toward developing a delicate balance between wilderness designations and oil and gas industry interests. He stressed the need for foresight and intelligent action in preserving Utah's pristine wilderness assets while also maintaining foresight in coal, oil, and gas, geothermal energy, tar sands, oil shale, hydroelectric power, and just about every other form of energy development, all of which are critically important to the economy of Utah and to the Nation's search for energy independence.

DAN has also been recognized as a champion of children's causes. He has served as the ranking minority member of the House Select Committee on Children, Youth, and Families. Recognizing the importance of his own family to him, he has continually advocated that the family is the single most important unit of our society. He has consistently felt that the importance of the role of the family cannot be negated and that, on the contrary, we must take time from our daily lives to recognize its value to society and to realize what we must do to foster even stronger family units. Consequently, DAN has been the sponsor for the past 8 years of National Family Week as a time when families can reflect and strengthen their own family ties. He has also actively worked to increase penalties for child pornography and for the passage of a measure to ease the adoption of hard-to-place children. He also sponsored the missing children's bill, which now, as a law, aids States in their search for missing persons.

These are only a few of DAN's efforts in Congress, and the list of his accomplishments is long, including service as a member of the Small Business Committee where he worked to safeguard the interests of the small businessman.

DAN has run several successful campaigns in his bid for the Second Congressional seat in the State of Utah, including a strong race against a very popular University of Utah professor where DAN won by a wide margin, and also against a very liberal opponent with views diametrically opposite to his. Most recently, he has run an excellent campaign for the Governor's seat in Utah. This was a difficult campaign for him as he also had to maintain his commitment to the Second District of Utah by working diligently for them back here. Though he was defeated in his bid for the Governor's chair, I believe we should all take a lesson from his superb attitude and example. Upon his defeat, DAN went to the headquarters of his opponent and told him he had won the race fair and square and that he would fully support him.

DAN's work in Congress and his accomplishments for the State of Utah are many. I have thoroughly enjoyed working with DAN as a member of Utah delegation. He will be greatly missed by those of us who have had the opportunity to work closely with him.

□ 1940

Mr. NIELSON of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I yield a few minutes now to Congressman DAN MARRIOTT.

Mr. MARRIOTT. Mr. Speaker, I want to say I appreciate very much my two good colleagues from Utah. This is the entire delegation occupying this space tonight.

I want to first of all thank Congressman NIELSON and Congressman HANSEN for taking some time at this late hour in an empty Chamber, taking the time to make these remarks for the RECORD.

I appreciate very much serving with both these fine capable gentlemen.

I would like to just simply say without making a long speech that I have thoroughly enjoyed my 8 years here as a Member of the U.S. Congress. Not only have I thoroughly enjoyed working with the Members, who I think are some of the greatest, best qualified, finest individuals on the face of this Earth, but I have also enjoyed working with the staff, those in front of me here, those behind the scenes and those who make things happen for all of us as Members of this great body.

So I leave Congress with a great appreciation for the Constitution of this great land. I leave with an appreciation for the Members of Congress who dedicate their lives and service to this great country. Most Members of Congress deserve about a $300,000-a-year pay increase. If I were here, I think I would support that legislation, because they really give 18, 20, 24 hours a day to the service of their country.

I am honored to have served here with such outstanding people.

I see sitting over here my friend, the gentleman from Illinois, PAUL SIMON, who will also be leaving this body and I certainly want to wish him the very best as he pursues the U.S. Senate. He certainly has made a great contribution. It is people like PAUL, people like JIM and people like HOWARD and people like the majority of the Members of this body, Mr. Speaker, who really have made this a worthwhile institution.

This is the greatest deliberative body on Earth. I am grateful to have had the privilege of serving here for 8 years. I look forward to going back and applying what I have learned to the private sector, hopefully improving what I had before I came here and hopefully making this country an even better place for all of us to raise our families.

So again, HOWARD and JIM, thank you very much for having these few moments on my behalf. I appreciate it very much and I want to tell all of you and the entire body of the U.S. Congress, Godspeed.

Mr. NIELSON of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the Congressman from the State of Illinois [Mr. SIMON].

Mr. SIMON. Mr. Speaker, I simply want to join in this tribute to our colleague. He has been a very solid, constructive, substantial Member of this body. There may have been times when I voted differently from my friend from Utah, but he is respected by the people on both sides of the aisle and I think it is most appropriate that we take a few minutes this evening to pay tribute to someone who has really contributed a great deal.

Mr. NIELSON of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I would like to conclude this by simply saying again how much we have enjoyed working with DAN. When I ran for Congress 2 years ago, I was one of eight who ran on my particular party. DAN was one of the first ones to support me. He could not do it publicly, of course, but I appreciated that very much.

I felt very good toward DAN. When I was working in the State legislature, he was very active at that time in Congress. He has been very conscientious and I think he has done very well and deserves every bit of credit that could be given to him.

● Mr. WON PAT. Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to join my colleagues here today to honor our good friend Representative DAN MARRIOTT of Utah.

His departure from the House saddens me greatly. DAN and I served together on the House Interior Committee for some time and I know that we will certainly miss his keen insight and concerns over environmental affairs.

DAN and I grew to be great friends over the past few years and I have enjoyed the privilege of working with this outstanding public servant.

One of the hallmarks of DAN MARRIOTT was his ability to stand for his own principles while also putting aside partisan differences when the good of the country was involved.

This was certainly true of his support for my own constituents on Guam. DAN visited Guam several years ago and I can honestly say that there has been no more ardent supporter of Guam or other U.S. territories than DAN MARRIOTT.

Even though he will soon leave the House and return home to Utah, I am looking forward to hearing from DAN MARRIOTT in the future. I am confident he will continue to make important contributions to this Nation and to Utah as he has done for the past 12 years here in the House of Representatives.

My best wishes to you DAN and on behalf of the people of Guam our appreciation for your support and friendship.

Thank you.●

● Mr. RUDD. Mr. Speaker, our friend and colleague, the Honorable DAN MARRIOTT, has served the people of the Second District of Utah and all the people of this Nation with integrity and ability, and his presence here will be greatly missed in the years to come.

DAN has distinguished himself as an outstanding member of the Interior Committee. As a member of that committee, he was instrumental in recently securing favorable action on the Arizona strip wilderness bill which represented an extraordinary amount of cooperation among environmentalists, economic and local concerns so that the difficult wilderness question in northern Arizona was resolved for the benefit of all Arizonans. That careful cooperation, in which DAN was so closely involved, should serve as a prime example in formulating other wilderness. proposals so that competing environmental and economic interests are appropriately balanced.

He has also been in the forefront in championing children's causes, and in advocating the rights of the unborn. He has worked to minimize intrusive Federal regulation, to minimize the tax burden imposed on the American people, and to protect our citizens' second amendment right to keep and bear arms. He has worked for responsible spending by the Federal Government.

It is an honor to have served with DAN over the past 8 years. I join with my colleagues today in thanking DAN for his outstanding service on behalf of the Nation, and wish him well in the days and months ahead.●

● Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, I am honored to have this opportunity to pay tribute to a valued colleague and dear friend, DAN MARRIOTT, who is leaving Congress after four consecutive terms. DAN is well recognized both on Capitol Hill and nationally for his consistent efforts to fight excessive budget deficits and Government spending. He is also a well-known champion of children's causes. Because of his original sponsorship of National Family Week, which continued for 6 years, he was selected in 1983 to be the ranking minority member of the House Select Committee on Children, Youth, and Families. This committee, on which I also serve, was established to study and review the diverse problems of our Nation's children and their families and to develop policies that would encourage the coordination of public and private programs designed to address these problems. As a leader on this committee, DAN has fought for what he feels constitutes the basic fabric of our Nation: the family. He has sought over the years to stress the importance of the traditional family unit and to reinforce this national foundation through various Federal initiatives.

DAN has also earned a reputation in Congress as a watchdog for small businesses. He was a member of the Small Business Committee, where he held a leadership status for several years, rising in seniority to become the ranking member of the Subcommittee on Tax, Access in Equity Capital, and Business Opportunities. During his tenure on the committee, he was instrumental in securing venture capital for small businesses, easing Government regulations, and raising the voice of small businesses in competing with major corporations.

Much of DAN's accomplishments resulted from his work on the House Interior Committee, where he is presently ranking minority member of the Mines and Mining Subcommittee and the second ranking member on the Energy and Environment Subcommittee. He is the fourth ranking Republican on the full committee. As a member of this committee for the last 8 years, DAN has been a key figure in safeguarding the destiny of Utah lands, 60 percent of which are owned by the Federal Government, but has never abandoned the interests of the people who explore those lands.

DAN has always remained a compassionate and far-sighted legislator, developing a delicate balance between wilderness and industrial designations. As a legislative body, as well as a collection of fellow human beings, we will sorely miss the presence of DAN MARRIOTT.●

● Mrs. HOLT. Mr. Speaker, I am sure that all of us regret that DAN MARRIOTT will be leaving the House after this term. His intelligent and diligent service has won our admiration, and he has won many friends because of his personal qualities.

I have learned to have great respect for his work in the House Interior Committee and have benefited from the wise counsel he has provided on legislation from that committee.

His compassion and concern for the youth of our Nation have been demonstrated by his work in the House Select Committee on Children, Youth, and Families.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to participate in this salute to DAN MARRIOTT, a good friend whose distinguished service will be remembered by all of us. We wish him well in all his endeavors after he leaves the House.●

● Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, after four consecutive terms as a champion of small businessmen, conservationists, and the American family, DAN MARRIOTT is leaving Congress to return to his insurance business in Salt Lake City.

In his 8 congressional years, most of which he has spent representing nearly half the State of Utah, DAN has earned tribute from many quarters. His latest achievement was signed into law this month—the Utah wilderness bill—which strikes a balance between wilderness designation and the interests of those who would like to extract minerals from Federal lands.

One of DAN MARRIOTT's most ardent pursuits in Congress has been one close to my heart—the preservation of opportunities for small business. During his tenure in the Small Business Committee, he was instrumental in securing venture capital for small businessmen and easing the Government redtape that has often worked against the small operator. He was also one of the original sponsors of the small business participating loan measure.

When last on the committee, he served as ranking minority member of the Subcommittee on Tax Access in Equity Capital and Business Opportunities.

Not only an active lawmaker, DAN MARRIOTT is a devout member of the Church of the Latter Day Saints, in which he serves as a high priest in his home State. And DAN is a compassionate man who has kept the interests of the American family unit close to his heart. One of his first actions in Congress was to sponsor National Family Week during Thanksgiving Week every year. He has continued to stress the importance of the family unit as the minority leader on the House Select Committee on Children, Youth, and Families.

I ask other Members of Congress to join with me in saluting DAN MARRIOTT, a valued colleague and an exemplary Member, who has been untiringly zealous and diligent in ministering to the needs of his home State of Utah.●

● Mr. WINN. Mr. Speaker, it is with a mixture of pleasure and sadness that I join my colleagues today in honoring my friend, DAN MARRIOTT. DAN has worked hard for the Second District of Utah and here in the House of Representatives and while he will be sorely missed, I am certain that DAN is going on to bigger and better things.

I know DAN MARRIOTT as a sincere, productive legislator. Instead of being a "podium-pounder," he has succeeded where others have failed through quiet, effective leadership. If one defines leadership as the courage to admit mistakes, as having the vision to welcome change, the enthusiasm to motivate others, and the confidence to stay out of step when everyone else is marching to the wrong tune, then this definition exemplifies the type of leadership role DAN has made for himself over the past 8 years, and is seen in any number of areas where he has made a difference. Recognized for his consistent efforts to achieve a balanced Federal budget by eliminating wasteful Government spending, he is also considered one of the leading champions of children's causes. Most recently, DAN was instrumental in achieving a respectable balance between environmental, wilderness, and oil and gas interests through the passage of the Utah Wilderness bill. He is to be commended for his thoughtful participation in the development of this legislation which is so important to the State of Utah.

With his many other important legislative contributions in the areas of small business, coal slurry pipeline, and nuclear waste policy, DAN has nevertheless found the time for important community affairs such as the Salt Lake City Chamber of Commerce, the Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter Day Saints and little league baseball. All the while he has been a strong proponent of the principles of the Republican Party both on and off the Hill.

It has been a pleasure to know DAN, and I wish he and his family the very best in the years to come.●

● Mr. SUNIA. Mr. Speaker, I rise in recognition of a colleague who has become a true and dear friend, DAN MARRIOTT.

As you know, sir, I am not a member of the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, the committee which is responsible for the territories. DAN has been most generous with his support of territorial issues in that committee. He has given me and my territory his help without reservation many times, even before I have asked.

I had the opportunity to travel to the territories with DAN 2 years ago. I remember complaining later that he was being too serious about the whole business. He was asking too many questions, taking too many notes and spending too much time talking with the people about their problems. But I came away from that trip convinced that DAN was a man dedicated to his job and very serious about his responsibilities.

The territories will miss DAN's help. Our loss, however, will be a gain for someone else, for I am certain that wherever DAN will go, he will take with him his dedication to tasks. Whatever job he will do, he will give it nothing less than his best.

On behalf of the people I represent, the Samoans, let me thank you, DAN, in the words most precious in the Samoan language, "Fa'afetai tele lava," and wish you and your lovely wife, Marilynn, Godspeed in their words, again, "Ia manuia le malaga."

Thank you.●

● Mr. SHUMWAY. Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to have this opportunity to pay tribute to our friend and colleague, DAN MARRIOTT, and to let him know how very much he will be missed here in this House.

Since my election to Congress 6 years ago, I have admired and respected DAN as a reasoned and able legislator. He has provided invaluable guidance, and I have often looked to him for leadership, particularly on issues affecting the Western States were addressed by the House Interior Committee.

DAN MARRIOTT has always had the courage of his convictions, and has stood strongly for that in which he believed. His deep commitment to the family and to the Nation's youth prompted him to be instrumental increating the House Select Committee on Children, Youth, and Families, and also to sponsor National Family Week for the past 6 years.

He has always proven to be an individual whose solid, well reasoned viewpoint could be trusted, and whose consistency could be relied upon. He has served his constituency well, and has certainly made a mark here in the Congress. In addition to being a man of strong personal integrity who defended his own principles, he has also succeeded as a team player, performing in an extremely effective manner as a Federal legislator.

I will miss DAN MARRIOTT, and I know that all my colleagues will also. I extend to him every best personal wish for continued success and achievement in his future endeavors.●

ONCE AGAIN, STYLE TRIUMPHS OVER SUBSTANCE: A RESPONSE TO THE REAGAN ADMINISTRATION'S STEEL DECISION

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from New York [Mr. LAFALCE] is recognized for 60 minutes.

● Mr. LAFALCE. Mr. Speaker, yesterday, the Reagan administration proudly announced that it had rejected a protectionist request from the steel industry to restrict steel imports from several developing countries. Strangely enough, steel industry executives who had forced the administration to make a decision 6 weeks before the general election, appear to support the President's rejection of their request. One does not have to be a cynic to question what is going on here. In my opinion, the answer is rather self evident—once again, style has triumphed over substance in the Reagan administration.

We are told that instead of the United States imposing import restrictions on such countries as Brazil and South Korea, we will now enter into voluntary negotiations with these countries in order to reach mutual agreements concerning acceptable levels of steel exports from those countries to the United States. In proposing such action, the administration can continue to invoke its magic-of-the-marketplace rhetoric in dealing with serious and growing international trade problems while, in reality, it will be resorting to a form of protectionism which President Reagan's own appointees on the International Trade Commission rejected. By refusing to insist on a real program to improve the competitiveness of the American steel industry in return for providing import relief, the Reagan administration has demonstrated an unwillingness or inability to confront the competitiveness problems of a basic American industry, and the pain that it is inflicting on tens of thousands of American families, and countless communities across this country.

The domestic steel industry has been in a state of serious crisis for some time—a situation which the Reagan administation has virtually ignored for 4 years. In the 1970's, steel imports averaged 15 percent of the U.S. market. Imports have continued to rise dramatically since 1980, reaching a record high of 34 percent in July. Total U.S. steel employment has gone down 46 percent in the past 5 years; and the industry has closed over 300 plants since 1980. Many of our major integrated producers continue to operate with outmoded plants and equipment that make serious competition with foreign competitors using modern production methods effectively impossible. More than 100,000 steel industry employees remain on layoff with little prospect of being reemployed by the industry. These workers and their families are suffering the brunt of the serious economic dislocation within the industry and continue to experience severe reductions in their standards of living. What is being done to help?

To date, the administration's response to the industry's plight has been indifference. Nothing of consequence has been done—or even suggested—by this administration to facilitate the modernization of plant and equipment that could improve the industry's competitive position or to ease the adjustment of dislocated workers. Workers are told, in effect, to "vote with your feet," and move to where other jobs might be found. The Reagan administration's plan for voluntary agreements with foreign producers provides no assurances that the relief from imports will actually help to facilitate the modernization of the American steel industry.

We are told the negotiations will begin shortly, and are provided vague references to hopes or expectations that limits on imports can be voluntarily achieved through such negotiations with key exporting nations. But we are also told that, if our foreign competitors refuse to go along, then the administration will be prepared to restrict American market access to these countries. Under such circumstances, one can wonder how voluntary the negotiations will be, or how the results will differ from import quotas. In any case, we will not be able to find out what the administration is really doing until sometime after the November 6 elections.

But, more important, the unconditional trade relief of the type that is apparently being granted is not a strategy designed to improve industry competitiveness at all. It is, instead, a politically expedient give-away. While precipitated by the steel industry's underlying competitive difficulties, the President's plan includes no means of ensuring improvement of the industry's competitive position. The plan will not reduce costs; it will not guarantee investment in modernization; it will not assist dislocated workers; it will, in effect, require no specific action designed to facilitate the adjustment the industry desperately needs to make in order to become internationally competitive. The President's plan will serve simply to insulate the industry from competitive forces over an extended—at least 5 year—period of time. In this sense, the administration's program could eventually prove to be the ultimate in protectionism.

In adopting this approach, President Reagan has disregarded the views of many experts that conditionality in the granting of trade relief is an essential prerequisite to adequate industry restructuring. In fact, three of the Commissioners who joined in the International Trade Commission's recommendation for restrictions on steel imports urged that protection only be granted, if the steel industry adopted a plan to improve its competitiveness that would be subject to periodic review. If the review revealed no meaningful efforts to adjust by all involved, relief would be terminated. The President has chosen to ignore the recommendations of his own nominees to the ITC and is thereby missing an important opportunity to help address the long-term problems of the American steel industry. Imported steel is not the cause, but rather a symptom, of the American steel industry's problems. The Reagan administration's plan does not deal with these problems, but rather provides a temporary band-aid which simply won't get the job done.

I believe that the President should have adopted the principles, if not necessarily the numbers, that comprised the recommendations of his own ITC Commissioners. In short, if relief was to be granted—which the President has essentially done under the guise of voluntary agreements—it should have been provided only upon the condition that the steel industry would also submit a plan to improve its international competitiveness.

Under such circumstances, a time-limited agreement to reduce steel imports would make sense as part of a comprehensive package. Such a package could require labor and industry to commit themselves to modernization and cost-cutting in return for Government and private-sector assistance with financing, research and development, worker retraining, and adjustment assistance programs. The industry plan would include such elements as investment projections, dividend policy, research and development, pension plans, more rational production plans,marketing changes, cost-cutting measures, more flexibility in work rules, and possible wage and price concessions.

Unfortunately, the Reagan administration apparently has neither the will, nor the interest in seeing such a program through. It appears that the only issue that counts is putting out fires between now and November 6. However, it is equally unfortunate that our foreign competitors will not be impressed. One would think that with the United States currently purchasing $400 million more a day in foreign goods than we are exporting, and with unprecedented balance of payment deficits about to turn us into a debtor country, we would be moving toward a serious discussion of international trade problems confronting this country.

Instead, we are once again given the same response: Talk free trade, practice protectionism as a last-minute political response, and pretend that everything is just fine.●

A PERMANENT NATIONAL RESOURCE CENTER FOR MISSING CHILDREN

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SIMON] is recognized for 15 minutes.

Mr. SIMON. Mr. Speaker, one of the significant achievements that I hope will be included in the legacy of the 98th Congress is legislation to create a permanent National Resource Center for Missing Children. If we are successful in the next few days in bridging some relatively minor differences between our earlier legislation and a counterpart measure that has recently won approval by the other body—and I believe we will be successful—then soon we can move into higher gear with our efforts to find the thousands of our lost or stolen children who desperately need this kind of help.

My purpose in taking this time with you tonight is to give four graphic examples why we need this step—four reasons in the persons of four children whose parents or grandparents have asked for my help in gaining any leads we can that could help reunite these children with their families.

First are these three youngsters, who were taken from their mother's home in Quincy, IL, last year on August 5. From left to right in this snapshot photo taken just minutes before they disappeared are 9-year-old Del-a-von Vincent Wingerter; 10-year-old Shamba Lee Wingerter; and 7-year-old Dakota Chandavette Wingerter. All three are believed to be together and in the custody of their estranged father.

Mr. Speaker, I have been actively at work on the problems of our missing children for some time, but sometimes I get a letter that convinces me that you have to be parent of a missing child to fully understand the range of wrenching emotions that these parents endure. Let me read you an excerpt from one of the letters I have received from the children's mother, Patty, who now lives in Fort Polk, LA, and continues her daily vigil to find her youngsters:

> I set goals for when they will be returned, at first I thought that they would be home by Del's birthday, then by Thanksgiving, Christmas, Shamba's birthday, Easter, and Cody's birthday. Each goal comes and goes as does each lead. My life has become a constant emotional roller coaster. With each goal and each lead comes bitter disappointment. The pain of having my children stolen is fresh and excruciating.
> I am truly worried about the safety of my children. I want so much to talk to them and to know that they are well. I want to hold them and to tell them how very much I love them and want them home.

It has now been 1 year and 1 month since these children disappeared from their home and from their community in Quincy, in western Illinois. Law enforcement agencies are doing what they can, but there are few leads at this point. Mr. Speaker, they may have been taken to my town, to your town, or to the town of any one of our colleagues. I realize that the rules of the House require that I address my appeal on their behalf to my colleagues here in the Chamber and not to others who may be watching these proceedings, but I do urge that any leads that could help us locate these children be directed to my office in Washington, where the phone number is (202) 225-5201.

The next case I have been asked to discuss is the disappearance of 8-year-old Mark Force. Mark disappeared from his front yard in Virginia, IL, near Springfield, on July 14 last year. In this picture, which was taken a little over a year ago, you can readily see that Mark has blond hair, blue eyes and lots of freckles. His birthdate is December 16, 1975. He also goes by the name "Marky" and "Dee." He is in the custody of his estranged mother, April M. Coats, and he has been seen in the area of the Van Nuys, CA, and also in Salmon, ID. His grandparents Lorna Jean and Jonathan Force, who also live in the town of Virginia, have put in tireless months of effort in their quest to reunite Mark with them and the rest of his family. Pastor Robert Ohlmann of Faith Baptist Church, Sheriff Carl Wubker, State's attorney John Dahlem and many other good people have been a great help and great comfort to these loving grandparents, and we all thank them for what they are doing to help.

Any leads that could lead to Mark's recovery may also be directed to my office at (202) 225-5201.

Thank you.

AMENDMENTS

Under clause 6 of rule XXII, proposed amendments were submitted as follows:

H.J. RES. 648

By Mr. BROWN of Colorado:

—Page 2, line 24, strike out the period at the end of section 101(b) and insert in lieu thereof the following: ": Provided, That 2 percent of the aggregate amount of new budget authority provided for in each of the first three titles of H.R. 6237 shall be withheld from obligation, and all earmarkings of funds in H.R. 6237 (except earmarkings for Israel and Egypt) shall be deemed to be reduced by 2 percent.

By Mr. FASCELL:

—At the end of the resolution, add the following:

SEC. . (a) The provisions of the bill H.R. 5119 (98th Congress), as passed the House of Representatives on May 10, 1984, are hereby enacted.

(b) Section 102 of this joint resolution shall not apply with respect to the provisions enacted by this section.

By Mr. FRENZEL:

—Page 2, line 14, strike out the semicolon and insert ": Provided, That each amount of budget authority provided in the Act, for payments not required by law, is hereby reduced to two percentum;"

By Mr. MILLER of California:

—At the end of the joint resolution, add the following new section:

SEC. . Notwithstanding any provision to the contrary in title XX of the Social Security Act—

(1) the dollar figure set forth in section 2003(c)(3) of such Act is hereby increased to $2,750,000,000 for the fiscal year 1985;

(2)(A) the additional $50,000,000 made available to the States for such fiscal year pursuant to paragraph (1)—

(i) shall be used only for the purpose of providing training and retraining, including training in the prevention of child abuse care settings, to providers of licensed or registered child care services, operators and staffs (including those receiving in-service training) of facilities where licensed or registered child care services are provided, State licensing and enforcement officials, and parents, and

(ii) shall be expended only to supplement the level of any funds that would (in the absence of the additional assistance resulting from this section) be available from other sources (including any amounts available under title XX of such Act without regard to this section) for the purpose specified in clause (i), shall in no case supplant such funds from other sources or reduce the level thereof, and shall be separately accounted for in the reports and audits provided for in section 2006 of such Act; but

(B) no more than one-half of the amount by which any State's allotment under section 2003 of such Act is increased as a result of paragraph (1) shall actually be paid to such State unless it has in effect procedures (established by or under State law and funded from other sources) for appropriately screening and conducting background checks and criminal investigations of all providers of licensed or registered child care services and all operators and staffs of facilities where licensed or registered child care services are provided, in accordance with standards specified in or established under State law, with the objective of protecting the children involved and assuring their safety and welfare while they are receiving child care services; and

(3) the determination and promulgation required by section 2003(b) of such Act with respect to the fiscal year 1985 (to take into account the preceding provisions of this section) shall be made as soon as possible after the enactment of this Act.

By Mr. PANETTA:

—H.J. Res. 648 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. . SEC. . (a) The provisions of the bill H.R. 5167 (98th Congress), as passed the House of Representatives on June 1, 1984, are hereby enacted.

(b) Section 102 of this joint resolution shall not apply with respect to the provisions enacted by this section.

By Mr. WILLIAMS of Montana:

—At the proper point in the bill insert this section and renumber subsequent sections accordingly.

SEC. . Notwithstanding section 102, no funds appropriated by this or any other Act may be used for any contract to administer a civilian conservation center of the Job Corps if the administration of such center was not under contract as of September 1, 1984.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

BLOODY SUNDAY II REVISITED AT AD HOC COMMITTEE MEETING

HON. MARIO BIAGGI

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. BIAGGI. Mr. Speaker, as I reported yesterday, on September 6 I conducted a meeting of the 104 member bipartisan Ad Hoc Congressional Committee for Irish Affairs. The purpose of the meeting was to get further information on the circumstances which led to a riot in Belfast which left one civilian dead and scores injured including some visiting Americans.

I was joined at this meeting by my colleagues Mr. GILMAN, Mr. MCGRATH, Mr. LENT, Mr. EDGAR, Mr. BORSKI, and Ms. KAPTUR, as well as by scores of staff members from other House and Senate Members. At this point in the RECORD I would like to insert a statement by Dr. Martin Abend—a television commentator from WNEW-TV in New York City. Dr. Abend was one of the Americans on the trip and witnessed the police action first hand.

STATEMENT OF MARTIN ABEND, TELEVISION COMMENTATOR, NEW YORK CITY

Dr. ABEND. Thank you, congressman.

I was there, I must say, not as a commentator for Channel 5. I went under my own auspices. I paid my own expenses. I went to Ireland for the first time in 13 years to see the tour, this is true, although I was not officially part of the tour, and to acquaint myself with facts for the purpose of future commentary. I frequently comment on Ireland. I am in sympathy with NORAID. I always have been and I think I always will be, and I am absolutely opposed to what I consider to be the most modern form and the latest form of Western oppression in northwestern Europe, which is the British occupation of Northern Ireland.

It is not so much the riot that occurred on Sunday that is significant to the American people and particularly to interested Members of Congress. What happened on that Sunday is the point of a very large boil. When you live in Belfast, particularly in the Catholic areas, in the areas of the so-called "Republican sympathizers," it is then and only then that you really comprehend the apprehensiveness, the fear and, above all, the hopelessness that prevails that there can be any kind of a peaceful solution, where you will have an oppressor using violence, not only in law and in theory but before your eyes.

The British Saracens patrolling up and down the streets, the presence of the Royal Ulster Constabulary, above all their expressions—which I have seen no one mention, and I personally saw it and heard it—of hatred, of despising, of contempt, they are very much lordly oppressors, visible and audible to anyone who want to take the trouble to go to these affected areas in Belfast. I lived with a Republican family, I heard what Noel Gill and Belle Gill, a 21-year-old and a 20-year-old man and woman and their two children, had to say about daily incidents, never mind the Sunday incident. This was highly dramatic. It could have been something produced by overzealous RUCs. What we do not hear about is what happens on a daily basis and a nightly basis in Belfast, in the areas of Republican sympathizers.

I think that the American people, and particularly the American media, have been done a great disservice and are doing a great disservice by not acquainting the Members of Congress and the people in general with these daily troops. They are, gentlemen and ma'am, I can assure you, of extreme urgency if we are interested in doing justice to the Irish question.

I went for those reasons, and I satisfied myself in very short order. You only have to be there two or three hours to feel it. It was like when I visited Leningrad and Moscow. No matter what you hear about it, it isn't the same thing as being there. When you go there, the air is thick with tension, with fear. This is what I found in Belfast, and I could scarcely believe it. I always associated the British with culture. You know Shakespeare and Isaac Newton and all the rest. That disappears immediately and utterly when you enter the streets of Belfast and see this policy of the latest form of Western oppression there in northwestern Europe.

I can only add to what Mr. Galvin said, and I think you are going to hear it much more eloquently from Father Burke what actually occurred at the Belfast riot. I was standing more to observe the Royal Ulster Constabulary and British army tactics. I do teach guerrilla warfare at the college level, and I have a certain interest, and objective interest, in just what the British intended to do about suppressing any riot if it occurred and what their tactics in general were. It was purely academic.

So I stood to the rear of all this, not in the crowd. I wasn't seated, ever. I stood among the Royal Ulster Constabulary, trying to overhear the commands that were given. The command to attack was given, it should be known, from a helicopter that was hovering overhead about 60 feet, which descended just about 60 seconds before the attack occurred. That command was relayed, I ascertained—I cannot prove this, but I know it is true—to a gentleman standing there. I have his photograph in one of the photographs I have, and I will be glad to present it to the committee when I have finished speaking.

This command was issued by him to the Rovers. These are vehicles used by the Royal Ulster Constabulary. Behind the Rovers were British Saracens. These are armored personnel carriers, occupied solely by British troops armed with automatic weapons, who were backing up the Royal Ulster Constabulary, which were armed solely, I could ascertain, with clubs and/or with plastic bullets.

When that command was given, I was standing to the far left. So I could observe as you might observe something from a parade ground. The attack came from the rear to the front, which is a very bad military tactic. They easily could have surrounded the area, waited for Mr. Galvin to finish his speech and then quietly arrested him. There would be no way for him to have escaped, absolutely none. That area was flat, there was no means of egress or ingress other than what the Royal Ulster Constabulary and the British army could ascertain and could police. So I say again, they could easily have surrounded that area.

The area, by the way, had almost as many women and children in it as there were men. The British at no single time paid any heed to in my presence and within my hearing to the fact that they were trampling over small children. I have photographs there of children shrieking at the feet of Royal Ulster Constabulary men and British troops, and I will be glad to show them to you, as I said, when I have finished talking.

Instead of surrounding this area, as they could have done with good old military tactics, and arrested this gentleman when he finished speaking, they deliberately made a frontal assault. This was to dramatize their intent to prevent him from speaking and thereby flaunting their concept of law. In doing this kind of assault, they knew very well—they had to know well, as any sane person would know—that they were jeopardizing the lives and safety not only of seated people but of seated women and children.

It should be noted by this committee and by all the world, because I did not see it on the media but I did see it with my eyes, that at least a dozen children were carried away by their parents from the scene so that they would not be taken away by ambulances. Anyone taken by an ambulance to the Victoria Hospital down the road was automatically noted and listed by the Royal Ulster Constabulary, and that person was in trouble. Therefore, the parent of an injured child, rather than have himself registered as a malcontent or a troublemaker, took his child away from there according to his own concept of what should be safety and health, and I saw at least a dozen such instances, I should tell this committee. In one of the photographs I have, you will see slippers of small children that fell or were kicked away while those children were dragged away by their parents, screaming and bleeding.

When Sean Downes was shot, he was shot at about four feet. The contention was that he had a club on him. Let me remind the committee of this, and all the world, for that matter, that Sean Downes may have been advancing with what in effect was a small broomstick, attacking seven armed men who had on heavy bulletproof vests, who were helmeted, who could easily overcome him. This man, almost stripped to the waist, in dungarees, left his wife and child and advanced toward their backs.

Why? No one has asked the question why he did this. It was because they were perpetrating outrages in front of him. Let me tell you, if I was not an American, I, too, would have been attacking them because they were doing what they were doing in cold blood. I say again, as has been said here, everyone was seated. No one was making trouble. That attack was deliberate and cold blooded, and all that occurred was gratuitous. The shooting that I saw horrified me.

The shooting that I saw horrified me. I could not believe it. Let me give you one instance. There was a man on a roof, half berserk with rage at the violence he saw perpetrated by these RUCs upon these people. This man was throwing a Coca-Cola bottle at these RUCs. I was standing three feet away. I was not wearing a helmet; they were. For this Coca-Cola bottle, I saw a volley of at least 25 plastic bullets fired at this man on a roof. I was standing not four feet away.

When Sean Downes was shot down, and he was obviously dead, Father Burke administered last rites. Yet another American ran up to me, complaining bitterly that his camera had just been destroyed. He pointed to the body and became somewhat hysterical. When he confronted the RUC, not one foot from me, with this bloody violence that these RUCs had done, the RUCs said—and I repeat verbatim—"That's a job well done. Get away, you bloody bastard." This kind of action, this kind of speech, this mood cannot be comprehended unless you are there, gentlemen.

I saw much else, but everything that I have to say cannot be summed up in this cool proceeding. It has to be summed up by Americans who will take the trouble to speak to people living there and, for that matter, good committee, to speak to the people on the opposite side, the Loyalists and the British. Anyone at all who wants to speak to this question, let them come forward, take an oath, swear that they are telling the truth, and speak about just what kind of an atmosphere prevails in this part of the world and what should be done to bring an end once and for all to that horror.

Thank you for giving me this opportunity. If you want to examine these photographs, I will be glad to let you do so.

Mr. BIAGGI. Thank you. We would like to see those, doctor.

Dr. ABEND. That is evidence of the force of a plastic bullet, fired at close range. It ruptured the heart.

There are two children in this photograph. You note the RUCs are all about them. If you examine these photographs, there is no evidence that the RUCs ever showed the slightest concern for these children, for their safety, not to mention their terror.

Here you see RUCs firing plastic bullets at waist-level height. They are supposed to fire them down. You can see them firing at waist level.

Here is a RUC pointing his gun at me and the cameraman. That is by way of intimidation, just as you see this man being threatened with a baton by that RUC.

Mr. GILMAN. Did you take some of these, doctor?

Dr. ABEND. No, but I stood next to a photographer who did.

These are photographs of Sean Downes. There is nothing to be said or added to that.

This is a photograph of a man shot in the neck by a plastic bullet. It has not been widely seen. The jaw is fractured. Again, you can see that they were not firing below the waist. Here you can see evidence of the numbers of RUCs that were present.

Mr. GILMAN. You were standing within a few feet of him?

Dr. ABEND. I was standing over Sean Downes when he died. He was dead when they dragged him. I stood over him. That's the only time I confess I became somewhat emotional. It was not believable. He was shot, as I said, by a person who must have known that Sean Downes was reacting to the violence that they were perpetrating. The contention that he was carrying a club, which in fact seemed to be a stick, is laughable when you consider the way those men were armed and heavily vested.●

A LOOK AT THE NICARAGUAN ELECTIONS

HON. RICHARD L. OTTINGER

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. OTTINGER. Mr. Speaker, this year has witnessed elections throughout Latin America. In El Salvador, Panama, and Guatemala, Central Americans voted in contests that President Reagan lauded as true examples of representative democracy. Nicaragua, honoring its 1979 pledge to the Organization of American States, has scheduled elections for November 4. But the Reagan administration has dismissed these recent attempts by the Sandinista government to democratize, denouncing the upcoming elections as a "sham."

To be sure, the Nicaraguan elections will not be as pluralistic as the Sandinistas have advertised. But part of the fault for this should be attributed to the capricious decision of the Democratic Coordinator, the main opposition alliance, to withdraw from the elections. The opposition boycott seems designed to embarrass and discredit the legitimacy of the Sandinistas in the eyes of the international community. This concerns me because one does not know how the current administration might choose to react, were it to be relected in November.

The boycott increases the possibility of U.S. military intervention in Nicaragua during a Reagan second term, with the White House expected to tout the opposition alliance's dropout from the forthcoming vote as evidence that there is no democratic option in Nicaragua under the Sandinistas.

I wish to submit for the RECORD the following summary of key components affecting this issue, by Research Associate Marc Klyman of the Council of Hemispheric Affairs, that appeared in that organization's biweekly publication, the Washington Report on the Hemisphere.

ELECTIONS YES, OPPOSITION NO

(By Marc Klyman)

Six parties still plan to compete with the ruling Sandinista National Liberation Front (FSLN) in the twelve-week general elections campaign beginning Aug. 8, despite the July 25 decision of the leading opposition alliance, the Democratic Coordinator (CD), to boycott the Nov. 4 elections. But the CD's move dealt a fatal blow to prospects that a fair vote could institutionalize democracy in that country, largely due to the role played by its presidential candidate, Arturo Cruz.

Nicaraguans are scheduled to elect a president, vice president and 90 members of a national assembly in the first election since the 1979 overthrow of dictator Anastasio Somoza. The CD's decison to pull out was ostensibly based on the junta's failure to comply with their series of nine preconditions—including and end to press censorship, a delay in the election date, the granting of amnesty for U.S.-backed contra forces, and a call for a national dialogue "among all the political parties and movements, including those in arms." The Sandinistas have argued—as Washington has towards the Salvadoran rebels—that they should not be obligated to negotiate with contra armies which have devastated the country—costing its economy hundreds of millions of dollars in damages, and the lives of almost 2,000 civilians and hundreds of members of the armed forces.

The main question of the campaign is not the outcome—the Sandinistas are widely expected to receive a clean win—but whether foreign observers would accept the FSLN victory as a popular sanctioning of their political mandate. Although the CD was to be the FSLN's principal opponent, foreign observers predicted that, at most, the coalition only would have garnered 25 percent of the vote. As a former member of the Sandinista junta, Cruz served as president of the Central Bank and ambassador to the U.S. before resigning from the government and going into self-imposed exile in 1981. In recent months a vocal supporter of rebel leader Eden Pastora, Cruz's presence among the Sandinistas' military opponents made questionable the sincerity of his short-lived candidacy for the CD.

With the CD removed, the Independent Liberal Party (PLI)—which split with the FSLN last February after citing ideological differences—has been catapulted to frontrunner among the alternatives to the Sandinistas. Led by Virgilio Godoy Reyes, former labor minister in the ruling junta, the PLI claims to espouse a more moderate alternative to either radical or conservative sectors in Nicaragua. Observers believe the PLI could garner a significant number of votes that might have gone to the CD.

Several smaller parties still plan to vie for office in the coming campaign, including those within the Revolutionary Patriotic Front (FPR), an alliance of the pro-government Marxist-Leninist Nicaraguan Socialist Party (PSN), the Popular Social Christain Party (PPSC) and the ruling FSLN.

On the left are two tiny Marxist-Leninist parties, the Moscow-line Nicaraguan Communist Party—whose differences with the Sandinistas have been ignored by the White House—and the Popular Action Movement (MAP-ML), of Maoist orientation.

EXTERNAL CONSEQUENCES

The boycott increases the possibility of a Grenada-style strike against Nicaragua during a Reagan second term, with the White House expected to tout the CD's dropout from the forthcoming vote as evidence that there is no democratic option in Nicaragua under the Sandinistas. Yet last December, when the Jamaican opposition People's National Party, led by Michael Manley, refused to participate in snap elections called by the U.S.-favored prime minister, Edward Seaga, not a word of protest was heard from Washington—although what occurred there was little more than a plebiscite in itself.

For his part, Secretary of State George Shultz has left little doubt as to the administration's real intentions. In recent months he has repeatedly said that U.S. pressure on Nicaragua will not abate "even if they hold elections"—ample cause for suspicion that Washington may have played a not-inconsiderable role in influencing Cruz and the CD's boycott decision.

In Europe, Nicaragua's allies will also be discomfited. The Socialist International, in efforts to prevent the collapse of support from across the Atlantic, is believed to have convinced the FSLN to pick coordinator Daniel Ortega to head its ticket. But many Europeans will be hard-pressed to regard the outcome of the elections as a resounding endorsement of the FSLN. This leaves the Sandinistas, who depend on heavy infusions of aid from Europe, in a potential extremely tenuous position, both economically and politically.●

ABE PLOUGH

HON. DON SUNDQUIST

OF TENNESSEE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. SUNDQUIST. Mr. Speaker, last week, Memphis, TN's No. 1 citizen, Mr. Abe Plough, passed away at the age of 92. I was privileged to attend a memorial service for him at Temple Israel. The eulogy delivered by Rabbi Harry Danziger was so moving and inspirational I would like to share it with my colleagues:

Abe Plough—As I look out at this outpouring of people—people from every cross section of Memphis and the Mid-South—there is a temptation simply to speak those two words—those nine letters—Abe Plough—and then to be silent. If I were to do so, this sanctuary would be filled silently, not only with people, but with recollections and remembrances, with tributes and memorials, far more eloquent than any words that I can speak. Such was the man—such was his life—such is this moment. To say the name, Abe Plough in this community is to evoke moving memories of a man of whom I can say with utter certainty, no major city in America ever owed so much of itself to a single human being. People in this community who might agree with one another on little else about what is good and right for Memphis and Shelby County are agreed on one thing—Abe Plough was good for all of us. And people agree on that in superlatives, and they base their agreement on the most solid of facts.

Because Mr. Plough left so vivid, so well-known, so legendary a memory among us, I would like to offer a few thoughts which he would, I hope, have wanted. I say that because, in fact, this service was still another of his gifts. In the instructions he left, he said that, while he wanted only a private funeral service for family, he asked that this service take place because of his involvement with this temple and for, as he put it, so many whom he loved and with whom he shared and who were in his heart and mind and thoughts. This occasion is then yet another gift in the monumental lifetime of giving which characterized Abe Plough.

In the Jewish tradition, there is a legendary figure whose name was Choni. Among the legends of Choni, one tells that he devoted himself, when he was already well past seventy years old, to going through the length and breadth of the land, planting carob trees. The carob tree produces pods filled with sweet and tasty seeds which people love to eat, and Choni sought to fill the land with that sweetness. One day, says the legend, a man saw him, bending down at his work and said to him, "Why are you doing this? Don't you know that the carob tree takes seventy years before it begins to bear fruit? You are already old. Surely you will never taste the fruit of the trees you plant." And Choni answered him saying, "Others planted for me. Now I plant for my children and their children and children's children."

Abe Plough may never have known the legend of Choni, but he knew its moral—and he lived it. I need not tell you who are here out of love and admiration, out of respect and gratitude to him, of all the seeds which Mr. Plough planted in this community—indeed, in this nation. I need not tell you that, at an age when others might have been totally self-absorbed, concerned only with their own health and well-being, satisfied that they had put in a good life's work, Abe Plough never stopped planting seeds, seeds that he intended to bear fruit for children yet unborn, for decades he knew he would never enter. And I need not tell you who are here that Mr. Plough's reason for continuing to plant those seeds—the seeds of a better life and a better community for all—was that he understood and appreciated the fact that others had planted for the future. Starting with his parents to whom his gratitude never diminished, extending to friends and family and countless associates in business and in charities, always with thanks to God, all that Abe Plough ever did to plant the seeds of a better life was because of what Choni said long ago—"Others have planted for me. Now I plant for those who are yet to come"

And, like Choni of ancient legend, this man—a living legend—would not permit age to be either an excuse or a reason for ending his good work. Out of hundreds, let me cite only two instances. It is now well known that, in the strife and turmoil of 1968 in this city, the negotiations between labor and government were stymied by city government's lack of funds to pay the wage increase agreed upon. Mr. Plough was, then, 78 years old. Were any single individual of any age in a major American city to have stepped forward—quite literally—to subsidize a great metropolitan government, it would have been unprecedented. That a man of nearly four score years personally planted the seeds of peace and harmony, not simply with his money but most of all with his vision must surely boggle the mind. Others had planted for him; now he planted for the future.

In the early 1970's, when this congregation—Temple Israel—determined the need for a new facility, who could have blamed a man, now in his 80's—reared and educated in our previous building—had he said, simply, "It was good enough for me for all these years; it is good enough now and for the future?"

Yet, like Choni of old, Mr. Plough responded, "Others built for me; now I will build—and spur you on to build—for those who are yet to come."

He recalled the past with reverence and gratitude—but he built for the future with generosity and vision.

Not only did Mr. Plough never permit age to be an excuse or reason for detaching himself from worthwhile causes, neither did he come to his spirit of generosity and community concern late in life. It would be understandable if he had determined that, having accomplished all he wanted for himself in the world of business, then and only then would he turn to the wider world. Not Abe Plough. I suspect that the single act of loving kindness which he did which most moved me personally was one he performed some sixty years ago when he was a young man. You may have read or heard of it. A savings institution in Memphis collapsed, and the depositors, unprotected in those days by insurance, stood to lose their savings, large and small. Abe Plough reached deeply into his wealth but deeper by far into his heart to make certain that not a single person of modest means lost a penny of his or her life savings.

He was constant in generosity of spirit, in his commitment to plant seeds of a better life, in his determination to touch the lives and hearts of people—in youth as in age, he was constant because he did what he did out of the convictions and the faith of a lifetime. He did what a man ought to do, and Mr. Plough never closed his eyes to duty. Rather he did that duty with a twinkle of satisfaction lighting them all the while.

That is one part of Abe Plough—that is the living legend of philanthropy and vision that made him indisputably the number one citizen of this city.

But too often, in our fascination with the legend, we lose sight of the person. This moment would be inadequate to his memory were we to permit that on this day of all days.

The legend of the ancient Choni continued. It is said that, one day, as he planted those carob trees which would not bear fruit for seventy years, he fell asleep. And, like the later Rip Van Winkle, he slept not hours but years—seventy years. And Choni awoke amidst a grove of trees, their branches laden with pods bearing the sweet seeds like those he planted. And there were children laughing and playing and eating the seeds. Choni asked, "Whose trees are these?" And the children answered, "these were planted by our grandfather Choni long ago." And then, legend has it, Choni was transported to heaven, his rewards on earth greater still than ever he could have dreamed.

Abe Plough received and earned countless titles—some official, some conferred on him as naturally as the law of gravity. He was honored by colleges and universities, by this congregation as honorary president, by the press, by business and the cultural world and so many others. He was called "Mr. Memphis" and "Master of Free Enterprise". But there were other and better titles that he wore with that wonderful twinkle in his eyes. Those titles were "Daddy" and "Papu" and "Uncle Abe". The news media might inform us all on a Friday morning of some grand gesture or some great gift made by Mr. Plough for one of a hundred causes. But the news media would not know of or report that, on the following Sunday, he was headed toward a store, to buy toys for his young great-grandchildren. The news would provide us with pictures and transcripts of Mr. Plough at the rostrum at a formal banquet, speaking on behalf of some great purpose. But how could they know that, on the previous evening, he had enjoyed a very different dinner, taking his great-grandchildren to a restaurant or picking up food to share with them at home, or sharing a family evening with children or grandchildren or nephews or nieces or other family—not as "Mr. Memphis"—but as Daddy or Papu or Uncle Abe. The news media might be aware of the fact that, at the tender age of 92, Mr. Plough became convinced that professional football was good for this city he loved and that because of that conviction, he offered support to that new program in many ways. They were unlikely to tell us that, at the closing game of the season, he shared the view from the press box with a youngster three generations his junior.

How could we pay tribute to the legend—the First Citizen of Memphis—without paying tribute to the man—Daddy, Papu, Uncle Abe? And how could we pay tribute indeed without recalling that, as in the world of business, Mr. Plough said that he never made it alone, so it was in life itself? The love and devotion of his children and their children and their children's children and a broad extended family were sources of enormous joy and pleasure to the man behind the legend. Whether it was sharing with him in the fun of life in which he delighted or sharing with him in these last weeks when he was robbed of the activities that marked his life, his loved ones were just that—loved ones—and they loved him as he loved them. Like Choni of legend, he was blessed to share the sweetness of life with his children, his children's children and their children as well.

When Moses—for whom Mr. Plough's beloved father was named—died in the mountains of Moab, the Torah—the five books of Moses—recalls that "his vision was undimmed and his vigor was undiminished." Surely that was true for Abe, the son of Moses, whom we took to his grave earlier today. When Moses died, his last moments were spent atop a mountain, looking across to the promised land on the other side of the Jordan. And the people whom he had led by word and by example mourned for him and for their loss. But when the time of mourning ended, they took up their journey—they took up the path he had charted—and they moved forward to the promised land. Moses had been the source for them of countless gifts in their years in the wilderness. Now Moses left to them the challenge to become what they were to become—to become what they were destined to become—to be what God gave them the ability to be. Moses left them gifts, but with those gifts he left a challenge.

To us as a community—to us as races and religions and neighborhoods—to those who loved him best and knew him best—Mr. Plough has done in death as he did so often in life. He has given us innumerable gifts—and he has challenged us—challenged us to move forward—with vision and spirit—to enter—perhaps to create—The promised land.

Zecher Tzadik Livracha—May the memory of his righteousness live on as a blessing to all who cherish that memory.●

THE HISPANIC VETERAN

HON. ROBERT GARCIA

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. GARCIA. Mr. Speaker, this is National Hispanic Heritage Week, and the theme this year is the Hispanic veteran. Hispanics have distinguished themselves as members of the Armed Forces throughout our Nation's history.

We have never shirked the responsibility of serving our country. As Americans, we have not only been willing to participate, we have been glad that we could do our part to serve this great Nation.

Our service as a community is no more apparent than with the Vietnam war. I am submitting for the RECORD an article by a young Hispanic journalist, Steve Padilla of the Hispanic Link News Service, on Vietnam and Hispanic veterans. I think it gives a good account of our participation in that conflict.

The article follows:

VIETNAM AND HISPANICS: REMEMBERED AT LAST

(By Steve Padilla)

When the last helicopter evacuating troops and personnel from the United States Embassy in Saigon took flight on April 30, 1975, on board was Master Sgt. Juan J. Valdez, the non-commissioned officer in charge of the embassy's Marine Security Guard. His presence there seems fitting now. Hispanics, among the first to serve in Vietnam, also were the last to leave.

Some, of course, never made it back. Nowhere is that sacrifice more apparent than at the Vietnam Veteran Memorial in Washington, D.C. A 479-foot, V-shaped wall of black granite, the memorial bears the names of more than 57,000 men and women killed or missing in action in the war between 1959 and 1975. Designed by Maya Ying Lin, the memorial was dedicated Nov. 13, 1982.

Any visitor to the wall—particularly a Hispanic—will notice a pattern as she or he reads the rows and rows of names: Jesus Gutierrez Escobar, Julio A. Hernandez, Edward Quinones, Catarino Morelos, Jr., Joaquin Robles, David Sanchez . . .

The names bring to mind notable facts about Hispanics and their involvement in the war:

Army Sgt. First Class Isaac Camacho became the first U.S. prisoner of war in 1963. His escape from the Viet Cong on July 9, 1965, won him the Silver Star and Bronze Star.

Navy Lt. Everett Alvarez Jr. became the first pilot shot down over Vietnam on Aug. 6, 1964. Imprisoned by North Vietnamese 8½ years, he became the longest-held prisoner of war in the nation's history. He is now deputy director of the Veterans Administration.

Of 239 Medal of Honor winners in Southeast Asia, 14 were Hispanic. Eleven received the award posthumously.

Figures on casualties vary, but many experts agree Hispanics accounted for an unusually high percentage considering their overall population at the time. One study found that between 1961 and 1967 alone, 22.3% of all Marine casualties and 19.4% of all Army casualties had Spanish surnames.

Given this history, it's not surprising that Hispanic veterans expressed displeasure and disappointment when the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund unveiled plans in 1982 for a realistic statue to be added to the "wall" memorial site.

A sculpture of three young infantrymen dressed in fatigues and carrying guns and supplies, it featured a white soldier, a black soldier and a third character considered "everyone else."

Soon the phone calls and letters from Hispanic veterans began. Typical was a letter from Lupe Gusman, a Vietnam veteran from Riverside, Calif., that said the exclusion of a Latino from the statue would be "a shame and dishonor for those who fought and died."

Sculptor Frederick Hart and the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund agreed. Hart changed his design, using as a model Guillermo José Smith-Pérez de León, a 24-year-old engineering student born in Washington, D.C. His mother, Hortensia Pérez de León de Smith, was from Mexico City; his father, William J. Smith, from Ventnor City, N.J.

The clay model of the 7-foot statue, unveiled this month in time for Memorial Day, will be bronzed this summer. Formal dedication ceremonies in the parklike memorial site will be held Veterans Day, Nov. 11.

As Hart told Hispanic Link reporter Ancel Martínez: "The wall is for those who didn't make it back, the statue is for the veterans who made it back."

The design change should not be viewed as a victory by a special interest group. It is deserved recognition. The change shows not that Hispanics were singled out, but merely that they were included.●

PRAYER IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

HON. MEL LEVINE

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. LEVINE of California. Mr. Speaker, I am deeply disturbed by recent actions by the Reagan administration and its allies in Congress to impose their religious views on many of our most basic governmental institutions.

One of the most disturbing examples of this is the President's campaign to require prayer in our public schools.

The current issue of the ADL Bulletin, which is published by the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, contains an article titled "The Christianization of Our Public Schools" which makes a compelling case that this administration's policies threaten to create deep divisions in our society and run counter to the very principles upon which our public schools were founded.

The author, James Woods, Jr., argues convincingly and compellingly against the administration's policies.

I commend this important article to all of my colleagues and urge them to take the time to read it:

THE CHRISTIANIZATION OF THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS

(By James E. Wood, Jr.)

The public school has long been a battleground in American church-state relations. These conflicts have been primarily the result of persistent and zealous efforts aimed at Christianizing the public schools and eliminating the secular character guaranteed by the First Amendment.

Religion and education form a continuing dilemma in American church-state relations. On the one hand, the role of religion in the public schools has been adjudicated on the basis that the tax-supported public schools are subject to public policy and therefore governed by the Establishment Clause of the First Amendment.

On the other hand, the use of public funds for religious schools has been repeatedly ruled as violative of the Establishment Clause since such use constitutes aid to religion and the entanglement of church and state in a program of education. That the U.S. Supreme Court's most far-reaching decisions on church and state should have to do with the public schools is both historically appropriate and judicially significant, since the public schools' role is crucial to a free and secular state and pluralistic society.

The American public school and our tradition of church and state represent two distinct contributions to the world. Founded as a secular state, the United States was the first nation in history constitutionally to prohibit the establishment of religion and to guarantee the free exercise of religion.

Thomas Jefferson first conceived of public schools, free and tax-supported. In 1817, Jefferson specifically advocated and free common schools be nonsectarian. By the 1830s his concept began to take root in the states. Massachusetts educator Horace Mann influenced the state legislatures to pass laws prohibiting sectarian practices, including the use of sectarian textbooks, in tax-supported schools.

Gradually, their vision for free public schools, tax-supported without sectarian control, spread. Meanwhile, during the latter decades of the 19th century, waves of immigrants, particularly from Ireland and southern, eastern and southeastern Europe, greatly increased the multifaith character of American society.

By the late 1870s, almost all state constitutions expressly divorced religion from the public education system and state courts widely espoused church-state separation for the public schools.

Despite this, phenomental gains in church membership in the first half of this century, accompanied by renewed demands for devotional Bible reading and school prayers, saw the waning of church-state separation in the schools. The first "released time" program of religious education in the public schools began in 1913 in Gary, IN. By 1948, all but two states had such released time programs. When the U.S. Supreme Court ruled in 1962 against devotional Bible reading and prescribed prayers in the public school, church membership in the United States has climbed to more than 63 percent of the total population.

The view of America as a Christian state transplanted to the New World by the Colonists, has persisted even without establishment and in spite of constitutional provisions and Supreme Court decisions expressly against it. The notion lives on in the American ethos aided and abetted by both the political and religious right.

Amendments to the Constitution have been proposed since 1962 ranging from abridging of the First Amendment to insure state sanction and support of religion to statements declaring the United States to be a Christian nation. Congress has enacted laws to change the Pledge of Allegiance to include "under God," to require that "In God We Trust" appear on all currency and to declare the phrase, "In God We Trust," as the nation's motto.

Since 1962, the extreme vilification and abuse of the Supreme Court by right wing political and religious leaders has made evident the fact that the concept of America as a Christian state is fervently and widely held by millions of Americans in the 20th century. The notion of the Christian state—reinforced with a fusion of Americanism with Christianity from the New Religious Right—threatens the secular status of America and of the public schools.

American public education is under frequent and serious attack by those who charge that the public schools are dominated by "secular humanism." The charge is increasingly being made the basis of a wholesale indictment of American public education. While "secular humanism" is condemned as incompatible with the guarantees of the First Amendment, at the same time the case is argued for the viability of parochial schools, justifying their right to public funds.

The charge of "secular humanism" is deeply rooted in the notion that neutrality on religious questions is identified with secularism and therefore destructive of all traditional religious and moral values.

This pejorative use of the term is offered by many as the explanation for deterioration in academic achievement and moral values in the public schools. The alleged teaching of "secular humanism" is widely used as a rationale for parochial and Christian day schools.

"Secular humanism" remains largely undefined by those most prone to employ it. A non-religious or secular humanism does not mean, let alone require, the rejection of Judeo-Christian religious and moral values.

Unfortunately, the attack on secular humanism is all too often a thinly veiled attack on academic freedom and integrity. Much of the myth has been predicated by those who seek to make the public schools more responsive to their own particular religious values, rather than remain schools in which a secular or non-religious approach to the study of history, science, government, and literature prevails. Quite properly, man and human values should be the focus of public education, just as God and religious values are the natural focus of religious education in the homes, churches, and synagogues.

America's public schools are necessarily committed to human values, human achievements, and human capabilities, in which the activities, interests and historical development of man are central. That is why public schools enjoy the support of public funds while parochial schools, committed to a particular religious world view, are denied those funds.

In several major decisions, the Supreme Court has denied the permissibility of state sponsorship of religion in the public schools. In McCollum v. Board of Education (1948), the Court declared that "released time," i.e., setting aside a portion of each day for religious education is unconstitutional even though attendance in these classes might be on a purely voluntary basis.

Four years later, the Court in Zorach v. Clausen declared constitutional the practice of "dismissed time," essentially the same program except that it was maintained off the public school's grounds.

In 1962, the Court ruled in Engel v. Vitale that the state-sponsored prayer program of the New York State schools was unconstitutional. The Court declared that government may not require prayer in the public schools, even when on a "voluntary" basis. "It is neither sacrilegious nor anti-religious," the Court said, "to say that each separate government in this country should stay out of the business of writing or sanctioning official prayers . . ."

The following year, faced with widespread Bible-reading exercises in the public schools, the Court ruled in Abington School District v. Schempp that such practices and the recitation of the Lord's Prayer are unconstitutional.

Since then, more than 200 proposals have been introduced in Congress to overturn the Supreme Court's decisions. Recent efforts, led by Senator Jesse Helms of North Carolina, have been directed toward limiting by congressional statute the Supreme Court and all federal district courts from hearing cases involving "voluntary prayers in the public schools and public buildings." Thusly, the place of prayer in the public schools would be determined by the states and local communities.

Proposals passed in the present Congress provided for the right of student-led religious groups to meet in the public schools before or after regular school hours on the basis of "equal access."

During recent months, district courts in Alabama, New Jersey, and Tennessee have ruled against legislation providing either for sanctioned prayer or a moment of silence.

Those decisions have been strongly denounced by both the political right and the religious right, more recently identified as the New Religious Right, a group primarily linked with religious fundamentalism found largely outside of America's mainline denominations. Significantly, the strongest support for the Supreme Court's decisions has come from the major religious denominations of America, both Christian and Jewish.

The controversy over "scientific creationism" is still another example of attempts to Christianize the public schools. The crux of the controversy is not over the teaching of the Genesis account of creation, which is clearly permissible and has never been seriously questioned in the courts, but rather over the demands of religious fundamentalists that creationism be taught as science and given equal time with evolution.

In a key case, McLean v. Arkansas Board of Education, the Arkansas "creation-science" law was struck down in January, 1982, by a U.S. district judge, who ruled that it violated the constitutional provision for the separation of church and state. The judge found the Arkansas law failed all three tests of the Establishment Clause: secular purpose, primary effect, and excessive entanglement. The law, he ruled, was "a religious crusade coupled with a desire to conceal this act" . . . and that it was an "unprecedented intrusion in the school curriculum. . . ."

Having to face the Supreme Court's ruling of unconstitutionality, religious fundamentalists adopted a new tactic in the 1970s: the teaching of creationism along with evolution. Such legislation has been introduced in at least 21 states. Encouraged by the national swing to the right in the 1980 elections and strongly supported by the New Religious Right, local school districts and state legislatures have been under considerable pressure to enforce the teaching of "scientific creationism."

These efforts have met with resistance from some education agencies and particularly in the courts. Following the 1975 action of the Indiana Commission on Textbook Adoption approving a creationist biology textbook, a state court ruled that the commission's action "both advanced particular religious preferences and entangled the state with religion and therefore violated both state and federal constitutions."

The Christianization of the public schools has become a major force in American politics. With an agenda largely orchestrated by the New Religious Right, these efforts are supported by millions of Americans, both within and without our communities of faith. As a result, the public schools have become a battleground for key political issues, the resolution of which is crucial not only to the public schools and to public policy, but also to the nation's future as a free and pluralistic society. Meanwhile, scapegoating the public schools has virtually become a national pastime—as a way of explaining many of the causes of the nation's social ills, particularly by those most resistant to demands of a secular state and to the dynamics of a pluralistic society.●

REPORT ON VISIT TO NICARAGUA

HON. ROBERT W. KASTENMEIER

OF WISCONSIN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. KASTENMEIER. Mr. Speaker, in August, members of the Illinois-Wisconsin delegation of Witness for Peace in Nicaragua visited Nicaragua.

Throughout their visit, this delegation, which included constituents from Wisconsin's Second District, was warmly received by the people of Nicaragua. This friendly reception, I believe, demonstrates the good will held by the Nicaraguans toward the American people. This feeling is all the more remarkable considering the official policy of the U.S. Government which is to give military support and encouragement to those forces attempting to overthrow the Nicaraguan Government.

Mr. Speaker, the Illinois-Wisconsin delegation of Witness for Peace in Nicaragua has issued a call for peace and the restoration of normal relations between the Governments of the United States and Nicaragua. They have written a report on their visit to Nicaragua, and I would urge my colleagues to take the time to read a condensed version of their findings. I hope this report will help provide a better understanding of the situation in Nicaragua and give us, in the Congress, more reason to end the administration's shameful policy toward Nicaragua.

The report follows:

CONDENSED REPORT OF THE ILLINOIS-WISCONSIN AUGUST 1-12 DELEGATION, WITNESS FOR PEACE TO NICARAGUA

Our delegation was diverse in social and religious backgrounds, ages, and occupations. We were able to share worship, prayer, work and travel on an intimate basis, and we formed close ties among the members of the group. We were very much united in our religious commitment, especially as it relates to our concern for and solidarity with the Nicaraguan people.

During our initial two days in Managua, we interviewed representatives of the various political and religious sectors, government officials, and others. Much of what we gleaned reinforced what we had read of the situation, but even that gained a new reality when related by the people who are living out the forming of their society. We also spent some time visiting with people in the poorest barrios of Managua, hearing their stories and feeling their welcome.

On the third day we headed north with two long-term WFP volunteers. We stopped at a Salvadoran refugee camp near Leon and visited for some time. We lunched at a Comidor operated by a collective made up of former prostitutes. By late afternoon we arrived in Somotillo, where we would spend most of our time. We became very attached to the people there, who spent quite a lot of time with us.

Many of us made a side trip to Cayanlipe, a town of 2,000 which boasts 8 collectives. We talked with them about their operation and their community, which is half populated by people relocated several years ago from nearer the border. We went to Villa Nueva to spend the night and held a vigil there in the evening.

Our whole group took a two hour truck ride north to San Francisco del Norte on Wednesday, where we met with several groups and stayed with families overnight. In the morning we took testimony from several people about the July, 1982 massacre in which 15 were killed and 8 kidnapped. On our way back to Somotillo the next day, we stopped at Santo Thomas, on the Honduran border. We walked out to the guard post and held a vigil, including in our circle the two guards and a few other Nicaraguans.

The following day was a parting with our good friends in Somotillo, as we went back to Managua to debrief and sum up our experience. We did visit the U.S. embassy, and the embassy spokesperson came to meet with us. We shared our concerns with him for about an hour, and he shared some of his points of view with us.

We came to several general and specific understandings as a result of our experiences and interactions in Nicaragua. We were overwhelmed by the friendliness of the Nicaraguan people, and by how greatly they appreciated our being there. We were impressed by their commitment to the continuation of their revolution, their idealism (after five hard years) and their determination to defend the revolution from aggression. We were struck by the senselessness of the economic destruction and the mutilation of people that is being carried out by the contras. We found that the Nicaraguan people understand very well that the U.S. government is supporting and supplying the contras, that they don't hold that against all U.S. citizens, and that they are gratefully receiving aid from many nations around the world, in the form of supplies as well as workers. We also found the understanding that much of their resource base is necessarily being diverted to support the defense effort, and that this slows economic development. Some contra activity occurred during and around the time when we were in the country, but we did not witness any actual violence in progress. We did feel that many of the people of the northern areas are constantly aware of the danger in which they live. On the other hand, we found it interesting that the opposition paper, La Prensa, was delighted to report that the opposition candidate for president, Arturo Cruz, was able to walk the streets of Managua without a bodyguard, and without any apparent fear for his safety. It was noted that this is perhaps the only country in Central America where this would be true, and that foreign ambassadors feel the same safety there.

We saw evidence of great progress in the areas of education, health care, housing, labor laws and wages, women's rights, and a more general feeling that people had some control over their lives and communities that they had never had before. We heard several sides on some areas of disagreement, i.e., confiscation of property, freedom of religion, freedom of the press, human rights violations, control of the army, and the laws controlling the upcoming elections. We certainly saw room for improvement in some of these cases. In some instances, opposition groups seemed to be grasping at straws, and in others, the Sandinista government had not or has not handled things very well.

All in all, however, the Nicaraguan people appeared to be in control of the forming of their society and economy and happy with the progress that they have made so far. The thing that they continually asked us was to please get our government to leave them alone so they can work on their own problems.

The members of this delegation came back to their communities in the United States deeply committed to working against the apathy, misinformation, sloganeering, and redbaiting that characterizes so much of the debate of Central American issues that take place in this country, and to begin to move the discussion into the questions of self-determination, justice, and peace for the people of Central America.●

NEW JERSEY BUSINESSMAN HONORED

HON. JAMES J. FLORIO

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. FLORIO. Mr. Speaker, I would like to place into the RECORD today a brief newspaper article which honors my friend Chris Koch. Chris is one, who through hard work and great determination has been able to be the very best at what he does. In this case you will notice that he has received the Ford Motor Company's Distinguished Achievement Award for 1983, which places him among the top Ford dealers in the Nation.

I am proud to have Chris Koch of Turnersville, NJ as my constituent. Mr. Speaker, the article follows:

CHRIS KOCH IS HONORED

Chris Koch Ford, Inc. in Turnersville has earned a place among the nation's outstanding Ford dealerships and has received Ford Motor Company's Distinguished Achievement Award for 1983, according to Ronald E. Tillier, Philadelphia district sales manager.

The Distinguished Achievement Award is presented "in recognition of a dealership's progressive management, modern sales and service facilities, sound merchandising practices, high quality standards and continuing interest in rendering superior service to Ford owners," Mr. Tillier said. "To receive this award, a dealership must be rated outstanding in every aspect of the business."●

A GREAT AMERICAN

HON. DUNCAN HUNTER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Speaker, on February 13, 1984, at Arlington National Cemetery, one of our Nation's truly great men was buried. His name was Lawrence Joel. He had been a recipient of our country's highest honor, the Congressional Medal of Honor. Joel was a retired sergeant first class, a medic in the U.S. Army. At the memorial service, chaplain [LTC] James M. Hutchens, presently serving as staff chaplain of the District of Columbia National Guard, pointed to Sergeant Joel's remarkable courage and dedication as the embodiment of Jesus' admonition that "whoever wishes to be great among you shall be your servant." There was no greater servant than Sgt. Lawrence Joel. I feel that the citation awarding him the Congressional Medal of Honor for his heroic deeds on November 8, 1965 recognizes Sergeant Joel's greatness:

HEADQUARTERS,
DEPARTMENT OF THE ARMY,
Washington, DC, 5 April 1967.

AWARD OF THE MEDAL OF HONOR

By direction of the President, under the Joint Resolution of Congress approved 12 July 1962 (amended by act of 3 March 1863, act of 9 July 1918 and set of 25 July 1963), the Medal of Honor for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of life above and beyond the call of duty is awarded by the Department of the Army in the name of Congress to:

Specialist Six Lawrence Joel (then Specialist Five), RA12253593, Medical Corps, who distinguished himself by gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of his life above and beyond the call of duty on November 8, 1965, while serving as a Medical Aidman, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 503d Infantry on a battlefield in the Republic of Vietnam. Specialist Joel demonstrated indomitable courage, determination, and professional skill when a numerically superior and well-concealed Viet Cong element launched a vicious attack which wounded or killed nearly every man in the lead squad of the Company. After treating the men wounded by the initial burst of gun fire, he bravely moved forward to assist others who were wounded while proceeding to their objective. While moving from man to man, he was struck in the right leg by machine gun fire. Although painfully wounded his desire to aid his fellow soldiers transcended all personal feeling. He bandaged his own wound and self administered morphine to deaden the pain enabling him to continue his dangerous undertaking.

Throughout this period of time, he constantly shouted words of encouragement to all around him. Then, completely ignoring the warnings of others, and his own pain, he continued his search for wounded, exposing himself to hostile fire; and, as bullets dug up the dirt around him, he held plasma bottles high while kneeling completely engrossed in his life saving mission. Then, after being struck a second time and with a bullet lodged in his thigh, he dragged himself over the battlefield and succeeded in treating thirteen more men before his medical supplies ran out. Displaying resourcefulness, he saved the life of one man by placing a plastic bag over a severe chest wound to congeal the blood. As one of the platoons pursued the Viet Cong, an insurgent force in concealed positions opened fire on the platoon and wounded many more soldiers. With a new stock of medical supplies, Specialist Joel again shouted words of encouragement as he crawled through an intense hail of gun fire to the wounded men.

After the twenty-four hour battle subsided and the Viet Cong dead numbered four hundred and ten, snipers continued to harass the Company. Throughout the long battle, Specialist Joel never lost sight of his mission as a Medical Aidman and continued to comfort and treat the wounded until his own evacuation was ordered. His meticulous attention to duty saved a large number of lives and his unselfish, daring example under most adverse conditions was an inspiration to all. Specialist Joel's profound concern for his fellow soldiers, his conspicuous gallantry, and his intrepidity at the risk of his life above and beyond the call of duty are in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflect great credit upon himself and the armed forces of his country. (This award supersedes the Silver Star awarded to Specialist Six Lawrence Joel (then Specialist Five), for gallantry in action on November 8, 1965, as announced in General Orders Number 1109, Headquarters United States Army Vietnam, APO San Francisco 86307, dated 17 February 1966.)

By Order of the Secretary of the Army:

HAROLD K. JOHNSON,
General, United States Army,
Chief of Staff.

Official:

KENNETH C. WICKHAM,
Major General, United States Army,
The Adjutant General.

It was my privilege to serve as a platoon leader in 1970 in the same unit as Sergeant Joel. He was a legend then and I trust he will continue to be a model for all those who aspire to greatness, reminding all of us that the greatest among us is the one who serves.●

BUDGET TRENDS

HON. LEE H. HAMILTON

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I would like to insert my Washington report for Wednesday, September 19, 1984, into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD:

BUDGET TRENDS

In this week's newsletter, I provide an overview of major developments in the federal budget over the past few years. I try to do this as accurately as I can so that you will have the pertinent facts. You have a right to these facts during the political season, and in any case many of you have asked me about them.

The sentences that follow contain too many statistics, and I apologize for that. However, a detailed examination of the budget, dry as it is, really is the best way to understand national policy. Better than any other document, the budget says what our values are, where we are headed, and how we intend to reach our goals. The trends in the budget over several years, and the principal effects of the budget during extended periods of time, tell us better than anything else what our policy has been, is, and will be. We have to look closely at the numbers if we want the big picture to emerge.

These are some common questions about the federal budget, and my answers to them:

Q: What has happened to federal spending?

A: Federal spending has not been reduced. It has gone up. Federal outlays have increased 28.6% between 1981 and 1984, from $657.2 billion to $845.0 billion. Expressed in terms of the gross national product (GNP), the federal government now consumes 23.5% of the country's wealth, up from 22.8% three years ago. For the immediate future, outlays will continue to rise rapidly, but the federal government's share of the economy will not grow to much unless the economy falters and the nation is hit by another recession.

Q: What has happened to spending priorities?

A: The composition of federal spending has changed. The focus of the federal budget is shifting toward the military and away from other programs. Computed as a portion of the budget, outlays for defense have risen from 24.3% in 1981 to 27.8% this year. Interest payments on the national debt have risen as well during the same period, from 10.4% to 13.1% of the federal budget. Spending for all other programs is taking a declining share—59.1% today, down from 65.3% in 1981. Under current law, this trend will become more pronounced in the years ahead.

Q: What has happened to federal revenues?

A: When federal taxes were cut in 1981, it was hoped that there would be a surge of investment and, eventually, a new era of tax-generating economic growth. The economy, however, fell into a recession that depressed revenues even further. Four bills were enacted between 1982 and 1984 to recoup revenues, yet the situation remains unsatisfactory. The federal government took in $599.3 billion in taxes in 1981, 20.8% of GNP. The current figure is $663.0 billion, 18.7% of GNP. When this trend is combined with the trend in spending, the result is a deficit that has risen from $57.9 billion three years ago to $170.0 billion today. The deficit will grow much larger unless we take positive steps to control it as soon as possible.

Q: What has happened to the tax burden?

A: The tax burden has shifted in a number of ways. Individual taxes have become less progressive, and much of the tax load has been lifted from corporations and placed on individuals in the form of higher payroll, income, and exercise taxes. Those making less than $15,000 per year, for example, have seen their real after-tax income decline, while those earning $20,000 to $40,000 annually are only marginally better off. Those with yearly incomes in excess of $75,000, on the other hand, have realized big after-tax gains. Also, levies such as the estate and gift taxes yield a smaller proportion of total revenues each year.

Q: What has happened to income distribution?

A: The changes in the tax burden, combined with spending cuts that have hit means-tested programs for the poor much harder than other programs, have shifted after-tax family resources from low- and middle-income families to high-income families. The latest data, from 1981 and 1982, show that the after-tax income of the richest twentieth of the population rose 4.2% between those years, while that of the richest fifth rose 0.7%. However, the after-tax income of each of the lower four-fifths of the population declined without exception, sinking the most, 4.1%, among the poorest people.

Q: What has happened to the economy?

A: The overall picture is decidedly mixed. Between 1977 and 1980, real GNP increased at an average rate of 3.3% per year, consumer prices rose at an average rate of 9.8% per year, business productivity posted average yearly increases of 0.3%, and the average rate of unemployment was 6.4%. From 1981 to 1983, the comparable figures were 1.3% for real growth of GNP, 6.6% for consumer price increases, 1.6% for yearly business productivity increases, and 8.8% for unemployment, clearly reflecting the effect of a deep recession. Other indicators are similar in thrust. Mortgage interest rates averaged 10.5% between 1977 and 1980, but 14.1% from 1981 to 1983. The trade deficit, $36.2 billion in 1980, may reach $120 billion or more this year. About 11.8% of the population on average lived in poverty during the 1970's, but the average figure was 14% for the first three years of the 1980's.

Q: What has happened to living standards?

A: The average standard of living has not shown much improvement. The gains that have been made are not as significant as those made during other periods in the postwar era. Basically, the figures show that the average standard of living is higher than it was four years ago, although it is not as high as it was in 1979.

NOTE.—Some data for the newsletter were drawn from "A Review Of President Reagan's Budget Recommendations, 1981–1985," a recent publication of the Committee on the Budget, U.S. House of Representatives. Other data were drawn from the 1984 Economic Report of the President.●

THE CONTINUING SEARCH FOR RAOUL WALLENBERG

HON. HAMILTON FISH, JR.

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, for many years, I and many of my colleagues in the Congress have been concerned with discovering the fate of Raoul Gustav Wallenberg, the Swedish diplomat who saved the lives of more than 100,000 people during World War II. Arrested by the Soviet Government in 1945, and subsequently reported deceased in 1947, reliable reports indicate he may be alive.

Following my Subcommittee on Immigration, Refugees, and International Laws and congressional approval of honorary U.S. citizenship for Raoul Wallenberg in 1981, we have continued our efforts, in conjunction with the Foreign Affairs Committee, to examine any further evidence of his whereabouts. In August 1983, the Foreign Affairs Subcommittee on Human Rights and International Organizations held a hearing to update the Congress on Raoul Wallenberg.

Former member Joshua Eilberg testified at that hearing, along with myself and several other Members. At the request of the Wallenberg Committee of Greater Philadelphia, I am reprinting former Congressman Eilberg's statement, the Philadelphia Bar Association's resolution on Raoul Wallenberg, and a list of international Wallenberg committees. I have also included my own statement from the August hearing.

Since the hearing was held, a lawsuit was filed last February in Federal district court in the District of Columbia by Wallenberg's family, seeking to free him or his body from the Soviet Union. The suit asks the court to declare Wallenberg's arrest illegal, seeks all pertinent information concerning his detention, and damages of $39 million, $1 million for each year of captivity. Although suits against foreign governments in U.S. courts are always difficult to prosecute, the case brings further international attention to the task of determining Wallenberg's fate.

Next year, on the occasion of the 40th anniversary of Wallenberg's capture, there will be commemorations in both Congress and throughout the world along with renewed efforts for answers from the Soviet Union.

STATEMENT OF HON. HAMILTON FISH, JR., A REPRESENTATIVE IN CONGRESS FROM THE STATE OF NEW YORK

Mr. FISH. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

In the 97th Congress your committee and my Judiciary Committee overwhelmingly supported legislation that proclaimed Raoul Wallenberg to be an honorary citizen of the United States and requested the President to ascertain from the Soviet Union the whereabouts of this courageous man and secure his return to freedom.

Raoul Wallenberg's extraordinary record of saving the lives of countless thousands of Jews during the Holocaust, at great personal risk and sacrifice, amply justified our conferring upon him this Nation's highest honor by proclaiming him an honorary citizen.

The passage of Public Law 97-54 represented a ringing affirmation of America's commitment to the survival of the Jewish people and our tremendous esteem for someone who risked his own life to try to save as many Jewish lives as possible from the barbarity of Nazi extermination.

Conferral of honorary citizenship on Wallenberg symbolized our commitment as a Nation to remember the Holocaust and vigilantly guard against the possibility of any recurrence. Honorary citizenship was singularly appropriate in the Wallenberg case, not only because of the place the Holocaust occupies in the history of human depravity, but also because Wallenberg acted at the behest of the United States and suffered untold misery as a result of it.

A few of the statements in the legislative underscored the critical significance of the step we took. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig, Jr. said that Mr. Wallenberg's "* * * contribution during the dark days of World War II in Hungary stands out as a beacon to all those who respect human rights and dignity."

Former Secretary of State Edmund Muskie informed this subcommittee and the Subcommittee on Europe and the Middle East that "* * * the chronological record * * * of State Department and War Refugee cables and communications * * * document the U.S. Government position of responsibility for the selection of Wallenberg, the directive and funding for his activities, the appreciation for his work, and the deep distress over his disappearance."

Assistant Secretary of State Richard Fairbanks wrote that "* * * the conferral of honorary U.S. citizenship on Wallenberg would serve to underscore the seriousness with which the American Government and people view Soviet behavior in the Wallenberg case. Conferral of honorary U.S. citizenship on Wallenberg would also serve to reaffirm to the Government of Sweden that the United States firmly supports the quest to resolve Wallenberg's fate."

The Soviet Union never has accounted satisfactorily for what happened to Mr. Wallenberg. Those of us who worked on this legislation fervently hoped that its passage would assist in the effort to locate Raoul Wallenberg and, if he is still alive, to free him.

These hearings will give the Congress an opportunity to assess the attempts that have been made during the last 2 years to fulfill the mandate of this legislation in our contacts with the Soviet Union.

In the course of this hearing I am sure this subcommittee will receive details of sightings and information indicating Raoul Wallenberg is alive. It is important that public attention be focused on these facts.

I wish to join all of you in commending our colleague from California, Tom Lantos, and Mrs. Lantos, the Free Wallenberg Committee, the Wallenberg Committee of the United States, and this subcommittee for continuing to focus national and world attention on one of the great heroes of this century.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. YATRON. Thank you very much, Mr. Fish, I really appreciate the fact that you and Senator Pell both came before our subcommittee today.

Do any members want to be recognized?

Mr. Gilman.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I want to join you in thanking our good representative from the State of Rhode Island for his continuing concern, and our good colleague, the gentleman from New York, Mr. Fish, the ranking Republican on the Judiciary Committee, for keeping this measure focused in both Houses. I think that these efforts are extremely important to our continuing effort to find a final resolution of this issue, and we thank the gentlemen for their time this morning.

Mr. YATRON. Thank you.

Mr. Lantos.

Mr. LANTOS. Just one word, Mr. Chairman. I first want to thank my friend, Ham Fish, for the invaluable work he gave us on the Judiciary Committee and since.

I would like to say a word about Senator Pell because in the case of Senator Pell we have a classic case of what I can only describe as noblesse oblige. It was his distinguished father who was one of the prime champions in American history for human rights before that phrase was known. I think it is only appropriate that Claiborne Pell carried the fight in the tradition of his distinguished father, one of our finest public servants in this instance. We are deeply grateful to you.

STATEMENT OF HON. JOSHUA EILBERG, MEMBER OF THE BOARD OF ADVISERS, WALLENBERG COMMITTEE OF GREATER PHILADELPHIA, AND FORMER REPRESENTATIVE IN CONGRESS FROM THE STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA

Mr. EILBERG. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Thank you for inviting our testimony today. We represent the Wallenberg Committee of Greater Philadelphia, an independent, nonprofit, and ecumenical group from Delaware, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania, organized to support all U.S. foreign and official and private efforts to free Raoul Wallenberg from the Soviet Union.

I would like to thank first Congressman Lantos for his very important role in organizing this hearing today. At the same time, Mr. Chairman, we did visit with both of you in April, and in visiting you, without any reservation you agreed to hold an oversight hearing. We are very indebted to you for following through with your commitment, but that is typical of the long association that I have had personally with you here in the Congress, as well as in the State legislature before that. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

Our emphasis today will not be so much on the good deeds of Raoul Wallenberg, which are well known to all of us or many of us in this room, although there is indeed the need to educate the public and the people of the Nation, but rather on what we can do to free him.

It was our desire and is our desire that the emphasis be laid on the oversight function and what might be done or can be done by the legislative branch and also by the executive branch.

It is our view, Mr. Chairman, that notwithstanding occasional statements by the executive branch, by the State Department, that indeed those statements have been too few, too few since the legislation was adopted.

Really, I think the purpose of today's hearing is to expedite the flow of statements and actions by the executive branch, including the White House, including the State Department.

So, we ask the following U.S. official actions, first mentioning legislative branch actions.

We ask you and all members of the subcommittee and the Congress to join us in writing to President Andropov and asking that the Soviet Union free Raoul Wallenberg. I am not speaking necessarily of a petition because we know that that doesn't mean as much as individual expressions. We never know what particular letter is going to reach a responsive cord.

Also, join us in publicizing Raoul Wallenberg by regularly and repeatedly referring to Wallenberg in all speeches.

We ask for continuing oversight. We sincerely hope that this will not be the end of the oversight of this issue, but that it will continue, including the exercise of oversight by the other relevant committees—there are five in all that have dealt with this subject, the legislation as we know—in joint or independent hearings. We ask that you and all Members of Congress notify the chairman of each committee having jurisdiction of support for all U.S. and foreign official and private efforts to free Wallenberg.

We ask that for such continuing oversight, Mr. Chairman, you use the Congressional Research Service and other information resources to provide information as needed in the various issues raised by the Wallenberg situation. In that connection, frequently as Members of Congress we overlook the tremendous resources that are at our fingertips.

With the courtesy of Congressman Hamilton Fish, my very good friend on the Judiciary Committee, with whom I served so many years, his office provided the answers to questions from the Congressional Research Service. I am going to ask that it be made part of the records of the subcommittee.

Mr. YATRON. Without objection.

Mr. EILBERG. I will just briefly indicate that in the material submitted by Congressman Fish from the Congressional Research Service we have selected reports on the status of Raoul Wallenberg, quite complete documentation.

We have organizations throughout the country that are Wallenberg organizations. We have an identification of possible violations of international law and Soviet law in connection with conduct committed by the Soviet Government. We have references to treaties that the Soviets have entered into providing diplomatic recognition and so forth.

This material is at your fingertips, Mr. Chairman. We know how busy you are, but we hope the staff will effectively use the kind of material that we are just reminding you of today.

We ask that you request continuous review with regular reports from all relevant State Department officials, the International Communication Agency officials, intelligence agency officials and other executive officials on the latest status of United States and foreign official and private efforts to free Wallenberg and other information relating to Wallenberg; that the members request from the intelligence agencies and other relevent United States and foreign agencies all unclassified information relating to Wallenberg.

We ask that you direct your staff to cooperate with all United States and foreign official and private efforts to free Wallenberg and that each member of the subcommittee designate a staff member to facilitate private contacts with U.S. and foreign government officials, including intelligence officials, and to facilitate replies to private requests for information, including intelligence information.

We ask that you request of the President that he designate one or more staff members to facilitate private contacts and to facilitate replies to private requests for information; that you ask the President to regularly and repeatedly—not once or twice and not merely to Jewish groups, Mr. Chairman—refer to Wallenberg in speeches to the public; and that you send a formal request to the President that he direct—and I emphasize direct—all Federal officials to cooperate with all United States and foreign officials in private efforts to free him, with this directive to appear in the Federal Register.

We attach, Mr. Chairman, a proposed Presidential directive which spells out in some detail what we think might be in such a directive, which of course refers, among other things, to the possibility of a spy swap. As Congressman Lantos mentioned so very well, there was an excellent example that was muffed by Sweden.

We refer in our directive to multilateral spy swaps, national spy swaps, any kind of deal that is necessary because Wallenberg is typical of the highest commodity that we are interested in, Mr. Chairman.

I emphasize that the directive that we are proposing, once placed in the Federal Register, has the force of law. We are presently without that. It seems to us that a Presidential directive is absolutely essential if this movement is to effectively proceed.

We thank you again, Mr. Chairman, for previously meeting with us in your office in April, inviting us to testify, and holding this hearing, notwithstanding the many other pressures that there are upon you. We welcome any questions or comments from the subcommittee now or in the future.

Thank you.

PHILADELPHIA BAR ASSOCIATION,
Philadelphia, PA, January 3, 1984.

RESOLUTION

Be it known that on October 27, 1983, the Philadelphia Bar Association voted for and unanimously passed the following resolution:

During World War II, Raoul Gustav Wallenberg, a Swedish diplomat, working with the United States War Refugee Board, almost singlehandedly saved the lives of an estimated 100,000 people. Despite and, perhaps, because of his heroic efforts, he was arrested by the Soviet Government in 1945. The United States Congress has determined that contrary to Soviet claims that he died in 1947, there is much evidence to support the fact that he was alive at least as recently as 1981. On October 1981, Wallenberg was made an honorary citizen of the United States—only the third time in history that such an honor was bestowed upon an individual.

The Philadelphia Bar Association implores the President of the United States and the Department of State to make every effort to convince the Government of the Soviet Union that they must immediately release Mr. Wallenberg in the name of honor, decency and morality.

(I certify that this is a true and accurate copy of the resolution as passed by the Philadelphia Bar Association's Board of Governors.)

ON THE UNTIMELY, SENSELESS DEATH OF LEAMON "RAY" HUNT, AN OKLAHOMAN

HON. WES WATKINS

OF OKLAHOMA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. WATKINS. Mr. Speaker, Leamon "Ray" Hunt, born in Oklahoma at Mill Creek, October 7, 1927, now in the Third Congressional District, was a man who devoted his life to peace yet one who died by violence at the hands of terrorists.

He was raised in the quiet, restful atmosphere of rural America, growing up in Murray and Johnston Counties. He attended high school at Sulphur, and college at Murray State College at Tishomingo. He and his wife, Joyce, planned to attend a high school reunion in Sulphur last May. It would have been his first return visit to his old home town in a number of years according to the Sulphur Times Democrat, the local newspaper. Several relatives still reside in that area.

After serving in the U.S. Navy during World War II, he started his diplomatic career as a guard at the Department of State. From that time forward, he literally circled the globe in his quest for peace for all mankind. He transferred to the new State of Israel and continued his endeavors on behalf of peace around the world until he was named Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for Middle East and South Asian Affairs in 1974.

He served prior to that time in Jerusalem, Turkey, Ceylon, Ethiopia, Costa Rica, Syria and Lebanon where he was Chargé d'Affaires as the Lebanese civil war escalated.

During his 32-year career, Ray Hunt was a recipient of four outstanding service awards. In 1973, he received the State Department Honor Award. In 1977, he received a meritorious honor award. In 1980, he was recipient of a superior honor award and the United States-Saudi Arabian Joint Commission Outstanding Award for his foreign service work.

While Deputy Assistant Secretary, he became a close personal friend of the late Anwar Sadat of Egypt, who was himself to die by assassination, and Prime Minister Begin of Israel. He was the logical choice when President Carter, President Sadat and Prime Minister Begin were seeking a man to direct the Sinai cease-fire.

After his retirement in 1981 from the Foreign Service, Hunt became the director-general of the 10-nation, 3,400 man peacekeeping force in the Sinai.

He was a seasoned diplomat with a soft-spoken style and a quiet manner, like many people of the Southwest. They speak softly, but mean what they say; it is a part of the world when a man's word, or his handshake, is just as binding a contract as a 40-page legal document.

On February 15, 1984, in Rome, he was being driven to his home where he lived with his wife and a son, Richard. Two or three men who had been following Hunt and his driver attacked the car with machine guns and then killed Hunt with a shot to the head. The chauffeur escaped injury and drove Hunt to a hospital where he was pronounced dead on arrival. The assailants escaped and a part of the Red Brigade claimed credit for this senseless slaying.

Mr. Speaker, Leamon Hunt was buried February 21 in Arlington Cemetery, which is fitting, for he was a hero just as surely as any of those honored dead who rest there on the banks of the Potomac, for Leamon Hunt was killed in the line of duty, on the battlefield, by enemies of free men everywhere. The tragedy is that terrorists in their insanity do not differentiate between men of peace with their bullets and bombs.

By this one senseless act they have gained nothing. A man has lost his life. A wife has become a widow. A son has become fatherless. Oklahoma, the United States, and the world has lost a man of peace of whom the Christ said, "Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God."●

AMERICAN POLICY IN SOUTH AFRICA: A DISMAL RECORD

HON. GARY L. ACKERMAN

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. ACKERMAN. Mr. Speaker, today the House of Representatives has adopted four resolutions sharply critical of the despicable actions of the South African Government. I am proud to stand in strong support of all these measures, which reflect the anger of the Congress at both the situation in that beleaguered part of the world, and also at the administration's appalling policy there. Each of these bills represents yet another aspect of the failed Reagan policy of "constructive engagement," a farcical name for a policy more appropriately called "destructive appeasement."

The passage of these resolutions enunciates the belief of this House that it is absolutely imperative for the U.S. Congress to put an end to America's overt support of racism in South Africa. As the Reagan administration spews forth rhetoric about progress there, its appeasement of the racist regime has meant the continued imprisonment of courageous apartheid foe Nelson Mandela; the "banning" of his wife, Winnie Mandela, a political leader in her own right; the stepped-up enforcement of the blackspot policy; and the unyielding occupation of Namibia. Furthermore, to enhance this dismal policy, the Reagan administration has sanctioned a program to grant "honorary" status to additional consulates that are established for the purpose of promoting tourism and trade with the South African regime. These policies are a disgrace to our country and the democratic values America is supposed to represent.

Ending Pretoria's cruel and illegal treatment of its black population in South Africa and Namibia must become a higher priority for the United States. The brutality with which the South African military massacred the Cassinga settlement, killing 600 Namibian refugees, symbolizes its absolute disain for international law, and its lack of interest in providing fair treatment to the black people of the region.

The poverty and dispair which results from apartheid demand a critical reexamination of American policy. A Washington Post article earlier this year reported the devastating effects of the income gap between the black majority and the white minority in South Africa. It is clearly unacceptable that there is one doctor for 174,000 people in black rural areas, that 25 percent of the work force in some homelands is unemployed, and that one-third of the men in some villages can spend only 1 month a year with their families because they can find work only at great distances from their homes. Our Government should not be supporting a government which treats its people in this manner as a matter of policy. It is a shameful disgrace.

As the leading democracy in the world, the United States can ill afford to stand by in silence or, worse, complicity, as the morally bankrupt South African Government continues its destructive policies. Over the past 3 years, the United States has done little to advance the change which must occur in South Africa if there is to be equitable treatment of the majority black population. Instead, the administration has sought to advance the extensive economic and political involvement between the United States and South Africa. Let us not delude ourselves. This relationship serves as yet another means for the oppression of 16 million black people by a powerful minority.

We, in the Congress, must accept a degree of culpability for allowing this policy to continue. By adopting the resolutions before the House, we have put ourselves on record in opposition to the racist policies in South Africa. But we must not let our work end here, our consciences soothed by what we have done today. We must adopt a conference report on the Export Administration Act, retaining important provisions passed by the House that limit U.S. investments in South Africa. We must insist on the end of the impotent Reagan "constructive engagement" policy. We must not stop until the words "human rights" have true meaning for all the people of that land.●

PAST TIME FOR EPA ASBESTOS ACTION

HON. JAMES J. FLORIO

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. FLORIO. Mr. Speaker, I know my colleagues are aware of the crisis in our Nation's schools over recent weeks concerning the hazards posed to our children's health by asbestos. In my own State, many schools were shut down as local officials scrambled desperately to assess this horrifying threat. Many other States had similar experiences.

I would, therefore, draw my colleagues' attention to a recent article in the New York Times describing a lawsuit brought by the Service Employees International Union in an effort to force the Federal Environmental Protection Agency to issue standards for evaluating asbestos hazards in schools and to propose a plan for removing asbestos from school buildings.

After several years of pointless bureaucratic hand wringing, EPA has only managed to come up with a so-called guidance document on these vital issues. The document is ambiguous at best on how to objectively evaluate asbestos hazards and has only served to confuse and frustrate local school officials who must deal with these difficult problems on a day-to-day basis.

The article quotes Alvin Alm, deputy administrator of EPA, as stating that the service employees union, which represents 100,000 schoolworkers, and others concerned about EPA's role in compounding the problem, are really posturing when they suggest that they care more about children than EPA. "That's nonsense," Mr. Alm declared. "We have children, too."

Mr. Alm's effort to deflect legitimate criticism of the Agency's performance by assuring us that its employees are also parents is both shocking and ridiculous. One need only ask a local principal or PTA head desperately trying to cope with the asbestos problem whether Mr. Alm's effort to excuse EPA's behavior makes its guidance document any easier to understand.

I urge my colleagues to read the New York Times article which follows.

[From the New York Times, Sept. 12, 1984]

UNION SAYS EPA IS STALLING ON ASBESTOS CLEANUP

(By Philip Shabecoff)

WASHINGTON, September 11.—Calling asbestos in the schools the worst potential health threat to children since polio, the Service Employees International Union sued today to require the Environmental Protection Agency to address the danger.

The union asked the Federal District Court here to order the environmental agency to set standards for asbestos hazards in schools and to propose a plan within 30 days for removing asbestos in school buildings.

John J. Sweeney, president of the union, charged that the Reagan Administration was deliberately delaying announcing plans for asbestos until after the election because it planned to do nothing.

But Alvin L. Alm, deputy administrator of the environmental agency, said its current program to protect children from asbestos in schools was working and that the steps advocated by the union would increase rather than reduce the dangers to children.

15 MILLION CHILDREN INVOLVED

Fibers from crumbling asbestos, once widely used as a building and insulating material because of its heat-resistant properties, can cause cancer and other serious disease when inhaled or ingested.

A survey by the environmental agency, not yet made public, has found that about 15 million children and 1.4 million employees are in school buildings containing asbestos. Agency officials say that only a small percentage of those buildings contain asbestos in dangerous form.

The Service Employees International Union has about 100,000 school workers among its 850,000 members.

The environmental agency requires school systems to inspect for asbestos in their buildings and to inform parents and teachers of their finding. But it does not require the removal of asbestos, and it has not defined what constitutes a dangerous exposure.

ADDITIONAL STEPS CONSIDERED

The agency is considering additional steps, such as setting more precise guidelines to identify the dangers of asbestos, and is requiring that contractors who remove or otherwise handle asbestos be certified for competence.

Mr. Sweeney said thousands of schools had not made inspections for asbestos and thousands more had inspected but "don't have either the money or the inclination to clean it up."

"Incompetent removal contractors are having a field day," he said. "Workers have been observed flushing indestructible, cancer-causing asbestos materials down toilets, releasing enough fibers to contaminate an entire city's water supply."

'WE ARE BEING STALLED'

Mr. Sweeney said the environmental agency's argument that it did not have the technical basis for setting standards for asbestos in schools "is a line we are tired of hearing," and added: "They can make all kinds of excuses on a medical and legal basis. But we are being stalled through the election."

Mr. Alm said he had not seen the union's lawsuit, but he said: "There is a certain amount of posturing that others care more about children than the E.P.A. That's nonsense. We have children, too."

He said the agency's current program was the quickest way to remove asbestos hazards threatening school children. If the agency were to draft standards, he warned, it would take at least two years until those standards were put into effect; meanwhile, school systems would be waiting to see what would be required instead of acting.

John Welch, president of the Safe Buildings Alliance, a group of companies that formerly made products containing asbestos, disputed the union's contention that asbestos in the schools constituted a serious national health problem.

He said a number of outside experts had reported that the problem of exposure to asbestos was far less serious outside the workplace than inside, and that there were relatively few schools where children were endangered.●

SOVIET SATELLITES DO NOT FREEZE

HON. DOUG BEREUTER

OF NEBRASKA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, a few years ago, nobody would have dared believe that with a deepening freeze between our country and the U.S.S.R., the nations of Eastern Europe would have reached for their own understanding and cooperation across the iron curtain. Over the past year and a half, we have been witnessing a dramatic display of heretofore unseen independence on the part of the Soviet Union's European satellites.

I would like to bring my colleagues' attention to a very thoughtful editorial recently printed in the Lincoln Star. The Star correctly points out, "never mind that Honecker finally canceled the trip." The fact that Honecker discussed taking the trip at all, at this time, is almost as significant as the final cancellation. Signs are cropping up all over Eastern Europe that these countries desire a stable, secure relation with the West. None of this means the Soviet empire is about to break down, but the Star well points out that these events are a lesson for America and a lesson for history.

I strongly commend this thoughtful editorial to my colleagues.

[From the Lincoln Star, Sept. 10, 1984]

EASTERN BLOC NATIONS BOLDLY LOOK TO WEST

Never mind that East German leader Erich Honecker has indefinitely postponed his planned visit to West Germany. A Washington Post columnist, William Drozdiak, writes from Budapest that, "Hungary is spearheading a cautious quest by East European countries to revive detente with the West and gain greater autonomy from Moscow at a time of prolonged tensions between the superpowers and uncertain leadership in the Kremlin."

Drozdiak is not the only one to notice that the Soviet Union has had little success in winning the loyalty of those nations that have fallen under its political and military control. The major reason for this is that the Soviet economic system has failed in just about all instances to produce an improved standard of living and expanded personal opportunities.

The Post's columnist writes that East German and Bulgarian initiatives to enhance their Western relations have provided support for Hungary's diplomatic and economic contacts with the West.

"At the same time," he writes, "Romania has continued its maverick ways, spurning the Soviet call to boycott the Olympics and calling for removal of Soviet as well as American rockets from Europe. Poland and Czechoslovakia, while more absorbed with internal problems, also have expressed a yearning for the economic blessings of detente.

"The Soviet Union retains powerful domination over its satellites through the presence of military divisions, control over energy and raw materials and a pervasive network of party and political contacts throughout East European governments.

"But under the apparently weak leadership of Konstantin Chernenko, the Soviet Politburo has disseminated, at times, conflicting signals over the course of policies. As a result, more unified leadership in some Soviet bloc countries have seized the opportunity to assert more autonomy, if not open independence, in their diplomatic and economic initiative. * * *"

None of this speaks of pending doom for the Soviet empire, as the Russian bear can go on a rampage when provoked too far, but it is a situation of considerable significance. What it does say is that while the Soviet Union has been able to impose itself by force of arms upon other nations, its system of government has failed miserably to meet the needs of people.

Beyond that, the people of the Eastern bloc nations simply continue to yearn for political freedom and the right of self-determination. The cause of freedom has not been smothered by the oppressive dogma and communism.

Also, it can be noted how unforeseen the events of the world can be. If anything, one might have expected that the freeze in relations between the United States and Russia would make the Kremlin even more guarded of its territorial possessions but it has apparently lacked the internal drive to move in that direction. More and more, the Chernenko regime appears to be splintering and dividing Soviet politicians.

It is a situation from which the United States might learn a lesson as well as take some comfort. The lesson is that any country that fails to properly consider the desires and needs of its allies runs the risk of losing those allies.●

THE 50TH BIRTHDAY OF ESTONIAN HUMAN RIGHTS ACTIVIST MART NIKLUS

HON. WILLIAM R. RATCHFORD

OF CONNECTICUT

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. RATCHFORD. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Mart Niklus, symbol of the Estonian resistance to Soviet occupation, who will be 50 years old on September 22, 1984. Mr. Niklus has been an outspoken critic of the Soviet regime for years and is currently being held in solitary confinement at the infamous Christpol Prison where his physical condition is steadily worsening.

Mr. Niklus has long been a symbol of patriotism and resistance to his fellow Estonians. He was initially imprisoned in 1958 and then sentenced 1 year later to 10 years of hard labor to be followed by 3 years of internal exile. His sole crime was sending a few photographs to a Western journalist on the conditions in Soviet-dominated Estonia. Unfortunately, matters for Mr. Niklus did not improve after this release in 1966. At first forbidden to work in his profession in the field of biology-zoology, he was compelled to accept other jobs such as construction laborer. Even after obtaining a post with the Tartu Foreign Language Institute to teach English and French, he was subjected to KGB harassment and pressure.

Between 1975 and 1979, articles appeared in the press denouncing Mr. Niklus and he was repeatedly sent to jail. In 1979, he lost his job at Tartu, and on April 29, 1980, he was arrested and placed in Tallinn's central prison just prior to leaving Maarjamoisa Hospital where he was being treated for radiculitis which he had contracted in the Soviet forced labor camps.

On January 8, 1981, he was sentenced to 10 years special regime hard labor and 5 years internal exile for "anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda" in a "trial" conducted by the Estonian Supreme Court. He was then sent to labor camp 389/36 at the foot of the Ural Mountains. In 1983, he was transferred to Christpol Prison. His steadily deteriorating condition makes it possible that he will not survive until his next birthday.

Mr. Speaker, Mark Niklus has exhibited exceptional strength and bravery in the face of extraordinary harassment and mistreatment. He has repeatedly protested Soviets violations of human and national rights and has played a central role in the coordination of human rights activists in Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania. Without such men on the frontline of liberty, the world would be poorer, indeed. His work deserves the appreciation of all free men and stands as a monument to be remembered. I congratulate him on his vitally important work and on his 50th birthday.●

FOR RYAN MICKINAK, GIVE A GIFT OF LIFE

HON. JOE KOLTER

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. KOLTER. Mr. Speaker, I stand before you today in an attempt to focus national attention on the life of one 5-year-old child, perilously close to losing that life because the unusual has become mundane, and what was once considered shockingly uncommon is now commonplace. I am speaking of transplant technology and the struggle of survival for Ryan Mickinak. His parents, Richard and Betty, have been waiting anxiously for a kidney transplant which they hope will save Ryan's life.

Ryan, who is diagnosed as suffering from nephrotic syndrome, or degenerating kidney disease, at 2½. In March 1983, Ryan Mickinak underwent a kidney transplant operation. Five months later, the transplant kidney failed to function and had to be removed. Two weeks later, Ryan's natural kidneys degenerated to such an extent that they, too, had to be removed.

To complicate things, as if they weren't complicated enough, Ryan's sensitivity level was 10 percent before his transplant operation last year; 50 percent after the transplant, and it has been increasing about 3 percent a month since with dialysis and transfusions. His sensitivity level reached 85 percent in July. If it reaches 100 percent, Ryan will be critically ill and there is a good chance that a transplanted organ would be rejected. Such a high sensitivity also makes finding a proper match more difficult even though Ryan's blood type—AB positive—makes him a better candidate. Even more frustrating is the fact that both of Ryan's parents have been tested to see if they could themselves donate a kidney and neither was a proper match for Ryan.

As the days go by, so do Ryan's chances of a successful transplant operation. Normal 24-hour flue bugs and colds turn into an emergency ambulance run to Pittsburgh.

Friends have launched a letter-writing campaign as the search for a kidney for 5-year-old Ryan becomes more desperate. More recently, Arnold Palmer, the world renowned golf-pro, came to the aid of the Mickinaks in an effort to spare the life of this fine child.

As with all transplant surgery, costs are astronomical and have currently exceeded a quarter of a million dollars which is well beyond the means of any ordinary family. But the Mickinaks will make every effort to pay their debts because, as Richard put it, "We consider our debts to be a matter of honor."

But money is not the major concern; the Mickinaks are after something far more precious, and that is the gift of life.

Mr. Speaker, I implore my colleagues to come to the aid of this desperate and loving family. Their devotion to Ryan to relentless and venerable.

We must all join in the struggle to save Ryan's life for we all have someone special who is so close to us that they are a part of us. No one can ignore the love of a mother for her child. We cannot deny her plea for salvation.

If anyone would like to send a kind word of support or is aware of a possible donor organ, you may contact Betty and Richard Mickinak at: P.O. Box 25, Rector, PA, 15677.

I thank the Speaker and my esteemed colleagues for their efforts and attention to this most urgent matter. Your actions could very well have saved the life of one child and cleared the path for others to follow. Thank you.●

THE VIRGINIA JAYCEES

HON. HERBERT H. BATEMAN

OF VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. BATEMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to the Virginia Jaycees, an organization I am proud to have served as a local president, national director, and as State president. I was also honored to have served as general legal counsel of the U.S. Jaycees. I take even greater pride in sharing with my colleagues news of the great distinction the Virginia Jaycees have earned this year.

The Virginia Jaycees were recently named the No. 1 State organization in the U.S. Jaycees. This is the first time this has happened in the 46 years that the Virginia Jaycees have been providing leadership training through community service to communities throughout Virginia. It is an honor that is justly deserved.

Each year, the nearly 8,000 members of the Virginia Jaycees give of their time and effort to serve their 169 communities in ways which make a meaningful contribution to their areas and leave a lasting, and positive impact on those people that are served, and in the process provides leadership training to its members. Those of us who are former Jaycees recognize this as the overriding mission on the Jaycee organization.

I want to offer my sincere congratulations to Virginia Jaycee President Wally Owings and all of the Virginia Jaycees for this great achievement. Keep your enthusiasm and your momentum on the rise for the remainder of the Jaycee year, and surely you will proudly lead the parade of States at the next annual convention of the U.S. Jaycees in Indianapolis.

I wish the Jaycees from all over the country great success as they meet in Washington this week for their governmental affairs leadership seminar.

Well done Jaycees. Keep up your good work. America needs the good works performed by its Jaycees and the enrichment of our national leadership produced by the Jaycees.●

TRIBUTE TO PATRICK C. MUDD

HON. ROY DYSON

OF MARYLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. DYSON. Mr. Speaker, one of my constituents, Patrick C. Mudd, is retiring after 38 years as clerk of the court in Charles County in southern Maryland. I'd like to take this opportunity to recall Pat's long and distinguished service to the county and to congratulate him on a job well done.

Patrick became a deputy clerk on October 23, 1946, to Thomas B.R. Mudd, his cousin. On November 6, 1946, Patrick was elected to the clerk's job after Thomas decided not to seek another term. The job paid $3,600 and Pat recalled that $300 a month looked pretty good back then.

Pat's office was small and furnished, he remembers, with a "pull-chain light bulb out of the ceiling, some mangled typewriters and an old adding machine." A vault separated his office from the register of wills office.

Today, the clerks office functions much as it did when Pat was still new at the job. The clerk is still responsible for issuing licenses, recording deeds, taking charge of the jury and issuing summons. In Pat's day, the clerk's office also performed naturalization ceremonies for people who came to the country after World War I.

Pat remembers that one cement mason seeking citizenship was asked to name the No. 1 baseball slugger. Instead of naming Babe Ruth, the man said, "ole Mouse Langley can hit as many as anybody," referring to a local baseball star.

"It has always been a challenge. It has been a pleasant, enjoyable job and I have just enjoyed every bit of it. This has been my life," Pat said recently. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to share the outstanding service of this public servant with my colleagues and warmly congratulate Patrick C. "Pat" Mudd on his retirement.●

NANSEN MEDAL AWARD WINNERS

HON. ROBERT J. LAGOMARSINO

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, I wish to extend my congratulations to the three U.S. Seamen, Capt. Lewis H. Miller, Jeff Kass, and Greg Turay, who have been awarded the Nansen Medal by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees for their heroic rescue of 85 Vietnamese boat people.

I ask that my colleagues join with me in applauding the outstanding service these men have performed. We can all be proud of this heroic accomplishment.●

JOE AND SALLY WOLF'S 50TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

HON. GARY L. ACKERMAN

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. ACKERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask my colleagues in the U.S. House of Representatives to join with me in commemorating the 50th wedding anniversary of Joseph and Sally Wolf of New York.

The Wolfs will celebrate their anniversary on October 13, 1984. Their story is one of success and of the American dream realized.

Joe emigrated to the United States from Poland as a youngster more than 60 years ago. He didn't come to America expecting a handout or to be taken care of. He and Sally set to the task of building a life for themselves with the tools of hard work, faith, and love. Their perseverance has yielded rich rewards. Joe and Sally now have a beautiful family. Their daughter, Evelyn, and her husband, Michael Rokito, have three lovely children—Alyssa, Steven, and Andrew. The Wolfs' daughter, Gilda, and her husband Richard Schwartz, have two wonderful children, Marni and Penny. Joe and Sally also add to the American economy as the owners of several businesses, including the International Newspapers Printing Co., Inc.

The Wolfs are active in their community and their synagogue, concerning themselves with the needs and problems of those around them. They are hard working, generous, and deeply respected members of society. Mr. Speaker, a 50th wedding anniversary is a joyous occasion and a testimony to the union of the lives of two people, bound together by a single purpose—50 years that have weathered hard times and bounty, sorrows and triumps, and many, many years of growth and change.

Joe and Sally Wolf have reason to be proud on this momentous day. Their hard work and determination has given them precious gifts: a beautiful family, countless friends, and the esteem of their fellows.

They have given to others freely all of their lives, and now their family and friends are surprising them with an anniversary celebration.

Mr. Speaker, the spirit of charity and generosity the Wolfs have shown for these many years is an inspiration to all of us—to those who have come to the United Sates seeking a better life, and to those born in our great Nation who hold dear the values of family, community service, and extending a hand to others in need.

As two people face the rigors of life together, their commitment and ideals are severely tested. Joe and Sally's 50th wedding anniversary is a shining example of hope and a clear message that the test can be faced and that obstacles can be hurdled.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues in the U.S. Congress to take this moment with me to wish Joe and Sally Wolf joy and prosperity on this eventful day.●

STOP WASTEFUL SPENDING

HON. PETER H. KOSTMAYER

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. KOSTMAYER. Mr. Speaker, today the House has the chance to save the taxpayers millions of dollars by voting to prevent the construction of a $100 million jetty to be built at Oregon Inlet, NC. I support the Seiberling amendment to delete the authorization for this project and urge the House to trim wasteful Government spending by approving this legislation.

I had the opportunity to thoroughly review into the request for Federal funds for this project during consideration of the legislation in the Public Lands Subcommittee, on which I serve. It was clear then, as it is now, that there is little justification to warrant such an expense.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers admitted that their first economic justification study overestimated benefits by 70 percent. The resulting benefit/cost ratio was 0.34/1.0. In other words, for every tax dollar spent, the country would receive 34 cents in benefits. Not one of my constituents would invest their savings this way and I do not intend to see their tax money spent in this way either. It is not surprising that this project is opposed by numerous groups including the National Taxpayers Union.

The new economic justification report by the Corps of Engineers double counts benefits, overstates estimated increase in fish landings of currently harvested species, and incorrectly attributes loss of life and ships to inlet conditions rather than human error.

While the tragedy of losing eight sailors over the past 15 years cannot be overlooked, a Coast Guard analysis of the shipwrecks determined that factors other than inlet conditions contributed to these accidents such as "A captain's unfamiliarity with the channel, the absence of a searchlight, and a boat with a history of engine and radio problems."

No one can argue in favor of risking life and limb if there's a way to prevent doing so. There are a variety of dredging options that would create safer conditions at a fraction of the cost of the jetties while preserving the environmental integrity of the area.

I urge my colleagues to reject funding for this unnecessary project and save the already-overburdened taxpayers $100 million.●

HOUSE JOINT RESOLUTION 392, NATIONAL PEARL HARBOR REMEMBRANCE DAY

HON. NORMAN SISISKY

OF VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. SISISKY. Mr. Speaker, on October 20, 1983, I introduced legislation designating December 7, 1984 "National Pearl Harbor Remembrance Day." I am very pleased to note that this resolution passed the House of Representatives on Wednesday, September 12, 1984 with the support of 234 cosponsors. Nationwide, this legislation has the support of the Pearl Harbor Survivors Association, a group of more than 9,000 who survived the attack on Pearl Harbor.

One member of the Survivors Association, Mr. Chester John Millman, deserves special praise for his efforts in promoting this legislation in Congress. Sadly, however, Mr. Millman died this past Monday—2 days before this resolution passed in the House—while attending a reunion of Pearl Harbor survivors. Mr. Millman was a remarkable individual who was very active in political life. As evidence of this, he personally called every Member of Congress to promote this legislation. He believed in and practiced the principles of democracy, knowing that his voice was important and that it made a difference. I am sorry that Mr. Millman was unable to witness the passing of this resolution by the House, but he will be fondly remembered by me and the rest of this Nation on December 7, 1984.

The designation of "National Pearl Harbor Rememberance Day" will cause the public to commemorate with proper solemnity and activities this important date in American history. It is fitting that we as a Nation honor the memory of the 2,400 citizens of the United States that were killed in the unprovoked attack on Pearl Harbor, an attack which marked the entry of this Nation into World War II.

We owe a tremendous debt of gratitude to all members of our Armed Forces who served both at Pearl Harbor and in all theaters of action during World War II. The designation of December 7, 1984, as "National Pearl Harbor Remembrance Day," will be one small way for the American people to express our thanks to those who did not survive the attack and to all members of the Armed Forces, who protect and defend this Nation.

Most importantly, "National Pearl Harbor Remembrance Day" will commemorate a day that has important historical lessons—lessons about defense preparedness and about strong resolve to defend this Nation from future aggression. It is, as President Franklin Delano Roosevelt once stated, "a day that will live in infamy," and it is important that we honor such a day.●

NATIONAL CHARTER FOR THE RETIRED ENLISTED ASSOCIATION

HON. KEN KRAMER

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing a bill to grant a national charter to the Retired Enlisted Association. A companion bill is being introduced in the other body today by my Colorado delegation colleague, Senator BILL ARMSTRONG.

It gives me great pleasure to offer legislation to give national recognition to this fine organization, which is headquartered in my district. Founded over 21 years ago, the Retired Enlisted Association is a nonprofit military veterans' organization that is dedicated to a strong national defense, the professional and cultural well-being of its members, and promotion of understanding and cooperation between the military and civilian communities.

A national charter for this outstanding group will give much-deserved recognition to the contributions to the defense of our Nation by enlisted retirees during their long years of military service and their continuing devotion to our country. I hope all my colleagues on both sides of the isle will join me in support of this legislation.

Thank you.●

POLISH GOVERNMENT-IN-EXILE CONTINUES TO PROVIDE HOPE TO POLES

HON. BERNARD J. DWYER

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. DWYER of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, it is with a great deal of pride and respect that I rise today to bring before my colleagues a resolution, submitted to me by the Polish National Council. From October 12, through October 23, His Excellency, Prime Minister Kazimierz Sabbat, the leader of the Polish Government-in-exile, based in London, will be making a good will visit to the United States.

In the Sixth District of New Jersey, we are proud to have a substantial population of Polish descent. They are dedicated and hard-working people, good Americans who are proud of their heritage.

It is a pleasure for me to be able to share this resolution with my colleagues today. I urge all of you to reflect carefully on the words here, because they represent years of struggle—a struggle which will not be ended until it is won.

The resolution follows:

RESOLUTION HONORING THE GOOD WILL VISIT OF HIS EXCELLENCY, THE HONORABLE KAZIMIERZ SABBAT, PRIME MINISTER OF THE POLISH GOVERNMENT IN EXILE, LONDON, TO THE UNITED STATES, DURING OCT. 12 TO OCT. 23, 1984

Whereas the present Polish Government-in-Exile in London is the direct and lawfully constitutional successor to the pre-World War II Polish Government; and

Whereas this legal and legitimate Polish Government-in-Exile still functions in London as a beacon of hope for the politically subjugated people of Poland; and

Whereas Poland had been ruthlessly invaded and attacked in 1939 by both Nazi Germany and Soviet Russia; and

Whereas the Poles, during the ensuing war, had continued their resistance both at home with their Underground Resistance Army and abroad with their Polish Armed Forces in Exile, fighting valiantly on far-extended battlefields with the Allied Forces, meanwhile incurring inordinate losses of manpower in combat assignments in Norway, the Battle of France, Belgium, Holland, North Africa, in their heroic and successful assault and capture of Nazi-held Monte Cassino in Italy and elsewhere; and

Whereas the Polish Underground Army, in conjunction with its indomitable leadership, has responded to the "deluge of bestiality" inflicted upon Poland during five-years of German occupation by supplying political and military intelligence to the Polish Government-in-Exile and conducting sabotage, guerrilla and open warfare; and

Whereas the Polish Armed Forces in Exile, at the end of the war in May, 1945, totalled more than 220,000 personnel in active service; and

Whereas these Polish Armed Forces in Exile who were then under the jurisdiction and control of the Polish Free Government in England and whose disproportionate share of heavy casualties on the field of battle was a factor in lessening the number of American military casualties in that war; and

Whereas agents of the Polish Underground Army with great ingenuity and daring had successfully smuggled out of Nazi-controlled Poland the Ultra Secret Enigma Decoding Machine, used by the Germans, and delivered it intact to the Allied Forces in England, thus providing the Allies with the only means to decode the secretly-coded German messages and military communications, thus contributing substantially to Germany's ultimate defeat and surrender, and

Whereas a Polish agent under instructions of the Free Polish Government had successfully conveyed the misleading notion to the Nazi military command in France, just before the June 4, 1944 landings at the Normandy beaches, that those initial landings were only diversionary feints and that the major, full-sized Allied landings would take place two weeks later in the area Pas de Calais, resulting in the retention of many German Armed Forces in the reserve area, thus weakening the force of the German counterattack on the Normandy beaches and contributing meaningfully to the success of the Allied invasion; and

Whereas the Polish Government-in-Exile had authorized the Warsaw Uprising in 1944 in the expectation that the approaching Soviet troops would act in concert with the determined but poorly armed Warsaw Resistance Army and had experienced another betrayal by the Kremlin inasmuch as the Soviet Army stopped its advance upon Warsaw and stood by while the Nazi Armed Forces mercilessly stamped out the Warsaw Uprising with unparalleled ferocity; and

Whereas the anguished pleas of the Polish Government-in-Exile for military materiel and medical supplies to be immediately flown and dropped by parachute for the relief of the beleaguered Warsaw Resistance fighters by American bombers were callously and treacherously rejected by the Russian Government; and

Whereas the Polish Government-in-Exile had always honorably discharged its responsibilities to the American, British and French Allies, it, however, was abandoned by these same Allies when the Kremlin ordered the installation of a puppet Polish Government in contravention of the Yalta Pact of February, 1945; and

Whereas for more than two centuries there has been a bond of sentiment and the leaven of friendship between the peoples of the United States and Poland;

Let it therefore be resolved that:

Proper recognition, cordial greetings and a sincere welcome be given to His Excellency, the Honorable Kazimierz Sabbat, Prime Minister of the Polish Government-in-Exile in London, who will be visiting Polish-American communities during mid-October, 1984 as the honored guest of the Polish National Council, U.S.A. Division (Rada Narodowa R. P. na Emigracji, Oddzial w Ameryce) whose President is Dr. Jerzy J. Lerski, Professor Emeritus.

Let it further be resolved that:

The Third Plenary session of the Polish National Council in America be held at Z.P.A. Crystal Ballroom of the United Poles of America, 281 Grace St., Perth Amboy, N.J., on October 20 and 21, 1984 to honor Prime Minister Sabbat. Arrangements for that session have been made by Gen. Jan K. Krepa, Vice President of the Polish National Council, and the Hon. Adam J. Zamoyski, Secretary of the Council. Dr. Charles Allan Baretski, another Council member and historian and educator of Newark, N.J., was authorized to research and draft the text of the Resolution to honor Prime Minister Sabbat's visit to America in October, 1984. Council President Dr. Jerzy J. Lerski will preside as Chairman at the Second Plenary Session of the Council. Visiting New Jersey the Prime Minister will aslo be a guest of Polish American Congress, New Jersey Division whose President is Hon. Reinhold W. Smyczek, N.J. Commissioner of Civil Rights; and Polish National Fund of New Jersey with its President Hon. Wladyslaw Sosulski, Member of the Polish National Council●

REPRESENTATIVE MILLER SALUTES BOCCE BALL REVIVAL

HON. GEORGE MILLER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, the World Cup Bocce Ball championship is being held this year in Split, Yugoslavia, and I am delighted that a number of my constituents from Contra Costa Couny, CA, are going to represent the United States at that event.

I know that all Members of the House of Representatives will join me in saluting Leo Moro, Gaetano Balestrieri, Joe Avina, Ken Dothee, and Donna Endom and wish them the very best of luck in the World Cup. I also would like to congratulate the other members of the U.S. delegation, including Leno Freschet, Bruno Freschet, Natale Bortolin, and Adriano Undorte.

As an avid bocce ball player myself, and the sponsor of George's team of the Matinez, CA, Bocce Federation, I am delighted by the current revival in this venerable game which has long been an important part of Italian heritage for centuries. Today, bocce is being played throughout the world in record numbers. Players include men, women, and children who are participating in tournaments and as family events.

Bocce transcends national boundaries, as shown by the upcoming international tournament in Split. On behalf of the Congress, I want to wish the very best of luck to our American representatives to the World Cup championships—particularly our Contra Costa participants—and to express our gratitude to the people of Split and the Yugoslavian Bocce Federation for sponsoring these games. We wish them all a very successful tournament.●

SECRETARY SHULTZ' STATEMENT ON THE INTERNATIONAL ASPECTS OF NARCOTICS TRAFFICKING

HON. BENJAMIN A. GILMAN

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, under the leadership of the distinguished chairman of the Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control [Mr. RANGEL], of which I serve as the ranking minority member, our chairman and I, along with the gentleman from Hawaii [Mr. AKAKA], the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. GUARINI], both of whom are also members of the select committee, and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. FEIGHAN], who is the chairman of the Foreign Affairs Task Force on International Narcotics Control, of which I am also the ranking member, recently met with our Secretary of State, George P. Shultz, to discuss, among other issues, the Narcotics Select Committee's report of its 1984 international study missions and our concerns that the Secretary of State should elevate international drug-related issues to a top priority on his agenda and on the agendas of our Ambassadors throughout the world.

The Secretary informed us that he planned to deliver a major address on the international dimensions of narcotics trafficking and on September 14 he delivered an address on narcotics before the Miami Chamber of Commerce in Florida entitled "The Campaign Against Drugs: the International Convention."

This is the first time that our Secretary of State has devoted an entire speech to the problems of international narcotics trafficking. I applaud him for his statement and urge him to make international drug-related issues a center piece for our Nation's foreign policy.

Given the magnitude of the drug problem—it is a $100 billion activity just in our country alone—and the ruthlessness of narcotics traffickers who undermine the political, economic, and social institutions of nations throughout the world, international narcotics trafficking and drug abuse can no longer be relegated to a back burner of our foreign policy; rather, it must become a major ingredient in our Nation's efforts to combat the highly sophisticated, well-financed, international narcotic syndicates who have now linked their illicit enterprises to international terrorists to subvert law and order in nations throughout the world.

Mr. Speaker, in an effort to inform my colleagues of Secretary Shultz's statement on international narcotics trafficking, I am inserting at this point in the RECORD the complete text of Secretary Shultz's statement, and I encourage him to continue to speak out against this evil menace that is creating so much havoc for the entire family of nations.

THE CAMPAIGN AGAINST DRUGS: THE INTERNATIONAL DIMENSION

I speak today about a problem that directly or indirectly affects the well-being of all Americans. That problem is narcotics. And I would like to discuss, in particular, the large international dimension of the problem and what we are doing to confront it.

All of you know well what narcotics are doing to our cities and our society. In Miami, in New York, in Chicago, Detroit, Los Angeles, in Washington—indeed in almost every American city—we see the drug problem in our streets and learn about it daily in our media. We see it preying on our nation's youth. We see it eroding families and communities. We see the crime it brings—the murders, the robberies, and the organized crime rings who have made it such a lucrative business. We see it destroying lives indiscriminately—rich and poor, black and white, young and old. We can measure the costs of drug abuse in many ways—in lost productivity, in escalating health and social costs, and most profoundly, in the senseless waste of life.

We see the drug problem in its enormity and sometimes we wonder how it can possibly be addressed. I will not stand before you and say that there are simple solutions. Nor, clearly, can solutions be found solely through governmental actions. Drug abuse is one of the lingering symptoms of a deeper social and cultural phenomenon: the weakening of the traditional values of family and community and religious faith that we have suffered for some time in Western society.

Our Founding Fathers created a system of government that could protect the rights and freedoms of the individual. But they deeply believed that something more was needed to protect the spiritual health of the nation. The carefully constructed edifice of a free society had to be buttressed by an enduring public and private morality. And the Founders also believed that upholding this morality was not primarily the role of government, but of our educational, religious and social institutions, our families and communities.

So when we look at the nation's drug problems, we must bear in mind that government does not have all the answers. Technical solutions devised by public officials cannot alone repair this loose strand in our society's moral fabric. In our public life we must restore the faith in family, church, and community that has kept democracy strong for over two centuries.

I believe such a restoration is occurring. Faith in these institutions is returning. And we can see this even in the nation's changing attitudes toward the drug problem. Today, there is a spreading consensus across America that drug abuse is not fashionable; it is immoral. We have rejected the fatalistic view that drug abuse as a national phenomenon is here to stay. Parents, community organizations, educational and religious institutions are heeding President Reagan's call "to join the battle against drug abuse."

THE FEDERAL STRATEGY

Government, of course, must do its part, with energy and determination. As you know, this Administration has made the reduction of national drug abuse one of its highest priorities. We have worked hard to devise new ways to attack the problem on all fronts. President Reagan has called drug abuse "one of the gravest problems facing us," and at his direction this Administration has set forth a comprehensive Federal Strategy for the Prevention of Drug Abuse and Drug Trafficking. This Federal Strategy has five central components that attack the problem at every link of the chain that extends from the grower to the user of narcotics. We have devised extensive programs for:

First, prevention, which includes educating our youth about the dangers of drugs,

Second, detoxification and treatment for drug abusers,

Third, research aimed at understanding the causes and consequences of drug abuse,

Fourth, drug law enforcement to destroy drug networks and interdict drug supplies before they reach the consumers, and Fifth, international cooperation to control the production and shipment of narcotics.

This five-point strategy adds up to an aggressive approach to this multifaceted problem. And we are pursuing each path with great vigor.

You are all aware of what this Administration has been doing to address the domestic aspects of our drug problem. The First Lady has made it her personal crusade to educate our youth on the dangers of drugs, and Nancy Reagan's valiant efforts have given great impetus to this dimension of national prevention. Vice President Bush has played the leading role in improving our domestic drug interdiction efforts.

As you know, he is the head of the South Florida Task Force, and he is also the head of the National Narcotics Border Interdiction System. These and other efforts have shown encouraging results on the domestic side of the problem. It should be clear that demand helps create supply, and we cannot expect to meet the challenge of drug abuse without doing all we can to reduce the demand for drugs here at home.

THE INTERNATIONAL DIMENSION

It is equally clear, however, that we cannot meet the challenge of drug abuse here at home without also attacking the worldwide network of narcotics production and trafficking. I want you to know that drug abuse is not only a top priority for this Administration's domestic policy. It is a top priority in our foreign policy as well.

Every year, drug traffickers smuggle into this country four metric tons of heroin; as much as 70 metric tons of cocaine; and as much as 15,000 metric tons of marijuana. These drugs come from all over the world: from Colombia, Peru, Bolivia, Mexico, Belize, Jamaica, Pakistan, Afghanistan, Iran, Thailand, and Burma. Once the crops are produced in these countries they are often shipped elsewhere for processing, and then in their refined narcotic form are shipped again to local suppliers in Western Europe, the United States, and throughout the industrialized world.

Drug money is laundered in international financial markets. Middle-men are hired to smuggle the drugs past customs officials and the Coast Guard. It is a smooth and ever-more efficient operation that is truly an international effort.

Our concern about this growing narcotics network is twofold. I have already noted its severe impact on our own people. But it also represents a threat to American interests of a different sort. The fact is, it is an example of a larger, and relatively new kind of foreign policy problem that confronts the civilized world today. It is part of a trend toward international lawlessness that has been increasing ominously over the past two decades.

This trend harkens back to the days when piracy on the seas was rampant, when the civilized nations of the world were unable or unwilling to combat it systematically. The modern versions of piracy are narcotics trafficking, terrorism, and similar kinds of outlaw behavior. Not surprisingly, there is ample evidence that shows that all these different types of lawlessness are linked. Money from drug smuggling supports terrorists. Terrorists provide assistance to drug traffickers. Organized crime works hand in hand with these other outlaws for their own profit. And what may be most disturbing is the mounting evidence that some governments are involved, too, for their own diverse reasons. There are demonstrable links between drug trafficking, terrorism, and some Communist governments, which I will come back to in a moment.

The civilized world faces, therefore, not just separate and isolated incidents of violence and banditry, but a systemic, global problem of growing proportions. And this global problem poses a unique—and deliberate—challenge to the world order that Americans and all civilized peoples seek: a world order based on justice and the rule of law.

Novel problems require fresh thinking, new tools, and new approaches. You have my personal pledge that the Department of State is committed to this effort. We have been working closely with federal drug enforcement agencies on new ways of dealing with the growing narcotics problem on an international level. And we do so not only to fight the calamity of domestic drug abuse, but to fight the growing threat of international lawlessness as well.

MEETING THE CHALLENGE

To meet the challenge of international nacotics trafficking requires, above all, international cooperation between those nations that share our concern about this growing threat to our society.

During this Administration we have gone beyond all previous efforts to promote international cooperation on narcotics control. In September 1981, President Reagan laid out our objectives. He called for "a foreign policy that vigorously seeks to interdict and eradicate illicit drugs, wherever cultivated, processed or transported." American officials at the highest levels, including President Reagan, Vice President Bush and myself, our Ambassadors and senior State Department officials, have continually emphasized to foreign leaders the importance we attach to their cooperation on the narcotics issue. We have placed our greatest emphasis on reaching bilateral agreements on crop control, eradication, and interdiction with nations where narcotics are produced, shipped, and consumed. We have also worked hard in the United Nations to support international efforts to stem the flow of drugs and reduce production.

Many nations, concerned as we are with the drug problem, have taken significant steps. In Colombia, an aerial herbicide eradication program that began July 5 has destroyed more than 4200 acres of marijuana, a truly major breakthrough in the global control effort. This initial effort alone could keep nearly $3 billion worth of marijuana off our streets—and the Colombian program has just started.

In Peru, despite the threat of terrorism, authorities have eradicated nearly 5,000 acres of coca bushes, used to produce cocaine; in fact, the government has recently sent its military forces into the coca-growing region. We are working with other South American governments to prevent the spread of drug production into new source areas.

In Asia, the government of Pakistan continues to extend its ban on cultivation of opium poppy into additional areas of the Northwest Frontier Province, and it has reported sharply increased seizures of heroin in the first quarter of 1984. And this month, Pakistani officials seized 163 kilograms of opium and 20 kilograms of heroin in one raid on a heroin laboratory. The Thai government has increased its commitment to controlling opium cultivation in villages that receive development assistance. The Burmese government is exploring with us more systematic methods of eradication.

All told, we will be spending over $100 million on worldwide narcotics control programs in 1985.

We know the difficulties involved in reducing crop production. In many producer countries, narcotics production is or has become an important fact of everyday life.

There are parts of the world where opium and coca are used as part of centuries-old traditions, and of course, many nations have growing addiction problems of their own, which encourage narcotics production. Finally, many producer countries are just too poor to mount effective crop control and eradication programs.

Our international narcotics policies are aimed at overcoming these obstacles. We are providing bilateral assistance in 1984 to 18 governments whose expertise or resources are insufficient to meet the challenge of crop reduction. We have encouraged multilateral assistance through the United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control and other international organizations. The Department of State has worked with the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration, the Customs Service, and the Coast Guard to provide training to foreign governments in narcotics control, enforcement, and interdiction. Since 1971, we have provided funds to train more than 25,000 foreign enforcement officers, and in 1985 we will provide more funds to train an additional 2,000 officers in 30 different countries. We have also tried to help foreign governments alert their publics to the threat that drug abuse poses to their societies.

But the toughest challenge we faced until recently was simply convincing other nations that narcotics trafficking is an international problem that requires international efforts. For a long time, foreign governments considered narcotics an exclusively American problem. Today, that is changing.

In Colombia, to take one example, the Minister of Health has declared that drug addiction is the greatest health threat to Colombian youth, and Colombia law enforcement agencies have responded with commendable vigor. In March the Colombian police discovered vast, complex cocaine processing facilities hidden in the Amazon jungle. In one case, ten tons of cocaine and cocaine base, with a street value of over $1 billion, were destroyed. Colombian public opinion was shocked at the discovery of these drug camps, some of which were operating side by side with guerrilla camps. They were outraged by the subsequent assassination of Colombia's Minister of Justice, apparently ordered by the drug traffickers. Colombia's President Betancur has ordered an all-out war on the narcotics traffic.

Other nations have come painfully to realize that narcotics is their problem, too, and that only through international cooperation can the world community hope to combat the international narcotics network. The leaders of the Andean nations and Argentina, meeting in Quito last month, expressed to Vice President Bush their deep concern over the problems caused by narcotics production and trafficking in their region.

Encouraged by the sense of urgency in their appeal and their willingness to work together, we are responding with specific proposals to strengthen regional cooperation on drug law enforcement, communications, and information-sharing.

Several important and distressing developments have contributed to this growing international awareness.

In Western Europe, and in the countries where narcotics are produced, drug addiction has begun to assume alarming proportions. The crime that inevitably accompanies increased drug abuse has begun to arouse popular anger even in countries traditionally tolerant of drug use. And, in some countries, the increased corruption that results from influence-peddling by organized crime and major drug smugglers has become a national calamity threatening the stability and continued survival of the governments themselves.

Narcotics trafficking poses a special threat to democratic nations in the developing world. Where democratic institutions and legal systems are in their infancy, the corruption and crime brought on by narcotics trafficking can be too much for the government to handle. Their stark choice may be between resorting to undemocratic measures on the one hand, or capitulating to criminals on the other. In either case, the result may be loss of public faith in democratic institutions. Elected leaders, such as those in Bolivia, Colombia, and Peru, recognize the dangers that narcotics trafficking poses to democracy itself.

Add to all this the fact that narcotics trafficking is undermining the integrity of international financial centers. According to some estimates, the drug trade may involve up to $80 billion each year; and drug money is often laundered through otherwise respectable financial institutions, including the offshore banking centers of the Caribbean basin, and in Europe, Hong Kong, and Singapore.

And finally, as I mentioned, international concern has been reinforced by the realization that narcotics traffickers, terrorists, and Communist revolutionaries increasingly make common cause in their separately destructive activities. I would like to take a few moments to elaborate on what we have learned about this disturbing interrelationship in recent years.

THE LINKS WITH TERRORISM AND COMMUNIST INSURGENCIES

For years, the world had good reason to suspect that narcotics smugglers were being aided by some governments: that they were getting money and protection, that they were being provided safe havens and support in shipping drugs to the United States and elsewhere. One of the most prominent suspects was Communist Cuba.

Over the years, the case against Cuba mounted until, finally, in November 1982, four high-level Cuban officials were indicted by a Miami grand jury for helping a major Colombian narcotics trafficker. That case provided startling evidence of Cuban complicity in Latin American narcotics trafficking.

According to evidence revealed in the course of that investigation, a Colombian drug smuggler, Jaime Guillot Laura, was recruited by Cuba's Ambassador to Colombia. The Ambassador offered Cuban government help in smuggling drugs to the United States. Cuban waters were provided as a safe haven for the transfer of narcotics to boats bound for Miami. Certain Cuban authorities were instructed to leave Guillot and his men alone while they went about their business. In return, the Cuban government received payments, in hard cash, of hundreds of thousands of dollars.

But there was another element in this elaborate deal. In return for help with his drug-smuggling racket, Guillot participated in a plan to provide weapons to the M-19, a terrorist group that operates in Colombia.

The pattern, long suspected, was finally and clearly established. Cuba was using drug smugglers to funnel arms to terrorists and Communist insurgents. And Cuba's involvement is not unique.

Later evidence has shown that the Sandinista regime in Nicaragua has also been involved in drug-smuggling activities. To facilitate his safe travel through Central America, Guillot was granted a Nicaraguan visa by Nicaragua's Ambassador to Mexico, apparently on the request of an M-19 leader.

Recent investigations by the Drug Enforcement Administration have revealed the extent of continuing Sandinista involvement. On July 17, the U.S. Government filed a complaint in the U.S. District Court in Miami charging two Colombians and a Nicaraguan official—Frederico Vaughan, an assistant to Interior Minister Tomas Borge—with possession, conspiracy to distribute, and importation of cocaine. Between March and July 1984, these men conspired to smuggle a shipment of about 1,500 kilograms of cocaine from Colombia to the United States through Nicaragua. Interior Minister Borge's assistant helped load this cocaine shipment onto a U.S.-bound plane on June 4. The drug traffickers were allowed to park their aircraft in the military side of Managua airport, and we have photographs that show Sandinista troops helping the traffickers load the cocaine onto the plane. All these facts suggest that other Nicaraguan officials in addition to Vaughan participated in the drug-smuggling plot.

The complicity of Communist governments in the drug trade is cause for grave concern among the nations of the free world.

It is part of a larger pattern of international lawlessness by Communist nations that, as we have seen, also includes support for international terrorism and other forms of organized violence against legitimate governments. Nor is the link between narcotics, terrorism, and Communism confined to Latin America. We have seen such networks in Italy and Turkey, though both governments have cracked down hard with remarkable success. Similar networks currently operate in Burma and Thailand. And we have evidence of Bulgarian complicity in the illicit arms and drug smuggling business.

We can only speculate as to the motives for Communist involvement in the drug trade. We know that with their failing economies, Cuba and Nicaragua need hard cash to buy essential goods. We have seen how Cuba uses drug smugglers to funnel arms to Communist insurgencies and terrorists. And it is not hard to imagine that smuggling massive amounts of drugs into Western nations may serve their broader goal of attempting to weaken the fabric of Western democratic society.

I am not suggesting that if we were able to end Communist support for the international narcotics network, our drug problems would be over, or even that they would be substantially reduced. Clearly the problem is much bigger than that. But as we look toward solutions to the problem of drug abuse, the free world cannot ignore the role of Communist governments.

And I would suggest that the implications of their involvement in this form of international lawlessness go beyond the drug problem. Government support for outlaws cannot be tolerated by the civilized nations if we are to build a world order based on law and justice.

WHAT THE REAGAN ADMINISTRATION HAS ACCOMPLISHED

The hurdles we face in confronting this problem are many, but we have made significant strides in recent years. Our international narcotics policy has rested on four basic principles:

First, countries where narcotics are produced or through which drugs are shipped must accept their responsibilities under international treaties to reduce crops and interdict drug smuggling.

Second, the international community must assist those nations that lack the resources to take the necessary steps.

Third, world-wide emphasis must be on crop control and eradication—we have seen that interdiction alone is not the answer.

And fourth, in producer nations that need our help, our narcotics-related economic assistance must be linked to agreements on reducing crop levels.

Our goal must be to control narcotics production in all geographic areas simultaneously. We have learned the hard way that markets shift to meet demand; we cannot focus on only a few areas at a time. When we helped reduce heroin production in Turkey, for example, increased production in Mexico filled the gap. A truly international effort aimed at all producer nations is essential. And we are moving down that path.

In 1981, when this Administration took office, we had commitments to work on reducing narcotics crops from Burma, Turkey, and Mexico. Today, thanks to this Administration's efforts and to the growing concern of leaders in producer countries, we also have commitments from Pakistan, Colombia, Belize, Peru, and Bolivia. In Pakistan, the world's leading supplier of heroin, we have seen tremendous results. Thanks in part to the extraordinary efforts of the Pakistani government and to U.S. assistance, raw opium production has been reduced from a massive 800 metric tons per year in 1979 to under 60 metric tons per year in 1983. Mexico's production of processed heroin, once as high as 7.5 metric tons per year, was reduced to 1.4 metric tons in 1983.

WHAT REMAINS TO BE DONE

Much has been done, and we are only beginning the fight. Obviously, we still have a long way to go. Some countries have not done enough to reduce their crop levels. We must seek greater cooperation and increased effectiveness in reducing cultivation in all of the producer nations. Overall crop production still provides a surplus of narcotics that greatly exceeds not only American but worldwide demand.

And we know that the international narcotics network is larger, more efficient, and more sophisticated than ever before. The narcotics market is an ever-shifting phenomenon that adapts to each new method we devise to confront it. Drug smugglers have managed to find new ways of smuggling to elude our stepped-up efforts. Finally, we have seen that some Communist nations continue to use the drug trade for their own purposes and, therefore, have an interest in its perpetuation. The international drug problem, therefore, presents an increasing challenge to our intelligence community to provide good estimates of narcotics production and trace the links between drugs, terrorism, and Communist insurgencies.

But we are making progress. We have a policy in place that addresses all aspects of the international problem—the cultivation, production, and distribution of drugs, the flow of profits, the impacts upon other countries as well as our own. And we have developed broad-based international support for controlling the narcotics trade.

I believe that our diplomatic and program efforts, together with the increasing awareness in producer countries of the disastrous effects of the drug trade, are improving the prospects of narcotics control.

But these substantial successes can be severely damaged by perceptions overseas about what is happening in the United States. To a greater degree than many people realize, our success in international narcotics control is dependent on the success of our assault on drug abuse at home. It will be hard to convince other nations to put an end to drug cultivation if they believe we are not living up to our own responsibility to get a grip on the drug problem here. We cannot preach what we do not practice.

This is why what we do here and throughout our own country is so important to our overall efforts. The officials in every community across this nation must understand that effective foreign policies of narcotics control are clearly linked to an effective domestic program against drug abuse.

And we must recognize that our national campaign against drug abuse rests ultimately on our ability to reduce the demand for drugs here in the United States.

By redoubling our efforts throughout this country, we send a message to people in other countries, and to their governments, that we in the United States intend to control our own drug abuse problem.

President Reagan has designated the last week of September as National Drug Abuse Education and Prevention Week. The President is determined to lead this effort, for the narcotics problem poses a direct threat to this nation's values and goals, both domestic and international.

We are confronting that threat, and we are making significant progress. Success will take time, and hard work. But we are building a foundation for the future, a future not only of reduced drug abuse in our country, but of a world where there is no room, and no tolerance, for outlaws.

It is an effort that calls for broad national support from all Americans.●

THE END OF THE "RIPLEY ERA"

HON. LINDY (MRS. HALE) BOGGS OF LOUISIANA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mrs. BOGGS. Mr. Speaker, on Monday, the Ripley era on the Mall came to an end with the retirement of S. Dillon Ripley as Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution. He has been succeeded by Dr. Robert M. Adams.

During his tenure as Secretary, Dr. Ripley devoted himself to pursuing the purpose for which the Smithsonian was established: "The increase and diffusion of knowledge among men" and women. The citizens of the United States, present and future, owe him a tremendous debt of gratitude for his service.

Last February, I had the pleasure of attending a dinner held to celebrate Dillon Ripley's 20 years of leadership at the Smithsonian. I would like to take this opportunity to share some of the observations made that evening about Dr. Ripley's accomplishments and about the support he received from his lovely wife, Mary, over those many years. The remarks are by Charles Blitzer, formerly of the Smithsonian and now Director of the National Humanities Center and Jeannie S. Clark, Regent of the Smithsonian.

REMARKS BY CHARLES BLITZER

In February of 1882, during Oscar Wilde's celebrated tour of the United States (which began, you will recall, by his informing the customs inspector in New York that he had nothing to declare except his genius), Wilde was taken to visit Niagara Falls, a spectacle that was deemed certain to impress even that jaded sophisticate. According to one account, Oscar gazed gravely at the Falls for several moments and then turned to his proud and expectant hosts and murmured quietly, "How magnificent it would be if only it flowed in the other direction."

I don't for a moment suppose that Dillon Ripley was thinking of this (perhaps apocryphal) anecdote when he arrived to take up his duties as the eighth Secretary of the Smithsonian twenty years ago; but I suspect that something of the same thought, and perhaps even of the same insouciant spirit, moved him then and has continued to move him for these twenty years. We do know that one of his first official acts—perhaps the first manifestation of his almost magical sense for the perfect symbolic gesture—was to cause the statue of Joseph Henry to be turned around on its pedestal so that the first Secretary no longer stared point-blank at the Castle, but rather looked out over the Mall and the world beyond. By this simple, inspired act Dillon declared his intention to make the Smithsonian flow in another direction, or perhaps more accurately, in a number of other directions: to turn its attention outwards, to broaden its horizons, to bring it into closer touch with the world of learning, with the community of museums, and with the lives of people throughout this country and abroad.

To say that Dillon succeeded is rather like saying that Mozart wrote music: the statement is true, but it scarcely begins to convey the full measure of the achievement. The fact is that the past two decades have been the most creative, the most exciting, and the most fruitful period in the one hundred and thirty-eight year history of the Smithsonian. Indeed, for sustained growth and dramatic change, I can think of few (if any) parallels in the history of any institution.

Surely this, of all audiences, does not need to be reminded of Dillon's accomplishments. We have a tendency on occasions of this sort to focus, perhaps excessively, on the new; and the list of Smithsonian organizations and activities that have come into being since 1964 is, to say the least, impressive. It ranges alphabetically from the Anacostia Neighborhood Museum to the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars; geographically from Fifth Avenue and Ninety-first Street to the Chesapeake Bay and the two seacoasts of Panama; in subject matter from the scientific sophistication of the multi-mirror telescope to the aesthetic elegance of the Renwick Gallery; and in clientele from the rather rarefied scholarly recesses of the Archives of American Art to the most popular museum in the world. Rather than going through the entire list, I would simply remind you that this dazzling burst of creativity was accompanied by the steady strengthening and improvement of what already existed. I can honestly say that I know of no part of the Smithsonian that is not today stronger, more vigorous, clearer in its sense of purpose, and more generously supported than it was twenty years ago. Although the guardians of the Institution's older bureaus and programs tended, quite naturally I suppose, to react with some uneasiness to the creation of the new—and I might add that I never ceased to be amazed at how rapidly the beneficiaries of each innovation joined their colleagues in viewing the next innovation rather warily—the striking fact is that the entire institution, old and new alike, has prospered under Dillon's leadership.

One of the curious facts about the accomplishments of great leaders is that, when viewed in retrospect, they tend to seem both inevitable and considerably easier to effect than they really were. Of course (we now say) the Smithsonian should publish a popular magazine of history and art and science; of course (we now say) the National Zoo should have a Conservation and Research Center in the country, outside Washington; of course (we now say) the Institution should share its collections and the talents of its staff by organizing regional events throughout the country in cooperation with local museums—what could be more natural, what could be a more logical fulfillment of the mandate to increase and diffuse knowledge among men? But the fact is that each of these innovations was greeted with considerable skepticism—and, as some of you may have detected, I have purposely chosen three instances in which I myself was among the skeptics. I can only confess that in each case I was wrong, as so many were wrong about so many of Dillon's other initiatives.

To say this is not to suggest that Dillon is infallible, that he has made no mistakes during these twenty years. It is inconceivable that anyone could have accomplished so much without occasionally taking a wrong turn or pursuing a false start. But what I find impressive, particularly in view of the public and congressional scrutiny to which he has been subjected, is that Dillon had the courage to persevere despite the risks of failure and criticism. Happily for the Smithsonian and for the nation, he never learned, or at least never took to heart, the lesson that Kermit Gordon stated so succinctly fifteen years ago. "The public servant soon learns," Gordon said, "that successes rarely rate a headline, but governmental blunders are front-page news. This recognition encourages the development of procedures designed less to achieve successes than to avoid blunders." To no one are these words less applicable than to Dillon Ripley, whose view of such cautious, risk-limiting procedures is, to understate the matter, unenthusiastic.

I mentioned a few moments ago that successes, viewed in retrospect, also seem to have been easier to achieve than in fact they were. I am not inclined this evening to dwell at length on the difficulties that Dillon confronted and generally managed to overcome, but I will briefly mention two—one internal to the Smithsonian, and one external.

The first is simply the problem, or congeries of problems, attendant upon any attempt to change the direction of any large, venerable, and complex organization. When that organization is composed of strong-minded, strong-willed scientists and scholars, the task is still more difficult, as any academic administrator will attest. And when the organization has settled comfortably into fixed, hierarchical and—dare I say it?—bureaucratic patterns of administration, the difficulty of effecting change is still further compounded.

All of this was nicely illustrated in the early incident of the elephant in the Rotunda. As I have been told, Dillon happened one day to look down from one of the galleries around the Rotunda of the Museum of Natural History and noticed that the top of the great elephant was covered with dust. He wrote a note to the head of the Buildings Management Department asking that something be done about this. In due course, a memo arrived in the Secretary's office pointing out that the elephant was part of the museum's collection, that the custodial staff was not permitted to touch specimens in the collections, and suggesting respectfully that the Secretary address himself to the curatorial staff. Dillon, who was perhaps a trifle more patient in those days, wrote a note to the curator of elephants, making the same request. And, once again in due course, a memo arrived from the curator begging to inform the Secretary that the elephant in question was an African elephant, that it is well known that African elephants frequently roll in the dust, and that therefore it was perfectly appropriate for this one to have a dusty back.

In order not to leave us all in suspense about the outcome of this story, I managed to talk my way through the extraordinary security arrangements attendant upon the vice-president's visit to the Museum of Natural History this afternoon and was permitted to visit one of the galleries overlooking the Rotunda on condition that a sergeant of the guard force accompany me. While I was leaning over the railing to look at the elephant's back, the guard was unable to contain his curiosity and asked what on earth I was doing. When I told him, he said: "Oh, I can tell you about that: the elephant is dusted once a year, whether it needs it or not." I do not know whether this constitutes a triumph for the Secretary or a victory for the curator; most likely, it is the sort of compromise that helps the Smithsonian to function.

As I hardly need to remind you, internal resistance was by no means all that Dillon had to confront in his efforts to move the Smithsonian in new directions. Both the Congress and the press—and also, I am sorry to say, in some instances leaders of the museum fraternity—had what might best be described as mixed feelings about what Dillon was up to. From the beginning, the Congress was, as I believe it continues to be, marvelously supportive. But often this support was accompanied by expressions of nervousness or of misgivings. I recall, for example, one subcommittee report that expressed concern over what it described as "Secretary Ripley's plan to make a Midway of the Mall"—a "plan," if that is the right word, that culminated in the Festival of American Folklife, now one of the great favorites of members of Congress.

Similarly, the press—and particularly the Washington press—reported often and with real enthusiasm the achievements of the Smithsonian under Dillon's leadership. But here, too, the praise was mixed, first with vague suggestions that somehow something must be wrong, and later with occasional outright attacks. In a pattern that might shed light on the problems of our government as well as of the Smithsonian, the more Dillon succeeded in making the Institution lively the more he made it interesting, the more "newsworthy" it became, the more he attracted to it and to himself the investigative, adversarial attention of the media. As Andrew Mellon observed, "No good deed goes unpunished."

As the "Midway on the Mall" phrase suggests, perhaps the most common theme of all this criticism was the suggestion that somehow Dillon's achievements were superficial, triumphs of showmanship rather than of substance, of pomp and ceremony rather than of solid value. I trust that no one will misunderstand if I quote in this connection Gibbon's unforgettable words about the Roman emperor, the younger Gordian: "Twenty-two acknowledged concubines," Gibbon wrote, "and a library of sixty-two thousand volumes, attested the variety of his inclinations, and from the productions which he left behind him, it appears that the former as well as the latter were designed for use rather than ostentation."

As the years have amply demonstrated, even Dillon's flamboyant gestures, even some acts that were scornfully dismissed as mere ostentation, were clearly intended for use. I can personally attest, for example, that the academic procession on the Mall in 1965, complete with regalia and a specially commissioned march, was critically important in, of all things, the genesis of the Woodrow Wilson International Center of Scholars. Other instances come to mind, but the general point is simply that for Dillon and Mary style and substance have always gone hand-in-hand, and the former has always served the latter, to the great benefit of the Institution.

So far, I have sketched some of Dillon's accomplishments and suggested some of the qualities that may help to account for them. But I am very much aware that I have not penetrated to the heart of the real enigma, which is the enigma of leadership. How does any leader, even one of Dillon's extraordinary vision and remarkable gifts, impress his mark upon an institution for so long a time and with such dramatic results? Although I was fortunate enough to observe Dillon (with some awe) for many years, and although I was privileged to work with him (with great pleasure) on many of his projects, I cannot finally solve the riddle. I am sure that each great leader has his own style and his own methods, but I should like to conclude by reading some passages about another leader that seem to me to come closer than anything I know to capturing the essential qualities, the actual flavor, of Dillon Ripley's secretaryship. Perhaps surprisingly, or perhaps not, they are taken from Isaiah Berlin's word-portrait of Franklin Roosevelt:

"Over this vast, seething chaos presided a handsome, charming, very intelligent, very delightful, very audacious man. . . . What attracted his followers were. . .qualities of a rare and inspiring order: he was large-hearted and possessed wide . . . horizons, imaginative sweep, understanding of the time in which he lived and of the direction of the great new forces at work in the twentieth century . . .; he was in favour of life and movement, the promotion of the most generous possible fulfilment of the largest possible number of human wishes, and not in favour of caution and retrenchment and sitting still. Above all, he was absolutely fearless.

"He was one of the few statesmen in the twentieth or any other century who seemed to have no fear at all of the future. He believed in his own strength and ability to manage, and succeed, whatever happened. He believed in the capacity and loyalty of his lieutenants, so that he looked upon the future with a calm eye, as if to say "Let it come, whatever it may be, it will all be grist to our great mill. We shall turn it all to benefit." It was this, perhaps, more than any other quality, which drew men of very different outlooks to him.* * *

"[He was the type of leader who] possesses antennae of the greatest possible delicacy, which convey to him, in ways difficult or impossible to analyse, the perpetually changing contours of events and feelings and human activities round them—they are gifted with a peculiar, political sense fed on a capacity to take in minute impressions, to integrate a vast multitude of small evanescent unseizable detail, such as artists possess in relation to their material. Statesmen of this type know what to do and when to do it, if they are to achieve their ends, which themselves are usually not born within some private world of inner thought, or introverted feeling, but are the crystallisation, the raising to great intensity and clarity, of what a large number of their fellow citizens are thinking and feeling in some dim, inarticulate, but nevertheless persistent fashion. In virtue of this capacity to judge their material, very much as a sculptor knows what can be moulded out of wood and what out of marble, and how and when, they resemble doctors who have a natural gift of curing, which does not directly depend upon that knowledge of scientific anatomy which can only be learned by observation or experiment, or from the experiences of others, though it could not exist without it. This instinctive, or at any rate incommunicable, knowledge of where to look for what one needs, the power of divining where the treasure lies, is something common to many types of genius, to scientists and mathematicians no less than to businessmen and administrators and politicians."

This genius Dillon surely possesses. The Smithsonian, the nation, the world—and, in a very special way, those of us who have had the honor to be his friends and collaborators—owe to him an immeasurable debt. It is a debt that we cannot really repay, but we can at least, as we have attempted to do this evening, acknowledge its existence.

REMARKS BY MRS. JEANNINE S. CLARK

Good evening, Smithsonian family members. I cannot tell you what a joy and an honor it is for me to address you at this time on this very happy twentieth anniversary of Mary and Dillon Ripley's tenure here. What a privilege. I want to say simply that Mary Ripley's name appears among the hundreds of volunteers of 1983 in the January issue of the Torch. However, from her alphabetical listing there you do not learn that she alone is responsible for the founding of the Women's Committee of the Smithsonian which now numbers sixty-five members and fifty-two resource members. This committee was started purely by dint of her devotion and commitment to volunteerism, a tradition started by the first Secretary of the Smithsonian who, with his corps of weather volunteers, was responsible for starting the United States Weather Bureau. The present Secretary and his wife have elegantly contributed to that wonderful Smithsonian tradition.

In particular I want to stress that in the beginning Mary Ripley invited a few of her friends to her home to discuss ways in which they could assist in the increase and diffusion of knowledge. Horticulture and education were among their primary interests and with the support of a men's committee (now extinct), the committee raised funds to create a garden in the courtyard of the National Portrait Gallery and the National Museum of American Art; and to create two hundred fifty scholarships for Junior Associates, one of which my own son won when he was in elementary school. Other benefits, including an annual Christmas Dance and most recently a Washington Craft Show (an idea which evolved, by the way, during an exploratory session with bureau directors which Mary Ripley chaired almost three years ago), have made possible numerous innovative and meaningful projects. They include contributions to the Hirshhorn Holiday, the Air and Space Museum's Amelia Earhart Symposium, Natural History's Insect Zoo, the Anacostia Museum's Oral History Picture Series, the Beaver Valley at the Zoo, the Family Learning Project of the Chesapeake Bay Center for Environmental Studies, the Visitor Information and Associates' Reception Center's book "Volunteer! O Volunteer!," and perhaps the most widely used and certainly the oldest project of the Women's Committee, the Resident Associate Free Film Series which was started in 1971 as a "labor of love" in this museum [the National Museum of American History] and now is a noontime feature in most of the Mall museums.

In summary, since its beginning the Women's Committee has contributed over three hundred thousand earned dollars and thousands of hours of volunteer service to the Smithsonian Institution. To the lady who gave it life the Women's Committee presented the following tribute during a coffee held in her honor in the home of one of its members, Mrs. George Bush. The tribute reads:

"With deepest appreciation and great admiration The Women's Committee of the Smithsonian Associates celebrates on this occasion the role of Mary Livingston Ripley in organizing a ladies' volunteer committee in 1965, which resulted in the permanent Women's Committee. Her wise counsel, her level-headed judgment, and her profound understanding of the need for women of the community to be a part of the Smithsonian experience during these exciting years have been of invaluable benefit to the Institution and the community. In Recognition of Her Active Interest and Gracious Support The Women's Committee Confers on Mary Livingston Ripley the title of Honorary Life Member; December 16, 1983."

In closing, I would like to remind you that it was Winston Churchill who once said: "We make a living by what we get, but we make a life by what we give."

Having had the distinct honor and privilege of working with Dr. Ripley as a Regent and Regent Emeritus of the Smithsonian, I wish to thank him for his leadership and dedication in building the Smithsonian to the position of preeminence it holds today in the world's artistic, cultural, and scientific endeavors. Also, I want to pay a special tribute to the multitalented Mary Ripley, whose charm, intelligence, and enduring love of the Smithsonian have enlivened Dr. Ripley's service and enriched the quality of life for all Americans.

Thank you.●

INTRODUCTION OF A BILL TO CONTROL SOARING MEDICARE COSTS

HON. MARCY KAPTUR

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Ms. KAPTUR. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing a bill designed to assist in the effort to control Medicare's increasing costs. Under medicare's current arrangements, ambulances transport wheelchair-bound patients to hospitals and clinics for nonemergency, medically necessary treatments. The cost of these ambulance services are then covered by Medicare. A frequent use of ambulances for such purposes is transport for dialysis treatment. Consider for a moment the cost to Medicare for just one wheelchair-bound patient taking an ambulance to a hospital for dialysis treatment, three times a week for 1 year: ambulances in my district can charge up to $180 roundtrip; $180 times three trips per week equals $540; $540 times 52 weeks a year is $28,080.

There is a better, more cost effective alternative. Ambulette services can transport persons confined to a wheelchair at a vastly lower cost. These ambulettes, nonemergency vehicles designed to transport people in wheelchairs, are covered under State Mmedicaid regulations for providing the same type of services that ambulances give for medicare patients. These ambulettes are required by State law to meet specific safety, crew, and other requirements in order to be licensed to carry wheelchair patients covered by Medicaid. An ambulette's services in my district cost $30 roundtrip. The same patient mentioned above, taking an ambulette to a hospital instead of an ambulance, would be charged $90 a week and $4,680 a year. Yet, Medicare does not cover ambulette services. When wheelchair-bound patients discover that the cost of their transportation to a hospital or clinic will only be covered by Medicare if they take an ambulance, they choose the more expensive, less convenient, ambulance service.

My bill would expand title XVIII of the Social Security Act to specifically allow medicare coverage for ambulettes to transport wheelchair-bound persons to hospitals or clinics for medically necessary, nonemergency purposes. I would like to stress that this is not an effort to expand service coverage under Medicare. It is an attempt to give wheelchair-confined Medicare patients, who have no access to other means of transport, a far less costly alternative for getting to hospitals and clinics for health care. With the option of ambulette coverage, these individuals would choose this method of transport, thereby reducing Medicare's outlays. I hope this legislation will be discussed in the months to come as we consider proposals to restrain health care costs.●

TRIBUTE TO THE LATE MSGR. GENO BARONI

HON. FERNAND J. ST GERMAIN

OF RHODE ISLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. ST GERMAIN. Mr. Speaker, on August 26, we lost Msgr. Geno Baroni. As a priest, and as an extraordinary public servant, Geno Baroni left an indelible record of achievement in the field of civil rights and social justice activism. Many of us in the Congress, and especially those of us involved in the area of housing policy were fortunate to have his counsel, and his impact upon us is, and will be, lasting.

Gerry McMurray, a close friend and admirer of Geno, has written of what Geno was like and of his struggles to give justice more meaning.

I commend to my fellow Members this tribute:

REMEMBERING GENO BARONI

'LORD, HELP ME TO KNOW THAT IT IS NOT ENOUGH FOR THE CHURCH TO BE THE AMBULANCE SERVICE THAT GOES ABOUT PICKING UP THE BROKEN PIECES OF HUMANITY FOR AMERICAN SOCIETY'

(By Gerald R. McMurray)

How like Geno Baroni to hold off impending death until after the Democratic National Convention nominated an Italian-American Catholic woman as its candidate for the Vice President of the United States. It was as if the goals of his priestly-political life were accomplished in a symbolic manner in the candidacy of a socially aware Catholic for the second highest office of our country.

While driving up North Capitol Street through the ghetto of black Washington, D.C., rarely seen by visitors, to Providence Hospital to bid my final farewell to this social activist priest, politician, bureaucrat, counselor to Presidents and a legion of politicians and policy makers; I struggled with what my words of parting to this unique man would be. One always struggles with what to say to longtime friends on their deathbed, but with Geno Baroni it was more difficult to summon up the words that reflect the feelings of those of us who serve in public life about what Geno Baroni has meant to our own striving to witness the Gospel in our efforts at molding public policy. His four-year battle with cancer, the last two years of which were a struggle to avoid imminent death, was a scenario of his whole life, a struggle against overwhelming odds. Pain and depression took turns dominating his last years, but always present was the unshakable hope that a sinful people could live up to the divine command "to love one another as I have loved you" and "to bring glad tidings to the poor, to proclaim liberty to captives, recovery of sight to the blind and release of prisoners."

My last visit was much easier than I expected. He was excited and full of strategies as to how the Democratic ticket of Walter Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro could address the glaring domestic social needs of our nation and a foreign policy that lacked moral content. Always ideas and strategies and coalitions to accomplish aims; even at the very end of his life, he was still at it. No emotional parting, as I embraced him. All that he said was: "Keep it up, Gerry." A month later, on Aug. 27, 1984, Msgr. Geno C. Baroni died.

Driving back down North Capitol Street, I passed the Sursum Corda Housing Project, begun by Geno Baroni as the first housing project offering homeownership for low- and moderate-income people sponsored by a Catholic diocese with Federal Government assistance. His presence will remain in Washington as long as Sursum Corda stands, but more important than the projects, programs and plans spawned by his activist endeavors were the spirit and encouragement that this priest left to those of us Catholics in public life who hungered after guidance from our church, which was too often occupied by traditions of piety, rules and rubrics.

In a secular setting the story of Geno Baroni would be Horatio Alger written broadly. Born in a tarpaper strike-barracks shack in an Acosta, Pa., coal camp in 1930 to Italian immigrant parents, Geno Baroni was raised in coal country. He was educated in local public schools, graduated in 1952 from Mount St. Mary's College in Emmitsburg, Md., attended its seminary and was ordained a priest in 1956 for the Diocese of Altoona, Pa. His father was a coal miner for 40 years, a member and an organizer for the United Mine Workers of America. His mother provided food, clothing, and many times shelter for the town drunks and others hard pressed by the brutalities of life in coal fields, much to the chagrin of young Geno.

The struggle to Americanize this Italian-American family traumatized Geno Baroni, so that years later he would recall the embarrassment of being publicly ridiculed by his public school teachers for carrying lunches to school pungent with the spicy smells of his mother's home cooking. He would say of this difficult experience: "They tried to homogenize me, by churning me from a Gorgonzola to a Velveeta spread." The seeds of his social-justice activism were sown by his parents. "My mother and father could not read or write any language, but they were the first voices of justice in my life."

His journey from these humble origins to adviser to Presidents, members of Congress and political figures across the political spectrum carved out a new role in American Catholic social activism. Young Father Baroni served as an assistant pastor in three Altoona and Johnstown parishes and as an instructor at a local Catholic high school from 1956 to 1960. He was in trouble with his bishop soon after his ordination for actively siding with workers striking against the Pennsylvania Railroad in 1957. Attending strike meetings and celebrating Mass in union halls and railroad yards were too threatening to many church officials at the time. Finally, frustrated at attempting to deal with this activist priest, the bishop "exiled" him to Catholic University for further studies. Arriving in Washington, he quickly dismissed his studies at Catholic and began serving as an assistant pastor at Sts. Paul and Augustine, a black parish in the heart of the Washington ghetto. In 1965, the then Archbishop of Washington, Cardinal Patrick O'Boyle, appointed him as the first Archdiocesan Director of the Office of Urban Affairs and incardinated him as a priest of the Washington Archdiocese. Serving in that capacity through the riots that tore through Washington following the assassination of Martin Luther King Jr., Father Baroni became one of the handful of whites listened to and respected by the angry black community of the nation's capital.

In late 1969 he moved to the U.S. Catholic Conference where he became Director of Program Development of the Urban Affairs Task Force, which produced the Campaign for Human Development, the church's response to the anti-poverty programs of the Federal Government. In 1970 he was made a Prelate of Honor by Pope Paul VI, entitling him to be called Monsignor, a designation he avoided but, as he later said, pleased his mother the most.

From 1971 to 1977, Monsignor Baroni headed an organization, largely of his own making, the National Center for Urban Ethnic Affairs. In February 1977, he accepted President Jimmy Carter's offer to join his Administration as an assistant secretary of the development of Housing and Urban Development. He was the first Catholic priest to be appointed by a President and confirmed by the Senate for a sub-Cabinet policy-making position. At the conclusion of the Carter Administration in 1980, he returned to the Washington Archdiocese as special assistant for social concerns to the newly appointed Archbishop, James H. Hickey, and he served in that capacity until his death.

Since no residence was available to Father Baroni at Catholic University when he arrived in Washington in 1960, a priest at the chancery office of the Archdiocese directed him to the rectory of Sts. Paul and Augustine Church, "a colored church" he was told, and he was to find out later, the dumping ground for the "problem" priests of the diocese. What he saw then in 1960—an old white ethnic parish dying amid drug addicts, pimps, prostitutes and hopelessly poor non-Catholic blacks—shocked his sense of reality. "The place was a hell hole then, and it still is now," he told me, "but at least now this parish stands with the poor, berates the mayor and local politicians and demands government services, housing, health, education, safety. . . . When I arrived in Washington, there were no elected officials, blacks counted for nothing, the church was more interested in building schools in Bethesda. How was I to preach the Gospel when all people here wanted was protection from drug addicts, hookers and pimps? The only way to get any action was to go to Congress, which ran the city in those days, and the Kennedy clan, which had just arrived at the White House."

Audacious and without guidance, Father Baroni approached both Congress and the White House, and at least found a place where people listened to this fast-talking priest. The few contacts that most of official Washington ever had with priests then, and until very recently, were at "Catholic functions"—weddings, funerals and invocations at some public events. This priest was talking housing, police protection, health care and better public schools for black Washington. Not the normal chit-chat from a Catholic priest.

The civil rights movement caught up with Father Baroni as the turbulent 1960's culminated in the aftermath of Martin Luther King Jr.'s assassination. Father Baroni joined Dr. King on his many marches in Washington. At one point he was called by Cardinal Patrick O'Boyle about a complaint the Cardinal had just received from another senior member of the American hierarchy protesting Baroni's presence in a march with King: "The Cardinal told me that I had been in all the papers with King, marching arm in arm and without a hat on; that this kind of activity was not priestly, and that O'Boyle should not tolerate this any longer. I asked the Cardinal what was he going to do, and he said 'Geno, next time wear a hat.' "

What troubled Geno Baroni about the civil rights revolution in this country was the absence of the American Catholic church in this struggle, its avoidance of social conflict with the prevailing social mores of the day. American cities were becoming black and brown, with isolated pockets of ethnic Catholics. "Oppressed and distressed people sharing the same bleak turf," he said so often. Father Baroni began attempting to join their concerns by his work as the first Director of Urban Affairs of the Washington Archdiocese, his careful persuasion and plain old politicking at the United States Catholic Conference putting together a coalition of conservative bishops and more socially conscious bishops to support the creation of the Campaign for Human Development, envisoned then as the church's response to the War on Poverty.

From the U.S.C.C., Father Baroni moved to an operation of his own creation, the National Committee on Urban-Ethnic Affairs. With the effort he attempted to create a bond between white ethnic Catholics of European descent, living in the large Eastern and Middle Western cities, and black Americans—a shared identity that would cause them to demand attention and services from their government.

Geno Baroni joined the ethnic pride renaissance of the late 1960's and early 1970's by shepherding the energies of neighborhood organizations from city hall sit-ins to city hall sit-down, where city officials negotiated resolutions with neighborhood groups. From ethnic pride to ethnic action was his goal.

As the first priest to receive a Presidental appointment to a policy-making a position in a Federal Cabinet department, as an assistant secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, Geno Baroni sought to use the power of the vast array of Federal programs and funds to empower community and neighborhood groups to make demand on their governments to make their neighborhoods livable.

The presence of a Catholic priest in a policy-making role in the Federal establishment was a novelty that many found unsettling. His scrambling after rainbows was combined with a winning humanity that caught up all who crossed his path. Sophisticated Washington operatives laughed at him at first, but witnessed successful accomplishments in garnering support for neighborhood development and housing programs from Congress that observers said would never be approved. There was considerable talk toward the latter part of the Carter Administration that Monsignor Baroni was to be moved over to the White House to attempt to repair Carter's frayed relationships with Congress, since he had been effective in lobbying the Panama Canal Treaty through the Senate. Monsignor Baroni resisted the pressure to move, believing that his programmatic responsibilities were more a part of ministry than being a political operative of the President.

Those of us who watched our friend, our priest-mentor, constantly employing strategies, innovative in most cases, traditional in some, experienced an awakening as to how the social teachings of our church could be employed in a way that dealt with the realities of our changing society. Many of us in public office had felt isolated, with no sense of direction from the church as to how to employ the rich traditions of Rerum Novarum and the writings of Msgr. John A. Ryan (1869-1945). Geno Baroni began to give us that direction, never the complete direction; that was our task to develop and pursue. We had the teachings, the tradition, but sadly no direction. He was there with us always, strategizing, analyzing, pursuing new coalitions, but always with the clear guidance that our faith makes no greater demand than to pursue social justice against the resistance of smug affluence, pervading racism and economic exploitation.

Geno Baroni refused to die within the time frame that his cancer was said to have set, because he had set his sights on upsetting social developments occurring in the American Catholic middle class. He was most troubled in these past few years of the Reagan era by what the fruits of affluence and economic prosperity had brought to a large number of the grandchildren of ethnic Catholic Americans. He was greatly troubled by the absence of concern for the disadvantaged of our society by middle-class American Catholics. There was no empathy for the less fortunate nor minority black and Hispanic aspirations. Any effort to move American Catholics by the power of the church's social teaching was being thwarted by, in Baroni's words: "I got mine: a house in the suburbs, two cars, job, kids in good schools. Don't force anything on me that threatens my American dream."

Monsignor Baroni felt that the ambitious and prophetic call in the bishops' peace pastoral and the beginnings of solidarity with the church in Latin America went directly against the grain of white Catholic middle-class America. Generations of patriotism and anti-Communism were being threatened by church leadership. With no following, he believed these efforts would have a hollow ring, but he had full confidence that a carefully laid out strategy of disturbing the comfortable would result in positive reactions.

When a priest friend told him that a group of parishioners had demanded that he stop preaching about the poor, Central America and economic injustice, as well as overemphasizing Scripture readings about the poor in liturgical settings, Monsignor Baroni's spirits plunged. Yet hearing from others about parishes and groups of individuals providing shelter for the homeless, sanctuary for Central American refugees, his spirits soared. He demanded of God the right to remain alive to push Catholic Americans still further by the challenge of our social justice teachings.

Geno Baroni's mark upon those of us in the public sector is the faith he strengthened to challenge our society, our nation, to serve the needs of "the least of these my brothers and sisters." His presence remains in the housing projects he helped build in Washington, the urban neighborhood organizations he empowered with faith and Federal money and in the numerous organizations that he encouraged, set up and gave direction to. Most importantly, his spirit will remain with those of us whose lives he touched, whose faith in the Gospel he strengthened, and whose commitment to the social justice teachings and traditions of our faith he reaffirmed.

On Labor Day, Sept. 5, 1983, in his last public homily at the Annual Labor Day Mass at the Shrine of the Sacred Heart in Washington, he shared with those of us privileged to have heard him a prayer that embodied his life and faith: "From my own life review, could I share with you a prayer, my own prayer, that comes from some disappointments. I have been a priest for 27 years, with many joys, but this prayer reflects a sorrow for my own life, my own struggle. On this Labor Day, Lord, I pray: 'Help me to know that our limited charity is not enough. Lord, help me to know that our soup kitchens and secondhand clothes are not enough. Lord, help me to know that it is not enough for the church to be the ambulance service that goes about picking up broken pieces of humanity for American society. Lord, help us all to know that God's judgment demands justice from us as a rich and powerful nation.

"Yes, who will hear the words of the Lord? Who will hear the words of the Lord in today's Gospel? On this Labor Day, let us pray that the Holy Spirit will provide new gifts to meet new needs. Let us pray that there will be new voices of justice, new prophets who will hear the words of the Lord and stand up, as Christians, to say: 'Yes, the Spirit of the Lord is upon me. He has sent me to bring glad tidings to the poor.' "●

LULAC HONORS HISPANIC EDUCATORS

HON. JERRY M. PATTERSON

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I acknowledge the distinguished members of LULAC, our Nation's largest Hispanic advocacy organization, as they honor 10 Hispanic educators for their contributions to education and their communities. LULAC represents the interests of over 14 million Hispanics in the United States and more than 4.5 million in my home State of California.

On September 29, 1984, the Office of the National Vice President/Far West Region under the leadership of Dr. Anita Chapa Del Rio, will hold the first annual Hispanic Educators Awards Banquet in Santa Ana, CA. It will be dedicated to the late Tomas Rivera, chancellor of the University of California, Riverside. He was the first minority and the youngest person to serve as chancellor in the University of California system.

Listed among the recipients are Santa Ana elementary school teacher of the year, Nydia Hernandez; Santa Ana High School teacher Rose Prado; Saddleback High School counselor, Maria L. Vargas; intermediate school teacher Albert A. Encinias from Carr Intermediate School; Santa Ana Community College instructor/coach, Justos Frutos; and university professor of biological science from the University of California, Dr. Eloy Rodriguez. The first Hispanic school teacher in Orange County, Alex Jimenez will be a special recipient.

The Far West Region will honor Dr. Thomas Arciniega, president of California State University, Bakersfield, as the California Educator of the Year. Theresa August will be the recipient of the Arizona Educator of the Year Award. Alfred Baca will also be honored; he was a tenured professor with the University of Nevada system before his death July 10, 1984.

Recipients of this special honor were nominated and selected on the basis of personal achievements, political awareness, community awareness, civil involvement in service clubs and organizations, and special contributions to education and the Hispanic community.

As the Congressman who represents West-Central Orange County, I have had the privilege of working with some of these individuals, and I can personally attest to their dedication to students, parents, and the community. Each of them has pursued the goal of achieving excellence and personal development in their students and has thereby set an example of excellence of their own as educators. When we recall our formative years, we very often reflect on the individuals who gave us the immeasurable gifts of love, understanding, and knowledge. Next to our families, those who were among the closest and most important people in our lives were often our teachers. This still holds true for others who have continued their education in later life, and who still can find an able mentor and friend in a professor.

Education is one of the institutions we most cherish in this great Nation of ours. We owe a debt of gratitude to LULAC and to these fine individuals being honored tonight for their daily commitment to its preservation. Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in saluting these educators for their exemplary service.●

PRESIDENT'S PLAN TO CURB STEEL IMPORTS A STEP IN THE RIGHT DIRECTION

HON. RALPH REGULA

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. REGULA. Mr. Speaker, yesterday the President announced a plan to curb steel imports through negotiated voluntary restraint agreements with several steel-exporting countries.

While this decision is not everything those of us from steel-producing regions would have wished for, it is a significant step in the right direction. Most importantly, the administration recognized that the domestic steel industry is being injured by unfair trade practices and is committed to remedying this situation.

The true test of the success or failure of the administration's proposal will be in the implementation. I think the industry can be encouraged by the recent example in the automobile industry where voluntary restraint agreements have helped lead to a resurgence in that industry.

Today the Congressional Steel Caucus, on which I serve as vice chairman, unanimously agreed to continue to push for House passage of the Fair Trade in Steel Act which would impose quantitative restrictions on steel imports. Passage of this legislation would give U.S. negotiators the leverage they need to achieve the administration's objective of limiting steel imports to 18½ percent of the domestic market.

Under the administration's proposal, U.S. Trade Representative William Brock has 90 days to conclude negotiations. I look forward to Ambassador Brock's successful fulfillment of his stated commitment "not to sit back and be the world's steel dump."

Following is the statement of the American Iron & Steel Institute concerning the President's announced steel program:

STATEMENT OF THE AMERICAN IRON AND STEEL INSTITUTE CONCERNING PRESIDENT REAGAN'S STEEL PROGRAM

WASHINGTON.—The American Iron and Steel Institute said today that President Reagan's action in establishing a new Comprehensive Fair Trade Program for the domestic steel industry is recognition of the effects of unfair trade in steel on the domestic steel industry. The total import share of the U.S. steel market under this program will be 18.5% of apparent domestic consumption plus 1.7 million tons of semi-finished steel.

The import levels, which apply across all product lines, should reduce unfair trade in steel and the extensive abuses which have caused such great economic harm to the domestic steel industry.

The President's announcement today is important to the industry, its workers and communities since the industry is operating at about 57% of capability, tens of thousands of workers are on layoff, and many of the steel plant town communities are on the brink of financial disaster.

The program will be implemented with the nation's steel trading partners within the next ninety days—assuring a move toward fair trade. If the program is successfully achieved and enforced, the investment climate in steel will become attractive once more, facilitating the increased modernization of the industry, to the benefit of the entire nation.

While the import level of the program is higher than the limitations in the Fair Trade in Steel Act, the ceiling provided is far less than the 33% level registered in July or the 25% so far this year.

There are a number of favorable features to the program. It covers all steel mill products. It is for five years. It will be enforceable under Administration-sponsored legislation. The resolve of the President to deal effectively with unfair trade is shown in his willingness to use his broad authority contained in trade statutes and trade cases. There is great promise for the industry, its employees and the steel communities in the program. There remains the fulfillment of our expectations for the program.

The program calls for a quantitative limitation on semi-finished steel. The steel companies will have the right to file unfair trade cases against semi-finished imports.

The industry has been assured that the program will be implemented during the next ninety days. Steel imports arriving after October 1 will be included under the program. Unfair trade practice cases can be expected to be filed in the event successful government arrangements or agreements with specific countries are not reached.

The domestic steel companies and their employees are deeply appreciative of the efforts of those Members of Congress, governors, mayors and state and local officials who, together with the United Steelworkers of America, have so strongly supported the industry in its efforts to achieve a comprehensive steel trade solution. The industry is indeed greatful for this assistance.

We are aware of the opportunity a successful program affords the industry and its workers. We are confident the opportunity and the challenge will not be lost.●

TRIBUTE TO CARL PERKINS

HON. JAMES L. OBERSTAR

OF MINNESOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. OBERSTAR. On September 11, the House paid tribute to one of its most decent and beloved Members, the gentleman from Kentucky, Mr. Perkins. Because September 11 was election day in Minnesota, I was necessarily away from Washington on that date and regrettably missed the opportunity to participate with so many of our colleagues in the tribute to Carl.

For over 35 years, he served honorably and with distinction his district, the Commonwealth of Kentucky, and the people of this Nation.

As chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee, he led the fight for so many of the humane, progressive programs which Congress has authorized since the New Deal. He was the champion of the poor, the oppressed, the school child, the older American—those who most need the protection of Government. Carl understood the importance of establishing priorities in Federal spending, of directing limited Federal resources to where they would be most effective for the broadest public good.

Carl and I worked particularly closely on behalf of the Appalachian Regional Commission—one of the most enduring, successful and needed components of the war on poverty begun nearly two decades ago. As chairman of the House Subcommittee on Economic Development, I benefited tremendously from Carl's experience, advice and assistance as I led the fight to save the Appalacian Commission.

Carl was a tremendous public servant. Elected in the days before advertising and the 32d television spot, he relied on the power of his mind, and the record of his personal closeness to the people and of his service and dedication to them and their needs. We needed the perspective which he brought to this body. And with his passing, each of us should endeavor to keep alive the legacy of his service and of his spirit. We shall be the richer for it.●

LAND POLLUTION TAX MAKES SENSE TO ECONOMISTS

HON. CLAUDINE SCHNEIDER

OF RHODE ISLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mrs. SCHNEIDER. Mr. Speaker, over the past year, an increasing number of experts have come to agree that a tax on land disposal of toxic waste must be enacted if we are to reduce the long-term threat to our constituents posed by inadequate disposal of toxic waste.

I would like to enter in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD at this time an article by Prof. Murray L. Weidenbaum that appeared in the August 24 edition of the Christian Science Monitor. Mr. Weidenbaum, the director of the study of American business at Washington University, and the original Chairman of President Reagan's Council of Economic Advisers, presents a cogent argument for a tax on land disposal of toxic waste. Professor Weidenbaum concludes that our current policy of taxing waste producers instead of polluters is shortsighted, and that environmental pollution is an activity that is susceptible to economic incentives.

[From the Christian Science Monitor, Aug. 24, 1984]

TOXIC WASTE: LET'S DUMP TESTINESS AND MAKE SOME BASIC CHANGES

(By Murray L. Weidenbaum)

A mid-course correction is needed in that major piece of environmental legislation called the Comprehensive Environmental Responses. Compensation, and Liability Act for "Superfund"), which Congress enacted in 1980.

As it stands, the law provides for a $1.6 billion fund raised largely through taxes on producers of chemical and petroleum products. The Environmental Protection Agency uses this money to identify and clean up hazardous wastes and waste sites. The Super-fund is not due for reauthorization until 1985, but the U.S. House recently approved a massive expansion of the law by increasing taxes and raising the fund's level to $10.2 billion.

Instances of toxic-waste contamination at Love Canal in New York State and at Times Beach, Mo., have brought a greater sense of urgency to the problem the Superfund is designed to correct or alleviate. The public mood on the subject of hazardous waste leaves little room for patience—but much opportunity for emotional responses. The same holds true, to a large extent, for the mood of Congress.

Moreover, public sentiment is helped little by the fact that the human health effects of many toxic substances, such as the various forms of dioxin, are not fully known and are subject to debate. Safe levels of some substances can now be measured by the EPA in terms of parts per billion, if not quadrillion—making our sense of the health hazards akin to searching for the proverbial needle in a cosmic haystack.

What is needed is less emotion on the subject of hazardous waste, especially a more clear-headed view of waste-disposal problems in the United States. Because definitions vary among levels of government, estimates of the amount of hazardous waste disposed of each year in the U.S. range from 30 million to 255 million metric tons. Most of this waste is buried in landfills because incineration, the safest and most effective means of disposal, is roughly 10 times as costly. Even so, government and industry spend an estimated $4.5 billion each year to manage toxic wastes. The annual price tag by 1990 is projected to reach $12 billion in 1981 dollars.

Experts agree that using landfills is enherently unsafe, if for no other reason than that they are only storage sites. They also concur that there are not enough of them. The EPA estimates that 22,000 waste sites now exist in the U.S., and fully 10 percent of them are believed to be dangerous and leaking.

The results: not enough reliable, environmentally safe places to dump toxic substances. Although EPA wants to clean up as many landfills as possible, it has very little choice of where to put the material it removes under the Superfund mandate. Taxpayers may wind up paying for the costly removal of waste from one site across the country, only to find later on that they have to pay again for removing it from yet another dangerous site. Merely throwing money at the problem will not help. EPA reports that it can reasonably and efficiently spend only $5 billion on cleanup over the next five years. Increasing the Superfund to more than $10 billion is not the answer.

One reason for the scarcity of hazardous-waste sites is the "Not in My Backyard" phenomenon. Sites for toxic substance disposal have joined prisons and mental hospitals as items that we all in general want, but not too close by. What is the answer? One method, strange as it may seem, is to provide financial incentives to get the acquiescence of the population of an area near a disposal site, while ensuring all possible safety. Another alternative is to use Superfund money more effectively to establish additional disposal facilities, whether landfills or incinerators.

The fact remains that continued public opposition to virtually every means of disposing of toxic substances will inevitably lead to disrupting the manufacture of needed products. Unfortunately, this could also lead to more illegal and dangerous "midnight dumping" of chemicals.

The Superfund mandates that a tax be levied on producers of "feedstocks" in the chemical and oil industries, and 88 percent of all funds are collected this way (the rest comes from the federal government). Consequently, thousands of other disposers wind up paying nothing.

Taxing producers rather then polluters does little to curb the actual dumping of wastes. A waste-end fee on hazardous-waste disposal, would be more economically sound. It would (1) provide an incentive to reduce the actual output of waste, (2) promote development of recycling and reuse systems, (3) encourage alternative disposal technologies, and (4) cover the disposal of products produced overseas. In short, rewriting the Superfund law so that it is more fair would also help protect the environment—and would probably save money at the same time.

The hazardous-waste-disposal problem is not going to disappear unless Americans radically change their life styles. Until then, greater understanding is needed on the part of the public and a willingness to come to grips with important features of the problems arising from the production and use of hazardous substances.

In legislating in this area, Congress must come to realize that the fundamental shortcoming is not the availability of money to clean up hazardous wastes. Rather, it is our unwillingness as a nation to accept the location of new disposal locations adequate to our production demands—or to look upon environmental pollution not as a sinful act, but as an activity costly to society but susceptible to economic incentives.●

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. RICHARD H. LEHMAN

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. LEHMAN of California. Mr. Speaker, due to unavoidable business in my district on September 19, 1984, I was unable to vote on H.R. 3755, the Social Security Disability Benefits Reform Act of 1984. Had I been present for this vote, I would have enthusiastically offered my support for this meritorious bill which clarifies policy and procedure in the Social Security Disability Program.●

A SALUTE TO THE PAWSOX: INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE CHAMPS

HON. CLAUDINE SCHNEIDER

OF RHODE ISLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mrs. SCHNEIDER. Mr. Speaker, move over Cubs. Look out Tigers. Your moment in the Sun may come soon, but this week's baseball heroes are the newly crowned champions of the International League: the Pawtucket Red Sox.

When the "PawSox," as they are affectionately called in New England, won the Governor's Cup last Thursday night, they did it in characteristic fashion. Behind 2-0 in the International League championship series against the Maine Guides, the PawSox took three straight games from the Guides on Maine's home field.

This was not the first time the team had come from behind in the face of great odds. After a suprising start, when the team burst to the lead of the International League, the PawSox slumped badly at midyear, and appeared to be heading out of playoff contention with only 2 weeks to go in the season. Then the PawSox turned on the tenacity and courage which are essential ingredients in all championship teams, won 8 of their last 11 games, and rolled into the playoffs with a head of steam.

Special thanks for this championship season go to owner Ben Mondor, general manager Mike Tamburro, and manager of the year Tony Torchia, and the entire PawSox family. Their skill at producing a winner on the field is matched only by their commitment to the well being of the local community. Even bigger congratulations go to the people of Rhode Island, who provide strong support for the PawSox year after year, regardless of whether the team is winning or losing.

Steve Lyons, Charlie Mitchell, Jim Dorsey, and the other PawSox stars will soon be making names for themselves in the big leagues. But I know that each of them will keep a special place in their hearts for the pennant flag which will now fly proudly over McCoy Stadium for years to come.

Congratulations PawSox, for a job well done.●

A TRIBUTE TO MAYOR MIKE NERVINE

HON. JIM COURTER

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. COURTER. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a moment to recognize a gentleman from New Jersey who has volunteered his services to the town of Bernardsville for half a century. Michael Nervine has served as councilman, a member of the board of education, and for the past 20 years as mayor. His contributions to the community are many. As well as being a civic leader, he is director of the First National Bank in Bernardsville, vice president of the Millington Savings & Loan Bank, a Rotarian, and most importantly a friend to all townspeople. Mike instills a sense of loyalty and commitment in his colleagues and commands respect from opponents.

Never too busy to help a worthwhile cause, Mike attacks each new project with the same exuberance and determination; his sheer enthusiasm generates successful results.

Bernardsville has proposed and grown over the past 50 years while still maintaining its local charm. This, in part, is due to the devotion and commitment this beloved mayor has made to his community.

I, on behalf of many, would like to express my gratitude and admiration for Mike Nervine; he is an asset to his community and his State.●

ASHWAUBENON, WI, FIGHTS ALCOHOL AND DRUG ABUSE

HON. TOBY ROTH

OF WISCONSIN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. ROTH. Mr. Speaker, in the last couple of years in particular, the American public has become increasingly aware of the dangers of alcohol and drug abuse. There is a community in my district which has been involved in antialcohol and drug efforts for several years now, and its efforts deserve commendation.

From September 23 to 29, the village of Ashwaubenon, WI, will be observing "Alcohol and Drug Awareness Week." The community has observed this week for at least the past 3 years, and it is truly a community effort.

The week will begin in the churches of Ashwaubenon on Sunday, with homilies and sermons on adult role models in this area. The week will be filled with awareness and education programs, guest speakers, special presentations, local public safety demonstrations, an essay and poster contest, and a community breakfast.

Alcohol and Drug Abuse Awareness Week in Ashwaubenon is a real community effort, involving churches, schools, local governments, and service organizations. I want to pay tribute to all of those who have been involved in organizing this special week. Their program is something special, and I am certain the community will benefit from it for many years to come.●

DETROIT TIGERS CLINCH AMERICAN LEAGUE EAST

HON. WILLIAM D. FORD

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. FORD of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I want to take this opportunity to congratulate the Detroit Tigers for clinching the American League East pennant last night. The Tigers combined the pitching of rookie Ryan O'Neal in his first major league start with the relief pitching of Cy Young Award hopeful Willie Hernandez into a 3 to 0 shutout of the Milwaukee Brewers. For the first time since 1927 an American League team has lead its division from opening day to the playoffs. This was not the only feat that this group of young men has accomplished in clinching the Tigers' first division title since 1972. The Tigers took off on a torrid start and shattered all previous major league records with their 35 and 5 record over the first 40 games of the season.

I am confident that there will be other records for Manager Sparky Anderson and his ballplayers before this season is over. With a record of 97 and 54 and 11 games remaining, the Tigers need only 3 wins to make Sparky the first manager in baseball history to win 100 games in both leagues. The Tigers have captured the hearts and hopes of Michiganders throughout the State with their hustle and dedication. I would like to salute the fine group of players that Sparky and owner Tom Monaghan have assembled. I wish the Tigers luck in the American League championship series as they move closer to their ultimate goal of winning the World Series.

Bless you boys.●

TRIBUTE TO KEN NORTON, FORMER HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMPION

HON. JULIAN C. DIXON

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. DIXON. Mr. Speaker, on October 26, 1984, the Youth Services Unlimited organization of Los Angeles, which provides counseling employment readiness training, and sports activities to young men between the ages of 14 and 26, will pay special tribute to Mr. Ken Norton, former heavyweight champion of the world, actor, businessman, and humanitarian. I take this opportunity to join those who are honoring an exemplary family man and community leader.

Ken Norton has already distinguished himself with a boxing career that climaxed with his winning the world heavyweight boxing title in 1973. He now utilizes the spartan dedication and positive determination to succeed that earned him the heavyweight title to reach out and help young people in need.

Ken is actively involved in helping the victims of child abuse, giving financial support to a home for battered children in Beaumont, CA. He has also started a scholarship foundation to enable and encourage needy youths to obtain an education.

It is this compassion for the young people of his community that the Youth Services Unlimited organization honors on October 26, and that I commend today. To the young men of south central Los Angeles, and the young beneficiaries of his charitable contributions, Ken Norton is a strong and positive role model. His humanitarianism reflects the dedication to family and love of children that has so enriched his life, and serves as a significant reminder to us all that we can channel the positive influences of our lives to improve our society.

I am proud to pay tribute to Ken Norton and wish him continued success.●

CALL TO CONSCIENCE VIGIL

HON. F. JAMES SENSENBRENNER

OF WISCONSIN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, the yoke of Soviet totalitarianism is a heavy load for the Russian people to bear. The entire population is subjected to constant harassment and surveillance. This harassment is particularly severe for those men and women who choose to act in accord with their fundamental beliefs. These prisoners of conscience are often physically abused or jailed.

One innocent victim of this type of Soviet repression is Vladimir Tsukerman. While Tsukerman's wife Ina and son Aleksandr have already been allowed to emigrate, the Soviet authorities have rejected Tsukerman's repeated attempts to join his loved ones in Israel. In part due to the unceasing efforts of the Union of Councils for Soviet Jewry and the Congressional Call to Conscience Vigil, Tsukerman was recently released from prison. Now is the time when continued public pressure can be most effective in forcing the Soviets to allow Tsukerman to emigrate.

I join my colleagues in the fight to win liberty for all Soviet prisoners of conscience.●

ADMINISTRATION SPOUSE EQUITY BILL

HON. WILLIAM E. DANNEMEYER
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. DANNEMEYER. Mr. Speaker, today, I am introducing by request of the administration a Federal spouse equity bill. The purpose of the bill is to remove any bias against the spouses of Federal employees in the Federal retirement system. This bill and H.R. 2300, by the gentlelady from Colorado [Mrs. Schroeder], are the framework for legislation approved by the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee.

In September 1983, the President proposed the Pension Equity Act (H.R. 4032), which would amend the Employee Retirement Income Security Act and the Internal Revenue Code to require private-sector pension plans to provide survivor benefits for a former spouse of a retired employee to the extent ordered by a State court in dissolving the marriage. The President's proposal would also require private pension plans to prohibit a covered employee from waiving a reduction in his annuity in order to provide survivor benefits for his current spouse, unless the spouse consents in writing to the waiver. Since the Pension Equity Act would affect only the private sector, it is necessary to amend the Civil Service Retirement law in order to bring its provisions into conformance, where appropriate, with the changes the Pension Equity Act would impose on private pension plans. The Civil Service Retirement law already requires the Office of Personnel Management to comply with State court orders stipulating that a portion of a Federal employee's retirement benefits must be paid to his or her former spouse throughout the retired employee's lifetime, and the proposal would extend this provision to permit payment of survivor benefits when a State court so orders. The retirement law now requires a retiring employee's current spouse to be informed of the employee's election to waive survivor benefits. The proposal would change this provision to require the spouse's consent to such a waiver.

The proposal also includes a technical amendment standardizing the length-of-marriage requirement for entitlement to survivor benefits at 9 months for all widows and widowers, regardless of whether they were married to the employee at the time of retirement. Currently, the Civil Service Retirement law imposes a 1-year requirement for marriages which occur after retirement and on cases involving death-in-service, while imposing no requirement at all where a marriage exists at the time of retirement.

The legislation makes a further change to protect the spouses of Federal employees in the matter of an employee requesting a refund of retirement contributions. Because such a refund would void any later opportunity for the spouse to receive a survivor benefit, the bill requires spousal consent in the request for a refund of retirement contributions.

This legislation makes clear the commitment of this administration to equitable treatment of spouses and former spouses of employees under the Civil Service Retirement System.

Mr. Speaker, I insert a statement of purpose and section-by-section analysis of this bill at this point in the RECORD:

STATEMENT OF PURPOSE AND JUSTIFICATION

To accompany a draft bill "To amend title 5, United States Code, to provide more equitable benefits for spouses and former spouses under the Civil Service Retirement System, and for other purposes."

Last September, the President proposed the Pension Equity Act (H.R. 4032), which would amend the Employee Retirement Income Security Act and the Internal Revenue Code to require private-sector pension plans to provide survivor benefits for a former spouse of a retired employee to the extent ordered by a State court pursuant to the dissolution of the marriage. The President's proposal would also require private pension plans to prohibit a covered employee from waiving a reduction in his annuity in order to provide survivor benefits for his current spouse, unless the spouse consents in writing to the waiver. Since this proposal would affect only the private sector, it is appropriate for the Office of Personnel Management to propose amendments conforming the Civil Service Retirement law, where appropriate, to these provisions of H.R. 4032.

The Office is already required, under 5 U.S.C. 8345(j), to comply with State court orders apportioning a retired employee's benefits between the employee and his former spouse at the time of divorce. However, these payments to the former spouse continue only during the retiree's lifetime, since there is no authority for the Office to pay survivor benefits to the former spouse after the retiree's death.

An amendment establishing such authority, in compliance with State court orders, would be a logical extension of the present authority under 5 U.S.C. 8345(j) to apportion retirement benefits. Under the proposed bill, the total of survivor annuities payable to the current spouse and all former spouses of a retiree could not exceed 55 percent of that retiree's annuity. In order to make it difficult for a former employee with future title to an annuity to evade the obligation to provide a survivor annuity for a qualified former spouse, the bill would prohibit payment of a refund of an employee's retirement contributions in lieu of annuity if the employee has a former spouse who would qualify for a survivor annuity under the bill.

The proposal would also require a current spouse's written consent to a retiring employee's decision to waive a reduction in his annuity for the purpose of providing survivor benefits. Moreover, the current spouse of a former employee with future title to an annuity would have to consent to the employee's application for a refund of his retirement contributions before the refund could be paid. These changes would be a reasonable extension of the present requirement under 5 U.S.C. 8339(j)(2) that the current spouse of a retiring employee must be informed of the employee's decision not to provide a survivor annuity, and they would be consistent with the protections the proposal extends to the annuity rights of former spouses.

In addition to these amendments, the proposal would effect a technical change in the length-of-marriage requirement for entitlement to survivor benefits. Present law imposes a 1-year requirement for marriages which occur after retirement and in cases involving death in service, while imposing no requirement at all where a marriage exists at the time of retirement. The proposal would standardize the length-of-marriage requirement for entitlement to survivor benefits at 9 months for all widows and widowers, regardless of whether they were married to the employee at the time of retirement. Also, the proposal would deem the marriage requirement for receipt of survivor benefits satisfied in case of accidental death or in cases involving remarriage in which the aggregate time married is at least 9 months. This provision is similar to that contained in the Social Security law.

SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS

To accompany a draft bill "To amend title 5, United States Code, to provide more equitable benefits for spouses and former spouses under the Civil Service Retirement System, and for other purposes."

The first section provides the bill's title: the "Civil Service Retirement Spouse Equity Act of 1984."

Section 2 contains various amendments to provisions of chapter 83 of title 5, United States Code, concerning Civil Service Retirement.

Paragraph (1) of section 2 amends section 8339(j) to prevent a married retiring employee from electing to provide a reduced survivor annuity or no survivor annuity at all without his spouse's written consent. Under regulations to be prescribed by the Office of Personnel Management, the employee could waive the survivor annuity without his spouse's consent only if he could establish to the Office's satisfaction that the spouse's whereabouts cannot be determined. Section 8339(j) will also be amended to require a reduction in the annuity of an employee who has a former spouse entitled to an annuity under section 8341(h), as added by section 2 of the draft bill. This reduction will be eliminated if the former spouse dies or remarries before age 60, unless the retired employee elects within 1 year thereafter to continue the reduction in order to provide a greater survivor annuity for his current spouse, or unless, if the employee remarries, he elects to provide a survivor annuity for his new spouse.

Paragraph (2) of section 2 effects several amendments to section 8341, relating to survivor annuities. It amends subsections (a) and (b) of section 8341 to standardize the marriage requirement for entitlement to survivor benefits at 9 months for all widows and widowers, regardless of whether they were married to the employee annuitant at the time of retirement. Paragraph (2) adds a new definition of "former spouse" to section 8341(a) to prevent a former spouse who was married to an employee for less than 9 months, or who was married to an employee who performed less than 18 months of civilian service, from becoming entitled to a survivor annuity under section 8341(h). Section 8341(b) is also amended to conform to the requirement in section 8339(j) that a survivor annuity cannot be waived or reduced without the spouse's written consent. Paragraph (2) of section 2 of the draft bill adds a new paragraph (4) to section 8341(b) to provide that the survivor annuity payable to the widow or widower of a retired employee shall be reduced by the amount of any annuity payable to a former spouse of the deceased retiree under section 8341(h). Section 8341(d), which provides a guaranteed minimum survivor annuity to the widow or widower of an employee who dies in service, is amended to require such an annuity to be reduced by the amount of any survivor annuity that is payable to any former spouse of the employee under the new subsection (h).

Paragraph (2) of section 2 of the bill also amends subsections (e) and (f) of section 8341. Subsection (e) provides different amounts of children's annuities depending on whether or not the employee or retiree is survived by a spouse. Under the amendment to subsection (e), the same distinction would apply according to whether or not there is a surviving former spouse. Subsection (f) provides an annuity to the surviving spouse of a former Member of Congress who has title to a deferred annuity but who dies before reaching age 62 or before filing an application for annuity. Subsection (f) will be amended to require such a survivor annuity to be reduced by the amount of any annuity payable to any former spouse of the former Member under section 8341(h). Finally, two new subsections are added to section 8341. Subsection (h) requires the Office of Personnel Management to pay a survivor annuity to the former spouse of an employee or annuitant to the extent ordered by a State court in the event of divorce or annulment, provided that the former spouse had not waived the survivor annuity before the divorce. In no case could such an annuity exceed 55 percent of the employee's benefit. This annuity would be reduced by the amount of any annuity payable to any previous former spouse of the employee or retiree. Subsection (i) deems the marriage requirement for widows and widowers satisfied in cases of accidental death or in cases involving remarriage in which the aggregate time married is at least 9 months.

Paragraph (3) of section 2 amends section 8342(a) to prohibit payment of a refund to a separated employee who has a former spouse as defined in section 8341(a)(5) and to require the current spouse of an employee to consent in writing to the employee's application for a refund.

Paragraph (4) of section 2 amends section 8345(f) to provide that the floor on annuities shall not apply to any survivor annuity payable to a former spouse under section 8341(h). It also amends section 8345(j), concerning apportionment of retirement benefits in the event of divorce, to clarify that the Office of Personnel Management will comply with orders of courts in U.S. territories and possessions, as well as in the 50 States and the District of Columbia.

Section 3 provides that the amendments made by section 2 will take effect 180 days after enactment and will apply to an individual who, on or after the effective date, is married to an employee or Member who, on or after the effective date, retires or applies for a refund under the Civil Service Retirement System. This means that no survivor annuity may be paid to any former spouse who becomes divorced before the effective date. Moreover, no survivor annuity may be paid to a former spouse of an employee who retires before the effective date, regardless of when their divorce occurs.●

THE EPA SCANDAL

HON. JAMES J. FLORIO

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. FLORIO. Mr. Speaker, several weeks ago, the House Energy and Commerce Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations, of which I am a member, released the first subcommittee report emanating from the congressional investigations of the EPA Superfund Program during the Reagan administration.

The report, released by the distinguished chairman of the Energy and Commerce Committee, JOHN DINGELL, details the destruction of the Superfund Hazardous Waste Cleanup Program by the administration's top level political appointees and gives what one reporter, Robin Goldstein of the Asbury Park (NJ) Press, describes as a "pretty convincing account of how Rita Lavelle, in her days as Assistant Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, used her position as czarina of the Superfund to help the political careers of certain favored elected officials."

In her article, Ms. Goldstein cites several examples from the oversight report which clearly illustrates the political manipulation of the Superfund Program and the complete disregard by the EPA of the public health and environment.

Ms. Goldstein concludes her article by writing: "Rita Lavelle, happily, is no longer at the EPA. But reading of her exploits now, one can only wonder how that sort of attitude could have prevailed for any time at all so high in the government."

Unfortunately, the one fact which emerges clearly from the subcommittee report is that the incidents at the EPA are not history about a bygone era; rather they reflect a consistent pattern of policymaking which continues at the highest levels of the administration.

Mr. Speaker, the ultimate irony of the report is that the administration continues to resist our subcommittee's effort to explore the White House's involvement in the Burford/Lavelle debacle by withholding documents detailing communications between EPA and high White House officials. The administration's clear fear that the EPA scandal will be traced to the White House reveals how little has really changed since its war on the environment went underground.

I commend the article to the attention of our colleagues.

[From the Asbury Park Press, Sept. 7, 1984]

RITA LAVELLE'S "STARS AND CHITS" LIST

(By Robin Goldstein)

A recent congressional report gives a pretty convincing account of how Rita Lavelle, in her days as assistant administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, used her position as czarina of the Superfund to help the political careers of certain favored elected officials.

But what really grates against the senses is that Ms. Lavelle didn't even have the decency to be low-key about her political machinations.

Quite the opposite, in fact. Ms. Lavelle apparently kept a careful ledger of all her political accomplishments, of all the politicians whose careers she had boosted by misusing her position.

She even had a whimsical little name for her ledger. She called it "Stars and Chits."

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., was on the list. Ms. Lavelle set everyone scurrying double-time so that Sen. Lugar could announce a clean-up plan for a hazardous waste site in his home state during his 1982 re-election campaign. "We have to deliver this one to Sen. Lugar before the election," Ms. Lavelle told a meeting of her EPA staff, according to the House subcommittee report.

Ms. Lavelle, according to the report, did a similar favor for Sen. John Danforth, Republican of Missouri. "He's in a tough race and we should help him," she reportedly told an aide.

Another name on the "Stars and Chits" list was that of John Dramesi, a South Jersey Republican who was, in the fall of 1982, running against Democratic Rep. James J. Florio for the 1st District congressional seat. According to the report, Ms. Lavelle instructed her staff to call Dramesi and invite him to help announce a Superfund grant to clean up a toxic waste site in Bridgeport, N.J., even though Dramesi had never before contacted EPA to express interest in the site. Florio, who had written the original Superfund law, was not invited to the pre-election press conference. Ms. Lavelle, the report says, told an aide she had invited Dramesi to the announcement "just to get Florio's goat."

"Rita M. Lavelle was obsessed with orchestrating activities in the Superfund program for partisan political purposes rather than focusing her energies on political purposes rather than focusing her energies on policy-making to protect the public health and environment," the report, prepared by the investigations and oversight subcommittee of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, concluded.

The above examples are a sampling of what the EPA was like under Ms. Lavelle and her boss, Anne M. Burford (nee Gorsuch), the former EPA administrator. When the scandal over how EPA was functioning—or not functioning—finally boiled over last year, both Mrs. Burford and Ms. Lavelle were ousted, to be replaced by "Mr. Clean," William Ruckelshaus.

Mrs. Burford was not charged with any criminal wrongdoing, but Ms. Lavelle was convicted of perjury, among other things. Interestingly, she was acquitted of using her position to promote partisan politics, despite allegations such as those detailed above of EPA projects being placed on the "election track" to help some Republican candidates and elected officials.

Is it naive to expect that the political appointees who run government agencies will be totally blind to the political prerogatives of the people who named them to their positions? Probably. But with Ms. Lavelle, and, to a lesser extent, Mrs. Burford, politics appears to have always come first.

Two incidents detailed in the House subcommittee report are particularly sobering, a step beyond merely hastening a grant announcement so a candidate can reap some pre-election glory from it.

The report alleges that Mrs. Burford held up the money to clean up a toxic waste site in California, the Stringfellow Acid Pits, for months, so that Jerry Brown, then the Democratic governor of California, could not take credit for the action. Brown, then running for the U.S. Senate, had made cleanup of the site one of his campaign issues, and there are indications that Mrs. Burford delayed the grant, scheduled to be announced in July, to put a crimp in Brown's campaign. Mrs. Burford says the delay had to do with last-minute questions on how much the state should pay for the cleanup. In the meantime, the Stringfellow site continued to threaten the land and water around it.

A second incident described in the report had to do with Ms. Lavelle's desire to bolster the campaign of Sen. Danforth.

In 1982, the state of Missouri was reeling from revelations of extensive dioxin contamination in towns such as Times Beach, where the entire populace had to be evacuated.

To help our Danforth in a closely contested race, Ms. Lavelle arranged for him to announce on Nov. 1—the day before the election—that EPA has approved the use of a revolutionary new technique for cleaning up dioxin contamination in Missouri.

This could only be greeted with euphoria by some residents of Missouri, put out of their homes and towns by the threat of dioxin, a potential carcinogen.

If Ms. Lavelle had gone through the regular procedures for approving a new technique, the announcement could not have been made in time for the election. So she circumvented the usual channels.

Danforth won his election, and Ms. Lavelle reportedly boasted to aides that she had "helped put him over the top."

But in her rush to announce the new dioxin strategy, Ms. Lavelle apparently gave false hope to many dioxin-traumatized Missouri residents.

Apparently, many technical officials at EPA knew that the "new" dioxin-removing technique was untested and of questionable effectiveness.

". . . the general thinking was that the action was a relatively futile attempt to essentially show that the agency had taken some action with respect to dioxin contamination in Missouri." Francis Biros, the acting director of the technical division of the EPA toxic waste program, told the House subcommittee.

To this date, no dioxin site in Missouri has been decontaminated using this technique.

For Ms. Lavelle, it was just another entry for her "Stars and Chits" log.

Rita Lavelle, happily, is no longer at the EPA. But reading of her exploits now, one can only wonder how that sort of attitude could have prevailed for any time at all so high in the government.●

COUNCILMAN ARTHUR KATZMAN'S 80TH BIRTHDAY

HON. GARY L. ACKERMAN

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 19, 1984

● Mr. ACKERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues in the U.S. House of Representatives to join me now in extending best wishes to New York City Councilman Arthur Katzman on his 80th birthday, on September 21, 1984.

The distinguished councilman was first elected in January 1962, and has devoted 22 years of selfless service to improving the quality of life for citizens in the New York area. He has championed the causes of the good people of the 22d City Council District in Central Queens. He has fought tenaciously for the interests and issues of his constituents. He is truly a representative of the people—listening to their concerns, caring, and translating that compassion into action. He has kept his door and his heart open to his people for all these many years.

Mr. Katzman is the chairman of the Council Committee on Environmental Protection, and is former chairman of the Committee on Standards and Ethics. He has been a source of strength and wisdom to the council, and his guidance and influence are well known and held in high esteem.

Mr. Speaker, Arthur Katzman is truly a legend in his own time. He has made an immeasurable contribution to the people of Queens, and to the city of New York as a whole. He was born in 1904 in Russia during the reign of King David Horodok, and it was a momentous day for the citizens of New York when Arthur touched down on American soil as a young immigrant, eager for a new life in the United States. He was educated in New York and received his law degree from Brooklyn Law School.

Arthur Katzman is a leading citizen in the community of Forest Hills. He practices law part time, and is a member in good standing of many notable organizations, including the New York State Americans for Democratic Action, the New York State and Queens County Bar Association, the New York Civil Liberties Union and the American Civil Liberties Union.

Mr. Speaker, Arthur Katzman's 80th birthday marks a long and remarkable career of public service. He has dedicated himself to the betterment of others and his tireless efforts have ensured a safer, brighter future for every resident of New York City.

Mr. Speaker, let us take this moment to congratulate Arthur Katzman on his memorable career in public office and to wish him a joyous 80th birthday.●

SENATE COMMITTEE MEETINGS

Title IV of Senate Resolution 4, agreed to by the Senate on February 4, 1977, calls for establishment of a system for a computerized schedule of all meetings and hearings of Senate committees, subcommittees, joint committees, and committees of conference. This title requires all such committees to notify the Office of the Senate Daily Digest—designated by the Rules Committee—of the time, place, and purpose of the meetings, when scheduled, and any cancellations or changes in the meetings as they occur.

As an additional procedure along with the computerization of this information, the Office of the Senate Daily Digest will prepare this information for printing in the Extensions of Remarks section of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on Monday and Wednesday of each week.

Any changes in committee scheduling will be indicated by placement of an asterisk to the left of the name of the unit conducting such meetings.

Meetings scheduled for Thursday, September 20, 1984, may be found in the Daily Digest of today's RECORD.

SENATE—Thursday, September 20, 1984

(Legislative day of Monday, September 17, 1984)

The Senate met at 11 a.m., on the expiration of the recess, and was called to order by the President pro tempore [Mr. THURMOND].

PRAYER

The Chaplain, the Reverend Richard C. Halverson, D.D., offered the following prayer:

Let us pray.

Almighty God, no one will be more greatly missed when the Senate convenes for the 99th Congress in January than the Secretary of the Senate. We offer to You our praise and gratitude for this public servant who behind the scenes has rendered such an incalculable contribution. We thank You for William F. Hildenbrand, who served his country in two wars, spent 2 years as a staff member in the House of Representatives and devoted 24 years to the Senate.

We acknowledge with gratitude his extensive and unsurpassed knowledge of Senate procedures and his profound concern for its efficient and productive operation. May he know, gracious God, that he has earned the respect, affection and trust of peers, associates and all who labor in the Senate. As he enters private life he does so with the love and best wishes of all of us who enjoy the privilege of working with him. May God's richest providence and blessing go with him and remain with him throughout his future years. In Your powerful name, O Lord. Amen.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. BAKER. I thank the Chair.

THE CHAPLAIN'S PRAYER

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, Members know the high regard and respect I have for the distinguished Secretary of the Senate so they will not take seriously what I am about to describe.

I thank the Chaplain for his prayer, for his good wishes and future success for the Secretary.

I thought at first we would ask unanimous consent to extend our best wishes, but I am sure we would have objection. Then I thought the Senate may be equally divided on the question. So I thank the Chaplain.

Mr. FORD. If the majority leader will yield, did the majority leader indicate that the Chaplain broke the tie?

Mr. BAKER. I am certainly not indicating that the Chaplain's prayer is the best we can do, but I am expressing my gratitude nonetheless.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BAKER. Yes, I yield to the distinguished minority leader.

EXPRESSION OF APPRECIATION FOR WILLIAM HILDENBRAND'S DEDICATED SERVICE TO THE SENATE

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I too wish to commend the Secretary of the Senate, William Hildenbrand, for his 24 years of Senate service. His knowledge of Senate procedure and his dedication to its efficient operation are qualities that are appreciated by Senators on both sides of the aisle. His wit and his counsel will be missed by Senators and staff alike.

I wish to thank the Chaplain for reminding us in these busy closing days of the retirement of our distinguished Secretary of the Senate. I wish Mr. Hildenbrand the very best in his endeavors outside the Senate.

ORDER FOR RECESS FROM 11:30 A.M. UNTIL 12:30 P.M.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, our Cloakroom has announced, and perhaps the Democratic Cloakroom has announced as well, that there will be a briefing on the Lebanon situation in the secure briefing room at 11:30 a.m. today for Members only and no staff.

May I say to the minority leader that I would propose to recess from 11:30 until 12 noon so Members may attend, if he has no objection.

Mr. BYRD. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. BAKER. Yes.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I think it is an excellent idea. It would assure better attendance at the briefing. The minority Cloakroom has sent out the message, as the Cloakroom of the majority leader has done. I thank the majority leader for arranging this.

Mr. BAKER. I thank the minority leader.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that at the hour of 11:30 a.m. the Senate stand in recess until 12:30 p.m. so that Members may attend the briefing by the Department of State on the situation in Lebanon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER [Mr. MATTINGLY]. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SENATE SCHEDULE

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, my daily appraisal of the agenda of the Senate changes a little every day, but, on the other hand, circumstances change a little every day. Let me go over it now, as I see it.

To begin with, I hope we can finish the trade bill fairly soon, early in the day, and I am advised that there is a good possibility of that.

It would be the intention of the leadership on this side then to ask the Senate to go next to the highway bill. It is hoped that we can finish the highway bill today; if not today, then tomorrow.

I would remind Senators that it is imperative that we pass the highway bill in order to release money for the Interstate Highway System.

Mr. President, there will be a vote on cloture tomorrow to limit debate on Senate Resolution 66. I will consult with the minority leader on the appropriate time for that. May I say I would like to have it as soon as possible, Fridays being what they are, and I was thinking of 12 noon. I will consult further with the minority leader on that point.

On Monday, Mr. President, we will either be in debate on Senate Resolution 66 or perhaps some other measure if there is another cloture motion filed, and there will be, I expect, if we do not get cloture on this one. The product liability bill comes to mind.

I had earlier thought that we could also do the clean water bill and the water resources bill, and I would still hope that we can. But I am going to move those down now to the I-hope-we-can list because I am advised that for a variety of reasons both of those bills now have serious problems. This announcement may produce an early conference with the sponsors of those measures, but they should know that those bills, both of them, the water resources bill and the clean water bill, appear to be in some trouble. Before I announce the intention of the leadership on this side in respect to those two measures, I would like to confer further with the two managers.

Product liability, however, is on the calendar, and that is the prime prospect for Monday, along with Senate Resolution 66, if the matter is not yet disposed of.

Two matters that are coming to the Senate Calendar next week, I am advised, are the balanced budget amendment for the Judiciary Committee and the Genocide Convention. Senators should be on notice that next week we may take up either or both of those measures.

By next week, Mr. President, we will be in the CR season. The House will send us that measure, I believe, tomorrow, so it will be here and go to the committee as soon as it is received. By the end of next week we ought to be in the position to take up the continuing resolution. We also have to do something about the debt limit by September 28.

So, Mr. President, in summary, between now and the end of next week these are the things I hope we can do in addition to other matters that may be cleared for action routinely: the trade bill, the highway bill, product liability, balanced budget, genocide, the continuing resolution, and debt limit.

An item that was not mentioned in this list, Mr. President, is Grove City, the civil rights bill. The reason it was not is that I am advised and expect that that measure is going to be offered as an amendment to something else. I will keep the Senate advised as I gain information on that prospect.

It is a big list, Mr. President, but it is not as big as it might be. It omits some things that I know many Members would like to have up, but we are running out of time. I will continue to keep the Senate apprised as I see the schedule and the probable arrangement of the remaining time.

Mr. President, I believe that concludes my report today.

I urge Senators to attend the briefing at 11:30 a.m. on the situation in Lebanon in room S-407, which I repeat is for Members only without staff, since it will be a classified briefing.

Does the Senator from Arkansas wish me to yield to him?

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, I was wondering if the distinguished majority leader was really serious about trying to finish the highway bill this evening.

Mr. BAKER. Yes, I was serious. I wonder if the inquiry means we might not.

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, I just had a briefing by my staff. Based on that briefing, I was led to believe that that is a very controversial matter because of some amendments that are going to be offered. There are 10 projects in the Senate bill, 29 in the House bill. Our bill provides for a 50-50 matching share, the House bill does not. I know how that goes.

I have a few projects in my own State that I want to get on that bill. I suspect there are 99 other Senators who are like-minded.

I was curious: Certainly, the majority leader would know more about our chances of getting that bill passed than I would. I understood there was some considerable debate about getting the bill up.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, really, we have to get up the bill, I am told. I do not know if we have a practical choice. If we let the year go by without the interstate highway bill, I think that would be a bad situation. So it is the intent of the leadership to try to pass the highway bill. If we cannot pass it, I shall confer with the minority leader to see what else we need to do. If we do not take it up, it is certain we are not going to pass it; if we do take it up, we may. We shall see how that goes.

It is the intention of the leadership to take it up as soon as we pass the trade bill if the Senate will agree to that. I thank the Senator for his inquiry.

If I have any time left, Mr. President, I yield to the minority leader.

RECOGNITION OF THE MINORITY LEADER

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The minority leader is recognized.

SENATE SCHEDULE

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished majority leader. I was interested in listening to his laying out of the schedule. I suggest there is the problem of nominations also, which could take a little time.

Mr. BAKER. Would the distinguished minority leader yield?

Mr. BYRD. Yes, Mr. President, I yield.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I should have included that, and I do now include any nominations that are available. I would like to make room for them.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, may I ask the distinguished majority leader when he contemplates taking up the continuing resolution if, as is expected, the House sends it over to the Senate tomorrow?

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I am advised by staff that the Appropriations Committee has indicated to staff that they intend to have a markup on Monday of the continuing resolution and to report it out Monday. If they do that, then it really would depend on whether we have a 3-day rule problem or not. The leadership on this side would intend to take it up as soon as we can.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the majority leader. I hope the Senate could proceed to debate and act on the continuing resolution at the very earliest possible date because the continuing resolution and the debt limit are the two major vehicles to which various and sundry germane and nongermane amendments are likely to be offered. I am sure the majority leader would agree with me that if the Senate and House have any chance of getting out sine die by October 4 or 5, we do need a little time on the continuing resolution and the debt limit; else we will not be able to adjourn sine die.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I agree with that.

WHERE IS THE ADMINISTRATION'S MIDDLE EAST POLICY?
